African Playmates Arrive for Gorilla Jim-Jim

NEW ARRIVALS—Two young gorillas, fresh from French Equatorial Africa, arrived at the Detroit Zoo early this morning. Holding the confused two-year-olds are Chief Animal Keeper George Bromley (left) and Zookeeper Thomas Brun. The new arrivals traveled by plane from their native land to New York, where they were flown to Willow Run. Zoo Director Frank McInnis hopes to raise a gorilla family in captivity, something never done before. The animals will soon join another gorilla, "Jim-Jim," in the Zoo's Ape House. McInnis said the gorillas will be named in about two weeks.

Gorillas Arrival at Royal Oak Zoo Heralds Opening of New Experiment

By TOM BUCHANAN
Jim-Jim, the gorilla, expected house guests last night, but he didn't wait up.

"Airplanes arrive at ungodly hours," he snorted, and ambled off to bed—an ungracious host.

Had he been more mannerly, he would have seen two gorillas caged in a wooden box roll through the gate of the Detroit Zoo in a station wagon early this morning.

Valued at $10,000, a 15-pound female and a male, a sullen 25-pounder, had been taken from a cargo plane by Zoo Director Frank McInnis and Chief Animal Keeper George Bromley at Willow Run about midnight.

Royal Oak was the last stop for the two two-year old apes, who are scheduled to join "Jim-Jim" shortly in the Great Ape Building. They traveled by plane from their home in French Equatorial Africa to the Zoo via France and New York.

"Jim-Jim," a native neighbor of the yet unnamed gorillas, arrived May 6 to set up quarters.

INFLUENCE NEEDED

After a year and a half of complicated dealings with the French Government in trying to obtain permits for the new apes an appeal was made to Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

McInnis and his staff are proud of their purchase. The Detroit Zoo's three gorillas is now exceeded only by Lincoln Park Zoo in Chicago, which boasts four of the animals.

McInnis hopes to raise a gorilla family in captivity, something never done before.

With the unopened box propped carefully in the back of the station wagon, McInnis and Bromley drove ahead to the Ape House, followed by a five-car caravan of news men with photo equipment.

As the cage was gingerly opened, the two jet black gorillas scrambled from the straw. The rather aloof, apes were passed gently among zookeepers and Zoo Veterinarian Dr. William Appelhof, before being placed on a table in the middle of the room. Dr. Appelhof's expressed concern for an instant when the tiny female began coughing and sneezing like a sick baby.

ARRIVE HEALTHY

On further hurried inspection, he said they looked healthy. However, the gorillas will be watched during the next few days while they undergo tests.

McInnis said the youngsters are expected to grow to maturity in about 15 years, stand six feet high, and weigh more than 500 pounds. Their early diet will consist mostly of a prepared milk formula, pabulum, and orange juice.

While staff members peered intently at the new arrivals, McInnis explained the involved process of buying gorillas.

"In an effort to protect the species, the French government has strict regulations regarding the shipment of these animals," he said.

The Zoo purchased the three gorillas a year ago through a New York animal dealer but permission was granted to ship only "Jim-Jim," he explained.

"After many attempts to get permits from the French Government, an appeal was made to John Foster Dulles. His assistant, John W. Hanes Jr., undertook the assignment.

MORE INFLUENCE

"With the aid of the U. S. Ambassador to France, who contacted authorities in Paris, permission finally was granted in May," McInnis said.

McInnis added that the gorillas never would have arrived without the help of Hanes.

With the new additions, the Ape House will have 11 residents. Three gorillas, two chimpanzees, two orangutans and four gibbons fill out the roster.

Rains Bring Relief From Sticky Heat

Rain brought temporary relief from hot weather to some areas but July's steady heat wave continued in wide sections of the country today.

The U. S. Weather Bureau Forecast for the Michigan area will be partly cloudy through Sunday with scattered afternoon and evening showers. There will be little change in temperatures. Variable winds are expected today, becoming northerly from 8-12 m.p.h. tonight.

Natives Enter Casablanca Riot

26 Lives Lost in Strife Despite Martial Law in City

CASABLANCA, Morocco (AP)—Rioting in Casablanca, which has taken 26 lives in the past two days, spread to the native quarter of the city today despite a declaration of martial law in the city.

