Welcome

This is the fifth year Emilie and I have had the pleasure of welcoming you to the Meadow Brook Music Festival. Each season has had its distinctive appeal, the blend of great music and serene atmosphere that make Meadow Brook unique. But in many ways, this season, the festival's 22nd, will be truly special. In 1985, we embark on a new era in our relationship with the magnificent Detroit Symphony Orchestra, an era in which the DSO and its exciting new conductor, Gunther Herbig, assume responsibility for the selection of the Thursday and Sunday series of classical artists, conductors and repertoire. We should all benefit. In addition, we will see two outstanding visiting orchestras — the Boston Pops and London Symphony — and the performance of the San Francisco Ballet. This is the first major dance company to perform at the festival in years and we are looking forward to it very much. We expect a gala season of classical and popular concerts. As always, none of this would be possible without the thousands of volunteers who give of their time and funds to help us mount this widely respected cultural enterprise. Please join Emilie and me often "Where Summer Sounds Best."

Sincerely,

J E Champagne

Here's to Oakland!

Here's to providing quality education, diligent research and dedicated community service.

Oakland University has begun its second quarter-century of service well positioned to meet the challenges of the 1980s and beyond.

Now an established, comprehensive research institution, the university has not rested on its laurels. There has been a vigorous review of the university's role and mission; there has been an increased emphasis on excellence in all university programs; and there have been renewed efforts to mount services in the areas of technology transfer and industry and community needs for nontraditional students.

University enrollment has stabilized at nearly 12,000 students, despite generally declining student populations throughout the state. Oakland now offers more than 70 undergraduate and 24 master's programs of study, and doctoral programs in engineering, reading and the biomedical sciences. Oakland President Joseph E. Champagne notes that new undergraduate general education requirements ensure a breadth of education, even if students select one of the popular career-oriented majors.

Nor has the growing adult population been neglected in university planning. The university's Division of Continuing Education continues its aggressive programs for nontraditional adult learners. The division is responsible for credit courses at a dozen extension sites and for noncredit course department programming, including specific university-level programs for the particular requirements of business and industry, governmental units, schools, and other organizations in the area.

Commitment and concern exemplify Oakland University. Right, history professor Richard Tucker provides the kind of rigorous course work Oakland University is known for. Above, O'Dowd Hall, situated in the heart of Oakland's modern campus, gleams in the summer sun. Adjacent to the campus is the Oakland Technological Park (top right), whose explosive growth and relationship with Oakland University will ensure the university's role in the continuing economic expansion of the region. Oakland's nursing (bottom right) and education (bottom left) programs stress the importance of community placement, giving students an oportunity to develop their skills before graduation and to serve the community as well.

If student needs have been considered, so too have the needs of area industry. The university is moving to provide increased consulting services and retraining programs where needed. Its part in forming the Oakland Technology Park, which now includes automotive technology, computer and banking operations, ensures its role in the continuing economic expansion of the region.

In addition, the university's impact on the region continues. Of Oakland's more than 27,000 alumni, 70 percent live and work in the tri-county area. A labor-intensive enterprise, the bulk of the university's budget each year goes into payrolls, with much of those funds being returned to local communities for housing, entertainment, and goods and services. In terms of employees (approximately 1,400 full- and part-time workers), the institution ranks 20th among 25,000 Oakland County employers.

President Champagne has also stressed the importance of community service in helping the institution maintain credibility and public support. That effort will receive increased emphasis during 1985. Academic units now provide consulting and research services to automotive companies in computer graphics and statistical quality control; provide engineering work and technical writing skills courses for the U.S. Army Tank and Automotive Command; provide new bedside care technology. for a major area hospital; offer free job counseling for unemployed area residents; present seminars through the Center for International Programs for firms hoping to do business in Japan and China; help establish a museum and excavate Thomas A. Edison's boyhood home in Port Huron; and perform hundreds of dance concerts for area school children. And, a new health maintenance-enhancement center will aid in the maintenance of wellness and in cardiac rehabilitation for patients in a six-county area. These are just a few examples of the exciting and relevant efforts in progress at Oakland.

But perhaps no accomplishment of the first 25 years stirs more pride than Oakland's emergence as a research institution. And at Oakland, undergraduate as well as graduate students play a significant part in many of the faculty accomplishments in research.

