

Thursday, September 10, 2015

OU Honors College continues to grow, attract top students

For the second consecutive year, Oakland University's Honors College welcomed a record number of freshmen to its ranks. This year's class is remarkable not only because of its size – more than 300 students – but also because of its strong academic profile. Nearly 40 percent of its members are Presidential Scholars – students who achieved at least a 3.9 GPA and an ACT score of 31 or above while in high school. Learn more about the Honors College at oakland.edu/hc.

Honors College Dean Graeme Harper addresses this year's freshman class during the "Making Discoveries" freshman colloquium.

Spirited, color-coordinated teams and their advisers took part in this year's freshman colloquium.