

Lyndon Johnson Begins Duties as Nation Mourns for Kennedy

2nd Man Arrested in Assassination

DALLAS (AP) — Police arrested a second man today and questioned him at length about the shooting of President Kennedy. He is believed a friend of Lee Harvey Oswald, who is charged with murdering the President.

Police Chief Jesse Curry said Oswald has "readily admitted he is a Communist."

The second man arrested was not immediately identified by police or others.

Justice of the Peace David Johnston said he issued a search warrant early today for the second man's home, but the man allowed a search without protest.

'GOOD' TEST RESULTS

Oswald insisted he is not the assassin, but an officer said today, "I think we got some good results from the paraffin test on both Oswald's hands."

With his jaw thrust out and his eyes intent and piercing, Oswald told newsmen:

"I did not kill President Kennedy. I did not kill anyone. I don't know what this is all about."

City detective Charles Brown said he believed the hand tests were positive but was not certain about results of a paraffin test on Oswald's face.

PICK UP GUNPOWDER

Paraffin tests are aimed at proving a suspect has fired a weapon. Paraffin is poured on the hands or face to pick up microscopic particles of gunpowder residue which show up then in chemical tests.

Brown said he has great faith in the tests.

Deputy Police Chief M. W. Stevenson said Oswald was arraigned late last night on a charge of murdering the President. He earlier was charged with killing a policeman.

Justice of the Peace Dave Johnston ordered him held without bond.

Stevenson said questioning of Oswald would continue today.

NEXT STEP

The deputy police chief said the next step would be a preliminary hearing, which Oswald could waive and ask that the case be taken directly to the county grand jury.

Oswald swore allegiance to the Soviet Union four years ago and tried to renounce his American citizenship.

President Kennedy died 30 minutes after the assassin's bullets crashed into his neck and head as he neared the end of a triumphal motorcade Friday.

WOUNDS CONNALLY

A third bullet wounded Texas Gov. John Connally. His condition was reported satisfactory.

Taken before microphones and cameras early today, Oswald insisted in a low voice that he was innocent of the death of Kennedy.

Kennedy and Connally had been riding in the presidential limousine with their wives.

The key factor that led to Oswald's arrest at 2 p.m. — an hour after the President's death — was the apparently senseless killing of the policeman.

CLEAR TRAIL

Authorities said a clear trail led to Oswald and he was (Continued on Page 2, Col. 7)

New President Goes to Work

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson, his face pale and drawn, went to work on his first full day as chief executive today in the office he used as vice president.

He left the White House, just across a narrow street, where the body of John F. Kennedy lay in state.

Planked by a Texas congressman and a long-time associate, Johnson strode across West Executive Avenue from the White House to the Executive Office Building at 9:29 a.m.

There he went into conference with Secretary of State Dean Rusk who arrived a few minutes earlier.

BLACK SUIT

Johnson wore a black suit and a black necktie with a single yellow stripe across it.

Rep. Homer Thornberry, D-Tex., and William Moyers, deputy director of the Peace Corps and a former Johnson aide, walked with him.

The President managed a nod and a "good morning" for newsmen and a White House doorkeeper.

That was all.

He came to the White House at 8:55 a.m., and spent more than a half-hour there before going to his old office.

CIA CHIEF

Shortly after Johnson arrived, Director John McConne of the Central Intelligence Agency entered the White House, presumably to see Johnson.

With McConne was McGeorge Bundy, special assistant on national security affairs to the assassinated Kennedy.

What Johnson did in the White House before going across the street was not known definitely. Assistant press secretary Andrew P. Hatcher told newsmen that perhaps the President spent the time in the White House "situation room" — the map-bedecked chamber where security information filters in from many parts of the globe.

The operation was on a tight timetable.

3 MINUTES

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara entered the building with a brisk "good morning" just three minutes before Rusk emerged.

"Can you tell us anything about your conference," Rusk was asked.

"No, not at all," the secretary said, and walked through the rain to his waiting automobile. Rusk and Johnson held their talk at a small conference table in front of the desk in the vice presidential office.

Johnson's wife, Lady Bird, arrived at the White House at 10:20 in a black coat and black hat. Elizabeth Carpenter, who handles her press relations, was with the new First Lady.

One item of business for Mrs. Johnson was the new First Family's next appointment, a somewhat ceremonious call by former President Dwight D. Eisenhower to pay last respects to the man who succeeded him in office.

'I Will Do My Best' Says New Executive

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sorrowing nation began to pay its final, formal tribute to a dead president today, and its new leader, Lyndon B. Johnson, started to pull together a still shocked government.

In the White House, for the last time, lay the body of John F. Kennedy, gunned down by an assassin's bullets Friday in Dallas, Tex.

Across the narrow street to the west, in the old Executive Office Building, President Johnson put in his first full day as head of the nation.

