DIRK BENEDICT
ACADEMY GRADUATE NOW
ON BROADWAY: SWEET SUCCESS

An aspiring young actor who trained for a career in professional theatre at Oakland University's Academy of Dramatic Art has made it big on Broadway.

Dirk Benedict, 26, is now playing the lead opposite Gloria Swanson in "Butterflys are Free."

A native of White Sulphur Springs, Montana, Mr. Benedict was accepted in the charter class at the Academy right out of college in 1967. He is a graduate of Whitman College in Walla Walla, Wash.

Commenting on his two years of intensive training in acting technique at the Academy, the young actor said the time spent there gave him the foundation in his craft that was "invaluable" and the "confidence" he needed as a performer. He termed the whole training experience as "fantastic."

Other Academy graduates who have achieved success professionally include Paul Perkins now at the American Conservatory Theatre; Joe Culliton with Richard Chamberlin in "Richard II" in Los Angeles; Mary Gantenbein at the Actors Theatre in Louisville; John and Brenda Bergstrom at the Cleveland Playhouse; Rob Evan Collins in Stratford (Conn.) Shakespeare Company; and Diana Bugas, David Himes, Robert Englund, Michael Tolaydo, Glynis Bell, Bradlee Shattuck, Suzanne Toren and others who have appeared or now are appearing at Meadow Brook Theatre.

Another charter class member, Pat Freni, returned to the Academy to direct this season's Studio Theatre opener, "The Caretaker." He also has an original play, "Anthony Burns" now in production at two professional theatres.
