Congress to rewrite fee referendum

300 percent graduate increase questioned

By CANDI SCHWARK Staff Writer

The referendum approved in November by the OU student body to restructure and increase the student activities fees resulted in a 300 percent fee increase for graduate

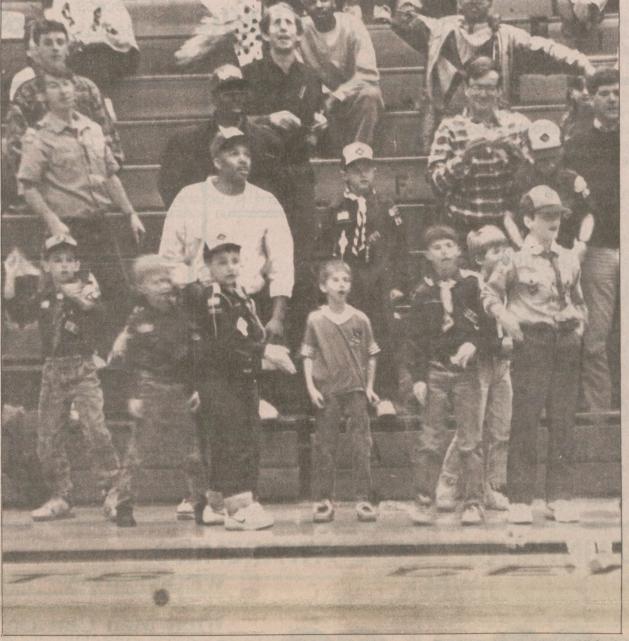

Congress is rewriting a proposal to resubmit to students in March, according to University Student Congress President Christina Landry. If students and the board of trustees approve the new referendum, new fees would not go into effect until fall of 1990, she said.

The initial proposal recommended restructuring to a flat rate fee, increasing fall and winter rates to $12 for undergraduates and $10 for graduate students. Spring and summer fees were set at $6 and $5, respectively.

Steady inflation and declining enrollment since 1985 made it difficult for Congress to provide services to the student body, according to the initial referendum.

The activities fee helps support student activities such as fraternities, academic and sports clubs, the Student Program Board, WOUX and The Oakland Post.

Engler announces campaign, higher education goals

By LISA TAYLOR Staff Writer

Oakland University administration, faculty, staff and students gathered in the OC Crockery last Monday to hear Michigan's Senate Majority Leader and gubernatorial candidate John Engler.

Environmental issues addressed

By TOM SAWYER Special Writer

With the environment fast becoming a major issue of concern, OU faculty and staff are begining to make efforts to help alleviate the growing waste problem.

Dick Moore, director ofspecial services, said his department supports the recycling effort fully. Moore said the department is pleased with the disposal companies the university has hired becuase they recycle.

"Unfortunatly, recycling is not one of the top priorities for many companies," Moore said.

OU's trash is picked up by Bushman Disposal and Standard Disposal. Bushman who picks up the smaller units of trash has been into recycling since 1940. Standard handles the larger items and drops wood, paper, cardboard and aluminum products off to places that re-

"There are a number of things that could be done," said Sharon Howell, associate professor of communications.

"There is a tremendous amount of paper being wasted. We need to be a plastic and styrofoam free campus."

Howell and fellow professor Richard Stamps recently wrote a letter to OU president Joseph Champagne asking him to create a committee to put forward an environmental action agenda.

One area coming under fire from campus environmentalists is the use of styrofoam and plastic food and drink containers which are not biodegradable. They do not break down and decompose when put in Marriott who handles the food service at OU has asked its suppliers about alternative containers.

"The suppliers don't have the answers," said Allan Roberts, campus operations director for Marriott.

"There is no reason to use plastic or styrofoam, for what we are using it now. We should use glass or ceramics," she said.

Marriott is also starting to get into recycling. At Alma College, Marriott is recycling almost everything according to Jon Groteluschen, vice-president and director of finance at Alma. Alma is also kicking off a program to recycle paper.

"We met last month, on this very issue, to see what we could do, "said Roberts.