"I will do my best—that's all I can do," he said

Friday in his first public words as chief executive. "I ask for your help and God's."

The morning skies were dull and somber, and rain wet the city streets. Downtown Washington was almost deserted.

A small but faithful crowd kept vigil in Lafayette Park across the street from the White House.

Slowly today those who were relatives of John F. Kennedy, those who had worked for him, those who had known him intimately and those whose relationship was purely official filed past the closed, flag-draped casket.

Two priests, one at either end of the casket, prayed for the soul of the first Roman Catholic ever to rise to the presidency.

BEARING UP

The Kennedy family, so successful in business and politics and yet so often struck by tragedy, seemed to be bearing up well under their shocking ordeal.

Mrs. Kennedy stayed by her husband from the moment that he was shot until his body was returned to the White House early today.

It was reported she was under no sedation. She walked bravely, steadily by her husband's body. Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy, the president's brother, was at her side.

There was a poignant note from Hyannis Port, Mass., where the Kennedy clan has had so many joyous, uproarious moments.

ALONE TO MASS

The President's mother went, alone, to early Mass.

Wife Bids a Touching Farewell

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mrs. Kennedy said goodbye to her husband with a kiss on his lifeless lips and then slipped her ring on his finger.

From then on — from the emergency room in the Dallas hospital through the sad flight home, to the naval hospital where he was prepared for burial until she brought him home in death to the White House early today — she was at his side.

As she passed through the somber portals of the Executive Mansion she still wore the pink suit stained with the blood of his fatal wounds and carried herself with self control.

It was a harsh day and it left Mrs. Kennedy dazed and tearless, almost unable to show emotion.

ASKS PRAYER

In the hospital, she bade her handsome 46-year-old husband a goodbye that was so touching a witness, Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Tex., couldn't bear to watch.

"Pray for him," Mrs. Kennedy asked a Roman Catholic priest who administered last rites to the President.

Mourning Day Set Monday

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson today designated Monday a national day of mourning for slain President John F. Kennedy.

"I invite the people of the world who share our grief to join us in this day of mourning and rededication," the new President said in a proclamation on the death of the old.

Johnson ordered all federal offices in Washington and throughout the nation closed on Monday, the day of Kennedy's funeral.

The President urged people to assemble in their respective places of worship to "pay homage of love and reverence to the memory of a great and good man."

DeGaulle to Be at Rites

PARIS (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle will attend the funeral services for President Kennedy in Washington Monday, it was announced Saturday night.

Winds Blow Cold Weather Into the Area

Wintry winds blew into the state last night and early today plunging temperatures to a low of 39 this morning. At 2 p.m. the mercury stood at 37 in downtown Pontiac.

Tonight's forecast is partly cloudy with scattered snow flurries and much colder. A low of 24 is expected.

Tomorrow's outlook is partly cloudy and cold. The predicted high is 38.

Weather will be warmer on Monday with continued partly cloudy skies.

Body Reposes in Washington

Family, Friends, High Officials to See Bier

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a closed, flag-draped coffin, President John F. Kennedy reposed today in the historic East Room of the White House.

Visits by family, close friends and high officials of the government, including former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, were speeded throughout the day.

The body is to be moved tomorrow to the Capitol to lie in state until funeral services are held Monday.

Four tall candles flickered at the corners of the casket. Two priests knelt beside it on prayer benches, their heads bowed in silent supplication to the Almighty.

BRIEF VIEWING

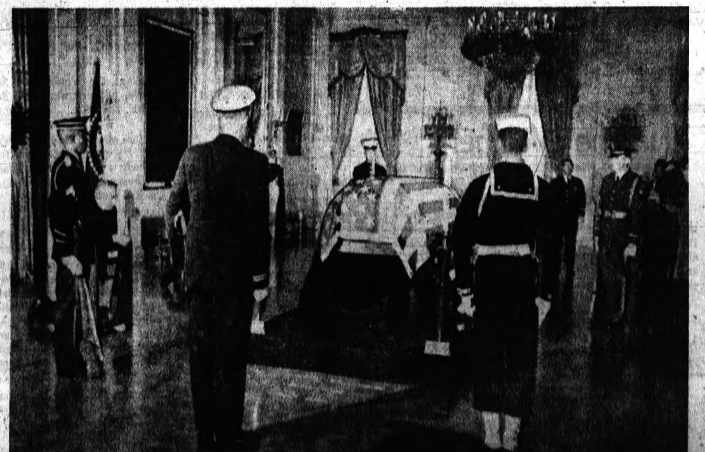

Reporters and cameramen were permitted a brief viewing, and noted at once that the casket was closed. In fact the casket itself could not be seen beneath the flag that draped it.

The coffin rested on a catafalque draped in black velvet.

White House officials said the casket would remain closed throughout the public viewings. Three of the enlisted men of the honor guard were white and the fourth, the Army man, was a Negro. The guards, and the kneeling priests, would be relieved periodically throughout the day.