Oakland's faculty attracted outside grant and contract support of its projects to the extent of nearly $4.5 million in 1984. Some $2 million in research alone ranks Oakland fifth among the state's 15 publicly assisted colleges and universities.

"Although carrying the state's highest average teaching load, Oakland's faculty has distinguished itself in a variety of fields," says Oakland Provost Keith R. Kleckner. "Our engineers are developing new methods for materials testing, new operating systems for microcomputers, new manufacturing techniques for mass-produced products, and new control methods for both ground and air vehicles. Our biochemists Oakland University strongly supports community residents' efforts to improve their quality of life, and offers several noted programs designed to enhance community health. Above, area runners find Oakland's rolling terrain challenging during one of the races held on the campus each year. are investigating the nature of possible cures for such diseases as herpes II and leukemia. Other Oakland biochemists are studying endocrine disorders, the regeneration of healthy heart muscle following heart attack damage and the processes of tissue aging."

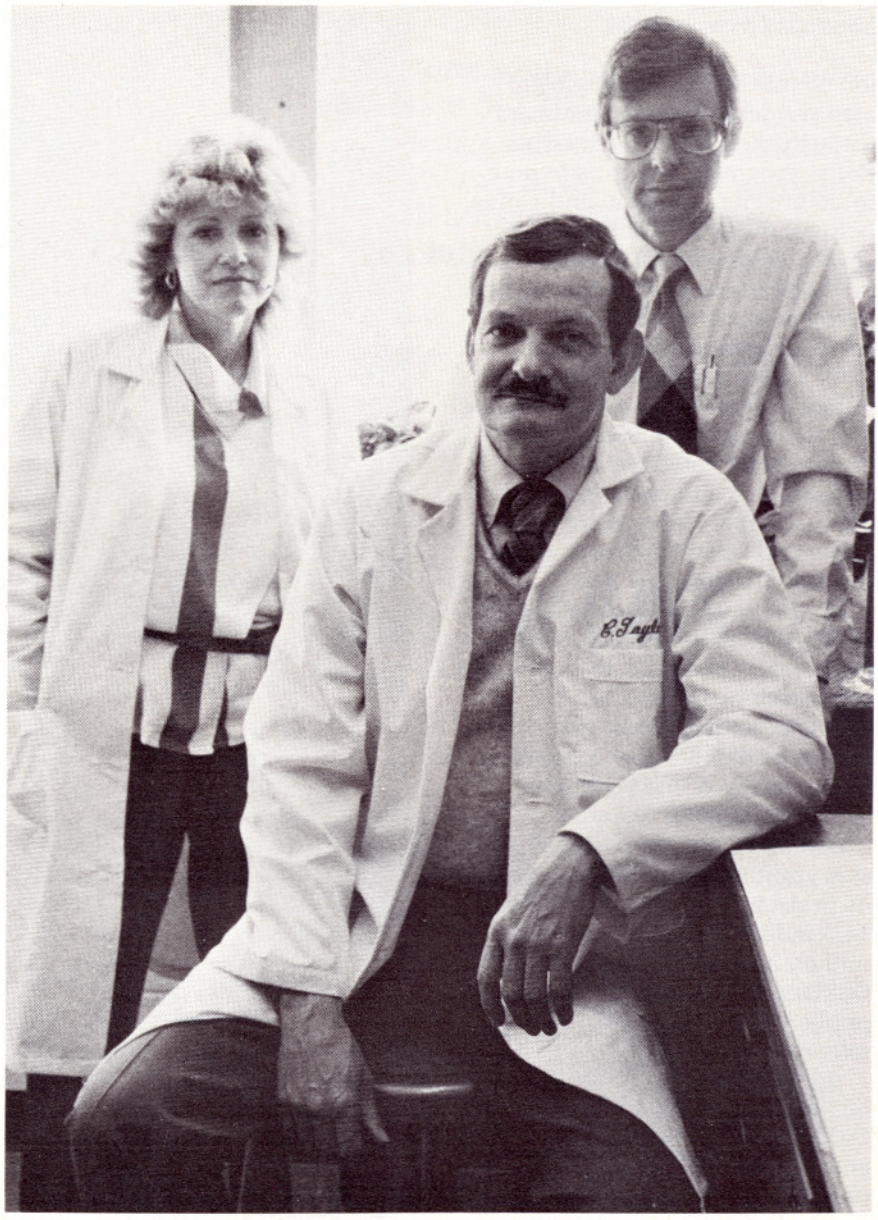
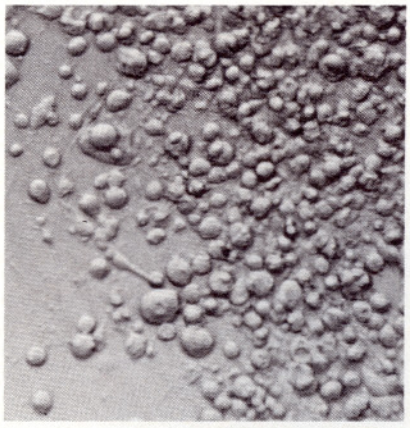
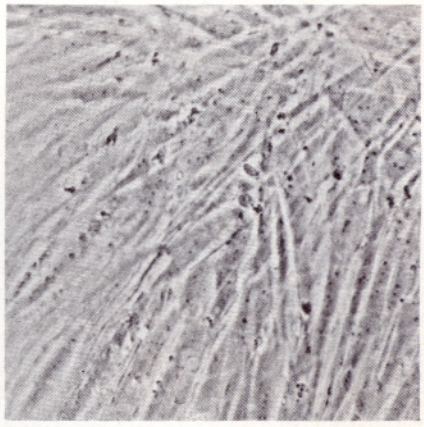
He cites additional examples. "Vision researchers at Oakland University are exploring the mechanism of cataract formation, glaucoma development and various disorders of the retina of the eye. Medical physicists in Oakland's Department of Physics are ascertaining the interactions between electromagnetic radiation and living tissue, and are developing techniques for predicting the onset of dangerous fluid pressure build-ups in the brain following head injuries. Oakland chemists are working in areas ranging from the development of techniques for preserving food without refrigeration to fundamental electrochemical research that applies to the design of storage batteries."

