

Thursday, April 18, 2002

Amanda Bryant-Friedrich

In the one and a half years she has been at Oakland University, Amanda Bryant-Friedrich, assistant professor of chemistry, has developed a substantial research group consisting of six undergraduate students and one graduate student. She has been awarded a prestigious National Science Foundation Startup grant and recently was warded an OU Faculty Summer Research Fellowship.

Bryant-Friedrich and her students have made several presentations of their work at national and international scientific meetings. She is considered an excellent instructor who is fair, enthusiastic and helpful. She is one of the chemistry department's strongest assets.

SUMMARY

In the one and a half years she has been at Oakland University, Amanda Bryant-Friedrich, assistant professor of chemistry, has developed a substantial research group consisting of six undergraduate students and one graduate student.

Created by CareTech Administrator (webservices@caretechsolutions.com) on Thursday, April 18, 2002
Modified by CareTech Administrator (webservices@caretechsolutions.com) on Thursday, April 18, 2002
Article Start Date: Monday, November 10, 2003