Nation Dies a Little With Its Leader

By The Associated Press
Life couldn't be quite the same anymore. A good man, a great man in the eyes of millions, was gone. He meant something to everyone, what ever they thought of him, and he was gone. Things couldn't be quite the same.

It was that way for a nation, even for the world.

It was that way for people, too, for ordinary citizens, who felt the sick emptiness, the helplessness, that death brings, especially the death of one who counted for so much to so many.

There were the usual words for it—shock, dismay, tears, heartache.

STUNNED IMMOBILITY
But there was more than that, for many, a kind of stunned immobility, a desolation for which there were no words to utter, as if vocabulary and emotions could neither comprehend it entirely nor express it.

So much was at stake, so much had depended on him.

And it came so suddenly, so violently, so unexpectedly, this death of a young President, the end of this handsome, vigorous John F. Kennedy, with his dark shock of hair, his lively eyes and sharp mind. And it took something out of most everyone.

bers of the Kennedy family began, members of the White House staff filed silently past the casket for a last tribute to their chief.

Tomorrow it will be borne by solemn cortege to the rotunda of the Capitol where for 24 hours it will lie in state, to be seen by the public.

Funeral services will be held at noon Monday at St. Matthew's Roman Catholic Cathedral with Cardinal Cushing, Archbishop of Boston and a long-time friend of the Kennedy family, celebrating a Pontifical Requiem Mass.

The final resting place for the President, 46, gunned down as he rode in a motorcade, remained uncertain early today.

In the early morning hours, the flag-draped casket of the fallen President was brought to the White House.

TOP OFFICIALS
From 11 a. m. to 2 p. m., the top officials of the government, led by President Johnson and including Speaker of the House John W. McCormack, Mass., and Chief Justice Earl Warren, were called to arrive.

Eisenhower also was to come at that time. Former President Herbert Hoover, 89, and ailing, expressed regrets he would be unable to attend. Former President Harry S. Truman is expected in Washington tomorrow.

Cabinet members, officials of the executive branch appointed by the President and other persons friends were to view the body from 11 a. m. to 2 p. m.

From 2 to 3 p. m., associate justices of the Supreme Court and members of the federal judiciary were scheduled to call. From 3 to 5 p. m., members of Congress and governors were expected, followed by the diplomatic corps from 5 to 6 p. m.

The public will be permitted to file past the bier in the great rotunda of the Capitol shortly after its arrival until 9 p. m. tomorrow and again from 9 until 10 a. m. Monday.

"I felt as if he was my brother," a New Haven, Conn., man said, a catch in his voice. "But he was more than that—he was our President."

Sorrow of New York City Observed by Press Editor

By JOHN W. FITZGERALD

Sadness engulfed New York City in a matter of minutes as word was flashed that President Kennedy had been shot down. People looked at each other in stunned disbelief.

I had just returned to the Waldorf Astoria Hotel after attending a morning briefing at the United Nations. The normal New York gaiety turned to a subdued silence.

A waiter in the restaurant at the Waldorf was quietly moving from table to table giving the first reports.

First reaction seemed to be "It's some kind of a mistake. It simply can't be true."

The governor urged the cessation of all business and other activity and halting of all traffic during the one minute. An official period of mourning was proclaimed until sundown on Sunday Dec. 22 during which flags of the United States and Michigan will be flown at half staff.

The usual New York place was at a standstill and no one was hurrying. Out on Park Avenue people gathered around newstands and cars with radios listening to the reports.

A few blocks away at Rockefeller Plaza where the Associated Press is located people gathered on the sidewalks and street to get word from the ticker tapes in the window.

SEEMED ONLY MINUTES
It seemed like only minutes, but actually within one hour from the announcement of the President's death flags were flying at half mast all over midtown Manhattan.

Many people reacted by shaking their heads and muttering that the assassination was a national disgrace.

St. Patrick's Cathedral was crowded with faithful people praying before going on about their business.

By 4 p. m. stores were closing. Some already had windows decorated with a photograph of the President, draped with the American flag.

On my way to the airport, the cab driver remarked "What a really great family clan the Kennedys were."

Blood sprang from the President's face and he fell face forward in the back seat of the car. Mrs. Kennedy, who had been riding with him, tried to lift her head, crying, "Oh no!" Half an hour later John F. Kennedy, 46, the youngest man ever elected to the presidency, was dead.

It was stunning, almost unbelievable news that flashed around the country and to the far reaches of the world.

Expressions of grief, sorrow, surprise poured in from friends and antagonists, allies and foes, from the Kremlin and from the Vatican.

For Johnson, the problems were just beginning. By moving into the White House he also assumes leadership of the West in the cold war—and faces the major question of whether to go to Vietnam.

Khrushchev will stir up a new crisis to test the mettle of the new American chief executive.