In the native quarter, built along modern lines, Moroccans set fire to a hospital and a sugar warehouse. Firemen were stoned. Army tanks were ordered to the area.

The announcement of martial law was made by Gilbert Grandval, the new French resident general, who declared police forces had showed themselves inadequate in the past 36 hours. During yesterday's wild demonstrations in the European quarter, police were reported to have been conspicuously absent. Grandval had previously ordered a 9 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew.

All stores in the European quarter were closed and street traffic was far below normal. Police and firemen worked to clear away debris from yesterday's rioting.

Reinforced police and army units patrolled the streets and a police plane flew low over the city to spot congregations of people.

Several hundred demonstrators tried to assemble near the area where the government buildings are concentrated, but police dispersed them.

Police and firemen began clearing away smashed and burned automobiles and utility poles littering the streets.

Mobs took over the European quarter of the city for 12 hours yesterday before order was restored.

Ferry Walkout Snarls Travel at the Straits

Main Highways Jammed as Inter-Peninsula Link Is Cut by Strikers

ST. IGNACE (AP)—A strike of crewmen cut off state-operated ferry service across the Straits of Mackinac today in the midst of a busy summer weekend.

Vacationers seeking to cross the five-mile-wide Straits to resort areas on both sides were stranded either here or at Mackinaw City, on the southern side.

By early this morning, motorists wanting to cross the Straits were lined up for two miles on U. S. 27 and a mile on U. S. 31, the two main highways leading northward to Mackinaw City.

On this side, more than 100 cars were awaiting transportation. The big ferry boats carry both cars and passengers.

The more than 300 crewmen tied up four of the boats in St. Ignace and one at Mackinaw City, starting their strike up to an hour ahead of last midnight's deadline.

WANT PAY BOOST

They are demanding a 30-cent hourly pay boost, time and a half for Saturday work and double time on Sundays. The State Civil Service Commission gave them a 15-cent hourly increase last month.

Francis J. Kelly, Assistant Deputy Director of Civil Service, said "the whole fleet is fired" because of the strike.

Under state law, any state employee who strikes may be fired. And under Civil Service regulations any employee absent without leave for two days may be dismissed.

Kelly met with representatives of the crewmen aboard the ferry City of Petoskey until nearly 4 a.m. in an effort to settle the dispute.

"We gave them every chance to come back to work and negotiate this on a peaceful basis," he said. "They refused."

Kelly said he would seek to recruit enough workers to get one boat running this afternoon.

Murrow Escapes Injury as Plane Crashes in West

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP)—Fifteen persons including newscaster Edward R. Murrow and family walked away unharmed yesterday when an airliner crashed into a pole and lost six feet of wing tip after a landing.

The Northwest Orient Airlines twin-engined DC3 set down during a thunderstorm on a flight from Seattle. Two-thirds of the way down the runway, Capt. Jack Taylor, the pilot, found his brakes would not hold against a sudden 40-mile-an-hour gust of wind.

The big plane sailed right along for several hundred yards after the runway terminated, scraping across a fence post and finally striking the utility pole.

Murrow, 47-year-old board member of Columbia Broadcasting System, said later he considered it a beautiful landing because "I consider any landing I walk away from beautiful."

With him were his wife, Janette, and their son Casey, 9.

Mike was out in 37 for the round, a ding-dong battle between the Oakland County players.

Andonian dropped a 75 foot chip shot after a short 2nd on the par 4 ninth. It gave him the hole to break a half after Krol took the eighth. The pair halved the 1st 3 holes with pars, evened the 4th on bogies, halved the 5th on par fives. Mike won the sixth on a par 3, and they halved No. 7.

State Acts to End Rouge Pollution

Suits seeking to prevent five Oakland County cities and townships from dumping sewage and waste into the Rouge River and its tributaries were filed in Oakland County Circuit Court Friday by the state attorney general.

Four suits ask the court to stop Birmingham, Bloomfield Hills, Bloomfield Township and the City of Lathrup Village from violating State Water Resources Commission directives ordering a halt to the pollution.