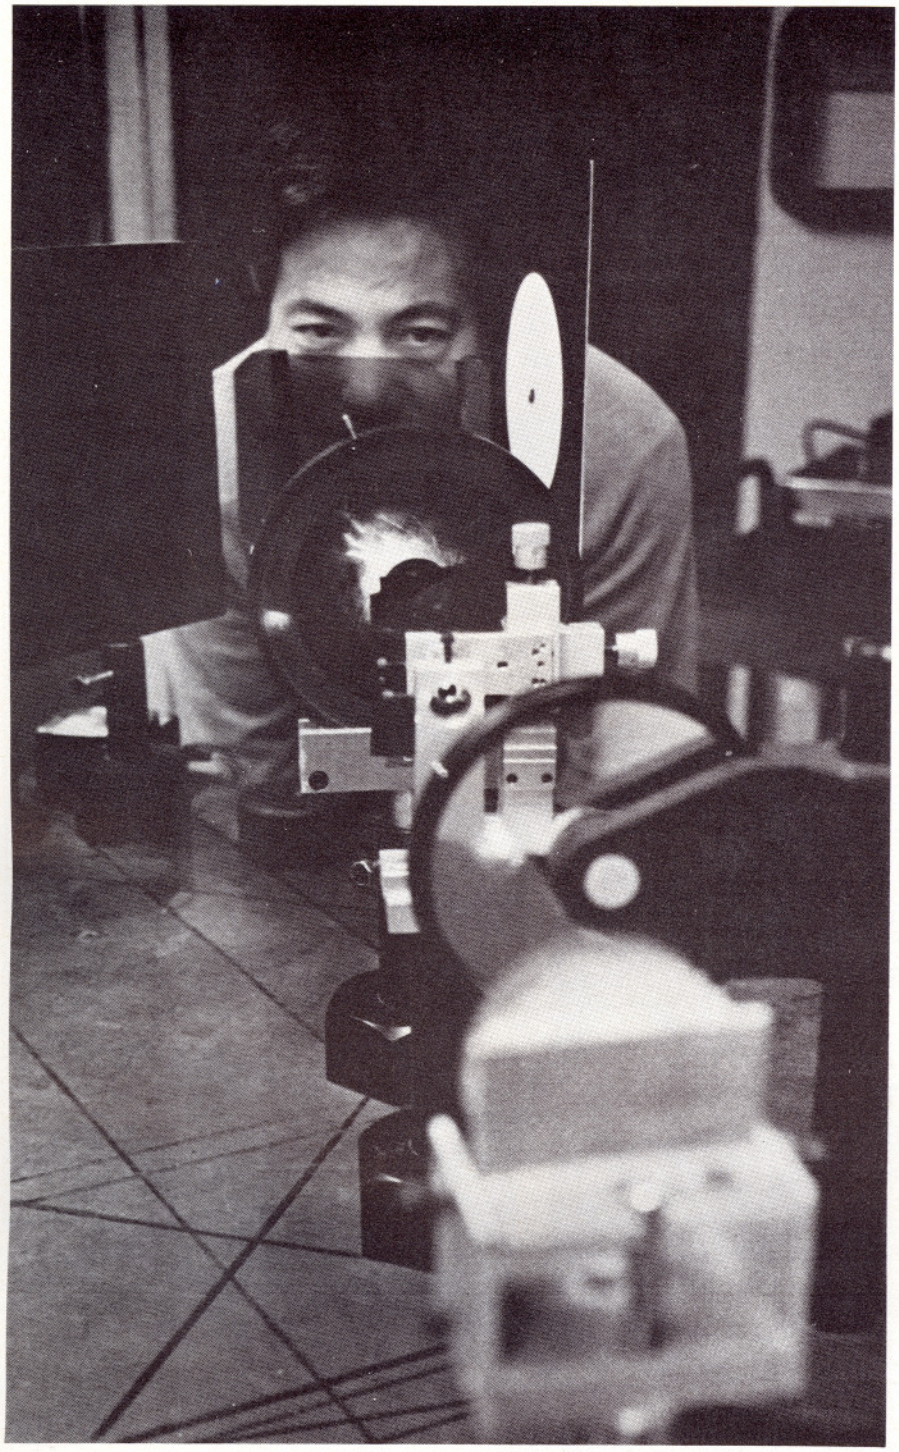
The quality of Oakland's research is attested to not only by the significant level of external financial support but also by national — and in many cases international — peer recognition. Oakland's faculty members receive numerous invitations to participate in major international symposiums in their research fields. Several faculty members have received prestigious awards in recognition of their research accomplishments. For example, Professor Frank J. Giblin of the Institute of Biological Sciences holds the Rhoto Award for vision research, and Professor Venkat Reddy, director of the Institute of







