CHARTER ALUMNI FUND DRIVE GOES UP AND OVER!

Congratulations are in order to the pacesetting Classes of 1963 and 1964 as Oakland University's Charter Alumni Fund Drive showed total contributions of $2,210.50 when the drive officially closed May 31.

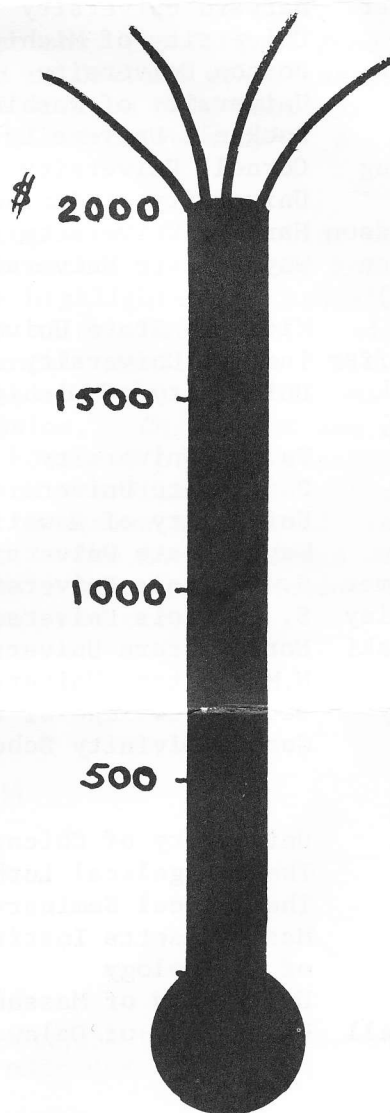

Forty percent of the alumni participated as donors to the drive with 40 of these becoming Wilson Donors. Wilson Donors gave $25 or more.

Six matching gifts from corporations where alumni were employed help swell the receipts and pledges beyond the pre-drive goal of $2,000.00.

The Charter Class of 1963, under the leadership of Bill Kath, surpassed 1964's number of contributors but only in a last minute surge as the drive deadline neared. Penny Batts headed the '64 class agents.

Roger Williams '63 was the winner of two season tickets to the Meadow Brook Music Festival offered at the kick-off dinner by Chancellor Varner. These went to the agent who showed the greatest number of his prospects contributing.

Success of the initial drive is due in large measure to the hard work of the 46 class agents who made both mail, telephone and personal contact with their former classmates.

NEWS FROM MEADOW BROOK

THE FESTIVAL

The Meadow Brook Music Festival will open its second season in the Baldwin Pavilion July 8 with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra playing a six week season this year.

Tickets at $15 (in the pavilion) and $5 (on the lawn) are still available but going fast. Write Meadow Brook Festival, Intramural Building, OU for tickets.

THE SCHOOL

(Reprinted from the Oakland Observer)

The Meadow Brook School of Music will begin its first year July 6, 1965, with a student body of nearly four hundred musicians.

Walter S. Collins, dean of the Meadow Brook School and chairman of OU's music department said in mid-June, "Our enrollment is nearly complete at this time. We still have openings for violinists in the Student Orchestra, altos in the Adult Chorus, and tenors and basses in the Youth Chorus."

The Student Orchestra, which will be conducted by Albert Tipton, principal flutist of the Detroit Symphony and conductor of the Meadow Brook Chamber Ensemble, will be modelled man-for-man on the 101-member Detroit Symphony Orchestra. The Student Orchestra will present a concert during its six-week session; and members will have an opportunity to audition for a "half-and-half" performance with the Symphony, that is, an orchestra of half students and half regular musicians.

In conjunction with the orchestral program, twenty-five orchestral conductors from all over the United States will participate in a Conductor's Workshop under the direction of Detroit's brilliant young conductor, Sixten Ehrling.

The four-week choral program will be under the supervision of Robert Shaw, acknowledged as one of America's finest choral conductors and music educators.

Two choral groups, a Youth Chorus of one hundred high school students and an Adult Chorus of college students and adult singers, will work under Shaw and such distinguished vocalists and educators as soprano Saramae Endich, alto Florence Kopleff, Blake Stern, tenor, Paul Steinitz, visiting lecturer and Director of the London Bach Choir, and Burton Garlinghouse of Yale University.

Questioned about the quality of its students, Collins replied, "We're highly pleased with the talent and ability of the students. We think we will have one of the finest groups of student musicians ever assembled in one place under such a distinguished faculty. At first we had some tense moments because the applications were so slow in arriving, but apparently it was a simple case of procrastination till the last possible moment."

Approximately half of the Meadow Brook students will be living on campus, increasing the resident student population by about two hundred. These students will be housed on the lower floors of Hill and all of Anibal House. Pryale House will be used as a practice area, with pianos in about half the rooms, utilizing as fully as possible the somewhat limited facilities of the Oakland University campus.
