

Thursday, May 23, 2002

Nominations accepted for outstanding AP

By Jeff Samoray, OU Web Writer

OU faculty and staff may nominate their co-workers for the 2002 Outstanding Administrative Professional Award. The AP Assembly created the award in 1984 to recognize AP employees who demonstrate outstanding achievements in their professional roles.

"I think this is a very valuable award because employees are nominated by their peers," said Vicki Larabell, member of the Outstanding AP Award Committee and associate director of the Information Technology Institute. "It's nice knowing that your work is recognized by your co-workers, and it encourages people to participate in community service. It promotes people to do their best."

This year's nominations are being accepted online for the first time, making it easier to submit nominations. The form can be found on the AP Assembly Web site. Faculty and staff may nominate both AP and Individual Contract employees for the award. Nominations are due by Friday, May 31.

The Outstanding AP Award Committee will choose the award recipient based on his/her support of the institutional mission and strategic plan, spirit of cooperation, and involvement in community and university service. The winner will receive an award plaque and a $1,000 stipend at the AP of the Year Reception, which is Wednesday, June 19, in the Pioneer Room of the Recreation and Athletics Center.

For more information, contact Larabell at (248) 370-4662 or larabell@oakland.edu.

SUMMARY

OU faculty and staff may nominate their co-workers for the 2002 Outstanding Administrative Professional Award. The AP Assembly created the award in 1984 to recognize AP employees who have demonstrated outstanding achievements in their professional roles.

Created by CareTech Administrator (webservices@caretechsolutions.com) on Thursday, May 23, 2002
Modified by CareTech Administrator (webservices@caretechsolutions.com) on Thursday, May 23, 2002
Article Start Date: Monday, January 23, 2006