Here's to Oakland!



In just 25 years, Oakland has established a research record that has brought it national recognition — and attracted some $2 million in research funding in 1984. The team of Oakland scientists at top left have been searching for clues to a cure for Herpes II. At bottom left are normal cells; at bottom right are cells that have been infected with the contagious disease. Other researchers (above) are working with lasers and the most advanced equipment available to explore new areas of scientific and technological research.

Biological Sciences, holds the Friedenwald Award signifying outstanding contributions to vision research. Professor Arun Roy's pioneering studies on the biological mechanisms of aging have attracted the attention of the Nobel Committee, which invited him to be among a select international group of scientists presenting their work at the 1983 Nobel Symposium.

As a smaller and relatively new member of Michigan's college and university constellation, Oakland University differs from the large research institutions, such as the University of Michigan, Michigan State University and Wayne State University, in one fundamental way: Oakland has not had the resources to pursue research across a broad array of fields as have the other universities. Oakland has, therefore, chosen to concentrate institutional resources and develop major research thrusts and advanced graduate programs in just a few areas. However, while Oakland's volume of research activity is below that of the "big three," the quality and importance of Oakland's research accomplishments is every bit as significant.

In just 25 years of existence, Oakland University has established a research record that has brought it substantial national recognition and has attracted external research funding which surpasses that of all but four of the state's public four-year institutions. Oakland University is a significant contributor to university research in Michigan, and its future looks bright under the increasing scholarship of its dedicated faculty.

At Oakland University, we stimulate physical, emotional and intellectual growth in our community.

Our health enhancement and cardiac rehabilitation programs help hundreds feel better and improve their quality of life. We host programs on career development and personal growth. We counsel the unemployed.

