

CONTRIBUTORS

---

Vincent Khapoya, Professor and Chair in the Department of Political Science, is the author of a widely used college textbook, The African Experience, now in its second edition. At Oakland since 1973, Professor Khapoya teaches courses in international, African, and comparative politics and the politics of development. His research at the moment centers on the politics of reconciliation in South Africa since the end of apartheid and the struggle for democracy in Kenya.

Louisa C. Ngote (Lisa) is both Curator of Visual Resources and Special Lecturer at Oakland University. Her special interest has been in ancient art. For the last several years Rome was her favorite vacation spot with its tremendous variety of ancient Roman, Early Christian and Medieval, as well as more recent (Renaissance and Baroque) Christian monuments. It is this close proximity of all these different churches that gave rise to this particular study in the urban development of Christian Rome.

Mary Karasch is a Professor of History with a specific interest in the social history of Brazil. She has published Slave Life in Rio de Janeiro, 1808–1850, which was recently translated and published in Brazil as A vida dos escravos no Rio de Janeiro, 1808–1850. Her current research focuses on Central Brazil in the late colonial period, 1780–1835.

Jim Ozinga taught at Oakland from 1967 to 2000, most often in the Political Science department, Area Studies (Russia), and Charter College when it was there. His books are on communism or altruism and his friendship with Robbin Hough was instant and lasting.

Michael D. Sevilla, is Professor of Chemistry, Chair of the Chemistry Department and a long time researcher on the effects of radiation on biomolecules. His more than 120 publications have helped to explain the chemical events after radiation damage to living systems. He enjoys the intellectual life of a university and promotes it at Oakland in the Science and Religion series.

Chaunda L. Scott is an Instructor of Human Resource Development in the School of Education and Human Services. Her scholarly interests are in multicultural education, adult learning, experiential learning and training. She comes to Oakland University by way of the University of Detroit Mercy, the Harvard Graduate school of Education and Teachers College/Columbia University. She is also the founder and president of a new Michigan statewide student higher education association entitled Diverse Voices.

Richard J. Burke has been at Oakland since 1959. He was Chair of the Philosophy Department from 1969 to 1988. He has been a Full Professor since 1973. His areas of interest within philosophy include history of Western philosophy, ethics, social philosophy, and philosophy of religion.

Sheldon Appleton is Professor of Political Science at Oakland University. In 1960, he had the opportunity to conduct a lengthy interview with former president Harry Truman.

Carl F. Barnes, Jr. has been Professor of Art History and Archaeology at OU since 1971. He teaches a wide variety of subjects, from Gothic Cathedrals to James Abbott McNeill Whistler, and offered the only course in erotic art ever taught at OU. Barnes retires January 1, 2001 and will devote more time to fishing.

Kim Johnson is a senior at Oakland University, majoring in English and Spanish. Next year she will pursue a Master's degree, specializing in African-American literature.

Chris Brockman is a 1971 graduate of Oakland University with a BA in Philosophy. He also has an MA in English from Eastern Michigan University. He currently teaches 8th-grade language arts in North Carolina. His writing has appeared in over three dozen diverse publications, from NOMOS: Studies In Spontaneous Order to Essence.

James Hoyle joined the Oakland English Department in 1968 and retired in 1997.