House Speeds Ike's Atom Bill but Senate Stalls

Representatives Give Tentative Approval After Lengthy Session

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Eisenhower administration's atomic energy bill raced toward victory in the House early today. But it remained stalled in a still-talking Senate session with no end yet in sight.

Uncorking a marathon meeting of its own, the House wound up 17½ hours of debate—with lots of votes—at 3:14 a.m. EDT by stamping tentative but seemingly decisive approval on the omnibus measure which would revamp the nation's basic atomic energy law.

Then it adjourned till Monday after a parliamentary maneuver by Rep. Murray (D-Tenn.) forced delay of the final, formal roll-call vote on the bill.

In the Senate, where there has been plenty of oratory but few votes in a round-the-clock meeting that started Wednesday morning, weary administration supporters were still seeking in vain for an agreement which would move the disputed measure forward along the lines they want.

GOP leaders said they planned to keep the session going till midnight tonight—then, after a Sunday lay-off, start up again Monday. Sen. Morse (Ind-Ore) took the floor at 2:18 a.m. for more hours of speechmaking to criticize what he says would be the bill's "give-away" of a basic national resource to "the private power monopoly."

Morse opened up after Sen. Sparkman (D-Ala.) had held the floor 5 hours, 13 minutes. Sparkman, another member of a determined band of opponents composed mostly of Democrats, asked a change in the bill to allow a longer government holding period on atomic patents.

Sen. Knowland of California, the Republican leader, spoke determinedly both to the Senate and in an interview. He said he planned to press Monday his cloture petition to limit debate, unless he gets an earlier agreement to shorten the talkfest—an accord he has been unsuccessful in gaining in repeated attempts so far.

Nor were there indications his cloture move, already introduced with the signatures of 38 GOP senators, was likely to gain the 64-member approval needed to take effect if he presses it to a vote. Most of the 47 Democrats and some Republicans were reported opposed to the cloture attempt.

In the House, where strict debate-limiting rules are the normal course, administration forces held solid sway yesterday and into the wee hours of the morning as they went through the complicated bill. The measure in general would revise the original 1946 atomic energy law to allow a limited sharing of atomic information with U.S. allies and to let private industry enter the field of peacetime atomic power development.

Wreckage in Tennessee Mountains

WHERE SIX DIED—Scattered wreckage marks the spot where a plane piloted by Gordon Wyrick of Pontiac crashed near Pikeville, Tenn., yesterday afternoon killing all six occupants. The plane left here Friday morning en route to Florida.

Oakland Wheat Farmers Also Back Crop Controls

Oakland County farmers joined other United States wheat growers yesterday in voting once again to accept controls on their next year's crop—but the margin was the thinnest ever.

The national and county vote was not in line with the Michigan tally. Michigan growers rejected controls by a 4,359-to-3,685 vote.

Pilot Says Plane Suffered Attack

Claims 2 Fighters Hit British Airliner Over South China Sea

WASHINGTON (AP)—The State Department said today "two Chinese Communist-based fighter aircraft" deliberately shot down a British airliner near Hainan, and two U. S. aircraft carriers have been dispatched to protect rescue and search operations.

HONG KONG (U)—There is "substantial evidence" that two unidentified fighters shot down a British Skymaster airliner with 18 persons aboard which ditched off Red China's Hainan Island yesterday, the Hong Kong government announced today.

Hainan, which lies about 200 miles southwest of here, is the site of several large Communist military air bases.

The pilot of the airliner reportedly said in a formal statement that he was attacked by two fighter planes whose markings he could not distinguish and whose pilots he could not see to ascertain nationality.

Chief Stewardess Iris E. Stohart, of Cathay Pacific Airlines said bullets were removed today from two of the eight survivors picked up by a U. S. Air Force Albatross rescue plane. Two doctors said one man suffered what might have been a bullet.

Burkemo Leads Foe in PGA Tournament

ST. PAUL, Minn. (U)—Wry-necked Sam Snead, the top favorite, took a 2-up lead over Dutch Harrison today at the nine-hole turn of their 36-hole third round match in the PGA championship.

Tempestuous Tommy Bolt took a 3-up lead over Jim Browning, upset winner over National Open champion Ed Furgol, on the first nine. He fired birdies on the 1st, 5th and 6th holes.

In other early starting matches, qualifying medalist Ed (Porky) Oliver led Detroit's Chick Harbert, the 1949 PGA runner-up, 1-up after four holes and defending champion Walter Burkemo was 2-up on Johnny Revolta, the 1933 winner, at the 3rd.

Gordon Wyrick and Party Hit Tennessee Peak

Carried Benton Harbor Group After Leaving Here Friday Forenoon

Gordon F. Wyrick, 41, operator of Gordon's Flying Service at Pontiac Municipal Airport, and five Benton Harbor people, were killed Friday afternoon when their twin-engined plane struck a mountain peak in Tennessee.

The crash occurred near Pikeville as the plane apparently encountered bad weather conditions on the second leg of a flight to Miami.

Wyrick left Pontiac alone in a DeHavilland Dove Friday morning and stopped at Benton Harbor airport to pick up Howard E. Anthony, prospective purchaser of the plane, and four others.

All were killed instantly when the explosion which accompanied the crash scattered the plane and bodies of its occupants over a wide area.

Anthony was president of the Heath Co., manufacturer of electronics, and a prominent Benton Harbor businessman.

Others killed were:

Mr. and Mrs. Laurel Brown, of Lawrence, near Benton Harbor, friends of Anthony; Gordon Paxton, a Benton Harbor industrial designer; and Lawrence Durham, Anthony's own pilot.

A Tennessee highway patrolman this morning said finding of a seventh person might have perished. Benton Harbor Airport employees, however, reported that only six were aboard when the plane left there just before noon Friday.

It had been flying about three hours when it crashed and is not known to have made any other stop after leaving Benton Harbor.

Pontiac Airport officials said today they understood the flight to Florida was a demonstration flight. Wyrick and Durham planned to bring the plane back and the Browns were to come with them after the weekend. Anthony and Paxton planned to continue to Jamaica for about two weeks.

Accounts of the crash are contradictory, and an investigation has been started by the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

First reports indicated the plane struck the mountain through failure to maintain sufficient elevation. Other reports indicate it may have crashed because of mechanical trouble encountered while airborne.

A witness, Mrs. Arthur Simmons, who lives near the crash scene on a 2,300-foot high Brayton Mountain, said she watched the plane pass about 300 feet over her house with a "rear like a bunch of jets flying over." She said she saw a motor fall from the plane and land near her house.

Plane's log showed it had gone up to 13,000 feet to get above clouds and had descended to 2,000 feet at (Continued on Page 2, Col. 8)

U.S. Urges Allies to Speed Defense of Free Indochina

WASHINGTON (UP)—The United States is urging its allies to draw a defense line around free Indochina and warn the Communists that stepping over it could mean all-out war.

Diplomatic officials said today that U.S. negotiators are pressing this strategy as they push for quick agreement on a Southeast Asia defense alliance to halt further Red aggression.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said Friday that prompt steps will be taken to create the pact and suggested that the Allies use the lesson of Indochina in welding the new defenses.

Couple Forced on Terror-Ride

Armed Thug Enters Car, Orders Pontiac Pair to Drive or Die

An armed thug early this morning ordered a young couple to drive him around Pontiac in their car while they were parked in front of Miss Schwartz' home at about 2:30 a.m. He said the youth, about 20 years old, was brandishing a .32 caliber automatic.

Plante told Pontiac Police the youth forced his way into their car while they were parked in front of Miss Schwartz' home at about 2:30 a.m. He said the youth, about 20 years old, was brandishing a .32 caliber automatic.

He forced Plante to unlock the car door, sat between the couple and shoved a clip of ammunition into the weapon. Plante said he offered his wallet and money, but the thug said: "I don't want your dough, I've got plenty."

He shoved the gun into Plante's side and said: "I'll kill you both if you don't do what I tell you—drive me downtown."

Later the youth, dressed in a sport coat, white shirt, light blue trousers and tan elk shoes with crepe soles, bragged:

"I'm hot on a three-year rap in New York and I'm hot in Pontiac too for hitting a fire plug with a car I stole."

After driving around about 20 minutes, Plante said the youth ordered them to let him out at Huron and Perry Sts., where he disappeared. The couple was not harmed.

Earlier, police said, a car belonging to B. H. Womack of 385 W. Huron St., was found on Kennett Rd. at Perry St. rammed against a fire hydrant. It was reported stolen from in front of a downtown bar at about 1:40. Police believe the car may be the one stolen by the youthful bandit.

How's fishing in Michigan?

Devotees of the art of angling will be given first-hand information on the subject next week. In a series of daily articles written on the spot at a half-dozen of the north's best angling areas, Pontiac Press' outdoor writer, Jack Patterson will "tell all."

Central Upper Peninsula will provide the Thursday material, and for Friday, Patterson will return his story to the lower peninsula, taking up the Little Traverse and Grand Traverse Bay areas.

Concluding the series will be coverage of the Ludington, Baldwin, Manistee and Cadillac sections.

Dixie Coed Wins Miss Universe Title as Miss Brazil Takes Second Place

By JAMES BACON
LONG BEACH, Calif. (U)—A freckled daughter of the Confederacy, who has more curves than the Dixie highway, today holds the twin titles of Miss U.S.A. and Miss Universe.

Miriam Stevenson, a 21-year-old college senior from Winsboro, S.C., last night made the first grand sweep in the three-year history of the international beauty contest.

Runners-up to the winsome Southern lass were Maria Martha Rocha of Brazil, Virginia June Lee of Hong Kong, Regina Ernst of Bremen, Germany, and Ragnarhild Clauss of Sweden—in that order.

Miss Stevenson not only was voted the world's most beautiful woman but also got back her luggage, lost ever since she arrived here a week ago yesterday.

She said that first of all "I want to thank South Carolina for giving me the opportunity to come here." Then to reporters she said:

"If you all ever come down to South Carolina, I'll cook you the biggest heppin' plate of corn pone, hominy grits an' ham hocks you ever saw."

She said her victory came as a complete surprise to her.

"When I came here I wanted very much to win," she added, "but when I saw all these beautiful girls from all over the world all I could do was hope."

The runners-up took defeat smilingly, especially Miss Rocha, who had been widely considered the favorite to win. Heretofore the pageant has produced two winners—Miss U.S.A. and Miss Universe.

Miss Stevenson has blue eyes blond hair, stands 5 feet 6 inches weighs 120. She measures 36 inches at the bust and hips and 24 inches at the waist.

In the movies she would be considered the wholesome, all-American girl type—healthy, handsome and happy. She says she has no steady boy friend.

Miss Universe said her senior year at Lander College in Greenwood, S.C., will have to wait a while because:

"I want to take a crack at this actin' business."

The Miss Universe and Miss U.S.A. crowns carry with them almost identical sets of prizes. Each set includes $4,000 convertible, a 13-week contract at Uni-

33 Foreign High School Students to Spend 2 Days in Birmingham Next Week

From Our Birmingham Bureau
BIRMINGHAM — Beginning a two-day stay in Birmingham Monday evening will be 33 high school students from 12 European countries.

The youngsters—all between 12 and 18—have spent the last year in public and private high schools in the eastern part of this country as part of the American Field Service International Scholarship Program.

Their month-long bus tour of five states and Washington, D.C., ends their stay. When they return to New York Aug. 8 they will embark for their homelands.

Each has another year of high school to attend in his or her own land.

It is the field service's idea that

Animal Raids Prompt Calls for Police Aid

BIRMINGHAM — A "return to nature" movement is under way here—unofficially, of course.

Reports of squirrels invading households have been coming into the police department all week.

And yesterday, they got a report that a mama wild duck and nine ducklings had set up camp on the grounds of the Carroll Voorheis home at 1743 Mansfield St.

Mrs. Harvey Bushnell of 438 Larchlea has been having the most trouble with the pesky squirrels. She's had them trapped in cabinets, caught in-between wall partitions, and just raising general Cain.

A bushy tailed beaver came skidding down the chimney of the Frank Riley residence at 2020 W. Lincoln St., Thursday morning and defied efforts of the Dog Warden to catch him.

He hopped into the furnace, out of reach, and the frustrated Dog Warden had to leave empty handed. Mrs. Riley later thought of lighting the furnace and friend squirrel scampered out, spreading a sooty trail all over the basement.

He was finally captured on a water pipe near the basement ceiling.

Mrs. Voorheis reported all but one lone duckling had left their yard by this morning—even though the Voorheis' had been feeding them corn and offering free plunges in the youngsters' pool.

vornal-International Movie Studio and about a half dozen pieces of jewelry.

Whether Miss Stevenson will receive both sets is uncertain. Judges meet today to decide. One official said he thought one car might go to Miss Brazil as first runner-up and there was speculation she might receive other prizes as well.

Each of the foreign finalists said she thought the choice was a wise one. Miss Brazil said: "If I had been a judge I would have voted for Miss South Carolina too."

She told a reporter she is in no hurry to return to her native country. She first will visit a married sister in Grand Rapids, Mich., and another in Revere, Mass.

"Maybe I'll find a husband," she said, "and stay here too—like my sisters."

Miss Hong Kong said she couldn't believe that she had come in third.

Miss Sweden also would like to stay a while in this country, but her plans are undecided.

Miss Ernst, 18, said she was happy and surprised she fared so well in the contest. She told a reporter she had learned some English since she arrived, including "sank you very much."

Judges included actresses Piper Laurie, Julia Adams, Susan Ball, columnist Earl Wilson, illustrator Albert Varga and Tom Kelley, photographer who took the famous nude photo of Marilyn Monroe.

Fire Authorities View Attic for New Clues in Hospital Fire

Authorities investigating Wednesday's Bloomfield Hospital fire believed today that faulty wiring in the attic may have caused the blaze which routed 45 patients and 32 staff members.

Meanwhile, Bloomfield firemen were called to the hospital last night when smoke began seeping upward from the basement.

But the latest blaze was confined to an overheated refrigerator which was controlled immediately. Evacuation of patients was not necessary.

Detective Glen E. Tanner, of the Redford State Police Post fire division, said the latest explanation of the fire's probable cause followed questioning of the hospital's handyman, Roosevelt Head, 45, of Detroit, who earlier was believed to have been using a blowtorch before the fire broke out.

Tanner quoted Head as saying he was painting the northwest side of the building when he noticed smoke rising from the roof. Head said he rushed to the hospital's front desk and told workers to summon firemen.

Head told Tanner he grabbed a water hose and ascended the ladder to try to extinguish the fire. When firemen arrived, Head was still spraying water on the roof, according to Tanner.

Tanner said, after talking with Clyde Marshbanks, hospital director and owner, that old wiring below the roof was the "probable cause."

"It is apparent that Head was painting on the side of the building," said Tanner. "Patients might have believed that Head was using a torch when he went up the ladder with the hose," he added.

Member Resigns as Safety Trustee in 'Speeding' Rift

NEW YORK (UP)—The National Safety Council lost a trustee when it questioned Robert Moses' statement that speeding is the biggest cause of highway accidents.

Moses, New York City planning commissioner, recently told a White House conference that speed caused "fully half" of all traffic deaths. The council quickly advised him it had sought but never found proof of this.

When Moses replied, citing some insurance figures, the council director wrote back saying, "there are many loose statements being quoted as facts."

With that Moses yesterday sent in his resignation as a trustee. He also sent off a letter suggesting that only a "desk statistician and mathematical hair-splitter" could deny that speed causes more accidents than anything else.

Young Vandals Go on Rampage Like a Tornado

GRANT (UP)—For a few minutes today, Grant businessmen thought a tornado had swept through the town's main street during the night.

But police said the damage apparently was caused by a gang of youthful vandals. Here's what they did:

They broke into a service station where they ransacked the office, scattering money on the floor, pouring oil into an ice cream machine and taking some cigarettes.

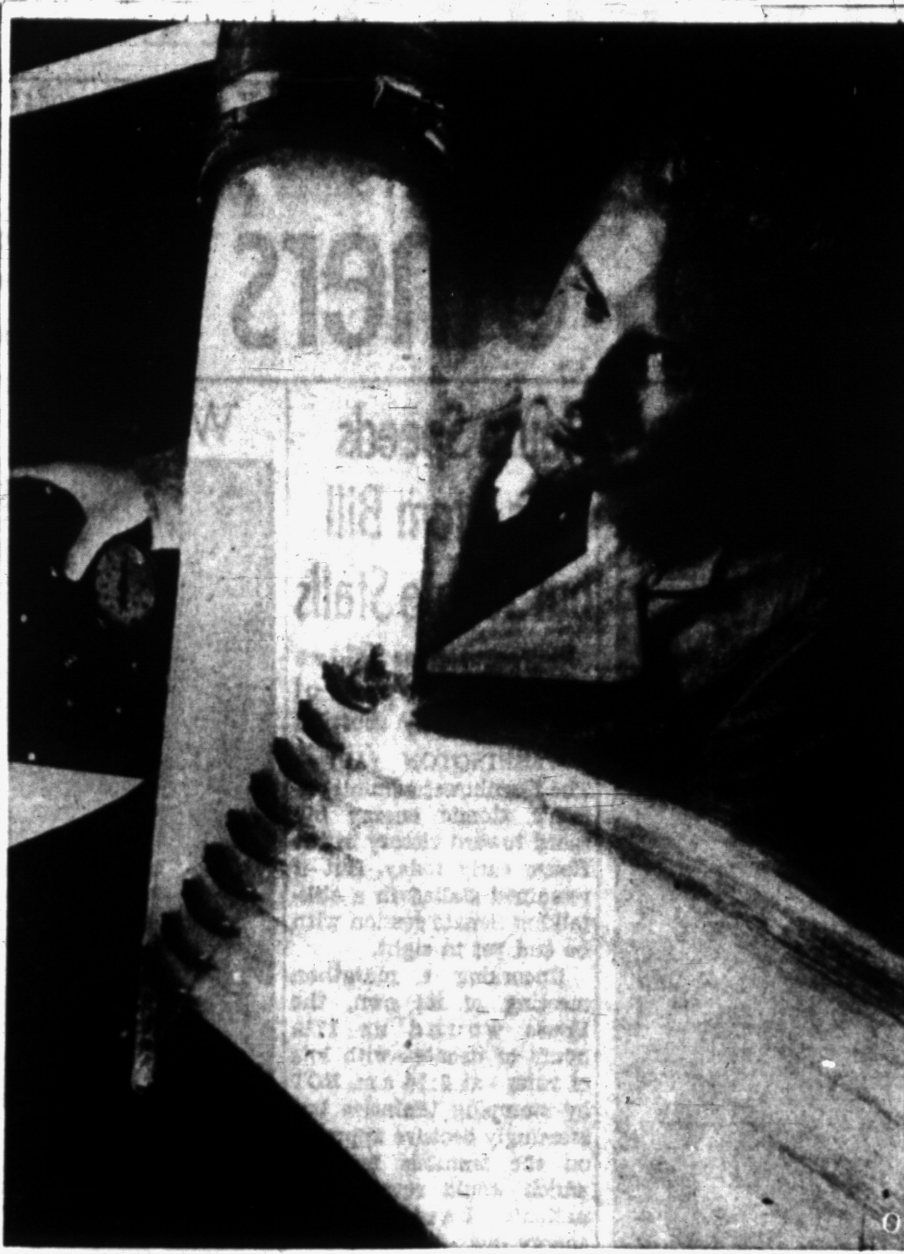

Their next stop was a garage next door where they tried to open a cash drawer. But when it failed to open they gave up and went across the street to an auto agency.