Abatement of the pollution has been under discussion for three years, and the areas have been under Water Resources Commission orders to do so for more than a year.

A fifth suit requests the court to grant Southfield Township a reasonable time to solve the waste disposal problem and thereafter join and restrain the illegal dumping.

Also named as a defendant is Ralph A. Main, county drain commissioner.

The state also requests that the five communities be ordered to take such steps within a reasonable time.

able time "as may be necessary to finance, construct, operate and maintain the necessary interceptor sewers and sewage treatment facilities."

Answers are expected to be filed within 15 days.

All of the communities cited by the Water Resources Commission have been cooperating on plans for joint solution of their pollution problem.

The proposed Evergreen Interceptor sewer would have funneled the sewage from the area into Detroit's sewage treatment plant.

The plan was devised in lieu of each municipality building its own costly sewage treatment plant. However, the $2,740,000 project has been stymied for more than a year.

Originally Southfield Township voters turned down their township's share of the payment for the project at the polls. Southfield is again holding up the works at present, because it is in the process of changing from a township to a city.

No action can be taken by Southfield until its residents vote on a city charter, probably in October or November.

State Attorney General Thomas M. Kavanagh said the pollution was being caused by the discharge of raw or inadequately treated human sewage and wastes.

"The situation has become an increasing hazard and menace to the public health with the tremendous development of this area for residential purposes," he stated.

1,500 Newsmen Invade Geneva for Big 4 Report

GENEVA — At least 1,500 officials estimated at least 1,500 newsmen, radio and television reporters and photographers will be on hand to cover the Big Four summit conference.

Each applicant for accreditation must produce a passport and three copies of a complete personal history sheet. As they arrive in Geneva they must report to temporary screening offices at Geneva University, and undergo scrutiny by Swiss police and security officers and U. Eisenhower Arrives in Geneva Today recent tolerance and conciliation pledges.

He spoke in moving terms of the latest speech by Soviet Premier Bulganin.

"He talked of conciliation and tolerance and understanding. I say to you, I say to all the world, if the words that he expressed are truly reflective of the hearts and minds of the men in the Kremlin . . . then there will be no trouble between the Russian delegation and our own at this coming conference."

And, said the President with deep seriousness, if the distrust which has poisoned relations between countries can be dispelled at this meeting with the Russian, British and French leaders starting Monday, then:

"We will have taken the greatest step toward peace, toward future prosperity and tranquility that has ever been taken in all the history of mankind."

He spoke of the conference attempting "to prevent war . . . to keep from us this terrible scourge that afflicts mankind."

A key-up crowd of more than 200 saw the President off at the airport. Vice President and Mrs. Nixon were there. So was Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey. So were a number of foreign diplomats — including, possibly as a good omen, the acting head of the Soviet Embassy, Sergei R. Striganov.

Eisenhower was joviality itself at the departure, in contrast to the gravity of his broadcast manner. Before the broadcast, he'd voiced some concern about the heat in the room and about a chance that he might run a little over the scheduled 15 minutes. He made it plain he meant every word of that address and wanted all of it to reach the nation. It did, within the scheduled time.

Perhaps the greatest tribute to the high purpose of his overseas mission came, unwittingly, from scores of motorists who leaned from their cars and waved as the President's long black car whizzed from the White House to the airport.

People hereabouts take the President's usual comings and goings pretty much for granted. They knew there was something special about this trip and they let him know it. A knot of bystanders gathered at the White House gate. Eisenhower flicked on the car's ceiling light and flashed his grin at them.

He had a suggestion for well-wishers: Go to church and pray for success of the Big Four conference. If all Americans did that, he said, it would "demonstrate to all the world the sincerity and depth of our aspirations for peace."

"This would be a mighty force. None could then say that we must preserve armaments because we want to. We preserve them because we must."

Disarmament, of course, is a prime topic of the Geneva talks, along with such matters as unfication of Germany.

But the President made it clear there are other problems to be settled and he referred to some of the Russians don't want to talk about — Communist subversion and interference with non-Communist governments, and "the problem of the captive states," the Soviet satellites.