Bill Marshall, the director of the Oakland Center pointed out that a recent study found that 17 percent of the garbage collected at the University of Michigan is cardboard pizza

"The life of a pizza box is one Others pay lip service. We need to hour and 15 minutes," Marshall said. "We need recycling and we need it

One major drawback to using biodegradable and recyclable materials is the cost.

The picture of higher education in Michigan is a positive one, state Sen. William Sederburg concluded in a report on results of Michigan public higher education faculty survey he coordinated.

They were the only university faculty group to heartily disagree. Michigan Technological University disagreed slightly. The OU surveys returned represent a 7 percent margin of error based on the total faculty population.

Sederburg prepared a 73-question survey, which was distributed to 11,500 faculty members through the 15 public four-year Michigan colleges and universities in late April and May of 1989. The response of 4,000 faculty members " ... accurately reflected the current mix (professors, associate professors and instructors) of the faculty population," Sederburg wrote.

The senator included major issues of concern to both the legislature and the university community. A Carnegie Commission national survey conducted at the same time showed that Michigan faculty and their national counterparts shared concerns about the issues of students' college pre-See SURVEY page 3

Smith Corona presents three products that can help make schoolwork academic.

The Smith Corona PWP 2000 Personal Word Processor is in a class by itself. It's so compact it can fit in the most compact dorm room. Yet, thanks to features like a built-in disk drive, 100,000 character DataDisk capacity, and a crystal clear display, it makes it easy to transform B's into A's.

For those who prefer an electronic typewriter, the Smith Corona XD 4600 is the typewriter of preference. With its 16 character display and approximately 7,000 characters of editable memory, you can have the convenience of word processing features with the simplicity of a typewriter.

Of course, the pocket-size Spell-Right 300P also comes with impeccable references. In this case, a built-in electronic dictionary, a thesaurus, a calculator, even a collection of challenging word games.

Faculty survey a good idea, but will state listen?

Senator William Sederburg's survey of Michigan's higher education faculty is an encouraging sign, in that it indicates someone in Lansing thinks communicating with faculty is important to the future of higher education. But whether the information it contains will effect any change is a different story.

First, Governor Blanchard and the Legislature must be willing to listen to what the faculty have to say. Based on Blanchard's track record, that is unlikely. Secondly, Sederburg's recent announcement that he won't be running for re-election means he will no longer chair the Appropriations Subcommittee for Higher Education after December 1990. That means it's up to Sederburg's successor to choose whether or not to carry on anything initiated by Sederburg, who has had a good reputation for listening to the needs of educators.

In keeping with that reputation, Sederburg surveyed the faculty at the state's 15 public four-year higher education institutions to find out what they think about such major issues as state funding and the quality of education. Not surprisingly, the results indicate that, statewide, faculty are crying our for more state funding.

Eighty-five percent of respondents disagreed with the statement, "State funding is generally adequate for the demands presently placed on universities." Seventy-five percent of respondents agreed with the statement, "Michigan faces a significant threat to the future of higher education due to the inadequacy of state support."

Sederburg commented in the report that he was not surprised that getting more state funding was faculty's major concern. But he said, "Greater discussion among schools and state policy makers needs to take place to clarify the feeling that all schools are being mistreated by the legislature compared to other schools." The senator said it's difficult to understand why 14 of 15 schools feel that funds are being distributed unfairly.

Indeed, more discussion is needed, but not simply between "schools" and the Legislature. Dialogues already take place between the state and top university officials, such as our President Joseph Champagne and Vice President of Governmental Affairs John DeCarlo. Judging by administration's progress - state prisons still get more of Michigan's pie than education does -- the time has come for more discussion to take place between the state's faculty and its lawmakers.

Sederburg has given the faculty a chance to speak. We hope Lansing listens.

BW announces an enhancement to the PS/2.

A high-speed loan.

If you're like most students, you're often running on empty when it comes to ready cash.

That's why we've come up with the IBM PS/2® Loan for Learning. It's easy. It's fast. And it's affordable.

Interest rates are substantially lower than those of most consumer loans. Just 1.5% above the Prime Rate (as published in The Wall Street Journal).

Qualified students (or their parents), faculty and staff⁺ can borrow from $1,500 to $8,000 for the purchase of an IBM Personal System/2.®* The one-page application makes it as easy as applying for a credit card.