We work with disadvantaged teens who want to go to college but need a boost to get there. We help youngsters overcome reading problems and we sponsor children's day camps.

Our faculty members go into the community — to business locations and to schools — to provide easy access to higher education opportunities.

Helping. Isn't that what friends are for?

Oakland University — at work for you.

We help you feel great.

1985 Meadow Brook Executive Committee Chairpersons Mr. and Mrs. Louis R. Ross

It gives me great pleasure to have this opportunity to express my most sincere appreciation to Mr. and Mrs. Louis R. Ross for their outstanding leadership of the 1985 Executive Committee.

As we open the 22nd season of the summer concerts we continue to be grateful for dedicated volunteers whose commitment to Meadow Brook has made it possible for the Music Festival to attain a position of excellence among major summer festivals.

The Festival began twenty-two years ago as a dream to create a natural setting where people could come together to share their love of music. The leadership of many dedicated volunteers has resulted in maintaining the dream.

Oakland University, the Theatre, and the Music Festival are deeply grateful to Carolyn and Louis for their enthusiasm and support. They have played a critical role in assuring that the Festival will continue to provide exciting and varied programs for the residents of the area.

The best-kept secret in town?

by Carl F. Barnes, Jr.

What is the best-kept secret in your town? Who's having an affair? Whose automobile was repossessed for missing payments? Who imbibed too much at the Christmas party? Whose children are out of control?

At Oakland University the best-kept secret is neither scandalous nor titillating. It is that the university has exciting, high-quality public presentations in the arts in addition to those offered by the Meadow Brook enterprises — art gallery, music festival, hall and theatre.

These are the presentations in art, dance, mime, classical and popular music, and theatre that develop out of the academic programs of the College of Arts and Sciences' Department of Music and Department of Theatre and Dance, and special programs and events sponsored by the Center for the Arts.

Oakland's departments of Music and Theatre and Dance — which are to be merged into a single Department of Music, Theatre and Dance in August 1985 — offer Bachelor of Arts in Music, Bachelor of Music and Master of Music degrees, and a Bachelor of Science degree in Music Education. Minors are offered in music, theatre and dance.

The classroom and performance requirements of these various majors and minors are taught and directed by a distinguished faculty of professionals dedicated to instructing young people in the arts. In Oakland's music program, to take only the most prominent examples, James Dawson performs with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra and the Detroit Contemporary Chamber Ensemble; John Dovaras is music director at Kirk in the Hills and leads choral tours to Europe each summer to perform at such sites as the Sistine Chapel in the Vatican and the Cathedral of St. Stephen in Vienna. Flavio Varani concertizes regularly in Europe and South America, as well as in this country.

Marvin "Doc" Holladay has his own jazz quartet and jazz orchestra, and played with Dizzy Gillespie during the 1984 Montreaux/Detroit Jazz Festival. Lyle Nordstrom directs the highly respected early music ensemble, The Musicians of Swanne Alley. David Daniels conducts both the Pontiac-Oakland and the Warren Symphony orchestras. The most recent addition to the faculty, basso John Paul White, performs in concerts and operas in Europe and in this country.

The commercial music program of the department also leads to a degree, and is home to a number of student ensembles, the best known of which is the Meadow Brook Estate. This program will have a new director in August 1985 and its future is bright.

In theatre, the university has this year secured the services of Yolanda Fleischer, one of Michigan's most respected directors, who directed Thorton Wilder's Matchmaker in March. Adeline Hirschfeld-Medalia has directed such recent successes as George Bernard Shaw's Pygmalion and Luigi Pirandello's Man, Beast, and Virtue. T. Andrew Aston, who is artistic director of the university's Mime Ensemble, directed William Gibson's The Miracle Worker and Gilbert and Sullivan's Pirates of Penzance.

In dance, Carol Halsted's ensemble, Other Things & Company, tours schools throughout Michigan during the academic year, and has brought fun to thousands of children. The dance program offers courses at all levels in dance performance, history and choreography. In addition, dance workshops with guest artists are offered throughout the year, and there is an active evening community dance program. New faculty will be hired to bolster the dance program during the 1985-86 academic year.