Still, his general tone was conciliatory.

Past conferences, he said, have floundered because too much was attempted, too many details swamped them, they were used as propaganda sounding boards.

This time, he said, he hopes for "an honest effort to conciliate, to see the other fellow's viewpoint, a recognition that all peoples—the Russians included—want to bring up their children 'in a world of which they will be proud.'"

"My friends," said the President, "Secretary of State Dulles and I . . . shall be conciliatory because our country seeks no conquest, no property of others. We shall be tolerant, because this nation does not seek to impose our way of life upon others."

Two City Men Now Engaged in U. of M. Work

Two city men attending the University of Michigan are participating in summer programs in social work and geography studies offered by the school.

Among 12 students attending an eight-week course in methods and techniques of geography field operations is Richard H. Zimmerman of Ottawa drive, a senior in the Arts College.

Camp Cusino, near Shingleton in the Upper Peninsula, enables students to gain experience in field mapping, interpretation of aerial photographs and to study the surface features of the area.

The course is directed by Prof. Kenneth C. McMurtry, chairman of the Geography Dept.

Working as counselor at the university's Fresh Air Camp for underprivileged boys is Robert F. Davis of Martell drive, a junior in the Arts College.

About 50 seniors and undergraduate students work with 200 boys in the 7 to 14 year age range, who are referred to the camp by social and school agencies.

Located on Patterson Lake near Pickney, the camp covers 300 acres. Student counselors earn credit in education, sociology and psychology.

The Fresh Air Camp is part of the University's Institute for Human Adjustment.

Voter Doesn't Approve

PROVIDENCE, R. I. —Vote as you desire—but no comment, please.

The Rhode Island election board yesterday threw out one ballot cast in last Tuesday's special election.

The ballot was unmarked save for the earthy comment scrawled across its face:

"Fooney bunch of bums."

The board agreed the spelling was atrocious.

Rubbish Collectors Adopt New, Get-Tough Policy

BIRMINGHAM — Because of abuse of the weekly rubbish and semi-weekly garbage pick-ups here, a get-tough policy has now become the rule of thumb for collectors making their rounds.

In answer to numerous calls from residents, Robert Kenning, DPW superintendent, said yesterday:

"We've heretofore allowed various size refuse containers, despite regulations calling for 10 or 20 gallon metal containers with handles or a ball and a cover if used for garbage) or metal or wooden bushel baskets with handles."

"But people have resorted to the use of 2 and 5 gallon paint buckets, which are not acceptable, and as a result are being carried away by the drivers on their pick-ups," he said.

"From an esthetic viewpoint, rows of small cans left at the curbs after collections are unsightly," he explained. "In addition, it means several trips to the packer, making a much less economical collection that if one trip were made."

TIP TO RESIDENTS

Another problem Kenning said his department had run into is in connection with the twice-a-week garbage collections. "Residents are also placing rubbish at the curb, which only gets left behind he said, in reiterating that the second collection is for garbage only."

Third, Kenning reminded residents that yard dirt, stones, clippings, incinerator ashes, etc., must be placed in separate containers.

"Some people have taken to burying such material in the bottom of their containers and piling cans and papers on top of it," he said.

Reflections

THINGS I CAN'T REMEMBER

I forget unpleasant things. An incident that brings a catch in my breath, a sharp word spoken in anger, a cutting remark, are incidents that can only bring remorse; the quicker they are forgotten the happier I am.

I remember a cherry greeting; it's a tonic. I'm thrilled when I'm remembered on my birthday, a smile and kind word spoken by a stranger makes me glad, sincere praise is the leavening in the bread of my life. These things I remember, bring them out and hoard them as a miser counts his gold.

I find it expedient to develop a convenient memory, one that quickly forgets the unpleasant and clings to the happy moments. Unpleasant things are erased like symbols on a magic slate but the happy moments are dyed into the warp and woof of my being. I remember them easily.

Girls Can't Push All Boys Around

By ELIZABETH WOODWARD

Some girls definitely have the idea that boys are like chessmen. They can move them about the board just as they please. They can push them, shove them, lift them up and lay them down at will. And the boys haven't any choice in the matter.