They tried to steal a new car but couldn't seem to maneuver it out of the showroom so they settled for a 1951 model in the agency's garage for a paint job. They drove the car through a triple-fold door and started to leave town. But before leaving, they stopped at an outdoor fruit stand and took two cases of fruit.

Sen. McCarthy Snubs Pentagon

An irate Joe Blasts Defense Department Clearance Procedure

WASHINGTON (UP)—An angry Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis.) said today he will no longer ask the Pentagon to okay any of his aides for access to secret information.

McCarthy's declaration came on the heels of a new Defense Department refusal to clear Thomas W. LaVenia, a McCarthy appointee on the Senate Investigations subcommittee staff, for access to classified documents, or to explain its reasons for withholding clearance.

And LaVenia, telling his side of the story to his Senate bosses, reported he believes his Pentagon turnaround stems from FBI reports about a Secret Service role he played in 1943 in investigating an alleged "plot" against President Franklin D. Roosevelt. He thinks he performed a playboy role so well it was misunderstood by investigators.

LaVenia and one other are the only two subcommittee staff members said to have been refused clearance after it was asked of the Defense Department. The other, Donald A. Surine, was switched by Chairman McCarthy from the subcommittee to the senator's own office payroll.

wound, but that no bullets were recovered.

Newsmen were barred from talking with survivors, but an official at Kaitak Airport quoted Pilot Philip Blown of Hong Kong as saying the airliner was shot down by fighter planes.

A report that Blown had identified the fighters as deadly swept-wing MIG jets could not be confirmed.

Colonial officials and airline spokesmen refused comment.

Six Americans were among the 18 persons aboard the plane, five of them members of the L. L. Parish family of Iowa Park, Tex., en route from Bandoeng, Java, to visit his parents. Mrs. Parish and her daughter, Valerie, were among the rescued. So was P. S. Thatcher of Stonington, Conn.

In addition to the five passengers and three crewmen rescued, the body of a young Chinese woman was recovered by the rescue plane.

Eyewitnesses aboard a commercial plane who saw the Skymaster ditch said three survivors were picked up by a small boat from Hainan. If they were, they presumably are in Communist hands.

IOU Wins Delay for Motorist, Also Small Loan

CHICAGO (UP)—In traffic court on a speeding charge, Theodore Koprek, 28, tried to pay his fine with a $5 IOU. He ended up getting a psychiatric test and a 50-cent loan from a bailiff for carfare home.

Koprek strode up to the bench before his case was called Friday and handed Judge Alfonso F. Wells the IOU and a note pleading not to be sent to jail. Judge Wells sent Koprek to the court psychiatrist, who reported, "definitely psychotic. Should not drive."

The judge continued the case two weeks, and Koprek walked out but came back a few minutes later and whispered to the judge that he had no carfare. A bailiff loaned him 50 cents.

M24 Crashes Claim 2 Lives

Orion Township Man, Detroit Youth Dies in 2 Accidents; 5 Hurt

Two auto accidents within only four hours and five miles of each other on M24 early today took the lives of an Oakland County farmer and a Detroit youth and sent five others to the hospital.

The dead are Warren D. Claridge, 50, of Silver Bell road, Orion Township; and Richard J. Hietala, 17, of 15066 Halmur, Detroit. Claridge was pronounced dead at the scene by Oakland County Deputy Coroner Dr. Isaac C. Prevette, and Hietala was dead on arrival at Pontiac General Hospital.

Claridge was a passenger with another farmer, Thorvald Hopkins of 3555 Gidding Rd., Orion Township, when the auto was struck at about 8:25 a.m. by a car driven by Gene Fisher of 5 1/2 N. Washington, Oxford.

Fisher and his wife, Winifred, were taken to Pontiac General Hospital for x-rays.

Hopkins told deputy Ferris Holcomb that he made a left turn into a driveway at 3000 M24 when Fisher's car came over a hill and struck his car in the left rear, throwing Claridge to the pavement. Hopkins was uninjured, Holcomb said.

The Detroit victim was fatally injured when a car driven by Christian E. Loeffler, 18, of Detroit, struck a parked large gravel trailer only four miles south of where Claridge met death.

Deputies Michael Felice and Lyle Walmsley said Loeffler attempted to pass a southbound truck, saw another car coming, cut back into his lane, lost control and hit the trailer.

Loeffler is reported in fair condition with possible head injuries and head cuts at Pontiac General Hospital. Others, all Detroiters, injured in the 4:25 a.m. crash were: Louis J. Minnaugh, 17, in critical condition with possible neck injury; and cuts; and Lee G. Gastineau, 18, in fair condition with a possible skull fracture and head cuts.

The youths were en route home from a visit to a Lake Orion cottage, deputies said.

Describe Habits of Dr. Otto John

But Allied Officials Still Suspect Railroadings of German Security Chief

BERLIN (UP)—Acquaintances of the missing Dr. Otto John described him today as a man of strange habits and said he should never have been made West Germany's top "F.B.I." man.

These sources said John was a heavy drinker and might have gone into Communist East Berlin under the influence of alcohol. Some believed John was "mentally depressed" and not responsible for his actions.

John, West Germany's counterpart of J. Edgar Hoover, disappeared mysteriously into East Germany four days ago with Dr. Wolfgang Wohlgemuth, a communist who shuttled back and forth to offices in each zone.

Many of John's friends heard the broadcast Friday night of a pro-communist recording purported to have been made by the missing security chief and said they did not doubt the voice was his.

John spoke for less than three minutes and attacked Western policy and alleged resurgence of Nazism in West Germany. He said the recent evangelical revival at Leipzig in the Soviet zone made him realize reunification of Germany was possible.

"Germany is in danger through the conflict between East and West of being permanently split," John said.

"I have therefore decided to take a step to call on all Germans to be ready for reunification."

Allied officials said they still believed John had been lured or tricked into entering the Western sector and forced to make the recording.

They wanted to know why John waited three days to speak on the radio if he fled voluntarily and why he made a recording instead of a "live" speech.

John crossed into the East zone on July 20, tenth anniversary of the plot to assassinate Adolf Hitler, in which he participated.

Although there is nothing in the published accounts of the anti-Hitler conspiracy to indicate John was a communist, intelligence officers now are digging deeper into his past. Two British security officers have flown from London to aid the investigation.

Officials also are investigating reports that John might have been blackmailed to flee to the East. He was a man of peculiar habits and described by friends and acquaintances as a "strange character."

All sources agreed that the communists had gained the key to West German security in John, a man who knew many Western secrets and had knowledge of the extensive underground movement in the Soviet zone and perhaps in the rest of Eastern Europe.

Dondero Sees Pickup in Industrial Tempo provide for the needs of a rapidly expanding population. As the population increases, more money is needed to handle resultant increases in production and consumption.

"The successful production of excessive business inventories, without price dislocations," Congressman Dondero continued, "already has been reflected in mounting industrial activity, and hence greater activity in all the service and distributive industries."

"Civilian employment in the United States, at the end of June, was considerably more than 62,000,000, or almost exactly equal to the all-time peak which came in 1953.

"Still further," Congressman Dondero concluded, "the fact that no drastic dislocation of prices prevented any tremendous losses at either manufacturing or distributive levels, made it possible for wage-earners to fare better than ever before in a period of economic readjustment. Average hourly earnings in manufacturing industry during June reached an all-time high of $1.81.

OMAHA (AP)—Much talk and no eat. That was the way it went for Nebraska Republican senatorial nomination candidate David Martin of Kearney here one day this week.

Sparks from a welding torch being used on an iron fire escape started a small blaze in a rubbish pile in the rear of Waite's Department Store in downtown Pontiac early Friday afternoon.

Five fire trucks from Fire Stations No. 1 and No. 3 answered the alarm. The fire was extinguished in less than 10 minutes.

Court Martial Clears Officer

Lt. Robert S. Morgan Vindicated of Holding Soldiers at Attention

FT. DIX, N. J. (AP)—A combat-tested infantry officer today stood vindicated of charges he permitted trainees of his command to be held at ramrod-straight attention for nearly an hour in 92-degree heat.

A special court-martial board of eight fellow officers cleared Lt. Robert S. Morgan of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., of the allegation yesterday after he denied having had anything to do with the June 21 incident.

Still to be tried by court-martial is Morgan's administrative aide, Sgt. Richard J. Witbeck of Wellington, Ohio, who one recruit described as "sadistic" and the man he thought gave the order for the formation.

Morgan and Witbeck were formally charged with "dereliction of duty" and alleged maltreatment of personnel, after 225 trainees were kept at attention in the wilting heat of June 21 for an unexplained breach of discipline.

A number of the men, members of Co. L, 272nd Infantry Regiment, reportedly passed out in the hot sun.

The board deliberated an hour in acquitting Morgan after a two-day hearing.

Negro Children Pick Integrated Schooling

KENNETT, Mo. (AP)—Making a difficult choice, a dozen Negro children chose integration and decided to pass up the cotton vacation that always means spending money in the fall.

They applied yesterday for admission to the previously all-white Kennett high school. Three others want to continue in the all-Negro high school at nearby Hayti, which each fall has a six-week vacation to permit pupils to earn money by helping harvest the cotton crop.

Public school officials met with the Negro children and their parents and gave them their choice, as a result of the Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in public schools.

The 14 children attending first voted 11 to 3 in favor of the Hayti school and cotton vacation. But most of them reconsidered and reversed themselves.

The Caine Mutiny

Synopsis: Willie is the decoding naval officer on board a dirty, old, converted Navy ship, a minesweeper called the Caine. He is a college man and he left a girl behind him in New York, named Mae Wynn. But he is uncertain of his feelings toward her, for her standards are not quite the same as his. Capt. Queeg is the commanding officer on the Caine and most of the men dislike him, but he is competent. He does such queer things, such as ordering each man searched for his keys, in order to discover who stole some strawberries. Mr. Maryk, his first officer, reads Navy Regulations late into the night, finding out that under certain circumstances, a subordinate can take over command of a ship. But the men were stripped and the queer business of the keys got under way. In the middle of it, the order comes: steam south to avoid a typhoon near Guam.

CHAPTER ??

"How the hell are they going to fuel in this sea?" said Willie.

"I don't know," said the exec. "but the damned tankers are all flying. Baker. They're going to try."

The task force kept up the attempt, at the cost of a lot of fueling hoses and steady lines and dumped oil, while junior officers like Willie, on all the ships, made watty comments on the mental limitations of the fleet commander.

They did not know, of course, that the admiral was committed to an air strike in support of a landing by Gen. MacArthur on Mindoro, and had to fuel his ships, or else deprive the Army of air cover.

A steamship, not being a slave to the wind like a sailing vessel, is superior to ordinary difficulties of storms, but surprising things happen when nature puts on a freak show like a typhoon, with wind gusts up to a hundred and fifty miles per hour or more.

The rudder, for instance, can become useless. It works by dragging against the water through which it is passing, but if the wind is behind the ship, and blows hard enough, the water may start piling along as fast as the rudder so that there is no drag at all. Then the ship will yaw or even broach to.

Or the sea may push one way on the hull, and the wind another, and the rudder a third, so that the resultant of the forces is very erratic response of the ship to the helm, varying from minute to minute, or from second to second.

Nevertheless a modern warship, functioning properly and handled with wisdom, can probably ride out any typhoon.

The TBS message was so muffled by static and the noise of wind and waves that Willie had to put his ear to the loudspeaker.

Chain Gang from Sunshine. Discontinue fueling. Execute to follow. New fleet course 180.

Small Boys reorientate screen.

"What? What was it?" said Queeg at Willie's elbow.

"Discontinue fueling, sir, and turning south. Execute to follow." "Getting the h-l out, hey? About time."

Maryk, squat and enormous in his life jacket, said, "I don't know how she'll ride, sir, with her stern to the wind. Quartering seas always murder us."

"Any course that takes us out of here is the right course. All engines ahead full. Right standard rudder. Steady on 180," said Queeg, and ran out of the wheelhouse.

The Caine went plunging downhill into a foaming trough. Stillwell spun the helm, saying, "Ch-t, this wheel feels loose."

"Bring your rudder hard right," said Maryk.

"Hard right, sir—Ch-t, sir, this g-dd-n wheel feels like the wheel ropes are broken! Just sloppy—" The hair of Willie's head prickled to see the looks of fright on the sailors. He felt the same expression forming on his own face.

"Shut your yap, Stilwell, the wheel ropes are okay," said Maryk. "Don't be such a baby. Haven't you ever had the wheel in a sea before?"

"Now G-d-d-n it, Steve," came the squeak of Queeg, "what the h-l's going on out there? Why aren't we coming around?"

Maryk yelled into the speaking tube, "Wind and sea taking charge, sir. I've got the rudder at hard right!"

"Well, use the engines. Get her around. Ch-t on a chutch, do I have to do everything here?"

Maryk began to manipulate the engines. A combination of standard speed on the port screw and slow backing on the starboard started swining the ship's head slowly to the south.

"Steady on 180, sir," Stilwell said at last, turning his face to Maryk, his eyes glinting with relief.

Queeg came in, mopping at his eyes with a handkerchief. "Damn spray stings. Well, you finally got her around, hey? Guess we're okay now."

"Mr. Maryk," the helmsman said hoarsely, "I can't hold her on 180. She's falling off to port—"

"Give her more rudder—"

"I got her at emergency right, sir—heading 172, sir—falling off fast—"

"Why is the rudder emergency right?" Queeg bellowed. "Who's giving rudder orders here? Is everybody on this bridge going crazy?"

"Captain, she's yawing to port," said Maryk. "Steersman can't hold her at 180—"

"One six zero, sir, now," said Stilwell, with a scared look at Maryk. It was the dreaded weather-vane effect, taking charge of the Caine.

The rudder was not holding, and the ship was skidding sideways at the pleasure of wind and waves. The head was dropping off from south to east.

Queeg grabbed at the helmsman and steadied himself to stare at the compass. He jumped to the telegraph and signaled "Flank Speed" with one handle and "Stop" with the other.

The engine-room pointers answered instantly. The deck began to vibrate with the one-sided strain on the engines.

"That'll bring her around," said the captain. "What's your head now?"

"Still falling off, sir, 152-148—" Queeg muttered. "Needs a few seconds to take hold—"

Once again the Caine took a sickening cant to starboard and hung there.

"Captain, we're broaching to," said Maryk, his voice lacking firmness for the first time. "Try backing the starboard engine, sir." The captain seemed not to hear. "Sir, back the starboard engine." Queeg, clinging to the telegraph with his knees and arms, threw him a frightened glance, his skin greenish, and obediently slid the handle backward.

The laboring ship shuddered fearfully; it continued to drift sideways before the wind, rising and falling on each swell a distance equal to the height of a tall building. "What's your head?" The captain's voice was a muffled croak.

"Steady on 117, sir—" "Think she'll grab, Steve?" murmured Willie.

"I hope so." Stilwell exclaimed. "Sir, heading 120. Coming right, sir."

"Good," said Maryk. "Ease your rudder to standard."

Without so much as a glance at the captain, Stilwell obeyed. Willie noticed the omission, for all that he was terror-stricken; and he noticed, too, that Queeg, frozen to the telegraph stand, seemed oblivious.

"Rudder is eased to standard, sir—heading 124, sir—" The Caine stood erect slowly and wobbled a little to port before heeling deep to starboard again.

"We're okay," said Maryk. "Heading 128-129-130—"

The Caine yawed shakily back and forth for a couple of minutes. Then suddenly it was flung almost on its beam-ends to port by a swell, a wave and a gust of wind hitting together. Willie reeled, brought up against Stilwell, and grabbed at the wheel spokes.

"Captain," Maryk said, "I still think we ought to ballast—at least the stern tanks, if we're going to steam before the wind."

Willie glanced at Queeg. The captain's face was screwed up as though he were looking at a bright light. He gave no sign of having heard. "I request permission to ballast stern tanks, sir," said the exec.

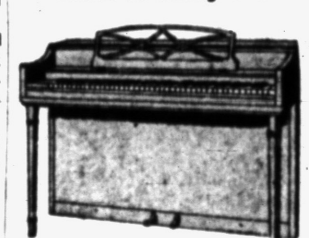

Queeg's lips moved. "Negative," he said calmly and faintly. Stilwell twisted the wheel sharply, pulling the spokes out of Willie's hands.

Predicts Senate Farm Bill Vote

Senator Kerr Foresees Price Support Action Before Adjournment

WASHINGTON (INS)—Sen. Robert S. Kerr (D) Okla., predicts the Senate will vote on farm legislation before adjournment despite forecasts that such action will be blocked.

Kerr, one of Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson's most severe congressional critics, says he expects the Senate to overcome its current deadlock, and to vote on the pending farm bill. The senator adds, however, he does not expect Congress to get away from Washington before August 15, despite an official target date of July 31.