The Center for the Arts is involved in special educational projects not directly related to the university's credit-bearing, degree-oriented academic programs. Each summer, in cooperation with Oakland Schools, the center offers two Arts-for-Youth camps. These are two-week day camp programs in art, dance, mime, music and theatre for children aged 6 through 15. Among other activities, the youngsters attend performances at the Meadow Brook Music Festival and give their own program at the end of each camp.

In March and April the center sponsored, in cooperation with the Department of Art and Art History, a symposium on the life and art of artist James Abbott McNeill Whistler in Meadow Brook Hall, and an exhibition of Whistler's graphics in the Meadow Brook Art Gallery. In June the center sponsored, in cooperation with the College of Arts and Sciences Alumni Affiliate, a Gilbert and Sullivan Gala in Meadow Brook Hall, timed to coincide with its production of Pirates of Penzance.

During its first subscription series season, Center for the Arts guest performers included pianist William Doppmann, Ars Musica: the Baroque Orchestra, and the Detroit Dance Collective.

As this article is being written, the center's 1985-86 season has not been finalized, but it will include a recital by Flavio Varani, a concert by Jasdances, a Chicago dance company, and the annual holiday concert by the Meadow Brook Estate. Theatrical productions will include a new play for children, Zoophabreaks, by the Mime Ensemble, and The Wayside Motor Inn and Man and Superman, directed by Yolanda Fleischer and Adeline Hirschfeld-Medalia, respectively. In addition, the world premiere of the English translation of William Mewe's early 17th-century Neo-Latin play, False Magic (Pseudomagia), will take place in October. This play was translated by Brian P. Copenhaver, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, and John C. Coldewey of the University of Washington. The theatre season will conclude with Rodgers and Hammerstein's Carousel.

In the spring of 1987, the center and the Department of Music, Theatre and Dance hope to produce a trilogy of operas by Stanley Hollingsworth, the university's composer in residence and professor of music. In honor of his 60th birthday, Professor Hollingsworth's music was featured in the Contemporary Music Festival this year.

The Oakland University Center for the Arts and the Department of Music, Theatre and Dance cooperate to educate and to entertain university students and the public. These are highlights of the recent past and the immediate future, some of which are also illustrated in the photographs accompanying this article.

For information on related academic programs, telephone the Department of Music, Theatre and Dance at (313) 370-2030. For information on tickets to public arts performances, telephone the Center for the Arts box office at (313) 370-3013. For general information on special projects, such as the

Other Things & Company, one of Oakland's three touring groups, uses dance and music to entertain Michigan schoolchildren.

Arts-for-Youth camps, telephone the Center for the Arts at (313) 370-3018. To book the center's various ensembles for your entertainment needs, telephone the booking manager at (313) 370-2032. To lease the recital hall or other facilities, telephone the center's facilities manager at (313) 370-2029.

There, now you're in on what may be the best-kept secret in town. Feel free to tell everyone you know!

SPECIAL ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

THE KRESGE FOUNDATION

The Meadow Brook Music Festival expresses its appreciation to one of its most important benefactors — The Kresge Foundation.

In 1964 when the Festival was a dream, the Kresge Foundation made a $76,000 gift to the capital fund in memory of civic leader and foundation trustee, Howard C. Baldwin, for whom the pavilion is named. A second gift a year later of $50,000 made possible the permanent seating in the pavilion. Subsequently the Foundation provided an additional capital grant of $33,000 which provided additional dressing rooms below stage, new electrical circuits, a sound reinforcement system and new restroom facilities. A grant of $145,000 provided for the repair work in the pavilion and a box office addition in 1977. Most recently, a grant of $100,000 has been used to upgrade the lighting system, structural improvements in and around the stage area, paving the service road and loading dock area, painting of the seats and girders, and general repair.

LULA C. WILSON TRUST

The original gifts of the Lula C. Wilson Trust provided the concert shell for the stage house of the Music Festival. The well-known excellent acoustics of Meadow Brook concerts distinguishes the Music Festival as one of the front-rank concert and amphitheatres in North America.

The continuing support of the Lula C. Wilson Trust assists the Music Festival in providing the finest cultural programs to enrich the community as a whole.

FESTIVAL CO-SPONSORS

Detroit Free Press, Detroit News, Chrysler Corporation, Chrysler Fund, WJR, WMJC/WHNC, WQRS and Hudson's.

