SIGMA XI NATIONAL LECTURER TO OPEN GREAT LAKES TOUR HERE

Oakland University's Sigma Xi Club was selected to be host for the society's 1968-69 National Lecturer, Professor Daniel S. Lehrman of Rutgers University, who will speak today (Monday) on "Animal Reproductive Behavior Cycle" at 8 p.m. in 201 Dodge Hall. His appearance here will be the first in a tour of Great Lakes colleges, universities, and research laboratories.

Lehrman, who is a Research Career Awardee of the National Institute of Mental Health, has been on the faculty of Rutgers since 1950 and director of Rutgers' Institute of Animal Behavior since 1959. An abstract of his lecture is as follows: "The reproductive (migratory, territorial, sexual, parental) behavior of animals occurs mostly in annual cycles, and in shorter cycles within the annual cycle. The changes in behavior during the cycle are regulated in part by changes in endocrine condition, with consequent effects of the hormones upon the nervous system. Concurrently, external stimuli, which change in the course of the animal's activities, have an effect upon the endocrine system, acting through the nervous system's control of the endocrine glands. The changing behavior during the reproductive cycle is thus both the consequence of the effects of changing hormone conditions upon the nervous system, and of the effects of social and other external stimuli (through the nervous system) upon the endocrine system."

LEND LEAST

Lawrence Sullivan (university relations) left Thursday as a last-minute member of the volunteer force which is taking a convoy of six semi trailers full of donated goods to British Honduras. The convoy, arranged by the Michigan Partners of the Alliance and using vehicles and drivers supplied by Lansing Community College, will travel almost 8,000 miles round trip. The cargo includes clothing, school desks and books, farm machinery and supplies, and a variety of surplus hospital equipment. Sullivan is on loan for the 10-day trip to serve as a free-lance writer for the Detroit Free Press.

THE APPLE CART

The John Fernald Company of the Meadow Brook Theatre has opened its third season with George Bernard Shaw's THE APPLE CART. Evening performances Tuesday through Saturday at 8:15 p.m., Sundays at 6:30 p.m. Matinees are scheduled on Wednesdays and Thursdays at 2:00 p.m. THE APPLE CART will run through Sunday, November 24th. Tickets may be purchased at all Hudson stores and at the Meadow Brook Theatre box office (Wilson Hall). For information, please call 338-6239.

GALLERY UNMASKED

Five African masks borrowed from the University's collection currently are being exhibited by the Detroit Institute of Arts in a program entitled "African Legacy", which reaches out into the public schools. The masks are part of the collection given to the OU Art Gallery by former Governor G. Mennen Williams, who also gave many African art objects to the Detroit Institute.

CAFONE LINES ARE BUSY

Harold C. Cafone (education) is participating in a weekly NDEA Institute at Michigan State University on the use of instructional media. His own NDEA Institute in Reading on the secondary level is continuing in follow up sessions each Saturday at least through December. Cafone and Ronald L. Cramer (education), who is away on a year's post-doctoral fellowship, are writing a regular column for a new quarterly publication, "Michigan Reading Journal".

WRITING AND EDITING

Publication notes from the school of education: Ronald L. Cramer has had an article accepted for publication later this year in "Elementary English". Fred Chandler is consulting editor on behavioral science and family-child dynamics for a journal called "Spectrum". And Patrick Johnson has co-authored a book, "Partnerships in Teacher Education".