The bill now pending would extend price supports on wheat, cotton, corn, peanuts and rice for one more year, and would raise dairy supports from 75 to 85 per cent of parity. Separate legislation already stipulates that tobacco supports will continue at 90 per cent of parity as long as farmers obey production controls.

A bill approved in the house would set supports on the five basic crops on a flexible scale between 82 and one half and 90 per cent of parity and raise dairy supports only five per cent instead of 10 per cent as planned by the Senate agriculture committee.

Chairman George Aiken (R) Vt., of the Senate agriculture committee, has submitted to the Senate a minority report calling for supports to vary between 80 and 90 per cent of parity. He was joined by seven other senators — including former Democratic Agriculture Secretary Clinton Anderson of New Mexico — in this report, while eight members of his committee joined in the majority report calling for continued 90 per cent supports.

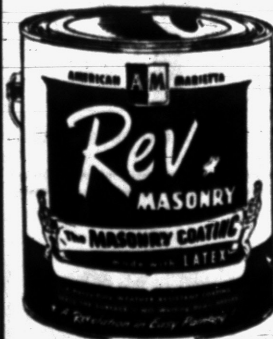

Should the Senate accept either of these plans, farm legislation will have to go to a joint Senate-House conference committee, which will mean further delay in action.

Aiken has charged the proponents of rigid, high supports with trying to block action, and specifically has accused Democrats of attempting to hold off until after next Tuesday's Louisiana Democratic primary. Sen. Allen J. Ellender, ranking Democrat on the Aiken committee, is seeking re-nomination in that contest.

Old Milford Landmark

Home Demolished for GM Expansion

By REBA HEINTZELMAN
Milford Correspondent

One of Milford's oldest homes was demolished this week to make way for industrial expansion.

The "Sands home," a landmark on West Commerce road for more than one hundred years, had walls three bricks deep. Its hand-hewn beams and stone foundation were still in good condition, according to workmen who wrecked the building.

The bricks in the home were all practically hand-made and had come from an old factory near Milford, long since gone.

The dwelling, which probably took almost a year to build, was leveled in 20 minutes by one huge bulldozer and three workmen. Thirty minutes later, the debris was a roaring inferno, and by nightfall only smoldering ashes remained.

More than a hundred spectators were on hand to watch the old house go down, and one elderly neighbor cried quietly as the home tumbled to the ground.

The house was leveled to make

WHERE CENTENARIAN STOOD—One of the oldest homes in Milford was the Sands residence believed to have been erected approximately 100 years ago. It stood as a symbol of a bygone age with its walls three bricks deep, and its hand hewn beams attesting to the rugged strength of the structure, until pulled down recently.

Airlines Wage War on Japanese Beetle

WASHINGTON (INS)—Airline companies began a new campaign today against the Japanese beetle which causes millions of dollars damage to U. S. crops.

The airlines published specific instructions designed to prevent aerial hitchhiking by beetles. Control procedures previously have been voluntary.

Under the new regulations, aircraft that might transport the beetles are included in the same regulated category as nursery and greenhouse stock, soil, fruits and vegetables.

Planes that have been exposed to Japanese beetle infestation will be given insecticide treatments. The regulations affect only the area east of the Appalachian Mountains — from Boston to Norfolk, and from Pittsburgh to Clarksburg and Morgantown, W. Va.

Missing Application Keeps Milford Dentist in Navy

MILFORD—While dentist Robert Lawrence is seeing only four patients daily at the Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill., Milford residents are beginning to wonder what happened to the application for discharge he filed when he arrived there some five weeks ago.

Lt. Lawrence, a disabled dentist father of five children, was the object of an extensive campaign by area residents to keep him at home.

One of three dentists in the community, he was given the choice of being drafted, or applying for a commission in the armed services. Due to a chronic osteomyelitis, one leg is two inches shorter than the other, and examining physicians marked him "permanently disabled" several times previously.

With his draft nearing, Dr. Lawrence applied for a commission in the Navy, which was granted after examining physicians first turned him down because of his leg, and then waived the disability.

On the advice of Sen. Homer Ferguson, Dr. Lawrence applied for a discharge on the basis of the hardship his serving would work on his family.

Sen. Ferguson's office reported recently that a check with the Navy Department in Washington revealed that Lawrence's application has not yet reached Washington.

Waterford Citizens Add Petitioning to Protests on Van Atta Firing

WATERFORD TOWNSHIP — A crowd of 300 residents which gathered at the Township Hall last night protested the firing of Police Chief Frank Van Atta by the township board.

Petitions demanding the reinstatement of the ousted chief were circulated through the partisan crowd which overflowed the township hall meeting room to gather on the backsteps.

Supervisor Lloyd Anderson told the group that if they wanted Van Atta returned, they should tell the township board so at its regular meeting at 9 a. m. Monday.

Van Atta was fired Monday evening by trustees Robert L. Bliss, Oscar Loomis, and Clerk Louis Barry, for political activities. In a prepared statement, Barry said the majority of the board felt that the police department must be kept free of political rancor and dissension.

Van Atta was closely questioned about his campaigning for Oakland County Sheriff candidate Frank Irons last night. Irons is opposing incumbent Clare Hubbell at the Aug. 3 primary.

F84 Crash Kills Arizona Child

Flaming Airplane Also Sets Fire to 3 Houses, Injures Four

WILLIAMS AIR FORCE BASE, Ariz. — The Air Force ordered an investigation today of a jet plane crash that left a child dead and four persons injured.

The F84 Thunderjet's pilot bailed out before it plunged into the officers' housing section yesterday and exploded.

Three houses were set afire. In one, base policemen found the body of 8-month-old Mathew Carl Watry, son of Capt. and Mrs. Charles A. Watry of Glendale, Calif. The parents suffered severe burns and shock.

The pilot, 1st Lt. Richard J. Hutten, 27, of Escanaba, Mich., said he parachuted when informed by his wingman that his badly vibrating plane was afire.

With the wingman, 1st Lt. Arthur M. Basbeer, Hutten had been returning to Luke AFB from Laughlin AFB, Del Rio, Tex.

The plane clipped the corner of the Hutten home and exploded. The roof collapsed. The engine ripped through a wall and crashed into an automobile parked 40 feet away. Pieces of the fuselage started fires in two nearby houses.

Children playing two blocks away were knocked to the ground by the force of the crash.

DROVE A MILLION MILES

By J. Lee Voorhees

Gomer W. Bailey has driven a big truck one million miles without a single chargeable accident. We can do as well, if we will. When driving conditions were precarious he reduced speed; to make up lost time he might have exceeded safe speed limits. He didn't, he brought in his load a few minutes late, right side up and without a blemish. When there was a choice of taking the right-of-way, with damaged vehicle or maimed body a possibility, or giving it to the other man he chose safety. It's nice to chat with a rider, also dangerous: Bailey kept his mind on driving, watching the road and other cars, chalking up an enviable record. Speed kills! Only rarely do we have serious accidents when closely packed automobiles are moving slowly; it is when they are on the open road. Speed and chance takes lives. Take it easy.

2 Priests in Paris Worth Meeting; Give Help to Children, Homeless

By BILLY ROSE

When I get to Paris next month, there are two people I am determined to look up. They both live in St. Denis, the workmen's district north of the city, and they are both priests . . .

One of these priests, the Abbe Pierre, received considerable attention in the American press a few months ago, and I understand that in France they talked about him almost as much as they did about Indochina.

BILLY ROSE

Why all this talk? Well, Paris in the spring may be a Pernod-green version of paradise, but in the winter it's something else again—a bleak, shivery city whose lower-depth neighborhoods are overrun with families.

Last winter, the Council of the Republic met in its centrally heated chamber and refused to pass an emergency housing bill for these half-frozen people. A few days later, a three-months-old baby died of exposure in an abandoned truck, and the following week 17 people froze to death in the streets.

Appalled by this, the Abbe Pierre started a one-man campaign for the homeless. Within a week, he somehow managed to collect 20,000 blankets and $250,000 in cash.

With part of the money, he bought a large plot of Paris wasteland and, assisted by a set of inspired ragpickers whom he dubbed "The Companions," he set up the "Notre Dame of the Homeless"—123 three-room dwellings at a cost of $425 per unit.

Before long, this impromptu town was sheltering and feeding 2,500 people a day. This coming winter, the "Apostle of the Homeless" hopes to have at least 50 such "emergency cities" ready, no matter what the politicians do or do not do.

Clearly, the Abbe Pierre is one of the sights of Paris I don't want to miss.

The second priest I plan to look up, Pere Raymond, has won the affection of his St. Denis parishioners by befriending wayward kids. Every morning, when juvenile court is in session in the district, he shows up and pleads with the judges to go easy on the young offenders. More often than not, the judges listen to him and release the youngsters in the priest's custody rather than send them to jail.

It seems that one day last April, Pere Raymond was returning from court where he had appeared on behalf of a boy named Jules who had gotten himself in serious trouble. A storekeeper had identified the lad as the one who had clubbed him over the head with a lead pipe and stolen his watch and money.

Down the street from his church, the priest passed the stand of Boji, the neighborhood shoeshine boy.

"Shine, Father?" said the boy. "Like always, it is free."

Pere Raymond climbed up on the chair and Boji went to work.

"How did it go with Jules in court?" the bootblack asked.

"Badly," said the priest. "The storekeeper definitely identified him as the thief who beat and robbed him. The magistrate offered to release him in my custody, but I couldn't accept. Jules had been in trouble before, and to beat an old man almost to death is a serious crime."

"Jules didn't do it," said Boji. "He's a little crazy sometimes, but he wouldn't rob or kill anyone. He's my friend, and I know . . ."

Next morning the priest stopped for his usual shine.

"Did you hear the news, Father?" said the bootblack. "Last night the police caught the fellow who robbed the store. He had the watch and part of the money in his pocket."

"Did he confess?"

"Sure, he confessed, and the storekeeper identified him right away. The mistake happened because the thief looks a lot like Jules."

The priest was silent for a few moments. "Tell me, Boji," he finally said. "What made you so certain your friend was innocent?"

"It's like I said, Father," said the bootblack. "Jules is my friend, and I know."

The priest got out of the chair. "Give me the polish and the rag," he said, "and you sit up in the chair."

"But, Father—" the bootblack protested.

"Do as I say," said Pere Raymond. "I'm a priest, and faith is my business, but you seem to be better at it than I. Now, let's find out how well I can do your job . . ."

Clearly, Pere Raymond is another of the sights of Paris I don't want to miss.

Texan Admits Indiana Murder

Confesses to Strangling
Girl in Indianapolis
Hotel Room

ST. LOUIS (U.P.)—Victor Lively, 32-year-old Texan who admitted the "dresser-drawer" slaying of a teen-age girl in an Indianapolis hotel, will be returned to the scene of the crime today.

Lively, in a signed statement yesterday, admitted killing 18-year-old Dorothy Poore three hours after he was seized by two St. Louis County deputy sheriffs while walking on a highway.

Deputies said Lively told them he became enraged when the girl protested about his drinking and that he choked her "three or four minutes until she was dead."

The body of the Clinton, Ind., high school graduate was discovered in a dresser drawer at the Claypool Hotel in Indianapolis last Sunday, three days after she was slain. It was clad in bra, panties and slip.

Indianapolis Detective Sgt. Harold Goodman and Randolph Chubb arrived here late last night to return Lively there. He has waived extradition.

Lively, they said, also said he recognized Widmann as a bellboy who was on duty at the hotel when he registered there.

Lively, who has unusually muscular arms and is 5 foot 3 inches tall, said he picked up the Poore girl earlier on the day of her death, in a hamburger stand in downtown Indianapolis.

Lively said he had been drinking and continued to drink in the hotel room. While he and Miss Poore were in the room, Lively told officers, two maids came in to clean it up. He said another girl whom he knew only as "Ruth" was with him and Miss Poore for a time before the slaying.

Lively, who said he had been married six times and had one child, was carrying a loaded .32 caliber automatic when arrested. After the slaying, Lively told officers he sat in a chair and drank gin more than five hours before stuffing the body into the drawer.

He came to St. Louis Thursday and slept in the open near the place where he was captured. Lively told officers he was hitch-hiking to Beaumont, Tex., where he was born, to visit his foster mother.

At Beaumont, Detective Capt. J. W. Wingate said Lively had never been charged in a sex case but that he "used to lure women to his hotel room."

Get an Electric Air Drier

(Dehumidifier)

Hot under the collar because rust makes your favorite saw bind, makes drills seize and chatter, makes tool calibrations hard to read? Excess moisture causes the trouble. Dry out the air with an electric dehumidifier and that basement workshop, or any other trouble spot, changes from jungle-damp to sunny-dry.

A dehumidifier's thirst is enormous. It removes as much as 3 gallons of water from damp air every 24 hours.

Electric dehumidifiers are compact—easily moved from one trouble spot to another. They plug in, just like a floor lamp.

Most air driers are under 25" high, weigh under 50 pounds.

Another Proving Ground

Announcement that the Ford Motor Co. will build a multimillion dollar proving ground in Macomb County ends speculation over the largest land deal in recent Michigan history.

The new facilities will be established on a 4,000-acre tract between Leonard and Romeo. The land is part of more than 6,000 acres optioned for the company last Spring by Roy Annett, Inc. It includes the 2,500-acre Hi-point Farm owned by Edward F. Fisher.

Nature of the land, with elevations varying as much as 300 feet, make it ideal for testing automotive equipment. When completed sometime in 1956 it will include, besides a network of test roads, a five mile high-speed track, the longest in the industry, offices, garages and fueling facilities.

Revelation of the plans is fresh proof that both the automotive industry and Michigan will continue to grow. The fact that it will provide direct employment for 100 persons is good news for both Leonard and Romeo.

Reds Rebuffed at Tehran

Things are looking up for Iran. First, the government feels strong enough and has the backbone to reject Russian efforts to discourage even the possibility of Iranian entry into the Turkish-Pakistani alliance. Second, there is prospect of an early final settlement of the country's long drawn out oil dispute with Britain.

The rebuff to Russia came in a meeting between Foreign Minister Entezam and the Soviet Ambassador. The latter was informed that Iran, as a sovereign nation, has the right to join any regional grouping within the United Nations framework it considers advantageous.

Moscow argued that any such alliance would be a violation of the 1927 Russo-Iranian friendship pact. The promptness and firmness with which this pressure was turned aside suggests a growing amount of political stability in the country Mossadegh almost wrecked.

Equally encouraging is the prospect that sorely needed oil revenues soon may flow again into Iran's almost empty treasury. Most settlement difficulties have been ironed out in conferences with eight oil companies which will distribute Iranian oil.

At present it appears likely that Britain can expect at least $200,000,000 in compensation for its billion dollar Abadan refinery and other installations nationalized by the Mossadegh government.

Speedy Rescue Work

Thanks to kindly fate and speedy staff and volunteer rescue work what might have been a holocaust was averted at Bloomfield Hospital.

As a result every one of the 42 patients was removed uninjured from the burning structure at Woodward and Square Lake Road. Rescuers worked with such speed and efficiency that many patients didn't realize the hospital was afire until they were outside.

Several of the more seriously ill were removed, bed and all. Nurses from nearby St. Joseph Mercy Hospital aided in giving them immediate expert care. While seven fire departments were fighting the $60,000 blaze, passing motorists joined in the work of removing furniture and equipment, most of which was undamaged.

Had the fire started on the first floor of the building instead of the roof, there might have been heavy loss of life. Clyde Marshbanks, hospital director, gives part of the credit for the efficient rescue work by the staff to special training in fire safety.

The work of volunteers also showed again that in emergencies people are pretty wonderful.

The People's Business

State Debt Soaring

Some Officials Wondering Where It Will Stop

By JACK I. GREEN
 LANSING (AP) — If the "hang-the-expense" boys have their way the taxpayers of Michigan soon will have more than two billion dollars worth of bonded debt hanging over them.

The people of Michigan, its political subdivisions or its public officials already have sewn us up for $1,358,000,000 worth of bonded debt—and the total is rising so fast that the State Municipal Finance Commission is working overtime to keep up with the new local bond issues.

Do you doubt that it is as big as all that? Well, let's add it up.

The people voted a $270 million bond issue for a World War II veterans bonus, but only $230 million of it has been issued. So let's call that $230 million.

The people voted a $65 million dollar bond issue for mental hospital construction.

The state, the federal government and local governments—without a vote of the people—have pledged highway revenues for an $80 million dollar bond issue for the Detroit expressway system.

The same agencies have pledged highway revenues (gasoline and license taxes) for a $20 million dollar bond issue for the Detroit-Toledo expressway.

The same agencies have pledged highway revenues for a $10 million dollar Grand Rapids expressway.

The Municipal Finance Commission estimates that local government in Michigan—school districts, townships, cities and counties—now are about $760 million dollars in bonds and similar delayed debts. Various district organizations owe about $13 million. Those items total $1,178,000,000.

The Mackinac Bridge Authority is bonded for about $100 million dollars to build the Straits bridge. While this is not a direct debt of the state government, it is to be paid out of the pockets of the motorists and no one questions that the state would have to bail out the authority if the bonds ever go sour.

The Legislature has submitted to the people another $80 million dollar bond issue to give Korean War veterans the same bonus as after World War II. That will be voted on in November and no one doubts but that the people will approve it.

Now come the highway boys with gladsome talk of a half-a-billion dollar bond issue for highway construction.

This being a political year, the political candidates are leaping happily aboard this gravy train. With the exception of State Treasurer D. Hale Brake, the candidates are telling us solemnly that "it won't cost you a cent."

Maybe not, but the state's last excursion into a highway bond issue was for $50 million way back in the days of Gov. Groesbeck. We got it paid off just a few years ago and it had cost us a total of $100 million, including interest.

The saddening thing about this $500 million proposal is that it would take 20 to 25 years to pay off—but the roads it builds will last about 10 years at current usage rates.

Then, this week, the state college presidents and Gov. Williams began to toy with the idea of a bond issue to expand the college system. They suspect they are never going to get the money fast enough from the Legislature—so they think of borrowing it.

The educators are not sure how much they will need. But if their last year's estimates are projected conservatively it could amount to between $150 and $175 million.