At the hospital, Mrs. Kennedy went to Bethesda Naval Hospital where Kennedy's body was prepared for burial.

Also at the hospital were Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy, the late President's brother and chief advisor, and several close aides, including the assistant White House press secretary, Andrew Hatcher.

Aboard the plane before take-off, with Mrs. Kennedy and his wife at his side, Johnson took the oath of office from U.S. District Judge Sarah T. Hughes.

Twenty-seven people, all there was room for, crowded into the gold-carpeted presidential compartment of the big jet for the two-minute ceremony.

MILITARY GUARD
At Andrews Air Force Base, just outside the capital, a military guard of honor came to attention as the jet with the big American flag on its tail touched down and taxied into the glare of lights.

A crowd stood there, and their mood was like that of crowds wherever they were, of grief-stricken, incredulous, and often angry, bitterly angry, that it could have happened.

"It's as if we lived in a jungle," a housewife said. "The rich and poor, black and white, whatever their profession or status, in town and country—they felt it, shuddered at it, were bewildered by it."

TERRIFYING TRAGEDY
Actor James Stewart, visiting in Colorado, tried to phrase what it meant, this sniper's killing of a "vital, intelligent" President at a time when the country desperately needs vitality and intelligence.

"A tragedy of terrifying proportions," he said.

Flags on school buildings went to half staff, and in many classrooms, where the news came in school hours, there were moments of silence, of prayer.

The kids were sent home, and there was a somberness about it, even among the kids.

OUR FRIEND
"He was our friend," a little girl said.

The first news brought the sharpest, the hardest impact. In a Falls Church, Va., department store, an announcement of what had happened was made over the public address system.

IN A DAZE
A shopper reported the reaction: "Clerks were just walking out of stores. People were in a daze. It was fantastic."

It wasn't just a president who was dead, and what that means to national and international affairs, but also a father, young father of two young children. And people felt that, too.

"My sympathy goes to Mrs. Kennedy and all of the Kennedy family," said Clare B. Williams, assistant chairman of the Republican National Committee.

But it was more than just a death in a family; it was a death in a crucial post in the whole human family.

"President Kennedy is a martyr of our times," said Auxiliary Bishop George J. Gottwald, of St. Louis. "He is a martyr to the injustices that exist in our midst."

"Connelly's turn, which was to the left, probably saved his life. After the governor was shot, he also toppled forward."

Read, said the most disconcerting thing for Connelly is that his right arm is suspended by ropes and pulleys and in a cast from above the elbow to the wrist.

CAST "HEAVY"
Read said Connelly called the cast "heavy and bothersome."

Mrs. Connelly talked to Kennedy relatives this morning and inquired about Mrs. Kennedy's condition. Read said Mrs. Connelly expressed again her concern and sympathy.

Read said President Johnson had called Mrs. Connelly Friday night and asked about the governor's condition.

Churches Get Order
Catholic churches received the following directions from the Archdiocese of Detroit Chancery this morning: All flags shall be at half staff through Dec. 21. Church bells may be tolled at noon on Monday.

City's Mayor Asks Pontiac for Prayers
Mayor Robert A. Landry issued this statement yesterday on the death of President John F. Kennedy.

"I'm stunned at the news of this tragedy. This is a tremendous loss to the American people."

"President Kennedy's leaving will also be a loss to every living citizen in this free world."

"I beg the people of Pontiac to offer a prayer for the repose of his soul."

Also at the hospital were Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy, the late President's brother and chief advisor, and several close aides, including the assistant White House press secretary, Andrew Hatcher.

Aboard the plane before take-off, with Mrs. Kennedy and his wife at his side, Johnson took the oath of office from U.S. District Judge Sarah T. Hughes.

MILITARY GUARD
At Andrews Air Force Base, just outside the capital, a military guard of honor came to attention as the jet with the big American flag on its tail touched down and taxied into the glare of lights.

The coffin was lowered on an elevator platform, then carried to a cream colored Navy ambulance with curtains drawn.

Mrs. Kennedy, who came down the plane's steps with chin high, climbed in to accompany

Schools in Pontiac to Close on Monday

All Pontiac public schools will be closed in observance of the death of President Kennedy.

School Supt. Dana P. Whitmer said the school board has closed the public schools and employees need not report to work.

Because a national day of mourning was declared, Pontiac area merchants expect to close at least during services for President Kennedy.

Mayor Robert A. Landry said city officials would probably close at noon Monday, but added that any final decision would be made at a City Commission meeting this weekend.

He said the commission would meet with merchants and clergy over the weekend to plan Pontiac's observance of the President's passing.

Pending any official order from state or federal authorities, area banks will pay homage to the late President Kennedy by drawing all blinds and shades from noon until closing.

However, the banks are required by federal law to remain open unless ordered otherwise.

John Austin, chairman of the County Board of Auditors, said the county offices will close at noon on Monday.