Pay for your PS/2 in easy bites. Take five years to repay. Choose from two payment plans: Standard (fixed) or Graduated. Under the Graduated plan, you pay as little as $33.32 a month for a PS/2 Model 30 286 preloaded with software.

Here's the smart way to get the money you need, for the PS/2 you need. Visit your campus outlet for an application or call the Nellie Mae Loan Hotline at 1 (800) 634-9308.

For more information, please call 393-6280.

OK, so I'm not Paul Simon, but the message is clear ... even if the student activities fee increases, OU students can get a lot of entertainment, exercise or socializing on campus, for little or no cost, with a student ID card.

The benefits of that one little, color-coded identification card are many, but they are wasted if that special piece of paper stays in your wallet.

Lepley Center is full of opportunities — free opportunities. Of course, the only catch is that someone has to pick up the phone or walk to the center and reserve a court or find out the open gym and swim times.

If you invite non-students, admitted on weekends only, they pay $5.

If athletic activities aren't tops on your list, then check out Varner productions. Students cost is $3 and the performances are first-rate.

Meadow Brook Theatre offers student rates on Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday evenings plus all matinees are 20 percent off. Students can also buy one "rush" ticket at the box office the day of the performance at 50 percent off.

Intermission is a good time to check out the Meadow Brook Art Gallery across the hall which is showing the late G. Mennen Williams' collection of African Art, donations accepted.

The Student Program Board is always planning special events, too. If the events—lectures, shows, entertainment, dances and parties - aren't free, they're low-cost or donations-only. The more interest students show, the more activities the board plans. And, your student activities fee helps support these Ifour recent "Spirit Week" was a typical example of OU student involvement, what a sad school this is. At a time when tuition is high and spending money is low, the freebies or low-cost activities could make a difference in a more exciting college life.

Join an organization. Each receives financial support from the activities fee. Choose from approximately 100 of them academic, social, religious or athletic. If you don't like them, form a new one.

Currently, each full time student is paying a $9.75 per semester activities fee. This is my last semester, but it's the first semester I've really tried to get my money's worth.

Even with the proposed increase in the fee, OU is way behind other colleges in this type of fee. Using the OU ID card enables each student to get back some, or all of that fee.

Stick around campus awhile, visit, get involved and take pride in the buildings, the grounds and the activities OU offers.

Slide the OU ID card out of your wallet, walk over to Lepley February 17 before 1:00 p.m. and you can see two great games. OU's women's and men's basketball teams play Wayne State University. They are your teams, and the ID card is money in your pocket. It's all you need.

Play some tennis, Dennis See a play, May Cross country ski, Lee Set yourself free.

Use your OU ID.

The 90s: Engineers are smarter, faster

Naim Kheir, chairman of Electrical Engineering and Systems Engineering feels the only way Americans are going to "regain competence in the world as a technology leader" is by increasing the priority of higher education.

He attributes a lack of awareness of the need for more competitive graduates, by both government and industry, as a major reason for the country's lag in the field.

Valentine's Day is simply that, and not St. Valentine's Day — the two have no connection.

February 14, recognized as the holiday of love and romance, does not find its origins with neither the late St. Valentine, Roman priest and physician, nor with St. Valentine, former bishop of Terni, Italy.

The valentine, however, was the first of all greeting cards and dates back to the 16th century, but the actual holiday dates at least from the 14th century.

"Valentine's Day is our single busiest day of the year," said Skip McClatchey, store manager of Sydney Boggs candy store in Rochester Hills' Great Oaks Mall. The most popular item is the sweetheart assortment box, which

Wesley Berry Florist in the University Square Plaza said Valentine's Day is their second busiest holiday of the year. A dozen red roses is the hot item this time of year because they have a $16.95 special versus the normal $34, Remillard said. Some couples, like office assistant

Magazine mistaken

As I picked up the "Sports Illustrated" (SI) at my office last week and glanced at the cover, I thought, "Oh they're highlighting a woman athlete this week."

Then, I looked again. The featured woman was dressed in a skimpy swimsuit and the headlines read, "Judit Masco in the Grenadines." Hmm... Judit Masco. The name did not sound familiar. Is she a swimmer? A water skier? A surfer?