And that's where some public officials are starting to blanch and ask privately: "Where do we stop? What do we do if tax collections (which must pay operating costs and support the bonds) suddenly start to drop?"

When School District No. 3 of Blackfoot Township bonds itself to build a $10,000 addition to its schoolhouse no one can say it isn't needed.

Unquestionably, the kids of Saginaw, or Muskegon, or Ironwood need a new school. The Straits Bridge will benefit millions of people.

Sure, new roads would be nice. The colleges will have double their enrollment in a few short years—and where will they put the students?

But, fiscal officials are starting to ask: "Where do we stop?"

Are Unemployed 'Idlers' Through Own Doing?

I disagree with a recent writer to this column when she states that people can blame only themselves for living in shacks, chicken coops or houses made of bottles. I don't believe persons living in such places would care to continue doing so if something better was offered them.

This writer calls them "idlers." I wonder how these people like that? Right now there are 3 1/2 million "idlers" walking the streets not to mention part-time workers. Are people idlers because they want to be?

Again the writer asks, "Who is going to provide the things that are necessary for a decent living?"

I will tell you who they are. They are the ones who are providing the money to carry on world wars, providing the money for subsidies for farm products, Social Security, pensions, Red Cross, etc.

The writer says, "If we all become idlers what then? Some country this would be." What kind of country have we got now with 3 1/2 million out of work walking the streets, being fed by charitable institutions? Are these people bathing themselves in self pity or are they looking for work?

In speaking of a Free Enterprise System building up this country, what about the world wars, the numerous Indian wars, not to mention that 90 per cent of taxes go to pay for wars past and present and preparation for future ones. Some country, I will say.

Case Records of a Psychologist

Competition, Rivalry Are Both Healthy Characteristics for Our Many Churches

Dr. Zeke's comment shows how communistic ideas have invaded our churches in America. For "free enterprise" depends on rivalry. Communism decries it and urges equal division as of scores at all football games. Jesus believed in competition, for he strove to recruit "bigger" crowds by sending the 70 ahead of him, two by twos, as press agents.

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE
 Case L-366: Dr. Zeke, aged 50, attended, a recent meeting of the religious executives in charge of Men's Work in the major Protestant denominations.

These included Lutheran, Methodist, Episcopal, Evangelical, Presbyterian, Baptist, etc. I had been asked to address the group and suggest ideas which they could pass along to their vast manpower of some 11 million adult males.

And in my speech I had urged more use of the "lighted" schoolhouse idea whereby churches rent the local school gymnasium or swimming pool one night per week for use of their youth.

I also stressed the need for more competition between Sunday school classes, church softball teams, etc.

"Dr. Crane, I am greatly encouraged to hear you suggest contests and competition for youth," Dr. Zeke informed me afterwards.

"For many years I occupied pulpits in our large cities and I have always felt as you do.

"But it has been routine for the home office of our churches to soft-pedal competition and to veto rivalry."

"Instead, they argue that Christianity should teach cooperation and brotherhood, but not competition."

"Yet I have always felt that rivalry is the spice of social life and the zest that adds a wholesome tonic to church progress."

Many leaders of various denominations have expressed the same view as Dr. Zeke.

Apparently, we have gone through a "communistic" era in religion where sturdy American competition and rivalry have been disdained as unAmerican.

But wouldn't it be silly to eliminate rivalry from a Notre Dame football contest and conduct the football game without competition?

And how much enthusiasm would the players develop if they were always to come out with a tie score?

Suppose Notre Dame made three touchdowns and the opposing team made one. The true "communistic" attitude would demand that we add four touchdowns and then give each team two touchdowns apiece.

But that is not the energetic American plan where we enjoy the zest of competition. For Americans would rather compete and lose, than to find that they always had to divide the score on a 50-50 basis every Saturday.

Competition is not immoral or unChristian. And rivalry is the spice that adds zest to thriving churches.

Contests will zoom attendance remarkably at Sunday school or Young People's Meetings. It is the yeast that makes healthy churches bubble over with young people.

But this sissy, communistic view of abolishing competition has crept into many churches and even into our schools. Many of the latter no longer offer specific numerical grades.

Instead of giving Johnny 97 in spelling and Billy 73, they mark both boys "E," meaning they are working "efficiently" as regards their mental capacities.

This is real communism enshrined by sissy pedagogues. It is the same idea as "averaging" the football scores and then giving both teams a tie for each contest or an "E" for Effort.

Jesus was no sissy. He also believed in competition, for he sent the 70 disciples ahead of him, two by two, to recruit "bigger" crowds.

That was modern advertising strategy. And advertising is a distinctly American competitive characteristic. It typifies "free enterprise" instead of the stagnation of communism.

Days of All Faiths

Many Legends Are Told on St. James Feast Day

DR. HOWARD V. HARPER
 Sunday, July 25, is the feast day of the patron saint of Spain, St. James, or as the Spanish call him, Sant' Iago. The Spanish people, and their close relatives, the Portuguese, have many legends about this Apostle.

One of the most interesting is that the Milky Way is really the "Way of St. James," and that the saint's grave will be found at the end of it, just as some people believe that a pot of gold will be found at the end of the rainbow.

The Portuguese used to say that between death and burial each soul must pass over the Milky Way—they called it the Bridge of St. James—or be eternally lost. Into every coffin they put a coin and a piece of bread dipped in wine. The bread would distract the lion that guards the bridge, and the coin would bribe the devil who waits beneath it to snatch the unwary souls.

The reason for St. James' connection with Spanish lore is a tradition that his body was taken to Spain by pilgrims after his death at the hands of the cruel

King Herod Agrippa. And, just as the English soldiers returning from the Crusades said that St. George had appeared in their ranks and led them to victory, so the Spanish troops reported that St. James fought with them against the Moors.

Very soon after the Christian Church began, Herod Agrippa struck at the little group, selecting particularly two of the strongest Apostles. He cast St. Peter into prison, from which he was miraculously rescued, and beheaded St. James, who was thus the first of the Twelve Apostles to die for the Faith.

According to early writings, which are not really considered very trustworthy, the Blessed Virgin Mary came of a wealthy family. The story goes that her mother, Hannah (Anne in English), and her father, Joachim, were greatly grieved and even embarrassed over the fact that for many years they were childless.

Joachim once went to the Temple to make an offering and was turned away because men who had no children were not worthy to enter. He went off to the mountains to pray about it. His wife heard of his embarrassment and she, too, began to pray over the situation. She was soon visited by an angel who told her that she would have a child who would be blessed by the whole world.

Monday, July 26, is St. Anne's day, in honor of the mother of that child, the Virgin Mary.

The main objection scholars make to the lovely legend is that it is obviously a reworking of the Old Testament story of the birth of Samuel—see I Samuel, Chapter 1.

To Americans the most famous of all churches dedicated to St. Anne is the one at Beaupre in Canada, where thousands of pilgrims visit each year.

Wednesday, July 28, is celebrated by the Volunteers of America as their Founder's Day. It is the birthday (1839) of Ballington Booth, second son of the famous William Booth, who established the Salvation Army.

In the early days of the Salvation Army in England, young Ballington worked with his father so faithfully and well that in 1857 he was sent to America, with his wife, Maud, to be in charge of the Army in the United States and Canada.

A disagreement over methods led the son to withdraw from the original organization in 1896 and to start his own group, which he named the Volunteers of America. The Volunteers grew rapidly and are now represented in nearly every state.

The purposes of the Volunteers are essentially the same as those of the Salvation Army.

 How much do you belong to me? ... What do I mean to you? ... Are you as faithful, darling, as I promise to be true? ... Are you convinced and confident ... And is your heart sincere? ... Will you be mine as much as time ... Beyond the longest year? ... My all is yours, if you are mine ... I cannot offer more ... What is your answer, darling, when ... I knock upon your door? ... It all depends upon your heart ... And how you feel towards me ... As much as we may share this life ... And all eternity ... I kneel before your feet but all ... Our life is up to you ... As much as you embrace me, love ... And promise to be true.

 Yolk Versus White

A contents that the yolk of an egg is less nourishing than the white. I believe the white is less nourishing than the yolk. (K. V.)

Answer — Egg yolks supply about 7 times more calories than whites, ounce for ounce.

Goat's Milk
 Ten-year-old son had asthma for five years, but no bad attacks since he started drinking goat's milk instead of cow's milk—would goat's milk contain more calcium? (J. T. V.)

Answer — Yes. For pamphlet on Asthma send stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Husband and Wife
 Is it the proper thing for a man to go with his wife when she goes to the doctor. My wife wants me to, but the doctor acted as though it wasn't quite proper. (G. A.)

Answer — Certainly it is. Perhaps you imagined the doctor didn't approve. When an expectant mother visits the doctor for examination, instruction or advice, her husband should always accompany her and help her follow the doctor's instructions.

How Long
 My daughter and I have had wonderful results from taking your iodine lotion. We started taking it now for seven or eight months. How long should we continue taking it? (Mrs. E. C.)

Answer — As long as you wish to maintain the wonderful results. It is essential food, which everybody needs; not medicine. For instructions send stamped, self-addressed envelope and ask in writing (no clipping, please) for pamphlet The Iodine Lotion.

Varicose Veins
 Like my father before me, I read your column and continue keeping the scrapbook. He started taking it and I have very bad varicose veins. Is there no remedy except operation? (G. E. D.)

Get a New Angle on Beauty With 'Hollywood Slant'

By Anita Colby

AMERICA'S NO. 1 COVER GIRL

Maybe you're so dry that by midwinter you look more like a cheese grater than a glamor girl. Well, oil that poor parched puss. You'd do it for an old shoe—do it for your face.

And during a cold, keep cream and lip pomade on against the drying, cracking heat of the fever.

Now, if, on the other hand, you shine like a head-light, ooze oil and have a fierce peppering of blackheads, it shouldn't take a brain trust to tell you that grease is not what you're looking for.

Take active, intelligent steps for any trouble spots, and that includes scalp troubles. Not everyone realizes that her scalp is part of her complexion.

If you suspect an allergy or contagious skin infection, go see your doctor. But correct diet and elimination, deep breathing, and sunshine and exercise are FIRST AIDS.

If You're Excessively Oily: Try washing with kitchen soap—literally. If your skin is broken out, wash with soap, then take three tea bags and swish them around in a bowl half full of tepid water, and rinse your face in it.

Eat plenty of green and leafy vegetables; drink skim milk; get plenty of sun. No greasy foods, chocolates, nuts. Easy on starches, and keep a beauty diet that includes six glasses of water a day.

If You're Excessively Dry: Avoid all extremes in water and temperatures, as I have said before. Wash in lukewarm water—not hot, not cold.

Try to avoid rushing from steam-heated rooms into snow, wind, etc. Cream and oil religiously—especially in the sun, and do not overbake in the sun. Use a creamy foundation for winter protection.

Other Problems

Enlarged Pores: Pay extra attention in your soap and water massage; use strong astringent and beauty mask if oily. If dry, stimulate and clean with cream massage; follow with a wash of skin refresher.

Blackheads: Steam your face, use extra long soap massage, and then use a mask. The dry skin may have to be lubricated and massaged to soften, working cream into the skin for about 15 minutes.

If an obstinate blackhead won't budge, steam area with warm washcloth, then press out with cotton covered fingertips. Always apply an antiseptic afterward.

Whiteheads: Lots of massage, and the use of the beauty mask nightly for a week, regular elimination, and circulation stimulation by the Hollywood Slant, which you'll learn about later today.

Pimples: Hot epsom salts solution should bring the small, simple type to a head. Spread skin gently and it will give up. If stubborn, do a series of deep, drying cleansings, using the tea treatment three times a day.

At night, dab with any pure medication, zinc ointment, or calamine lotion, for instance. In a word—or two—cleanse thoroughly, and use antiseptic. Then if you don't improve, see a doctor or skin specialist.

I repeat, no, I shout, Keep Your Hands off Your Face!

Wrinkles: Oil and massage for wrinkles you now have, stroking always up and out.

And avoid collecting new crow's-feet, etc., by using eye pads in the sun, reading only in sufficient light, and throwing away your pouting, grimacing, frowning habits that age you.

Ruddy Face: Spicy foods, liquor, extremes of heat or cold, or too strong facial preparations go out the window.

Eat more greens and lean meats and fruits—do your Hollywood Slant (described below) after—and in cold weather use foundation twice for double protection. Apply very little, let set, then apply very little again before powdering.

'Hollywood Slant'

"I've told it to the world hundreds of times," Elsie Mendi said. "I believe in it. People of the theater have always known this simple fact—that you have to help your heart circulate, blood flowing into the brain, up into the neck and face. Myself—for a few minutes each day, I stand on my head. I've been doing it for 50 years."

Looking at the astonishing freshness of another face, Billie Burke's, I asked her, "You too?"

"Naturally," she said. "I've always stood on my head."

The secret of it is, of course, the carrier function of blood. It brings in food and fuel to each cell—takes away wastes and poisons. But think how we're made—by sheer force of gravity blood is naturally attracted down into our legs. (That's why legs swell when you're tired.)

It has to fight uphill through smaller arteries to the head and neck all the time we're standing or sitting up. It must push straight up above the heart, its pump.

The very fact that blood must climb straight up to bring that flush to your cheek says it will go down the instant it can.

Now do you see why a woman starts aging from her head down? There's many a young body carrying around an old head. You must learn to give face, neck and shoulders more circulation.

Lean an ironing board against a low bed, put pillows under buttocks and heels on wall—reverse your angle on sofa or chaise longue; head down, feet up on arm—do anything to put your body on about a 30 to 45-degree upslant. Start off with 10 minutes at a time, work up to 20, then to a half hour a day.

Lie this way to telephone—while polish dries on nails—while you give yourself a facial—of simply to rest and think. But do it daily, get a fresh supply from your own fountain of youth every day.

Look what happens to your face troubles when you try the Hollywood Slant on beauty.

In the first place, blood flushes up into those myriad tiny arteries and suffuses face and neck. All the delicate muscles of face and neck slide back up into positions that make a lovelier face.

So first cleanse and lubricate your face, then get into your Hollywood Slant, and feel yourself grow younger.

The new Mrs. Jaruzel is the former Ethel Irene Ogg, daughter of Mrs. Forrest Ogg of Elizabeth Lake road and the late Mr. Ogg. Peter, the son of Mrs. Martha Jaruzel of Gaylord, has been making his home on West Hopkins avenue.

A gown of white Chantilly lace over nylon tulle and satin was chosen by the bride for the 9 o'clock ceremony performed by the Rev. William Immel.

The gown featured a cathedral-length train, and a Juliet crown held her fingertip veil. She carried a chapel bouquet of white roses, carnations, stephanotis and ivy.

Mrs. Donald Ogg was matron of honor wearing a gown of aqua net over satin. Mrs. William Liley and Bernice Fernandez were the other attendants wearing matching gowns of orchid net over satin. Sharon Hughes was flower girl wearing a gown of lavender net over taffeta.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Ogg wore a rose nylon lace dress with navy and white accessories and a corsage of pink and white roses. Mrs. Jaruzel wore a dress of navy flowered print with a corsage of red roses.

After a reception to be held in the Knights of Columbus Hall on South Saginaw street in the evening, the bride will change to her traveling costume, a navy blue linen dress with navy and white accessories and a white rose corsage.

A breakfast was served in Knights of Columbus Hall for members of the family immediately following the ceremony.

Training Wasted When Women Quit Jobs

Bosses Fear Career Girls Will Wed

Editor's Note: Claire Giannini Hoffman, director of the Bank of America and daughter of its late founder, A. P. Giannini, believes that girls who choose business careers instead of homemaking should have equal rights with men, even though some women occasionally change their minds and quit to get married. Mrs. Hoffman tells why in the following article, last of a three-part series by San Francisco Call-Bulletin staff writer Jane Eshleman Conant.

By JANE ESHLEMAN CONANT
SAN FRANCISCO (INS)—The trouble with some women in business is that they keep doing flighty things—like getting married.

Then they quit their jobs, and all their training has been wasted. That's the man's point of view. "In considering promotions," one said, "We are quite willing to consider women."

"But we have a selfish regard for our own operations. When we appoint executives, we must assure ourselves that they are not here today and gone tomorrow."

Claire Giannini Hoffman, director of the Bank of America and daughter of its late founder, A. P. Giannini, concedes that the man is perfectly right.

But, she inquires: "Why should the others—the real career women, with stick-to-it-iveness and brains and skill—be penalized because some girls don't stay on the job?"

"After all, keeping the homes and raising the children is still the woman's main job."

"But if she wants a career, instead, she should be entitled to it."

Mrs. Hoffman says the true career girl still hasn't won that right, and she herself believes the situation is "horribly unfair."

For instance, she says, if a girl who's been groomed for an important job suddenly exchanges her desk for a dishpan or bassinet, the men say "Well, there's a woman for you."

"But if a man quits capriciously, nobody says 'That's a man for you.'"

Mrs. Hoffman hopes it will be understood that she is not critical of her own bank when she cites it to show how the career girl often comes to a dead-end while a man, no smarter than she, keeps rising to new heights.

In fact, she said she believes the Bank of America does better by the fair sex than lots of other institutions.

One factor which many of the nylon-and-perfume coterie regard as a drawback is the State Labor Commission regulation which bars them from working more than eight hours a day with certain exceptions.

Unless a woman earns $350 or more a month, and has certain supervisory or professional rank, she must quit when the clock says 5, whether or not her work is done.

This, says Mrs. Hoffman, allows certain anti-career-girl males to kiss them all off by saying that the women just can't make it under that handicap.

Another millstone around the necks of the girls, she believes, is their habit of herding together in "auxiliary" groups—such as the Women's Committee of the American Institute of Banking—instead of taking leading roles in the AIB itself.

But there's a lot of hope, she said.

Whereas a few years ago the men in the AIB found it unthinkable to consider a woman for membership in the executive board, now they've let it be known they'd like the feminine faction to put up a candidate.

And whereas as lately as four or five years ago there were no women officers in her own bank, now there are 62—a good start, but not enough for Mrs. Hoffman.

Other banks, too, are providing brass hats for some of their girls.

