Statement of Purpose: The Oakland Journal is meant to serve three purposes: 1) to provide a commons for university people to get to know each other's work and creative energies, and 2) to provide a marketplace of ideas that will work to the general benefit; and, 3) to provide a beacon to students on the importance of writing as well as a place for them to achieve their first publication.

Advice to Authors: We prefer articles from Oakland University faculty, staff, students, and alumni. Generally, articles should be 15 double-spaced pages or fewer. Email submissions if possible. There are no fixed deadlines, however, material arriving by June is usually in time for the fall issue and material arriving by October is usually in time for the winter issue. We would like to hear from you, anything you feel would be of interest to other OU people, our neighbors or aimed toward the betterment of our University will be welcome.

Editor decisions are made in consultation with the associate editors. Any reasonably current word processor format will do. By mail, send to Sherm Folland, Department of Economics, Oakland University, Rochester, MI 48309; by email to: folland@oakland.edu.

Getting a Copy: If you want a copy, these are provided without charge to all faculty, staff, and students upon request. Others may purchase a copy for $3.50. Full time faculty and administrative level staff receive each issue automatically. Anyone can download any current or previous article at the Journal's website archives by going to <http://www.oakland.edu> (the Oakland University homepage), click "New & Info", then select us from the "News and Publications" menu.

Funding Support: Financial support is provided by the Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs and Provost, and this is gratefully acknowledged.
