Early Childhood Outdoor Adventure

This week, Julie Burn-Ross' Early Childhood class (EC 3322) took to the woods for new perspectives the outdoors offer for learning.

The focus of the activity was to experience the environment as a third teacher. The environment offered the place to be creative, problem solve, and to explore in partnership.

Students reflected on the unlimited potential that the outdoors offer to social, emotional, physical, and cognitive skill development for young children within an integrated curriculum.

Instant Searches to Make Browsing Easier

Sometimes it can be hard to find the books necessary due to the search terms library catalogs must use being unfamiliar or not intuitive.

Have you ever tried a subject search for wordless books, or books about Native Americans, and come up with few or none? The ERL has crafted some instant searches for a few of the frequent topics that patrons are searching for.

All you need to do is click the ERL's link to the Frequent Catalog Searches page and the system will do a current search for you. Once you find the book you need, it's helpful to look at the subject headings in the catalog record for that book to know how to find more in the future. Happy Reading!