There's Mrs. Ruth E. Sherrill, vice president of the First National Bank of Memphis, who heads the National Association of Bank Women.

Elsie Tolley is an assistant vice president of the American Trust Company in San Francisco; Louise McGovern, assistant trust officer for the Wells Fargo Bank, and Louise Hewitt, assistant secretary of the Bank of Berkeley.

Mrs. Hoffman's interests range from her stallion "Scotty" and his two fillies, to riding, golf, bowling, tennis and work in the Telegraph Hill Community Center and the Salesian Boys Club.

But she confesses that the bank is her first love.

She wants it to be perfect—and that's why she's plugging for advancement for the girls.

How's it to be done?

"Mr. A. P.'s" daughter sets an example herself, by tactfully expounding her cause among her high-echelon male colleagues in the bank. She hopes other women in top jobs will do the same in their own institutions.

As for the career girl herself:

She should do her job so thoroughly and well that no one will say . . . "There's a woman for you."

She should take a more active role in her professional organizations, rather than hiding away with the other women in "auxiliaries."

And if she finds legal restrictions like the eight-hour law a hindrance, she should seek to have them corrected.

Then the day of emancipation may finally come, and Mrs. Hoffman said: "Wouldn't it be wonderful?"

Plastic Purses Will Give Away Careless Habits

Time was when the inside of a woman's handbag was no one's affair but her own—except when she couldn't find something in a hurry. Now, fashion's playing a trick on us, and our secrets are shown to everyone.

That pretty new "peekaboo" plastic handbag indicates that you're conscious of the latest fashion, but it can also tell everyone you meet that you're careless in your handbag habits.

Your handbag accessories, to be correct, should match—billfold or French purse, eyeglass, key and cigarette cases, etc. There's no limit to the number of beautiful and interesting new colors available in complete sets of personal leather goods; you can find everything from buttercup yellow to sea green turquoises.

There are conversation-making leathers, fabrics and synthetics used, too, and metal or jeweled ornaments to catch sunlight on the beach, moonlight on the terrace.

We've even seen accessories cued to the designs of the bags, such as gold-embossed stars on pale pink kidskin which pick up the glitter pressed into the clear plastic of a handbag. There are billfolds trimmed with tiny seashells, little rhinestones, even pearls. And for evening, gold mesh, snakeskin and embroidered brocades certainly can cause comment.

Right now, if you're showing the world a faded, dog-eared billfold, a crumpled package of cigarettes (with tobacco wisps lining the folds of the bag) and a jangle of keys, it's time to look at that new bag as others see it!

Shower Given for Joan Davis

Mrs. Harold Jacobson's Interlaken drive home at Pine Lake was the setting Wednesday evening for a bridal shower honoring Joan Davis, bride elect of David Locklin.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Davis of Medina, Ohio, Joan will speak her vows with David on Sept. 4. He is the son of the A. L. Locklins of Oneida road.

Mrs. Davis came from Medina to attend the shower and friends from Detroit, East Lansing and Washington were among the other 30 guests present at the event.

Stop Mildew Fast

Mildew on leather goods should be removed immediately. Wipe with a cloth wrung out of mixture of half denatured alcohol, half water. Then dry in a brisk current of air. Leather also can be washed in thick, mild soap suds.

for Civilian Defense

By Religious News Service
ANOKA, Minn. — Minnesota Seventh Day Adventist have offered their camp here and its facilities to the state's civilian defense organization, in event of emergency. They also have volunteered to provide a staff of doctors, nurses and welfare workers, including a camp superintendent and medical director.

A resolution empowering Col. F. B. Miller, state civilian defense director, to open and operate the camp during war or a natural catastrophe was formally presented to Col. Miller's deputy, Davis Harrison, in a ceremony during the annual conference of Minnesota Seventh Day Adventists at their camp here.

In recommending the resolution to the delegates at the conference, Elder E. R. Osmonson, Minneapolis, conference president, declared:

"The Seventh Day Adventist denomination has always been dedicated, not only to the preaching of the Gospel, but to relieving suffering and distress in the world, both in war and in peace. Therefore, as our nation faces the present international crisis our church should cooperate more fully with the national defense program."

Everyday Religion

By DON D. TULLIS

"KING SIZE"

"King Size" is a popular slogan on the marts of trade. It may well be copied in the realm of morals. The world can get along without king-size merchandise but it must have king-size men—men who have "strong minds, great hearts, true faith and willing hands."

As the electric company plants tall poles to convey light and power to homes and factories, so civilization must have men who tower above the clouds of infamy and shame that so often darken the skies—honest men who know the truth and live it, men who will not seek popularity at the television's mouth.

King-size men do not parade their virtues or seek for praise. They do not stoop to stir up the muck of meanness through which they must pass. Circumstances may drive them through the mire and mud of things but they come through with no unseemly mess clinging to their garments.

Shakespeare's King Richard says of them, "Not all the water in the rude rough sea can wash the balm from an anointed king. The breath of worldly men cannot depose the deputy elected of the Lord."

King-size men bear the burdens of their age. Dwarfs of mind and spirit cannot carry the load that life puts upon the backs of men. Nor can the gnomes who think themselves to be giants.

It is only by the way of sacrifice and suffering that men grow to king size. Milton says, "A crown is but a wreath of thorns, bringing danger, troubles, cares and sleepless nights to him what wears a regal diadem, when on his shoulders each man's burden lies, for therein stands the office of a king."

Over every department of human activity is the sign, "WANTED. KING-SIZE MEN." In commerce and trade there is need for more employers who value men above the product of their mills, and more workers who recognize the sacredness of toil.

Governments require king-size diplomats and education wants more men who dare to stand for freedom of thought and an unbiased search for truth.

In religion it is imperative that there be king-size men to teach and live a king-size Gospel, men who receive their commission from the one king-size Man of the centuries.

In Him great souls inherit a royal birthright and from His hands receive a kingly crown.

Peace Churches Ask A-Weapon End

By Religious News Service
PHILADELPHIA — In a joint statement, the service agencies of three historic peace churches declared that "man cannot serve both Christ and the bomb."

The statement, issued on behalf of the Mennonite Central Committee, the Brethren Service Commission and the American Friends Service Committee, warned that peace cannot be built from fear.

"Let us be done with these fearful weapons, regardless of what others do," the statement pleaded.

In a reference to the recent H-bomb test explosion which, they said, "took the form of a cross as it rose into the upper atmosphere," the three groups recalled the words of Jesus: "No man can serve two masters. Their statement continued:

"Today our thoughts go back 2,000 years to Calvary, but for mankind in 1954 the cross of Christ stands in the shadow of the cross of hydrogen.

Tough Talk No Good in National Relations

By Religious News Service
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y. — Talking tough is not the way to deal with other nations or with rival groups within a country, Dr. Everett R. Clinchy said here.

Dr. Clinchy, president of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, spoke at the annual Institute for Family and Community Living at Vassar College.

Warning against "the hard-boiled threat that grows out of fear, insecurity and anxiety," he said: "In dealing with the other states that exist in the family of nations with us, Theodore Roosevelt's policy 'to speak softly and carry a big stick' is as sound today as when enunciated two generations ago.

"Fortunately," Dr. Clinchy continued, "today the world can speak reasonably in the United Nations, and the big stick can be the collective police action of free peoples."

Public School Becomes Parochial Institution

By Religious News Service
CLINTON, Ia. — A rural public school in Clinton county, taught by Roman Catholic nuns since 1888, became a parochial school on June 1.

Changeover of the two-room Sugar Creek school, which has an enrollment of 50 Catholic pupils in eight grades, was announced by F. C. Bowersox, county school superintendent.

Mr. Bowersox said the county board of education and the pastor of St. Joseph's church had agreed it "would be better" to operate the school as a parochial institution.

New Windows Adorn Church

2 Presbyterian Groups
Present Stained Glass Offerings

Two new stained glass windows have been installed in the sanctuary of First Presbyterian Church.

The children's window, given by the church school portrays the Good Shepherd carrying a lamb in His arms. To the left of this main meditation is the portrayal of the small boy with five barley loaves and two fishes, below which is the designation "Teach Me to Give." To the right of the shepherd is a child dressed in white kneeling in the posture of prayer. The inscription below this reads "Teach Me to Pray."

The window given by the Women's Association centers around the idea of womanhood in the New Testament. The center figure in a blue gown is Mary, the mother of Jesus. To the left is portrayed Mary and Martha of Bethany in conversation with Jesus and to the right is "Mary Magdalene and the other Mary at the empty tomb, confronted by angels.

Predominant colors in the windows are cathedral blues and reds. The glass was made in Belgium and England.

Both windows will be dedicated in the fall.

Ascension Pastor Heads Camp Board

This year the Rev. George L. Garver, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Ascension, was re-elected chairman of the official board of the Lutheran Camp at Gun Lake. The Rev. Mr. Garver was the first director of the camp when it was organized several years ago.

Each year pastors of Michigan congregations of the United Lutheran Church in America devote a week to counseling and teaching the youth of the church at camp.

The Rev. David A. Belgium, instructor in religious education at Wittenberg College, is camp director this year.

Thirty youths of the local church are registered for a week or more at camp this summer.

Christian Principles in Business Urged

CHICAGO — Samuel Cardinal Stritch, Archbishop of Chicago, warned here that the American economy can survive Marxism only if Christian principles are applied to business as well as everyday life.

Addressing the ninth annual convention of the Catholic Business Education Association, Cardinal Stritch condemned businessmen who have a different ethical code for business and private life.

Flooded German Area Receives Relief Goods

GENEVA — More than 35 tons of relief goods have been sent to Regensburg, Germany, by the Evangelical Church in Germany for distribution in the flood-ravaged areas of Bavaria, it was reported here by World Council of Churches officials.

The shipment was drawn from emergency stocks of bedding and food in Bremen sent to Germany earlier by Church World Service, relief arm of the (U.S.) National Council of Churches, and by Lutheran World Relief.

Meanwhile, the officials said, World Council representatives in Austria have offered authorities there all the relief goods they have on hand for use in that country's stricken villages and cities.

Sunday will be Women's Day at Trinity Baptist Church with all services of the day in charge of the women of the church, according to the Rev. Richard H. Dixon, pastor.

The Sunday services will be preceded by a Mother and Daughter banquet tonight with Mrs. A. A. Banks of Detroit as guest speaker.

Mrs. Banks is wife of the pastor of Second Baptist Church there.

She recently was appointed to the Michigan Social Welfare Department for 5 years by Governor Williams, and is a member of the School of Religion sponsored by the Detroit Council of Churches. She also is a member of the board of directors of the National Council on Family Relations and Child Study Association of America.

The banquet which starts at 8 p. m. will have a table reserved for three families with four living generations.

Mrs. Gertrude Strickland and Mrs. Sarah Harper are chairman and co-chairman of the affair.

Sunday's program will include an address by Mrs. Primrose Functious of Nashville, Tenn. She is director of youth work of the National Baptist Convention and a director of the World Council of Church Women. She also will speak at the 4:30 panel and forum.

The women of the church will present the Sunday evening service.

Priest Warns Nation Courting Mental Illness

By Religious News Service
ST. PAUL, Minn. — A Jesuit priest warned here that as a nation "we are well on our way to a nervous breakdown."

The Rev. Edward A. Conway, S. J., associate editor of America, Jesuit national weekly review, spoke at the 42nd annual commencement exercises of the College of St. Catherine.

He said that just as frustrated individuals frequently suffer from nervous breakdowns through "knocking their heads against one locked door after another," so too "as a nation we are trying one after another door to peace—and none opens to our hand."

We are locked in a struggle with forces which secretly and cunningly hold every closed door," the priest said, "and we are becoming more and more frustrated because we cannot find an 'open sesame.'"

"The mind of the nation is becoming troubled, and its nerves are frayed."

Church Council Plans Festival

Cast of 3,000 to Give Pageant on August 15 in Chicago

An estimated audience of 100,000 persons will fill Chicago's mammoth Soldier Field Aug. 15 to witness one of the largest and what advance plans indicate will be one of the most spectacular public worship services in recent Protestant history. The "Festival of Faith"—with a cast of more than 3,000 is planned for the opening day of the Second Assembly of the World Council of Churches meeting in Evanston, Ill., Aug. 15-31.

With the aid of pageantry, music and drama, the service will deal with the relationship of the human spirit to God and reveal the struggles through which the individual and the Church find their fulfillment in Christ, according to advance program reports.

The script for the service has been written by Miss Helen Kromer, who has done outstanding work in the field of radio, motion pictures and religious drama. She wrote both the historical pageant "Presbyterian Panorama" presented at the 1952 General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., and "This City Under God," a dramatic pageant commemorating the 300th anniversary of Protestantism in Brooklyn, N. Y. The festival is being arranged by the Church Federation of Greater Chicago in cooperation with the Chicago Area-Midwest World Council Assembly Committee.

The service will open with a procession of some 1,500 World Council representatives. Selected delegates, wearing their church regalia and others in the costumes of the 48 nations in the Council's membership, will carry flags to be placed a one end of the stadium beneath a blue hanging on which will be emblazoned in gold the World Council emblem.

Included in the massive cast are several massed choirs; a brass choir, special trumpeters, a carillon, a large speaking chorus and an interpretative pantomime group.

Singspiration Slated at Marimont Baptist

A singspiration has been planned for Sunday at 9:15 by young people of the city for young people. The event will take place at Marimont Baptist Church, Walton Blvd. at Hollywood St.

The program will feature many musical numbers by young people in the area. Numbers will be presented by young people from Memorial, Perry Park, Silvercrest and Gingsville Baptist Churches, as well as Sunnyvale Chapel and Five Points Community Church.

Dave Kives will be the song leader.

Cure Social Evil, to Stop Reds, Says U. N. Official

By Religious News Service
DAVENPORT, Ia. — Military steps to meet the Communist challenge are "symptomatic treatment" but not the cure for the worldwide conditions which breed war, Dr. Hugh L. Keenleyside, director general of the United Nations Technical Assistance Administration, said here.

Addressing the faculty and alumni of St. Ambrose Roman Catholic College at their 71st annual commencement exercises, Dr. Keenleyside said the cure lies in remedying social injustices within our own national boundaries and supporting "the weaker nations that are still free from external domination."

Providence Baptist to Host Detroiters

The Usher Board of Providence Baptist Church will present the New Liberty Baptist Church of Detroit as guests Sunday at 3 p. m.

The choirs of the guest and host churches will furnish special music and the visiting pastor, the Rev. E. Allen Rudolph II, will preach.

Dinner will be served by the Pastor's Chorus of which Mrs. Grace Clark is president.

Mrs. Georgia Chenuit is president of the Usher Board and the Rev. T. Walter Harris is pastor. Proceeds will be for the benefit of the building fund.

Church Council Names Site for Headquarters

CLEVELAND (U. N. — New York City has been recommended as the site for permanent headquarters of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. The recommendation, which was made last Monday after a special meeting here of the National Council's headquarters committee, will be presented to the council's general board, which meets Sept. 14 and 15 in New York.

Confident Living

Life's Interesting, Exciting When Person Finds God

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE
Is life an exciting experience for you? Are you fascinated by people and by things? Can you honestly characterize yourself as an "agony" person? Have you mastered the art of getting a great thrill out of life no matter how old you are or how heavily burdened?

If your answer to any of these questions is in the negative, you're not getting what you should out of life. It is hard to understand how anyone can be dull or apathetic, living in this dynamic age.

How can anyone possibly be unmoved and unthrilled by it all? It seems incredible that this amazing world should fail to evoke enthusiastic response in anyone.

I get a great thrill out of going to the circus at least once every year. And this year I was the guest of my friend, Beverly Kelly, one of the "big show's" famous publicity men. He is a very busy person and handles a multitude of details. "Beverly," I asked him, "do you enjoy this job? How long have you been at it?"

"Twenty-eight years," he answered. "And, as for enjoying it, it's a lot better than working." That is one of the most thrilling remarks I have ever heard a man make about his job.

Recently Arturo Toscanini, great music master, retired, at 87, he was still conducting orchestras with unsurpassed skill and genius. "Whatever my father is doing," his son explains, "whether it is tackling a new symphony or peeling and orange, it is the biggest moment of his life."

And then there is another old friend, Branch Rickey, head of the Pittsburgh Pirates, now 72. A reporter asked him, "Mr. Rickey, what was your greatest thrill in 50 years of baseball?"

Rickey drew down those great brows of his, thought for a minute, looked out at the players on the field and answered: "My greatest thrill in 50 years? I haven't had it yet."

These are men who are living to their fingertips. They have learned how to keep alive, how to be perpetually thrilled and fascinated, they know the meaning of the greatest formula of living ever spoken, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."

That's the way we all want to be, isn't it? Why, then, aren't we all that way? And how can we get to be that way?

It's a simple proposition. One reason that the thrill, the zest, the rapture, the fascination, the flavor and the joy of life depart, is because we allow ourselves to become so burdened down, so overwhelmed with a mass of things. An old lady I once knew put it very neatly when she commented, "Life is so daily."

You get up in the morning and go through the routine and infinite minutiae of the day. You worry about things, become plagued by anxieties and dwell under a haunting sense of frustration. That's the unhappy way many of us live, and of course this is depressing and completely unexciting.

But there are people who don't get that way. They seem to have a constant infusion of energy and enthusiasm. They carry life's burdens easily. What is their secret? They find their insatiable curiosity, eager interest and unquenchable zest in spiritual experience.

It may be described in a line from the Bible, "In Him we live and move and have our being." When a person really finds God, he finds life that is perpetually interesting and exciting.

Sign Language in U.S. Acclaimed by Deaf Priest

By Religious News Service
NEW YORK — The first totally deaf priest to be ordained in the Roman Catholic Church said here that the sign language used in the United States is "infinitely superior" to that employed in the British Isles.

The Very Rev. Canon William J. Hayward of the Salford, Eng., diocese told a press conference he was planning to "import" the American sign language to his country.

"It is easier to learn and understand," he said. "It is more defining, clearer and more elaborate. Our system in England is based on pictures of ideas instead of letters and is very incomplete. In America, you can make signs, word for word, and we cannot."