MRS. GEORGE T. TRUMBULL

The original gift of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Trumbull made possible the construction of the Trumbull Terrace dining facility, and patrons of the Meadow Brook Music Festival continue to benefit from their generosity. Mrs. Trumbull has provided improvements to Trumbull Terrace, the magnificent flowers on the grounds, and the tables and chairs in the Cafe Promenade. We are grateful for her continued interest and support.

The Meadow Brook Music Festival is funded in part by grants from the Michigan Council for the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts.

DETROIT SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Gunther Herbig, Music Director

The Detroit Symphony Orchestra has been a part of Detroit's cultural and civic life since the Symphony's founding in 1914. In the 71 years since then, its presence has grown in the international community as well, strengthened by an impressive roster of conductors, recordings, a much-heralded European tour and radio broadcasts.

Today's Symphony is testimony to the spirit and vision of a group of civic-minded women who sponsored the first Detroit Symphony concert, conducted by the Symphony's first Music Director, Weston Gales (1914-17).

In the subsequent years, the Symphony gradually built upon its reputation as a world class orchestra through the efforts of guest conductors and music directors Ossip Gabrilowitsch (1919-36); Victor Kolar and Franco Ghione (1936-42); Karl Krueger (1943-49); Paul Paray (1952-62); Sixten Ehrling (1963-73); Aldo Ceccato (1973-77); and Antal Dorati (1977-81).

Its reputation was further enhanced by the appointment in 1984 of Music Director Gunther Herbig, who led the Detroit Symphony at Carnegie Hall this past April in its first New York performance since 1981.

Maestro Herbig was born in Czechoslovakia of Austrian parents, beginning musical studies at the Franz Liszt Academy in Weimar with Hermann Abendroth, a leading German conductor of that time.

Prior to his appointment at the Detroit Symphony, Maestro Herbig was Conductor of the Berlin Symphony (1966-73), General Music Director of the Dresden Philharmonic (1972-77), General Music Director of the Berlin Symphony (1977-83), Principal Guest Conductor of the Dallas Symphony (1979-81), and Principal Guest Conductor of the BBC Philharmonic Orchestra in Manchester (1981-83).

Maestro Herbig has appeared in North America with the New York Philharmonic, Saint Louis Symphony, orchestras of Montreal, Toronto, Los Angeles, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, and with the National Symphony in Washington, to name a few.

In addition to his conducting, Maestro Herbig has toured with the Dresden Philharmonic and the Leipzig Gewandhaus orchestras, and he has recorded some 35 discs on the Eterna label with the State Orchestra of Berlin, the Berlin Symphony Orchestra and the Dresden Philharmonic. Performances led by Maestro Herbig have been broadcast on radio in Berlin and Leipzig, in Japan, on the BBC in Great Britain, and in Detroit.

This June, Gunther Herbig led the Detroit Symphony in three of four concerts at the Casals Festival in Puerto Rico. Next season he will conduct the Orchestra in the world premiere of an original piano concerto, jointly commissioned by the Detroit Symphony, Carnegie Hall and the American Symphony Orchestra League, and written by Pulitzer Prize-winning composer Ellen Taaffe Zwilich. The New York premiere of the work is scheduled for 1987, performed at Carnegie Hall by the winner of the next Carnegie Hall International American Music Competition, the Detroit Symphony and Gunther Herbig.

Detroit Symphony concerts are regularly broadcast on radio in 12 major markets, including New York, Chicago, Boston and Washington, and on more than 50 National Public Radio stations by satellite feed. The broadcasts are produced by WQRS-FM, and they are sponsored by General Motors Corporation.

Twenty-seven Detroit Symphony recordings are currently available, with four more to be released soon. Among the most popular are Antal Dorati's recordings of Stravinsky's The Firebird, The Rite of Spring, for which the compact disc version earned the Grand Prix du Disuqe, and Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture. All are available on London-Decca.

Meadow Brook Music Festival at Oakland University, north of Detroit, is the Detroit Symphony's home for eight weeks every summer. It is recognized as one of the nation's major summer music festivals. This year's Chrysler Concert Series of Detroit Symphony performances is sponsored by the Chrysler Corporation and the Chrysler Corporation Fund.