STRANGE CIRCUMSTANCES
A trail of strange circumstances led authorities to beat down on Oswald as the prime suspect in the killing.

He worked in a textbook warehouse which police pointed as the place from which a high-powered rifle with a telescope sight was aimed at the head of the chief executive as he drove past in his open limousine. Police said Oswald was in the building at the time.

Within 45 minutes after the assassination, a policeman who tried to pick up Oswald at a suburban house about three miles from the warehouse was shot to death.

Police said the bullet that killed the officer came from a pistol fired by Oswald, who was charged with murder.

DESCRIPTION MATCHES
Mrs. Oswald, mother of a 2-month-old child, was quoted by Wade as saying her husband had in his possession as recently as Thursday night a rifle matching in description the one used by the assassin.

The personal history of Oswald was in character with the backgrounds of past presidential assassins, who were lunatics, anarchists or political fanatics of one kind or another.

Oswald admitted to a strong attachment for the Soviet Union and Communist Cuba. He once lived in Moscow and married a Russian. He tried to renounce his American citizenship in 1959, and he said he belonged to a pro-Castro outfit called "Fair Play for Cuba."

Police said that Oswald, during his first 10 hours of questioning, was arrogant and defiant. They promised him a night's sleep in the city jail before grilling him anew.

Johnson's wife at his side, then stepped off the plane. Looking white and drawn, Johnson shook hands with government officials and congressional leaders, faced a battery of microphones and cameras, and asked the help of all Americans and God.

The big army helicopter that had lifted Kennedy off soon after he was shot, then carried the new President to the White House.

He spoke briefly with Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and McGeorge Bundy, special assistant to the President for national security affairs, who rode in the helicopter with him.

Then the party moved through the rose garden that Kennedy had always taken delight in and up to the executive mansion, looming white in the darkness with the Washington Monument behind them.

Then, while the others stood beneath the portico outside, Johnson walked alone through the French doors and into the White House.

60 Feared Dead in Fire

NORWALK, Ohio (AP)—About 60 persons were trapped and killed in a fire today at a nursing home for the aged and infirm in Fitchville, the Ohio Highway Patrol reported.

A patrol spokesman said the blaze swept through the one-story concrete home in the predawn hours.

Eighty-four patients were reported residing at the home when the fire broke out.

Twenty-one patients and three nurses were safely accounted for at Eber-Titus Hospital in Norwalk.

Fitchville is a community of about 200. It is 20 miles southwest of Norwalk, the Huron County seat.

DEATH TOLL
Huron County Deputy Sheriff Jim Wade said the death toll would be "very close to 60."

No bodies had been removed from the still-smoldering building more than four hours later. Authorities feared many of the victims would be burned so severely as to make identification almost impossible.

Mourn and Praise Late President

By MARY ANGLEMIER
Church Editor

Church leaders of all faiths in the Pontiac area joined with the rest of the world to mourn the death of President John F. Kennedy.

In some cases, special services were set.

Rev. Galen E. Hershey, pastor of First Presbyterian Church, said "Through his ability, his energetic personal ity, and courageous leadership, John F. Kennedy has earned our admiration and affection.

"A man, who because of his circumstances, could have lived about as he pleased, or even have wasted his life in selfish and careless living, he chose rather to give his life in service to the cause of freedom."

"At his death the free people of the world, all who long for freedom, and people of all faiths and races mourn. We are left infinitely lonely by the loss of our great President.

UNITE EFFORTS

"My prayer is that his death will quicken and unite our efforts as a people in all that brings dignity, justice, hope and freedom to mankind."

"Should this be done, John F. Kennedy will have served us nobly not only by his life but also through his untimely and tragic death."

His sentiments were echoed by clergy of all faiths.

Rev. Frederick J. DeLaney, pastor of Our Lady of the Lakes, Waterford, said "I consider President John F. Kennedy's death a great loss. His ideals and aims will be the principles we'll all work for in years to come. He was a dedicated man."

Requiem Mass was celebrated this morning for the President in Our Lady of the Lakes Church.

SOLENN MASS

Solemn Pontifical Mass was celebrated for President Kennedy at 11 a.m. in Blessed Sacrament Cathedral, Detroit.

Rev. C. George Widdfield, rector of All Saints Episcopal Church: "I am deeply shocked and certainly feel a personal loss at the death of President Kennedy. It is a tragedy not only for the country but a great tragedy of the century and of the world."

Memorial services of Holy Communion for the President will be observed at 8, 9:15 and 11:15 a.m. Sunday at All Saints.

Together with other Missouri-Synod Lutheran Churches throughout the state, St. Paul Lutheran Church will conduct a memorial service tomorrow for President Kennedy at 10:45 a.m. Rabbi Israel Goodman, spiritual leader of Congregation B'nai Israel said "Whether one be a Jew or an adherent of another faith, man or woman, upon each according to his deeds will the Divine Spirit rest."