Episcopalians Parade

NEW YORK — Some 1,500 Episcopalians, many of them in colorful national costumes, paraded through the streets of lower Manhattan to open an unusual Day of Witness.

Arranged by the New York Urban Priests Group, an organization of Protestant Episcopal clergymen working in parishes that are largely interracial and international, the program stressed the theme "One Family in Christ."

Pope Tells Girls to Combat Evil

Pontiff Says Building of "Spiritual Fortress" Protection From Bad

By Religious News Service
VATICAN CITY—Pope Pius XII told 7,000 girls, delegates to the international Marian congress of the Children of Mary, that they should each build within themselves a "spiritual fortress" in order to combat the "snares and deformations" of the world.

The Pontiff addressed the delegates in St. Peter's Basilica after a solemn Mass was celebrated for them by Clement Cardinal Micara, Vicar General of Rome and Prefect of the Sacred Congregation of Rites. Fifteen thousand other pilgrims crowded into the Basilica to hear the Pope.

After hailing the "enormous enthusiasm" of the Children of Mary, Pope Pius warned them of a "world constantly forgetful of God."

"You must have great trust," he said, "in the intercession of the Holy Virgin and ask her help that you keep your promises. You cannot remain faithful to her without special help as everywhere the world invites you to inactivity and superficiality and often to sin while you yourselves try to act decently. You must study Christian doctrine, read the Gospels and the lives of the saints. . . . You must inside yourselves build a spiritual fortress wherein you may be able in contemplation and silence to listen to the voice of God."

Pastors Following Migrant Laborers

NEW YORK, N. Y. — The peak of the vast migrant trek is on just now, as an estimated 2,000,000 migratory workers, including their families, fan out to the nation's bean, pea and corn fields, to the strawberry beds and the fruit orchards, reach into virtually every state in the union during the summer.

And close behind them or even preceding them, members of the Migrant Ministry, some of them volunteers, arrive to minister to their social, religious, welfare and educational needs.

Three hundred teachers, principals, ministers, college students and seminarians are now moving into the agricultural migrant camps throughout the country.

In Michigan the problem is the swift movement of an estimated 107,000 migrants from strawberries, cherries, peaches, sugar beets, etc., with 23 Migrant Ministry staff keeping up with them. Counties so served are: Bay, Berrien, Genesee, Grand Traverse, Ingham, Leelanau, Montcalm, Oceana, Sanilac and Van Buren. Program includes child-care, daily vacation Bible school, education, recreation, and in one camp, lending library services.

Psychiatry Sees Religion as Cure for Sick Minds

VIENNA—The medical treatment of men's souls—this is a new school of psychiatry which is growing up in Vienna, the birthplace of psychoanalysis.

"Logotherapy," as the new school is called, says doctors do not pay enough attention to man's spiritual strivings. It believes a combination of medicine and God can help men with atom-age neuroses—with high blood pressure, ulcers, nervous headaches, phobias and other symptoms.

Dr. Viktor Frankl, Vienna neurologist and president of the Austrian Society of Medical Psychotherapy, explains:

"Man is not driven only by animal instincts—those of sex, hunger and power—but primarily he is motivated in his deepest nature by strivings for a life full of meaning."

"Modern man, however, is often ashamed of God. He represses his spiritual longings like men of 50 years ago hid their sexual urges. He becomes confused and sick."

Frankl, 49, a Vienna University associate professor and founder of the new "logotherapy," seeks to harmonize religious faith with some of the basic concepts of Sigmund Freud and Alfred Adler.

Freud and Adler often are regarded as the fathers of modern psychiatry, but, although both were Viennese, Vienna generally has rejected their ideas.

Frankl himself was a pupil of both Freud and Adler. His modification of their ideas has been accepted by many doctors and teachers in Vienna and his methods have been introduced in France, Germany, Italy, Spain, Holland and Argentina. He is, however, virtually unknown in the United States and England.

Frankl estimates that three quarters of Europe's population is suffering from a collective sickness of the mind.

They do not want to plan in the H-bomb era, they believe more and more in a fatalism that they can do nothing about the world, they are willing to surrender to the mass and become intolerant fanatics, he believes.

"Sometimes," says Frankl, "men talk more easily about their sexual histories than about their need for God."

"The patient is finally brought to recognize that he is born with a mission to fulfill. He no longer has to believe that he is a mere victim of hereditary, environment and instinctual drives and that he cannot control them. He is freed from his inhibitions about religion and can face the emotional problems of life."

More than 3,000,000 people in the world have malaria.

Director Finds Many Problems in Pool Ballet

By HUBBARD KEAVY
(For Bob Thomas)

HOLLYWOOD — Here is a swimming pool with a capacity of 600,000 gallons, the most attractive of which is Esther Williams. It takes some doing to figure out new ways to display Esther in the water, but Hermes Pan is our man.

This classically christened dance director went into mythology, because the story is about Hannibal and Rome, to dream up a number for Esther. In the pool are statues of Apollo and several other fellows who could have been kinsmen of Hermes. Esther glides into the pool and Apollo — in the person of Johnny Oizewski, he of the Chicago Cardinals — comes to life when Esther kisses him. This is fantasy?

On the screen the entire sequence will last but seven minutes. But it involves 75 players and technicians, five weeks of rehearsal and five full days of filming.

Heretofore, Esther's underwater life has been filmed through a window in the side of a big tank. That got to be pretty stale stuff, because about all Esther could do was cut her capers in front of the camera. The limitations were pretty narrow. In this one, called "Jupiter's Darling," the cameras will be in the water too, which will give Esther and companions much more latitude.

Part of the rehearsal time was spent determining how long Esther and the six males representing the ancient deities could stay under water. The limit was 50 seconds. Hermes had to break up the action into 50-second takes. This meant something had to be done about the music, because you just can't play music willy-nilly and hope it fits. Eight bars run 50 seconds. So everything had to be coordinated to the second.

It would seem that after Hermes got this thing all set up and timed and rehearsed it could be knocked off in eight 50-second takes. But movies can't be made so easily. There will be long delays while the swimmers rest, while lights are focused and cameras moved. And each tiny part of the scene will be filmed many times from varying angles.

If you see this picture you are apt to wonder how Esther's red hair stays in place under water. Simple. She douses her head with transparent grease and her braids are wired into place, she explains. "So I can't come undone, can I?"

Gov. McKeldin Asks Ike to Forsake Golf Games

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Gov. McKeldin of Maryland has asked President Eisenhower to give up his golf as his favorite recreation — at least long enough to try the Maryland duck hunting.

McKeldin sent the President Maryland's No. 1 hunting license yesterday and expressed hope he could find time to use it. The governor holds license No. 2.

Instruction in military signaling and telegraphy was added to the curriculum of the Military Academy at West Point in July, 1953.

Ionian Dorm Request Backed by Williams

LANSING (UP) — Michigan's emergency appropriations commission meets Monday to consider a $225,000 request for a 150-man dormitory at Ionia Reformatory to ease prison overcrowding as the state's inmate population continues to soar toward 10,000.

Gov. G. Mennen Williams issued a call for a "little Legislature" session July 15 following an urgent warning by the corrections commission that Michigan's prisons are operating with 900 inmates over capacity.

"In view of the demonstrably dangerous overcrowding of prison population, the urgency in finding a solution, even if only partial, and the obvious practicality of the recommendation by the corrections commission, I strongly urge that the appropriation be made," Williams said in calling the lawmakers.

Corrections Director Gus Harrison said today construction of the dormitory is the "only feasible thing to do."

Myrtle the Turtle Finds Swimming Some Hurdle

ROME, N. Y. — This turtle named Myrtle had a college education. But she flunked in swimming. Myrtle was among the chosen few who helped great scientists in California study the habits of land turtles. Then last April she came to Rome and became the pet of 12-year-old Billy Messenger.

But Billy went to camp this summer. And some other children who didn't know Myrtle apparently thought she was thirsty and put her in water. Myrtle drowned.

Georgia's Camp Dies at Bethesda

Death of Congressional Veteran Adds to GOP Edge in House

WASHINGTON — Rep. Albert S. Camp, Democrat of Georgia, died at Bethesda Naval Hospital early today of a liver ailment. Married and the father of two children, Camp would have been 62 years old Monday. He had been under hospital treatment a number of months.

The congressional veteran was first elected to the House in 1939 and has served continuously since then. He was the sixth House member to die since the present Congress was chosen in November, 1952.

His death, together with the resignation last Wednesday of Rep. Louis B. Heller (D-N.Y.), leaves the House lineup at 219 Republicans, 213 Democrats and 1 independent. All other vacancies except these two have been filled.

Consider Equal Adultery Laws for All Italians

ROME — Under Italian law a husband can have his wife arrested for adultery if he can prove a single instance of infidelity. But a husband cannot be convicted of adultery unless he has a "habitual and notorious relation" with another woman.

A Christian Democrat senator, Giuseppe Solar, 46, wants this changed to apply the same rule to husbands as to wives.

His proposal has stirred widely varied reactions in this land where the Roman emperors once had noses cut off unfaithful wives while smiling on errant husbands.

"We Italian wives are tired of the continuous unfaithfulness of husbands," one woman wrote to her newspaper.

Another letter signed "a husband" appealed to senators not to vote "against our freedom and against all traditions."

Record Number to Take National Guard Training

LANSING (UPI)—A record number of officers and men will take part in Michigan National Guard field training this summer, Brig. Gen. George C. Moran, state adjutant general, revealed today.

Training for nearly 10,845 guardsmen will be inaugurated July 31 by Company A of the 878th Engineer Battalion at Camp Douglas, Wis.

State field training will hit its peak when the largest element of the Michigan guard, the 4th Infantry Division, invades Camp Grayling Aug. 7 for 15 days of active training.

Of the record 10,845 men now in the State National Guard, more than 96 per cent are expected to take part in summer training, Moran said.

National Guard truck convoys, which touched off a squabble between tourist and military interests last year, will create "a minimum disturbance" on highways this year, guard officials promised.

"No more than 15 troop carriers will travel in one section and slow-moving vehicles will pull off the road to allow civilian traffic to pass when necessary, guard officials said. Heavy equipment will move by rail.

Along with Camp Grayling, currently being used by 8,000 Indiana National Guardsmen, Michigan units also will utilize Camp Claybanks (west of Eshbury on Lake Michigan). The 146th AAA Battalion, Detroit, will train at Claybanks Aug. 14-21.

The Michigan Air National Guard will begin its first year of summer training at the new Alpena Air Guard Base on Aug. 21. No combined air-ground exercises are planned this year, officials said.

Also on Aug. 21, the 300th AAA Battalion of the Upper Peninsula and Manistee will embark for Camp Haven, Wis.

Cost of the 1954 National Guard field training in Michigan will be an estimated $1,330,853, Moran said. More than $1,000,000 will be spent at Grayling encampments.

"Pay and allowance costs of $944,150 constitute the largest item in estimated field training costs," Moran said, "and a large percentage of this money will accompany troops and airmen back to their home communities."

Food, expected to cost $202,524, is the second highest single item.

Six mess halls and eight bath houses have been constructed at Camp Grayling in the new special troops area. A seventh mess hall is under construction.

Emergency communications between guardsmen and families, in addition to financial aid provisions, will be available.

National Guard recruits will be relieved of KP duty during the first week of training, officials said.

To Attend Safety Course

Floyd Gilson, acting mechanic in charge of trucks for the Pontiac Post Office, has been named to attend a course in motor vehicle safety in Detroit July 26-30, Pontiac Postmaster Leslie H. Dean said today. The course will be given by the U. S. Post Office Department as part of a national highway safety program recently announced by Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield.

European Paintings Hang in Lake Home

By HAZEL A. TRUMBLE

Raphael, Renoir and Michelangelo are right at home in an authentic Early American setting—on the oyster white walls of the E. M. Buckleys' new home on the shores of Cass Lake.

Hung in gilt frames, they present an impressive picture grouping, but their European influence blends with rather than dominates the long combination living-dining room furnished in old Salem Rockers, pine chests and cherry tables.

The Buckleys chose a New England cottage design home when they decided to build on their three-acre lakeside site at 4116 Commerce Rd.

Gray brick with white shutters and a stage coach lantern mounted on an iron post presents a surprise picture after driving down a winding and heavily wooded driveway off Commerce Rd.

Mrs. Buckley, well-known in Pontiac social and educational circles as Agnes Buckley, wanted an Early American background for her furnishings of native woods and historical glass and crystal collection. She wanted a home that would invite braided rugs, old music boxes and tale lamps.

Selecting white for the living room background color, this same oyster shade is used in the draperies with moss green fringe for edging. The carpet for the living room is an oriental rug whose gold tones are picked up again in the button-backed cherry-framed sofa.

Homespun tweeds cover occasional chairs and the cobbler's bench has its original leather seat with brass studded nails.

Kitchens Must Look as Such, Says Designer

NEW YORK (UP)—A recognized designer advocates that kitchens should look like kitchens, and not living rooms.

Walter Dorwin Teague, whose firm has designed everything from houses to the interior of a jet airliner, says the use of a room should decide its decoration.

"I don't hold with slip-covered refrigerators," he says, "and a range that looks like anything but a superior cooking device should be rejected on sight."

Teague opposes the rash of high-style colors invading kitchens. He explains that the clear whiteness of most appliances such as stoves and refrigerators should be relieved by color accents, but nothing as drastic as coral pink, chartreuse or aquamarine.

"Imagine," he says, "being stuck with a lump of color that size for the life of the appliance."

"A few years ago," he says, "we had an outbreak of knotty pine offices in skyscrapers. I think now we are in danger of having a rash of knotty pine kitchens, and other efforts to introduce nostalgia into what should be the most functional and efficient department of the house."

outlining the depressed section. Serving as a separating unit between the living and dining section of this room is a green velvet upholstered divan.

Drawer pulls on the walnut and cherry tables tell another era in American history with their opalescent and their sandwich-styled lines. A stand that holds magazines is actually an old towel rack.

Interesting window treatment is achieved by the Buckleys with their twin-bays curving out to break the straight lines of the room's interior and serving to give the exterior of the house a variation in line.

A circular cherry drop-leaf table centers the dining room area with an old pine milk chest and another chest in cherry placed here. Chairs are the traditional captain's and black Hitchcock.

Over a period of years and from many parts of this country, Mrs. Buckley has found rare milk glass, pegged plates, hobnail and inverted thumb print glass, the one-thousand eye and the aristocrat of all glass, the three-face stemmed crystal.

In colors, the glass is amber, blue, vaseline and she has an old-fashioned sugar shaker in silver resist.

Modern in mode and convenience is the white kitchen whose yellow counter tops give a lovely color scheme to this room which overlooks the lake. A stainless steel stove in countertop fashion

GRAY BRICK—Designed as a New England cottage style, the E. M. Buckleys built their new Cass Lake home of gray brick with white used for trim. Contrast note is in the hammered wrought iron hardware used both on the interior and exterior of the gracious home that provides a perfect background for the many Early American furnishings owned by the Buckleys. Adjacent to the two-car garage is the utility and oven built into the wall are facilities offering convenience for cooking.

Hammered wrought iron hardware used on all the cupboards presents a contrast note against the stark white baked-enamel wooden units. Black and white combine in a marble effect for the floor linoleum.

The screened-in porch is the one contemporary furnished room with its new glass and wrought iron furniture. Some bamboo furnishings have been used in this room also. A gift from a friend, the hand braided rug in the study has the same blues and reds as the bird prints on the walls. Polished mahogany panels the walls of this room with two walls housing built-in bookcases.

In the bedroom wing of the Buckley home are two bedrooms both in pale gray and pink tile. They feature the frosted glass sliding shower doors and built-in dressing tables.

Swiss embroidered organdy made in cottage style provides the window curtains for these two rooms and this same organdy with wide ruffles is used for the bedroom curtains.

One bedroom is furnished in South Carolina cherry and the other in French Provincial furniture.

A full basement has a recreation room with reclaimed brick fireplace, a workshop and hobby room, a furnace room and laundry unit. The house plan also includes a fully plastered two-car garage.

Architect for the Buckley home was Edward Bissell of Birmingham with Ernie Boldt, the contractor and Lloyd Maddock, the mason.

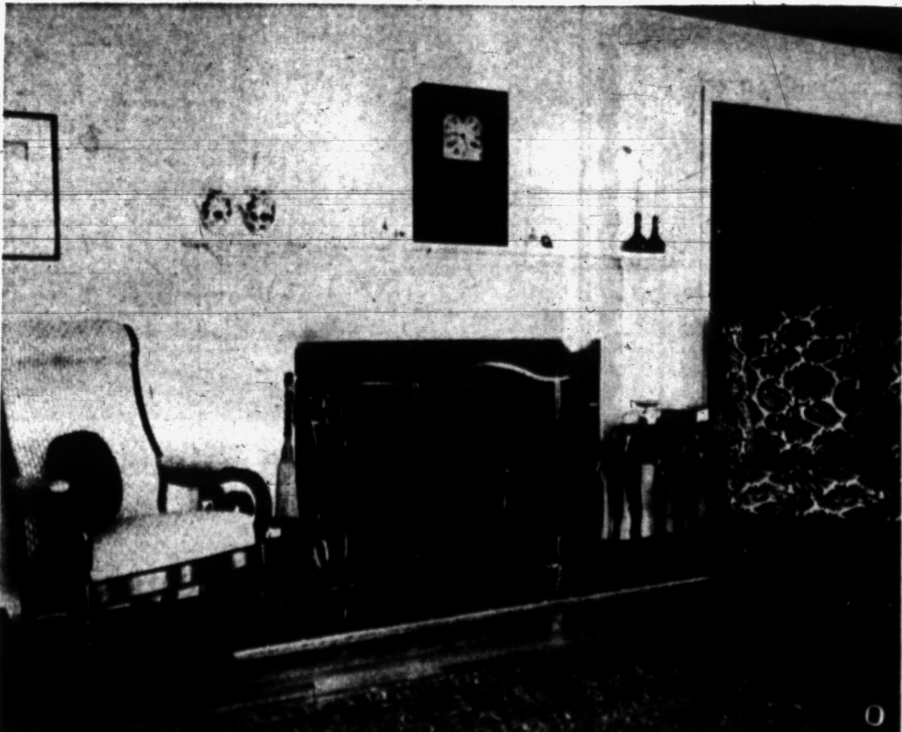

BUCKLEY HOME FEATURES ANTIQUES—The history of American furniture development is written in the many authentic pieces the Buckleys have in their new Cass Lake home. A cherry framed button-backed sofa is flanked by a pair of cherry tables, one having the opalescent pulls and another the sandwich lined pull. Placed in front of the divan is a true cobbler's bench which still has the original depressed leather seat. At the left in the picture is seen an old cherry towel rack which Mrs. Buckley has selected for a magazine holder. The low circular table in front of the bay window is in pine with several chairs in the room upholstered in tapestries and homespun tweeds.

