Recognizing faculty for teaching and research excellence, creative achievements and community service

This Founders' Day, Oakland University faculty members were honored for their scholarly achievements, dedication, path-breaking discoveries in research and critical teaching roles in educating the leaders of tomorrow.

At the April 15 luncheon, OU formally recognized faculty members whose teaching and research excellence, creative achievements and community service have contributed to the betterment of society.

Founders' Day honors the memory of University benefactors Alfred and Matilda Dodge Wilson, whose gift of 1,400 acres and $2 million has enriched the lives of thousands of people since Oakland University's founding in 1957.
