Students, faculty and staff are settling into a busy semester while enjoying crisp autumn temperatures amid a dazzling display of fall foliage across campus. Check out the latest campus news and calendar of events!

Group Lunches
The Pioneer Club meets the 2nd Wednesday of every month at 1:00 p.m. at Nick’s Country Oven in Rochester (Adams and Silverbell). These lunches are very casual, so please stop by when your schedule permits.

Golden Opportunity
Do you have a great idea for a future Pioneer Club event? The planning committee needs your help! The group meets on a monthly basis to discuss campus happenings as well as organize activities for Pioneer Club members. If you are interested in joining the planning committee or would like more information, email upioneerclub@oakland.edu or call (248) 370-4325.

All-University Fund Drive
With the theme “Your Gift Opens Doors,” the Oakland University community kicked off this year’s All-University Fund Drive (AUFD) earlier this month at the annual AUFD Launch Party.

The event drew $90,088 in contributions from 126 donors. Both amounts were the highest-ever for an AUFD kick-off event. The drive runs through Friday, Dec. 9, aiming to raise more than $475,000.

University employees and retirees can “open doors” at Oakland and beyond by directing gifts to the program of their choice, or making a gift to the area of greatest need, the OU Fund. Donors can also create a named scholarship with a contribution starting at just $1,000.

OU President George W. Hynd will match every employee and retiree gift by 50%, up to a $2,500 match.

This year’s AUFD co-chairs include Robert Gaylor, retired Associate Professor, Kresge Library and Pat Nicosia, retired Director of Budget and Financial Planning.

For more information regarding the AUFD, or to make a gift, visit the AUFD website at isupportOU.com/AUFD or contact Annual Giving at (248) 370-4504 or giving@oakland.edu.

Jack Moeller
Dr. Jack Moeller is one of those fortunate retirees who has been “re-wired” as well as retired.

Jack began his higher education as a piano major at Oberlin College. When he decided that piano was not going to be his major, he switched to a major in German and reserved his musical abilities for his own enjoyment.

While still in graduate school Jack and his wife, Hilda, attended the University of Basel under a Princeton-Basel
Exchange Fellowship. Throughout his career, he spent much time in German speaking countries, attending a number of seminars and workshops, some for an extended period of six weeks. “One great experience,” he says, “was teaching at a German school under a Fulbright Exchange fellowship. At that time I learned first-hand how quickly children can acquire a language. Our daughter, Susan, attended first grade in Germany and within weeks she had no problem with the language and even finished the year with top grades.”

Dr. Moeller joined the Oakland University staff in 1963 and led a distinguished career as a professor of German until his retirement in 1992. During that time he realized that the standard method of teaching German was not, in his mind, the appropriate approach. During the early 1970s he teamed with Professor Helmut Liedloff of Southern Illinois University to produce several high school and college German language textbooks to fill what they considered a void. Forty years later those books are still in print and considered the gold standard of German language textbooks.

He and other Oakland University modern language teachers led the movement away from the old system of teaching grammar and vocabulary only, toward the incorporation of speaking and writing into the curriculum. “The college texts of the time,” he says, “were old fashioned, and we thought they needed to be modernized as well. We tried to make them more streamlined.” Current language teaching follows that lead, incorporating language proficiency along with information about German history and culture.

After his retirement, Moeller volunteered to teach German to seniors at the Older Persons’ Commission in Rochester. An active German group developed under his direction, learning to speak German and gain cultural knowledge about German-speaking countries. He found working with older persons a wonderful and exciting experience and hopes that the courses have continued.

Because of Hilda’s poor health she and Jack moved to an independent living apartment in Ann Arbor in 2014. She passed away early in 2016, but Jack remains in Ann Arbor because their daughter, Susan, is a professor of finance at Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti. Their son, Kurt, is an engineer at United Technologies in Hartford, Connecticut. Susan is called upon constantly, Jack says, to take care of such matters as driving him to doctors, buying necessities and even making some dinners. Their son and his family make occasional visits from Connecticut. Dr. Mueller has three grandchildren: Katie, Susan’s daughter, and John and Chloé, children of Kurt and his wife, Judith.

Since his retirement Jack continues to revise Deutsch heute, now in its 10th edition, which now includes an audio-enhanced e-book and other interactive features. He has also worked with co-authors Simone Berger and Professor Anja Wieden of Oakland University to produce the ninth edition of Kaleidoscop, a text for intermediate German. In later years he has discontinued work on the high school editions, but continues to revise new editions of the college texts.

But back to the re-wiring: In his new life in the senior home in Ann Arbor, Jack has gone back to his first love. “Switching my major to German was the correct choice for my career, but I now have a piano in my apartment. I do accompanying for sing-alongs and even gave a recital here, although I don’t play as well now as I did when I started at Oberlin,” he admits.

Jack remembers Oakland fondly. Living in Rochester after his retirement allowed him to visit the Department of Modern Languages and Literatures often—keeping in touch with former and newer colleagues, keeping up-to-date on developments in the Department, attending student functions, events and presentations, even being one of the judges each year in various student contests involving speaking and writing. “I do miss my colleagues and students now,” he admits. And he is mildly surprised that the Department functions so well without him, now that he is in Ann Arbor.

Gerry Palmer Coon served as administrative assistant and adjunct faculty member in the School of Education and Human Services from 1971 to 1991. She retired after eleven years as co-editor of Rochester OPC's (Older Persons' Commission) quarterly publication, Vintage Views, and is a member of the Pioneer Club.

Pioneer Profile is a feature that appears monthly in the Pioneer Club eNewsletter. If you are interested in being profiled or sharing suggestions on fellow retirees to showcase, please provide your contact information and details to us at oupioneerclub@oakland.edu.