I opened the magazine and, to my surprise, found many more photographs of women in swimsuits and women out of swimsuits lolling on beaches with come hither looks on their faces.

Whoops! Did I pick up "Vogue" or "Cosmopolitan"? No... this is definitely SI.

OK, will someone tell me what fashion models are doing in a sports magazine? What? This is a special swimsuit issue? It comes out every year? It's been coming out for 26 years? Excuse my ignorance, but I thought a sports magazine was supposed to cover sports, not uncover them.

Scantily clad women in a sports magazine. Well, that makes about as much sense as recipies in "Motor Trend" or new lingerie fashions in "National Geographic".

When I open up a sports magazine, I want to see what is going on in the world of sports, not the world of flesh and fantasy-I'm weird that way.

Supporters of the issue say it is harmless and that they wonder why these "women libbers" make a big fuss every year? The issue is not harmless. Aside from the inappropriate placement of the pictures in a sports magazine, the issue also emphasizes a message women have been receiving from Day One: "It doesn't matter whether you win or lose, it's how good you look."

A woman is taught to develop her pectorals rather than her talents. Women are driven to breast enlargements or reductions, nose jobs, tummy tucks, liposuction, fad diets, face lifts, hair coloring and makeup to make themselves look better, instead of focusing their energy on something more constructive. Now, there is nothing wrong with maintaining a healthy physique, but some of these procedures are excessive and dangerous.

People may argue that swimsuit issue models are not bad role models for young girls. True, but girls should set their goals higher than just wanting to look good. If a young boy said he wanted to grow up to be just like the guy on the cover of "GQ" magazine, parents would probably send the child to counseling. People expect boys to idolize Babe Ruth, Joe Namath or Gordie Howe—because boys are taught to achieve.

Girls on the other hand are taught to idolize Cheryl Tiegs, Christie Brinkley or Miss America—because girls are taught to look good.

Billie Jean King has said that the lack of women's sports coverage in SI is what is sexist about the magazine, not the swimsuit issue itself. How can a magazine take women's athletics seriously when the magazine when the magazine treats women as sex objects?

SI and the rest of the sports magazines will never take women's sports seriously as long as they continue to exploit women in this way.

The real losers in this whole situation are the women athletes. They work hard at what they do and should be recognized for their efforts, but they are overshadowed every year by an issue devoted to bathing beauties.

It is time "Sports Illustrated" and the rest of the sporting world emphasized women's athletic accomplishments rather than their sexuality.

Bring on the Bulldogs

Pioneer players dive for a loose ball during OU's 86-72 victory over Lake Superior State University Saturday at the Lepley Sports Center. The win sets up a showdown between the Pioneers and Ferris State on Thursday.

Words of wisdom, I hope

Greg Kampe

Editor's note:

This is the fifth in a series of columns written by men's basketball coach Greg Kampe throughout the season.

28 games makes a long season. While most believe it's the coach's job to motivate his players, I don't. I think that the player has to motivate himself. They have to learn how to keep themselves on that cutting edge for six months. Mental perpetration is so important, it can be the difference between winning and losing. As we prepare for "The Game" of the year this Thursday at Ferris State you might think that I would try to give an emotional, win one for the Gipper speech before the game. I won't.

The players will start getting dressed during half-time of the women's game. They all have their little routines they go through. Because of the importance of this game they will be a little more attentive to detail. Tie the shoes a little tighter so to say. There will be music playing and certain players will be loud while others are off by themselves.

Ten minutes before the start of the game I will enter the room. We will discuss the game plan: what we feel as coaches the team has to do to win. They have heard these things all week so it's just a reminder. When I'm done I'll ask if there are any questions. If not, I giver my pre-game talk. Thursday it will sound something like this:

"Make no doubt about it gentlemen, this is a big game. Win and we're back in the race. Lose and we cannot win the championship. These are the types of games that make all the effort and hours of work worthwhile. Eighty percent of the teams in this country don't get to play in a game of this importance. They are just playing out their season, talking of

The important thing tonight is how you perform. Everyone in this room wants to win. I know that. But everyone in Ferris' locker room wants to win too. The key is the little things. How are you going to react in a pressure situation. Will you remember what you've been coached to do or will you take off on your own? We all know how we can win this game- can we stick to that plan when something goes wrong? I know we will play hard, but we have to play smart. We have to get to the last five minutes with a chance to win. Remember that. No matter what happens early- a big lead, fall behind, whatever... don't panic. Our goal is to win it in the last five minutes.