"The United States and the world wherever free people live have lost a great leader with the passing of our beloved President John F. Kennedy."

Rev. L. R. Miner, Macedonia Baptist Church pastor: "We have lost a great statesman, one of unselfish devotion and patriotism. I pray that his sacrifices were not made in vain for his home and his native land."

Rev. John J. DeWitt, assistant pastor at St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church: "President John F. Kennedy's death comes as a shock. It is disruptive to the national and international scene."

MEMORIAL SERVICE

"He was remembered at Mass this morning. A memorial service is being planned. My sympathy and compassion go out to the family in a deep sense of grief."

Rev. Gus Tsompanas, St. George Greek Orthodox pastor: "We have all suffered a tragic loss in the death of our president at a time when the country needed him most. A memorial service will follow morning worship."

Dr. Emil Kuntz, pastor of Bethany Baptist Church:

"Rising above partisan differences, we must all recognize his gifts of wisdom and leadership, a fine spirit of humility combined with a vigorous confidence."

"Above all we are all impressed not only with his faith in people but with his genuine faith in God."

The Bethany Church held a prayer service last night for the Kennedy family, the new President and the nation.

Rev. Theodore R. Allebach will read a Psalm and offer prayer for President John F. Kennedy at the beginning of the 10 a.m. service in Oakland Avenue United Presbyterian Church tomorrow.

The Pontiac Area Council of Churches held a memorial service yesterday evening in Central Methodist Church for President Kennedy.

Dr. Milton H. Bank, minister at Central Church, said "In this time of darkness for our entire nation and with deepest sympathy for his family and greatest concern for our country we ask citizens of our community to pray."

"Let us give thanks for the courage and bravery with which John Fitzgerald Kennedy led this nation. Let us now pray for his wife, small children and all his family."

"Let us pray for our new President Lyndon B. Johnson and the tasks which face him in days ahead."

A service of prayer was held in the Orchard Lake Community Church, Presbyterian, yesterday evening.

Pontiac Workers Numbd by Murder of President

By AL PHILLIPS

As the first news of President Kennedy's assassination was heard, downtown streets seemed cleared of pedestrians and motor traffic.

Inside stores and banks, clerks, executives and shoppers clustered around radios. They would stand there for a few minutes as the heartrending news flowed from loudspeakers. Then habit would take hold, and employees would go back to their desks or counters with grave looks on their faces, and shoppers would move on.

"I just heard it on the radio. I'm shocked," said Marlene

Cuba Group Was Active in Detroit

The "Fair Play for Cuba Committee," a group with which the suspected assassin of President Kennedy was connected, was active in Detroit for a while but is not active.

Its activities were never extended to the Pontiac area, although a local group once accompanied some of its members on a January 1961 trip to Cuba, and a former member is reported to be living in the Pontiac area now.

The Detroit chapter of the national organization was estimated to have about 20 members, but seemed larger when up to 150 sometimes showed up for demonstrations and picketing at the federal building in Detroit and other spots.

Most of them were pacifist sympathizers with the pro-Castro group, but not members.

NEVER VIOLENT

The group never ran afoul of the law or was involved in any violence, however.

Its last gasp on the Detroit scene came during the missile crisis over Cuba in October 1962 when President Kennedy forced Russia to withdraw missiles with a naval blockade. The group staged demonstrations at the federal building then.

The original organizers and leaders of the Detroit chapter, however, had reportedly already left Detroit, following the 1961 U. S. Senate Internal Security subcommittee investigation of the group.

Many of the leaders were identified as members of the Socialist Workers party.

The top leader was identified as Ed Shaw.

WITH ADVERTISEMENT

The "Fair Play for Cuba Committee" announced its formation April 6, 1960, with an advertisement in the New York Times that said its purpose was "to tell the truth about Cuba and neutralize the distorted American press."

In hearings before the Senate subcommittee, Charles A. Santos-Buch testified that he and Robert Tabor organized the nationwide group and obtained funds from the Cuban government to help pay for the New York newspaper ad.

Although it was known that both the FBI and Michigan State Police were investigating the Detroit chapter for possible subversive activities, both police agencies declined to comment on the group when contacted yesterday.

Loucks of 81 W. Rundell, a clerk in the Pontiac Area Chamber of Commerce office.

"It just makes me sick to my stomach. It's cruel and inhuman," said a co-worker, Mrs. J. C. Ramsey of 3285 Walms, Orchard Lake.

NEWS SPREAD

In the Pontiac Motor Division plant, which has no public address system, the news spread within the space of a few minutes.

At first inclined to think it a joke, workers paused in disbelief. Then they turned back to their jobs in silence. There was no interruption of manufacturing operations.

Inside the main lobby of the Community National Bank building, a handful of patrons, fewer than on an ordinary Friday afternoon, listened to bulletins coming over the public address system that usually carries pleasant music.