BLACK HARDWARE HIGHLIGHTS WHITE KITCHEN—Black and white have combined with yellow and gray to give the Buckley kitchen an inviting color scheme. Cupboards, highlighted with hammered wrought iron hardware, are in wood with a baked enamel finish. Counter tops are yellow and the floor is in a gray and white marble effect linoleum. Designed for the maximum in efficiency, everything is waist height in the kitchen. The stove is a counter top facility with the oven also a built-in.

BLACK MARBLE FRONT—The formal white mantled fireplace has a black marble frontpiece for contrast with a black tiled marble forming the floor-level hearth. Furnished in Early American decor, the Buckley living room and dining room area walls are done in a soft oyster white.

CASS LAKE VIEW—Window treatment on the Cass Lake side of the Buckley home presents an interesting variation from the straight lines customary in most home designs. Twin bays, each with four vertical windows, are curved and inside this half-circle space gives chair room beside the windows. Other windows in the Buckley home are framed on the exterior with white shutters.

THE NEW LOOK, WALLPAPER—Wallpaper can lead you all through the house with delightful room to room color tie-ins. Here you see the dining room from a kitchen view. Like soft background music, the textured wallpaper in the dining room echoes the bright and beautiful colors of the tropical pattern framing the kitchen door. Vertical color lines of coral, aqua, white, gold and rich brown, give the dining room walls the look and feel of a softly woven fabric. Very dramatic and very restful. And, the very richness of the wallpaper adds warmth to the stern simplicity of the modern table and chairs. To give your home a spacious look, start your color theme in the living room and carry it out all through the house. For example to a color theme of pink, white, beige and black in the living room could be added complementary colors in other rooms such as the coral, aqua, gold and brown in the kitchen and dining rooms.

Tag-Conscious Shoppers Investigate Before Buying

The many new materials on the market have made women more tag conscious. They look for informative tags on articles to guide them in selection and maintenance of various articles, rather than querying sales people, and forgetting their advice and instructions.

Informative tags supply brand name, identify style or type of item, describe color, tell what the product is made of and explain the importance of it to the potential consumer, note specifically outstanding workmanship and quality, explain the uses of the item and provide instructions for the product's care.

Most times these tags give the name of the store, price of the article and approximate delivery date if the merchandise is on order.

The woman who does her laundry at home for instance wants her sheets to be durable, but she is not so interested in the weight of the sheets as the woman who sends her sheets to the laundry, paying by the pound.

These housewives will make their choice probably from two different lines of sheets. The percale informative tag will show the thread count to be 104x38, weight per square yard to be 3.5 ounces, and the breaking strength to be 65 pounds both warpwise and fillingwise.

The one on the second sheet, a heavy muslin, shows the thread count to be 76x70, the weight per square yard to be 4.9 ounces and the breaking strength to be 75 pounds both warpwise and fillingwise. The lighter weight percale is often chosen by the woman with laundry costs in mind.

Furniture is bought to greater advantage through the informative tag medium employed now by more than 50 per cent of manufacturer's brands.

A woman shopping for a living room chair encounters one that is tagged:

"Beautiful, sturdy chairs. Were $110—Now priced at $80. Limited selection. Buy now."

That tag does not give her the information she seeks. Even though the chair is reduced $30 and it knows nothing about it. If she knew exactly what the chair represented, she would be in a better position to judge whether it is a bargain or not.

Another display reads like this: "French Provincial style" Curled hair construction Rayon tapestry cover—blue, green, red, gray. Reversible cushion—down and goose feathers—Price $30. Allow 10 days for delivery."

A tag such as that answers questions an average woman would try to garner from the salesperson. It enables her to choose according to value and quality, buying a chair that is suited to her needs and within her budget.

Canvas Paint Used for Fiber Rugs, Too

The use of canvas paint isn't limited to awnings, tarps and canvas lawn chairs. It's also recommended for fiber rugs.

If you have a fiber porch rug with a faded plaid design, for example, you can paint it one solid color. Just dust and clean the surface thoroughly, then brush on two or three coats of canvas paint—whatever is necessary to conceal the pattern.

If the rug is a solid color to start with, you can use an exterior house stain on it instead of canvas paint.

$50 Million for Cars

Car owners spend over 50 million dollars a year to give the family car a new coat of color. Most often used for refinishing is lacquer, the fastest drying finish known. It is dust-free in a few minutes and hard enough for delivery within a few hours.

Stuck Windows Easily Adjusted by Fixing Stops

If the bottom sash of several windows swell up and stick tight in summer, and waxing the pulley stiles hasn't helped, you can whip the problem by adjusting the stops that hold the sash in place.

Remove the inside stops. Inserting a thin chisel under the stop from the outside so the chisel marks won't show. A few stops are screwed to the window frame.

When the stops on both sides of the window are off, test to see if the sash is sliding easily between the stiles. If it isn't, it should be removed and the edges sanded and waxed.

In resetting the stops, move them a tiny fraction of an inch away from the sash. To keep the windows weather-tight, the space between the stops and the sash should be less at the bottom than at the top. This will minimize wind and water leakage when the sash is closed but will make raising easy.

Benzine Bath First, Then Metal Primer

Painting galvanized iron used to be an almost impossible job, because ordinary paint wouldn't stick to the smooth zinc surface and the vinegar or copper sulfate solution sometimes used didn't help much.

Now all you have to do is clean the metal thoroughly with benzine or any other paint thinner. Then brush on a coat of galvanized metal primer containing zinc dust.

Over this goes a good exterior paint.

Wash Off Calcimine

Don't try to apply any sort of finish over calcimine—even a fresh coat of calcimine. Wash the old calcimine off the walls and ceiling with warm water.

Transparent Coats Protect Exterior Building Material

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The desire to be in style — to obtain a "new look" — frequently submerges our practical sense. Take the matter of retaining the "natural look" on exterior building materials.

At present it's proving highly popular with home builders and buyers. The effect is not obtained, of course, merely by leaving the materials in their natural state. Even when it's possible, it's not always wise to do so.

Take stone, for instance. It might well be voted the building material most likely to retain its natural appearance without man-made aid. Tough and durable as it is, it's porous and cannot prevent the invasion of destructive moisture that can cause costly damage to inside surfaces.

And take that indispensable building material — wood. Once a tree is severed from its roots, it begins to disintegrate, unless it is given man-made protection.

The natural appearance of such building materials — and to increase their serviceability — can be retained by applying transparent coatings to their surfaces. On masonry, for instance, such a coating will greatly increase its water-repellency.

It's usually wise to apply three coats, to begin with, and to add another coat or two approximately every three years. Application, incidentally, can be made with either brush or spray gun.

On wood, transparent coatings can also be used if one wishes to keep the grain and wood markings visible. However, the surfaces must be recoated at regular and frequent intervals.

Pigmented coatings have much greater durability and a longer life span than the clear finishes devised for exterior use. Even the addition of half a pint of color-in-oil (oil containing a pigment) to one gallon of clear exterior finish will lengthen its life to a marked degree.

What do pigmented coatings have that clear ones lack? It's the ability to repel the destructive ultraviolet and infrared rays of the sun. Without this "coat of armor" that the pigments provide, the light and heat of the sun can disintegrate the organic matter contained in a clear coating with comparative rapidity.

All pigments do not supply equal durability to a coating. Some of them may not add durability at all, but increase the hiding power of a paint. By the addition of the latter type of pigment, it's possible to reduce the number of coats necessary to apply.

Pigments are manufactured in very small particles which are carefully and thoroughly combined with oil. Then, together with more oil and ingredients that hasten drying, they are mixed to a smooth flexible paste.

Maple Attains Perfection in Hardwood Forests

The northern hard or rock maple is indigenous to our common country from Maine to Minnesota, but in the hardwood forests of the North, in the region of the Great Lakes, it attains its highest perfection in quality of timber, size and symmetry, often reaching a diameter of three feet and rising sixty feet to its first limb. Individual trees on fertile soil occasionally reach one hundred and twenty feet in height.

Cement that has been spattered on stone or masonry can be removed after it has been softened with a solution of one part muriatic acid to 10 parts water.

Building Awards Set New Peak

Individual Categories Up Over Last Year at 6-Month Mark

DETROIT — Contract awards for future construction in southern Michigan set a new high dollar volume for the first six months of any year according to just announced totals of Dodge reports. The first-half 1934 figure of $544,099,000 was also 42 per cent greater than the like 1933 period, according to Dodge district manager Marvin J. Brokaw.

All individual categories were up over 1933 at the six month mark: nonresidential at $203,133,000 was up 37 per cent; residential at $251,987,000 was up 45 per cent; heavy engineering, at $88,999,000 was up 42 per cent.

The June construction award total of $115,275,000 was up 12 per cent over May and was up 97 per cent over June 1933.

Individual June classifications were: Nonresidential, $58,729,000 up 79 per cent over May and up 174 per cent over June 1933; residential, $49,416,000, down 20 per cent from May but up 116 per cent over June 1933; heavy engineering, $7,134,000, down 18 per cent from May and down 50 per cent from June 1933.

Penetrating Sealer Type of Finish Ideal for Floors

The penetrating sealer type of finish is ideal for Maple and Birch floors. The sealers have penetrating qualities that become an integral part of the wood.

After application, the finish wears away only as the wood itself wears away. Excellent sealer finish products are available at hardware and paint stores, as well as at many local lumber yards.

One of the advantages of the highly water impervious latex paint film is its use as a vapor barrier.

Smart Bathroom Needed

A smart, cheerfully colored bathroom is as essential for that favorable impression on guests as anything else. Gay, yet subdued shades are the most popular today. Practically every alert builder is using colorfast tile, often in floor-to-ceiling installation, in all new homes. It comes in 200 different colors and never loses its original fresh effect.

When installing cut flooring nails, be sure they are driven in with the flat side of the nail parallel with the grain of the wood.

DEFENSE AGAINST ROT — Preservatives make wood surfaces highly distasteful to boring insects and fungi, and protect against moisture damage.

Chemical Preservatives Protect Exterior Surfaces

Paint alone on the exterior wood of your home won't stop rot damage where the wood touches the ground, where exposed wood surfaces meet or tightly join other building materials, or in other areas where moisture or boring insects collect.

These are spots that call for and, in fact, plead for the application of chemical wood preservatives. These may be applied by brushing, spraying or dipping and are available at hardware or paint stores and lumber yards.

Preservatives are recommended for use on clean, dry, unpainted wood, but can be used more or less effectively on painted surfaces where the finish has flaked away or where joints have opened slightly, exposing bare wood. Two coats are advisable.

The best time for treatment is before repainting. Some preservatives can be painted over.

These solutions are sold under many brand names, but contain either pentachlorophenol, copper naphenate or zinc naphenate in a light, volatile oil solvent.

Some pentachlorophenol solutions are clear for use above grade; others contain crude oil for below-grade protection. It is best not to paint over this type of solution or to use it where it may contact the roots of young plants and injure them.

Copper naphenate solutions are green in color and harmless to plants, but are likely to spoil the appearance of a light-colored paint job unless you seal the treated area with shellac or aluminum paint before coating with house paint.

Solutions containing zinc naphenate are often used on wood under varnish. Applied to unpainted basement walls or concrete, they also curb mildew.

Wear gloves while using any of the above solutions, for they may irritate the skin. Medicine dropper, insect spray gun and bent-spout oilcan are all good applicators to use in hard-to-reach areas. An old paint brush will suffice for most open areas.

There are a number of places you could begin treating now with preservative. As you go along you will take note of many more.

Wooden steps are good for a starter. They take a lot of punishment from the weather and foot traffic. Coat bare wood where steps touch the ground and where they join the house. The steps will stand many times longer if treated.

Touch up joints in window sash and frame, both inside and out. Remember that condensation on the inside of windows causes as much damage as rain water on the outside.

Know Construction Before Buying Paint

When you're buying white paint for the exterior trim of your house, be sure to tell your dealer what material was used in the construction of the body of the house.

The self-cleansing type of exterior white paint can be used on the trim of a house only when the body is also painted white.

Where a house is of unpainted masonry — or of a color different than the trim — use an exterior enamel, a trim-and-trellis paint or a house paint that has only a limited degree of self-cleansing.

Sandpaper Drawer Sides

When bureau drawers stick, try rubbing the sides with sand-paper or steel wool. Rubbing with the edge of a cake of soap should help to create a better sliding surface.

WITH OR WITHOUT BASEMENT—Broad and low, this house is designed for brick veneer on wood frame construction with an asphalt shingle roof. It can be built with or without a basement—stairway shown, allowing for enlargement of kitchen, while garage is wide enough to accommodate a heating unit. Split bath provides convenience of a powder room. This is plan 6R-100 by Elmer Gylleck, architect, 191 So. Grove Ave., Elgin, Ill. It covers 1,464 square feet, garage adding 392 square feet. Terrace is envisioned in the rear. (Further information and blueprints available from the architect).

Basement Best in Cold Areas

Type of Home Foundation Depends Much on Climate

The choice of what goes under a new home—a full basement, crawl space or slab—is just as important as above-ground construction details, for it affects the initial building cost and fuel bills. We note several important points which the new-home builder should consider before deciding on the type of foundation structure to build. The basic consideration, of course, is the depth of frost line in your immediate area.

In a cold climate, choose a full-height basement. It is likely to save you money wherever the frost penetrates three feet or more.

If you were to specify footings more than three feet deep (in order to have crawl space or slab construction) and if your builder has to dig the necessary trenches by hand, the excavation will cost more than to have the entire hole dug out.

While trenches require fewer cubic feet of earth to be dug than excavating the entire basement, the latter can all be done with the usual equipment of the small-house builder.

The full-height basement provides good space for the heater, assures a warm first floor and access to plumbing, heating and electric lines.

A crawl space is suitable for a moderate climate. It has a number of advantages if the frost line is only about three feet or less below the grade.

The builder can use a hydraulic scoop to dig out the shallow excavation. There is room for plenty of ventilating louvers to insure air circulation in summer. And workmen have access to plumbing and heating pipes or ducts if you need to make repairs or changes.

There are special heating units designed for this shallow space below the first floor. Some heating systems blow hot air into the crawl space, and the heat escapes to the first floor around the outside walls.

The house-on-a-slab may be your best bet if footings and foundation walls can be relatively shallow and if your builder can insure a warm floor with hot-water or hot-air radiant heat.

This slab method has been successfully used by many of the large house builders in the country. It is essential to have insulation between the edge of the slab and the foundation, extending downward at least one foot and preferably to the frost line, to prevent heat losses from the slab.

Bleach Dark Furniture

Sometimes, when you take off the old finish from a piece of furniture with paint-and-varnish-remover, the wood is still dark from the original stain. If you wish the wood to be lighter still—so it will harmonize with newly-bought light wood pieces—you can use a bleach, obtainable from your paint dealer.

You can freshen up a fiber rug by coating it with a hot dye or a thinned paint. Canvas awnings that are faded can be made attractive again by painting with canvas awning paint.

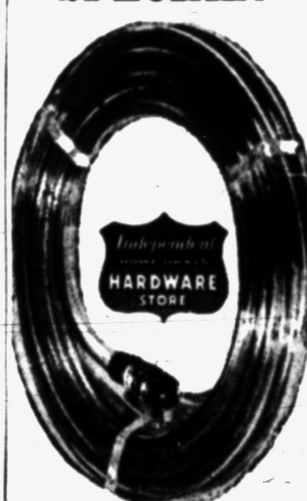

Rock Salt, Water Solution Prevents Grass in Cracks

A simple way to keep grass from growing up between flagstones is to sprinkle a strong solution of rock salt and water between the stones.

And to keep a dirt driveway from becoming dusty during dry weather, sprinkle it with calcium chloride. This chemical will absorb moisture out of the air and keep the earth damp.

Mosquitoes will breed in garden pools unless the pools contain fish.

After the old finish has been removed with paint remover and you get down to the bare wood with fine sandpaper, a penetrating sealer stain can be applied with a rag.

Darken Blond Furniture by Refinishing It Yourself

What'll it be—blond or brunette—in furniture, that is. Many home-makers, who adopted the blond look in furnishings and now find that it does not complement the newer lighter hues in wall paints, papers and paneling, are seeking ways out of the decorating predicament without investing more funds.

Actually it is easy to give blond furnishings a darker coat. All you need is elbow grease and a few materials.

Thorough wet sanding will develop a fine dull-gloss finish after rubbing varnish has dried over the stain.

Walnut and light fruitwood are the popular wood tones today. But mahogany, cherry or any other stain desired may be obtained. Here's how:

Remove the old finish with a wax-free paint remover. Wear rubber gloves. Brush on a heavy coat, let set until the finish is softened down to the bare wood and scrape off with a paint scraper.

This may require several coats of paint remover. Let the remover do the work. Scraping should be done only after the finish is thoroughly softened.

Then the old finish is swabbed off with heavy rags or burlap. If you must work indoors, open windows and protect floors with a waterproof covering such as old rubber crib sheets or pieces of scrap linoleum.

When the surface is dry, sand with fine production sandpaper until scratches and surface imperfections are removed. A rubber sanding block may facilitate sanding, permitting a smooth finish. Finish with fine production sandpaper. Dust off with a cloth moistened in turpentine.

Most blond modern furniture is constructed of birch and other close-grained woods that do not require filling, according to experts. In that case, stain may be applied directly to sanded wood.

A penetrating sealer-stain, applied with a rag and wiped out with a clean cloth until the desired depth of color is obtained is all that is needed, usually. It takes about 12 hours to dry.