It's why some girls lay on the criticism thick. They figure they have a right to make themselves clear and the boys are expected to take it and behave accordingly.

It's why girls play tricks on boys. They're supposed to eat humble pie and come back for more. It's why girls on a sudden whim will break off with boys who like them. Then count on getting them back when the mood is over.

Doormat-boys will take such treatment from the girls they like. But a lad with spirit has feelings, pride, sensitivity and a stubborn will of his own. He has his choice in the matter. And his choice is not always to give another chance to a girl who does him in the eye.

Yet there is sometimes hope for a reformed doer-inner, just as there is for this girl. She writes:

"Dear Miss Woodward: I broke off with a boy I'd been going with very abruptly and while he was still very much interested in me. I couldn't be sorrier because now that I don't see him I realize how much I really do like him.

"I wrote him (I was away at school at the time) a letter of school at the time) a letter of I would like to go with him again. He wrote me a very nice letter in reply.

"Now I'm home from school and don't know how to go about letting him know that I'd like to continue our friendship. Or is the damage irreparable?"

Answer: There's no way of knowing whether your hurt is permanent unless you make another effort to get in touch with him. And that shouldn't be too hard to do now that you're home from school and have your own house to entertain in.

Call him up cheerfully and gaily some time to find out how he is. Make no mention of your quarrel and your letters. Buzz happily about being home and how school was, then add that you'd like to see him. See how he responds before making a definite invitation.

But if he's affirmative, suggest that he come over some specific evening. Tell him your family would like to see him too, so how about getting there in time for dinner?

If he agrees to come, spread out friendliness on the welcome mat. Pretend nothing has ever come between you. Skip all talk of your break unless he brings it up. Then admit quite calmly that you must have been insane.

You had some very crazy ideas at the time which you're definitely outgrown, and you hope with all your heart that he's not the type that bears grudges forever. You just might get another chance. But remember that a girl can't afford to have too many whims like yours.

A girl can exert a little pressure now and then on a boy she likes, but it's unbecoming to toss her weight around trying to control him. In other words, boys like to do what they want to do. And no girl can prevent it. So don't try, that is my advice to this girl.

"Dear Miss Woodward: The boy I like goes steady with another girl. But he was in my class at school so I've seen more of him than she has.

"He always fooled around with me a lot, both in school and out. My big question is: If I know he doesn't like me should I stop fooling around with him or let it go the way it is? This way I'll never stop liking him."

Answer: The boy you like must like you somewhat or he wouldn't bother to fool around with you. And said fun and games have nothing to do with the fact that he takes some other girl out instead of you.

He teases and has a good time with anybody that suits him, and you've been the center of his attention quite a bit.

Now that you don't see him every day in school, your problem may solve itself. He won't be any more fooling around.

But if you see him and he shows you that he knows you're there, why not enjoy the attention that comes your way?

Crisp Accessories Spark Old Outfits

It's not necessary to break your budget to be in fashion this summer—just spend a little on crisp new accessories, and many of your last-year outfits will grow a year younger!

Fresh collars, bibs, scarfs, and gloves can work fashion wonders—but be sure they're soap-and-water washable so you won't have to spend more for the upkeep than you did for the accessories!

Color Scheme Depends on Sun

URBANA, Ill. (INS)—No matter what the fashionable colors are in home decor, women should assess the amount of sunlight in a room before choosing a color scheme.

This advice comes from Ellen Hansen, member of the home furnishings staff at the University of Illinois.

For example, she says that a room that has little natural light should stress reds, yellows and oranges which are warm and cheerful.

On the other hand, a bright room can use blue or green.

.. really dark room, Miss Hansen suggests, can be cheered up considerably with a judicious use of bright yellow.

IF college girl wants height—

A coat that hangs straight from the shoulder and contrasting skirt, are not as good as tunic suit with matching skirt and A-line jacket.

The long tunic silhouette makes its mark for juniors this fall. On the slim girl the tunic length can give a tall look if it is properly fitted and the all-in-one color look does not break the height-giving effect.

To relieve the strain on the buttons of a child's garment, try sewing them on with elastic thread.