"I just can't really believe it. It's terrible when any individual in America has to express himself in such an extreme measure," said Frank G. Andreoni, bank vice president, speaking of the assassin.

SOMETHING TERRIBLE

"In this country we can remove a president by not re-electing him, not by doing something as terrible as this," Andreoni added that while he felt deeply about the President's assassination, he said the country is fortunate to have other trained and responsible men who can assume his duties in such an emergency.

The bank official then paused, and recalled that a few months ago a U.S. Secret Service man had visited the bank to explain procedures in handling counterfeit money.

"This same Secret Service man," Andreoni said, "has served many times in the President's bodyguard. He told me of the elaborate precautions they take and the complete files they keep of such people that are able to do something like this."

DEEP HATRED

"He told me," Andreoni added, "that such people are characterized by a deep hatred of everyone, which they focus on the President."

Outside, as a light breeze began to fall, two police officers stopped to exchange the latest word of the President's condition.

"It's a catastrophe," intoned Patrolman James L. Ocherman Sr., who holds Pontiac's Police-ment of the Year award.

"I've been to Dallas and it's a pleasant college town. How could this happen there?"

"I just couldn't believe it," agreed Patrolman Walter P. Patton, who then turned to passerby who stopped to question him about the tragedy because they noticed his uniform.

In his second floor office, Bank President Milo Cross, on hearing the latest reports, commented, "It's certainly horrible to have a thing like this happen."

At that moment a secretary hurried in.

"The President just died," she announced.

HAND ON HEAD

At this Cross held his hand to his forehead and quietly said "It was terrible."

Outside his office, the ordinary conversation was hushed. The quiet was broken by the constant jangle of the telephone as relatives and friends at home hurried calls to bank employees.

SAD TRIBUTE—Sgt. Don A. Morgan, of the U. S. Marine Corps Recruiting Station in Pontiac, lowers the flag atop the Federal Building to half mast, shortly after news of the President's death. Flags throughout the city were lowered as the news spread.

Flags to Be Lowered

Flags in Pontiac and throughout the country will be flown at half staff by presidential proclamation. In March, 1954, President Eisenhower designated that the flag should remain at half staff for 30 days upon the death of a president or former president starting from the time of death.

When flown at half staff, the flag first should be hoisted to the peak and then lowered to half staff. The flag should again be raised to the peak before it is lowered.

Students Were in Class; They Couldn't Believe It

By JEANMARIE ELKINS

Disbelief, shock, sorrow, and anger were reflected by Pontiac area high school students yesterday upon hearing the tragic news of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Isaac E. Cray, junior high school students were notified over the school public address system.

Hours later, 15-year-old freshman Johnnie Clements of 3565 Overton still raised his arms and shook his head in disbelief: "I really didn't believe it. It really shook me up. The teacher had to leave the room. I guess she must have been crying."

"I didn't believe it at first. I still don't. It was a stupid thing to happen. It won't help world affairs any."

14-year-old Dick Carlock of 3200 Lexington Drive.

Some girls cried in his class at Cray.

Pontiac Central High School students were also notified over the public address system.

WAS IN CLASS

Lynn Nelson of 190 Ottawa Drive was in chemistry class.

"I didn't believe it at first," the 16-year-old junior said. "I didn't know what to think. We were right in the middle of chemistry experiments and couldn't stop. Some girls were crying and trying to finish them. It was terrible."

"It's terrible, I cried," said 15-year-old Central sophomore Nancy Tripp of 1870 South Hammond Lake Road.

"I don't know why I cried, he wasn't my best friend or anything, but I really felt terrible. At first I thought he'd be OK."

SAT AROUND

Fifteen-year-old Central sophomore Ross Ludwick of 233 Elizabeth Lake Road was dressing for a practice scrimmage game, with the rest of the Central basketball team.

"All we did was sit around and talk about what had happened. No one did any practicing before the game."

Silence in the halls between classes at Waterford Kettering High School impressed many students, who had never seen the school like that before.

Dale Wilts, 17-year-old Kettering junior, of 4440 West Watson Blvd., was a Western history class when the word came.

TOPIC: PRESIDENTS

"We were talking about how the government was formed and the different presidents. Then this happened."

Troy High school junior, 16-year-old Jo Ann Lovejoy of 820 Sylvanwood was in gym class when the tragedy was announced.

"It was just chaos. Even before we knew for sure the President was dead, girls were running left and right and crying. It was such a total surprise, no one could really believe it had happened."

Sixteen-year-old junior Jim White of 1394 Bradley was in his history class at Troy.

"There wasn't a sound. At first no one believed it. A lot of girls were crying."

Many school activities were canceled last night.

MOURNER — A weeping woman wipes the tears from her eyes as she leaves St. Patrick's Cathedral (background) in New York where she and hundreds of others had hurried to offer prayers for President Kennedy. Flags on the cathedral had already been lowered to half-staff, and the bells of the church were being softly tolled.

