By Jeff Samoray, OU Web Writer

Oakland University's 2002-2003 dean's list is now available online. OU students, their relatives and friends may access the list through the Oakland University Web site. Students named to the list also will continue to have their names submitted to their local newspapers.

This year, 1,097 undergraduate and post-bachelor students were named to the dean's list, which is an increase from 1,068 students last year.

"The dean's list recognizes the efforts and dedication of our students to their academic mission," said Virinder Moudgil, vice president for academic affairs and provost. "We are proud of our students' accomplishments and wish them continued success in their chosen fields of study. Our students are the most effective ambassadors of the excellence of academic programs of Oakland University."

Students named to the list are those who distinguish themselves academically by attaining a grade point average of 3.60 or higher for 12 numerically graded credits in each of the consecutive fall/winter semesters. The list is posted once a year following the winter semester for the previous academic year.

Visit the Dean's List Web site to search the 2002-2003 list by last name, first name, city, major or class. Site visitors also may view the entire list alphabetically by last name. Note that what appears is not a complete list, since some students who qualified for the dean's list have requested their names not be published for privacy reasons. The 2001-2002 dean's list also is still available online.