Seniors, you've given four years of yourself to the University for this moment. Don't get caught up in this "we have to win" or "its over". Enjoy the moment. Relax and revel in the excitement of the game. This HAS to be fun. If all of you individually meet the challenge of performing well in a pressure situation, the results will take care of themselves. Let's go out and show everyone here that no one plays harder or smarter than we

Pioneer victory coupled with Ferris St. loss sets up Thursday showdown in Big Rapids

By TIM TAFF Staff Writer

The stage is set for the biggest basketball game in the history of Oakland University.

University at the hands of Northern Michigan University, and a 86-72 victory by the Pioneers over Lake Superior State University Saturday at Lepley OU once again controls its with Eric Taylor and Andre Bond own destiny.

Big Rapids will be the location for the clash between FSU with its 10-2 conference leading record and OU at 8-3, which is looking for a share of the conference lead.

The Pioneers have an opportunity to atone for a dreadful previous week that saw them drop conference games to Grand Valley State University and Saginaw Valley State University.

OU coach Greg Kampe was pleased with his team's new lease on life, "We've said all along it would take four losses to knock a team out Zuver who finished with 15 points. of the race," he said.

Saturday's game against LSSU was just the medicine the Pioneers needed to shake them out of their mini slump.

The Lakers entered the game with a 2-9 conference and a 6-15 record overall. LSSU coach Mark Paluszak thought a Thursday night overtime loss to Hillsdale College hurt his Thanks to a loss by Ferris State team's chances, "We're coming off a tough loss, and we're a little down, but Oakland is tough they have so many weapons," he said.

The Pioneers led 39-31 at the half hitting from inside and outside.

The second half saw OU stretch its lead to as many as 20 points with Brian Gregory finding the mark for several key baskets.

"They were laying off of me expecting me to give up the ball, so I took the shot," Gregory said.

Women hoopsters closer to defense of GLIAC title

By MARC MORANIEC Sports Editor

Last years GLIAC champion women's basketball team moved a step closer to a repeat title performance with a 105-76 trouncing of Lake Superior State University Saturday.

OU's conference record stands at 10-1 and 20-3 overall.

Second place Grand Valley State University, which handed the Pioneers their only league loss, are 9-3 in the GLIAC and 18-5 overall.

Debbie Delie paced the potent Pioneer attack, which shot 73 percent, by pouring in 32 points and hauling down nine boards.

Delie was 11-of-13 from the field and 10-of-11 at the free throw line. Jennifer Golen scored 20 points on 10-of-13 from the floor.

Shawne Brow and Amy Atkinson added 11 and ten points respectively.

Chris Comito led the Lakers with 21 points while Kris Bullock and Natasha Porter chipped in with 14 and 11 points respectively.

LSSU enjoyed its only lead at 2-0 after a Michelle Thatcher hoop to open the game's scoring. OU then went on a 21-8 run capped off by a Delie lay-up to put the Pioneers ahead 21-10.

The Pioneers, ranked No. 15 in Division II, finished a first half that saw them shoot 85 percent from the field on 22-of-26 with a 58-40 lead.

The Lakers got as close as 15 when they trailed 62-47 but the Pioneers ripped off a 16-4 run which pushed their lead to 80-51 with 10:11

The rest of the game gave coach Bob Taylor a chance to rest his starters and empty the bench to give the reserves some playing time.

Guard Ann Serra did not play in Saturday's game with the Lakers after re-injuring her hurt knee last Saturday against Saginaw Valley

State University. Although the Pioneers beat the Lakers, Taylor said it wasn't an easy

"When you lose a player like Serra and then you have to play two games in the next week, it's really hard to adjust," he said.

Serra, who has opted until after the season for any type of possible surgery, hasn't set a definite return

Thursday, OU travels to Big Rapids to battle the Bulldogs from Ferris State University and Saturday the Pioneers are home to play Wayne State University.