Then an even coat of rubbing varnish may be applied with a clean brush. Wait at least four days.

When it is thoroughly dry it will require a wet sanding. This is done by moistening the surface of the furniture with a light oil such as salad oil and sanding with extra-fine black waterproof sandpaper.

Sand with the grain. The oil lubricates the varnish finish, allowing a much more even finish to be obtained. Sand until the surface is perfectly smooth. Clean off with a good furniture cleaner and soft cloths.

The finish should be a dull-gloss, the favored finish for contemporary furniture. A higher gloss may be obtained by following the same procedure but doing an extra sanding with a super-fine waterproof sandpaper and cleaning off with furniture cleaner.

If a still higher gloss is desired, follow that sandpapering with rottenstone and oil. This combination should be mixed to a batter-like consistency, applied on a soft cloth wadded into a ball and rubbed with the grain. Protect these finishes with a coating of paste wax.

A small portable electric fan placed on a chair or bookshelf can be used to increase the distribution of cool air from a window air conditioner to other rooms in the house.

Little Prospect of Housing Drop

Statistics Economists Predict Production Will Remain Level

WASHINGTON (INS) — Housing economists are saying there is little prospect of a serious slump in housing production for at least the next 18 months based on recent Eisenhower administration actions.

Commerce Department and Bureau of Labor statistics economists have estimated housing output will total 1,080,000 units this year and the outlook indicates production will remain at this level through 1955.

The Federal Reserve Board has provided the latest stimulant to the housing picture with its decision to lower reserve requirements of member banks, an action assuring a plentiful supply of mortgage financing.

This will help to maintain high home building the rest of this year and prospects for 1955 are enhanced greatly by President Eisenhower's housing program which is expected to clear Congress in the near future.

In its action, the reserve board allowed its member banks to reduce by one and a half billion dollars the amount of cash they must have on hand to cover checking and savings account deposits.

By freeing this amount, the board has made it possible for the banks to expand their lending by nine billion dollars. Most of this extra money will, of course, be absorbed by new treasury borrowing, amounting to about ten billion dollars later this year.

But the decision averts the possibility of a tight money market in the coming months and assures continuance of the present favorable supply of financing for all business operations including home buying.

Senate Banking Committee economic consultant Joseph P. McMurray estimates that housing production may rise from about 1,100,000 new dwellings this year to 1,300,000 units in 1955.

McMurray bases his unusually optimistic forecast on the probability of easier home buying credit provided in the president's program, the favorable supply of financing, greater production of low-priced homes and the general economic situation which he believes is improving.

On the other hand, industry economist Miles Coleman says he feels that home building will average between one million and 1,100,000 units in 1954 and 1955. He questions McMurray's expectations of a sharp upturn in output.

Coleman says he is "concerned" about some restrictions written in the housing bill to prevent Federal Housing Administration scandals and declares that if they stick, FHA's rental housing program is a "dead duck" while other home building will be hampered.

Both men agree that it is still too early to make flat predictions about production in 1955 but agree that the chance of any sharp downturn seems remote at this time.

Check 3 Danger Areas

With children running in and out of the house, it's a good idea to brush up on home safety. Three places you should check are the stairs, floors and electric outlets. Scatter rugs on polished floors are dangerous. Non-slip tile floors are best for kitchens and bathrooms. Faulty electric outlets should be repaired and light cords fastened to baseboards.

SWING WITHOUT STAND MAY HANG FROM PORCH CEILING PATTERN 205

Here is a modern version of the old-fashioned porch swing that is both comfortable and good looking. The smooth curves of the framework for the seat and back are easy to cut when actual-size patterns are used for the shaped pieces. Slats are screwed to the shaped pieces to form the seat. Pattern includes directions for making the glider base of sturdy oak, securely bolted together for use on the lawn or terrace. If used on a porch it may swing from the ceiling. Pattern 205 gives list of the materials needed and will be mailed for 25c. Write to Workshop, Pontiac Press.

7 Handy Hints for Enthusiasts

Build Lean-To to Store Garden Tools on Back or Side of Garage

The urge to "live out of doors" is a great stimulus to home improvements, do-it-yourself experts report. Here are a few suggestions for summer projects:

If you need a handy storage for wheelbarrow, lawn mower and garden tools, build a lean-to on the back or side of the garage. It can be done simply and economically by covering a wood framework with asbestos-cement board. For easy removal of large items, have double doors.

An objectionable view can be screened off by a lattice fence, with vines for decorations. Another method is to erect decorative fencing, using corrugated asbestos-cement sheets. They may be painted or left in their natural light gray color.

For a hospitable touch, build a circular bench around the base of a shade tree in the yard. Choose a tree thick enough to provide a back for the bench.

A charming walk is easily made by putting down flagstones. If flagstones are not readily available, cut hollows four inches deep in the lawn and fill them with concrete.

To give your picnic table a smooth, weatherproof surface, cover the top with a piece of asbestos board, cut to size.

An accent color often will give new personality to a home. Consider painting the outside doors in a combination of two harmonizing colors.

And, of course, a garden—for flowers or vegetables, or both—is always a good project. To get off on the right foot, have your soil checked by your state experiment station. Your county agent can give you the exact address.

Curve With Garden Hose

An easy way to establish a curve for a garden walk, driveway or pool is to use a garden hose. Just lay it in the shape you want and then make your excavation while it is still in place.

Damaged Door Panel Repaired With Plywood

Did the wife recently smash through a panel in the garage door with the family car—or was it the man of the house?

In either case, don't fret over it. It's actually pretty easy to fix. With a sharp chisel, cut out the fold that holds the panel in place. Knock out the panel, then smooth down the rabbets in the stiles and rails.

Cut a new panel out of waterproof exterior plywood of the proper thickness. Set the new panel into the door and secure with quarter-rounds or other moldings that match those removed.

No Pitch in Hemlock

There is no pitch in hemlock logs. For that reason, fine interior plywoods are made from it.

To Prevent Sticking

If you are troubled with putty sticking to the blade of a putty knife instead of to the wood where you want it to stick, wipe the metal blade down with some turpentine. This will keep the putty from sticking.

Cafe Curtains Branch Out, Acquire Lots of Relatives

NEW YORK (INS) — A housewife practically needs a fashion vocabulary to buy curtains this year.

The most popular curtain style of 1934 — the cafe curtain — has acquired a lot of relatives with names like petticoat curtains, conga tiers, ruffled and scalloped cafes and brise bise bottoms.

All of these are variations of the old cottage curtain set that decorated kitchen windows. A cafe is fundamentally the bottom half of that curtain set, and it's new popularity is due to the fact that you can hang one cafe in the window, or one above another, without worrying about measurements. Mrs. Jones can display one longish cafe curtain in her window, and be just as stylish as Mrs. Smith, who shows off two short cafes.

The true cafe curtain may be straight-edged or scalloped. It has loops on top for running over the rod, or it can be attached to a bar with clips. Ruffled cafes are a cross between the plain cafe curtain and the tier curtain, which is literally a curtain made of tiers—or rows—of fabric sewn one over the other.

A conga tier is like the skirt worn by conga dancers — shirred rows cascading one over the other. A petticoat tier is like a gathered and ruffled petticoat, with the fabric rows all in one line instead of overlapping.

It takes a real drapery expert to tell one style from the other—since practically all these new curtains are ruffled. They are available in almost every fabric, color and pattern you can name.

Materials Take Work Out of Plumbing Jobs

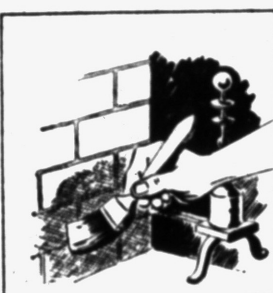

A plumber's black bag of special tools isn't needed for plumbing jobs around the house when you use flexible pipe and solderless compression fittings.

These materials take most of the work out of minor plumbing jobs. No soldering is needed, no pipe wrenches, not even a wad of oakum.

You can buy flexible copper pipe cut to any length you need, or you can cut your own with a hacksaw. You can also buy flexible aluminum pipe in some of the shorter lengths, somewhat cheaper than copper, with fittings attached.

It's easy to see the advantage of flexible pipe. You can bend it with your knee to the exact shape you need, to fit between walls, around joists and rafters, almost anywhere. And you need fittings only at the ends.

When drawn tight, the threaded compression fittings become airtight and don't need soldering. In addition to easy installation, this means that the fittings can be taken apart whenever necessary.

An easy way to prevent dust from collecting on the face of a brick fireplace, is to coat the bricks with liquid wax, which you can find at the hardware store. The wax fills the porous surface in which dust and soot accumulate. And it gives the bricks a slight gloss and smooth finish.

Clean With Turpentine

Turpentine or mineral spirits are used for cleaning off paint splatters, for thinning some oil paints, enamels and varnishes—also for soaking and cleaning brushes and rollers used in such coating materials.

Vienna's Phones Highly Versatile

Provide Music, News, Fiction; Serves as TV or Radio

VIENNA (UP) — Vienna claims its telephone system is the world's most versatile — it spouts music, news, fiction, many kinds of advice and even acts as a babysitter. All you have to do is dial. "It's been such a remarkable success that we hope to keep on adding special services indefinitely," said Anton Hyros, vice president of the government-run Austrian communications.

Hyros dreamed up many of the features when he noticed a few years ago that Vienna switchboard operators were being pestered with questions that fell into categories. "Many cities had been providing the correct time on recordings for years," Hyros said, "I thought to myself — why not handle other queries the same way?"

One by one, new services were listed in the Vienna phone book. Big tape recordings started grinding stock market quotations and weather reports. Then came soccer and racetrack results, road conditions, skiing advisories, travel suggestions and bus schedules — all recorded.

Hyros moved into education and entertainment. He taped special dictation at two speeds for apprentice stenographers, fairy tales for children, recipes for housewives, puzzles and riddles, popular and classical music.

Besides telling the correct time, Vienna telephones measure the minutes into seconds with a ticking device and provide accurate musical pitch.

Vienna telephone subscribers use phones the way other people use radio and television. And they're showering Hyros with new suggestions. Daily listings of movie and theater programs may be added soon. Hyros also is considering taping readings from the New Testament and language instructions. For some time he toyed with the idea of telephonized jokes, but gave it up because he found most of the best ones were either political or too ribald.

Denise Darcel Takes Up History; Tires of Leg Art

NEW YORK (AP) — Denise Darcel, who once sold Camembert on the streets of Paris, is now weary of American cheesecake.

Not cheesecake, the food—but cheesecake, the art form. She says she positively no longer will pose in the chesty postures that first won her attention when she arrived here in 1946, billed as "the most beautiful girl in France."

Denise thinks that kind of publicity almost busted up her career. She feels there are at least 1,000 girls in America who could match her in the cheesecake realm merely by drawing a deep breath. "At first I do this because they told me to, and I do know better," she said. "Now I know better."

"I have something else. I have talent. I want to perfection my career. I like to be the dramatic actress and to do the comedy. When you can make the people to laugh, you can also make them to cry."

Denise has proved her point. After flopping in Hollywood initially, she got a job behind a sales counter in Beverly Hills and started working her way up in show business all over again.

Today she gets up to $5,000 a week in night clubs, co-starred recently in the film, "Vera Cruz," and now has a top spot in the Friday night Du Mont TV network show, "Gamble on Love."

But if you want to be her bosom buddy, don't praise her figure—even though she has trimmed off 25 pounds. Praise her historical knowledge. She had to quit school and go to work at 12. Now she is brushing up on her education—and her English—by taking morning classes at Hunter College in European and American history.

Denise, who wore a very high-necked polka dot dress with a demure white collar, insisted she was really vexed about the glamour girl publicity build-up which she believes got her off to a false start in this country.

"I was very upset when eel was printed that I said that if money grows on trees, then I will be weeding to marry an ape."

"I really want to marry and have babies, but I don't ask any husband to support me. All my life, since I am 12, I work. I much rather to be happy in a small cafe with a man I love than in El Morocco not to get hurt!"

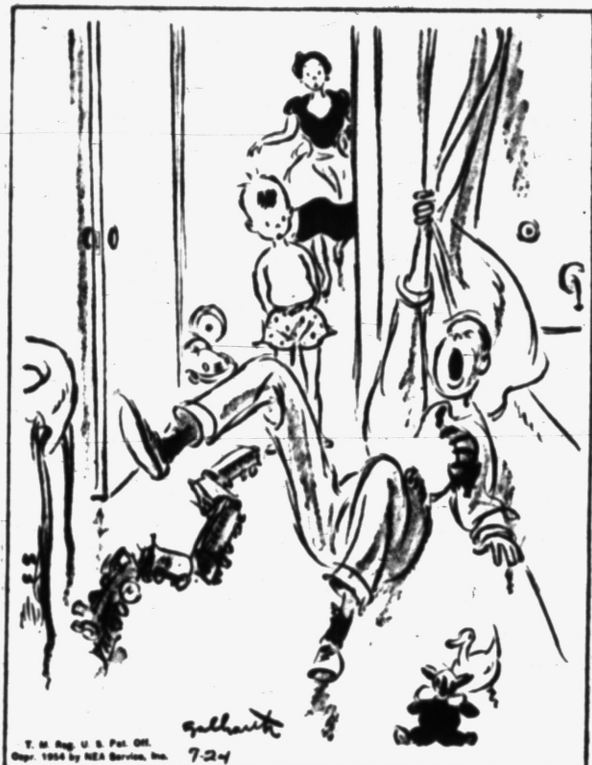

Since Denise looked so svelte, I told her she really owed it as a matter of loyalty to the fans of her cheesecake past to let them know if she still felt in shape after dieting off 25 pounds.

"Well," she said, laughter lighting up the blue candles of her eyes. "I am a size 14 dress upstairs, a size 10 dress in the middle, and a size 12 dress downstairs—or do you say in the basement? The blouse is upstairs."

Normal Families Aid Delinquency

Good Parents Condone Anti-Social Behavior, Authorities Say

CHICAGO (UP) — How can "good" parents rear "bad" children? What accounts for the juvenile delinquent who comes from a normal family?

Those questions are on the minds of more parents.

Two authorities, who have been studying the questions for more than a decade, give this answer:

Without knowing it themselves, the parents of the juvenile delinquent have encouraged him in developing a poor conscience.

The report was made in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

It came from Dr. Adelaide M. Johnson of the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., and Dr. S. A. Szelek of the University of California.

They studied child delinquency in apparently "normal" families of good reputation. The major cause, the doctors said, comes from parents who have "poorly integrated forbidden impulses."

The things these parents want to do themselves but can't, they encourage in one of their children when they usually pick as a "scapegoat."

The encouragement isn't conscious, the doctors said. Usually, the parents give "unwitting sanction" or indirect encouragement . . . for such antisocial behavior as fire-setting, stealing, truancy, and unacceptable sexuality . . .

On the surface, the doctors said, the parent seems to be doing right by the child—scolding him for misdeeds, telling him not to steal, warning him to be good.

But, unconsciously, the parent expresses his pleasure in what the child did wrong—perhaps by a smile, by demanding the details of the forbidden act, by getting too angry and too concerned.

"Children are masters at sensing parental interest or gratification, however subtle, at a tale of naughtiness," the doctors said.

Parents cannot expect their children to be honest when they smile at keeping too much change from the grocer or encourage children to understate their ages to get into a movie at half price, the doctors said.

The doctors said that in cases of juvenile delinquency, both parents and child should be treated.

When the parent learns about his unconscious behavior and its effect, the parent may become neurotic, the doctors said.

"Troublesome as such neuroses may be . . . they are preferable to antisocial behavior, with its threat of perpetuation through generations," the doctors concluded.

Non-Communist World Still Cool Drive for Recognition by Red China Makes Little Progress in Four Years

By MAX HARRISON

U.N. Correspondent of The AP

Despite talk about giving Red China a seat in the United Nations, the non-communist world remains cool toward according diplomatic recognition to the Peiping regime.

A study of the record shows that not a single government has recognized the Chinese Communist regime in more than four years — the last being just before the start of the Korean war in June, 1950.

Prior to the Korean war, there was a brisk movement toward Peiping recognition, but it stopped when only 14 non-communist countries and 14 communist regimes had announced their decisions.

The non-communist governments which recognized Peiping include seven in Asia, six in Europe and one in the Middle East. None of the 21 nations in the Western hemisphere, however, has granted recognition.

Here is the complete list of those recognizing the Chinese Reds: Communist — Russia, Poland, Czechoslovakia, White Russia, Ukraine, Romania, Albania, Bulgaria, Hungary, East Germany, North Korea, Outer Mongolia, Vietnam and Yugoslavia, (the latter, although communist, is not a member of the Soviet bloc).

Non-communist — Britain, Netherlands, Norway, Denmark, Sweden, Finland, Switzerland, India, Pakistan, Burma, Afghanistan, Indonesia, Ceylon and Israel.

This shows that less than one-fourth of the world's non-communist countries have recognized the Peiping government and that many of these are small nations. Out of the 28 communist and non-communist countries listed only 17 are in the United Nations. Six of these are communist.

It also shows that many leading countries in all parts of the world are missing from the list.

In Europe, for example, seven non-communist countries — including Britain — have recognized Peiping, but a dozen others have not. The latter group includes France, Italy, Spain, West Germany, Belgium, Luxembourg, Austria, Portugal, Iceland, Ireland, Greece and Turkey.

The United States — together with most of the Latin American governments — remains firmly opposed to either recognition of the Peiping regime or its admission to the U. N.

In Asia and the South Pacific, the list of non-recognition is equally as impressive. It includes Japan, the Philippines, Thailand, Australia, New Zealand and South Korea.

There also is a long list of countries in Africa and the Middle East that have not given Peiping the nod. The list includes Egypt, Lebanon, Syria, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Yemen, Iran, Liberia, Ethiopia and the Union of South Africa.

Of the 14 non-communist countries, which have recognized the Chinese communists, only five have actually established diplomatic representation in Peiping. These are Sweden, India, Indonesia, Switzerland and Britain.

Several countries have indicated they are reviewing the problem and will make their decisions on the basis of future developments. These include France, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the Arab countries.