Priest Says JFK Dead During Rite

DALLAS (AP) — President Kennedy appeared to be dead when he received the last rites of the Catholic Church, the priest who administered the sacrament said.

"I didn't see any sign of life," said the Rev. Oscar Huber, C.M., pastor of Holy Trinity Catholic Church in Dallas.

"I couldn't tell if it was real death," he said. "I administered the sacraments conditionally. We do this when we don't know for sure if a person is actually dead. Real death doesn't come until the moment the soul leaves the body."

"But we don't know just when the soul leaves the body so we administer the rites conditionally," he said.

RUSHED TO HOSPITAL

Father Huber, 70, said he and the Rev. James Thomson, C.M., rushed to Parkland Hospital as soon as they heard a television bulletin that Kennedy had been taken there.

"Parkland is in my parish so we went right over in case we were needed," he said.

The priest said he talked briefly with Mrs. Kennedy after her husband's death.

"I expressed my sympathy from myself and my parishioners," he said. "I told her I was shocked and very sorry."

'PRAY FOR HIM'

"She thanked me for coming down and administering the last rites," she said. "She asked me to pray for him and I told her I would say Mass for him."

"Our 5:30 Mass this evening was for him. We'll have a solemn Requiem High Mass Tuesday evening," he said.

"She, like everyone else around there, had a paralyzed look," he said. "We just couldn't believe that this could happen."

Ex-Governor of Texas Relates State's Grief

HOUSTON (UPI) — "The people of Texas are grief-stricken over the terrible tragedy and great loss to our nation and the world," former Texas Gov. Price Daniel said yesterday.

"It is impossible to comprehend that this assassination of the President and attempted assassination of our governor could occur in the midst of what had been the warmest and friendliest reception that any president has received in Texas within my memory."

British Chief at Mass

Former VP Shaken by JFK Death

UVALDE, Tex. (AP) — John Nance Garner, the former vice president who may have been the last man to talk on the telephone with President Kennedy, was badly shaken by the news of Kennedy's assassination.

"He took a nap after lunch and they didn't wake him up," Garner's son, Tully, said. "They told him about 3 p.m. When he got up and it shook him so bad he went back to bed."

Kennedy called Garner at 10:15 a.m. Friday to congratulate Garner on his 95th birthday. Kennedy was in Fort Worth at the time.

Hour later Kennedy flew to Dallas for the motorcade that ended when the President was shot in the head.

"God bless you," Garner told Kennedy during the conversation.

"You're my President and I love you. I hope you stay in there forever. God bless you."

"He was very happy to talk to the President," Garner's son said. "He was very saddened by his death."

Phone Company Calls Extra Crews

DETROIT (UPI) — The Michigan Bell Telephone Co. called in emergency crews yesterday to handle the flood of telephone calls to the news media and take care of cable troubles should they crop up.

A telephone company spokesman said the President's death led to what was referred to as a "condition yellow" or what would be an unexpected heavy load of telephone cable use by radio, television and wire service use.

The only higher priority rating used by the telephone company is a "condition red" indicating a national emergency.

Sorrow Is Expressed by Cuban Ambassador

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The Cuban ambassador to the United Nations, Carlos Lechuga, tonight expressed the "deep sorrow" of his country at the death of President John F. Kennedy.

Lechuga said: "In spite of the existing antagonism between the U.S. government and the Cuban revolution, we have heard with deep sorrow the news of the tragic death of President John F. Kennedy."

The Cost of TLC

There's an ingredient in hospital care that nurses call TLC (Tender Loving Care).

It's the indefinable quality in hospital people that sustains you when you are flat on your back—physically and emotionally—in a hospital bed.

TLC cannot be manufactured and it cannot be bought. A nurse is born with it, and it's as much a part of her as her very heart.

Yet, TLC does cost money. For it represents the time and the hard work of more hospital people to provide today's better hospital care.

Good hospital care does cost more money today. Good health is worth it.

Modern hospitals mean so much to you and your family.

Our community hospitals provide more health for your money than ever before.

Segregation Charged in City Schools

A Pontiac parent group charged the school board last night with "de facto segregation" in some local schools.

Charles E. Billings, 236 Gage, stating he represented a parent group, said Pontiac has several elementary schools that are totally segregated, one junior high—Jefferson—totally segregated, and another junior high—East—rapidly becoming segregated.

"In our opinion," Billings said, "this type of classroom situation presents an extremely unhealthy school atmosphere for all students in the Pontiac system, particularly the Negro child."

Billings was accompanied by Dr. Rigoberto M. Guzman who said he was a spokesman for the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Billings told board members that a 1954 Supreme Court decision declared the "separate but equal" doctrine unconstitutional and said it applied to "any segregated school district in this nation."

He asked the board to submit a plan of action (to end any school segregation in Pontiac) by the beginning of the second term.

"We firmly believe that before the residents of the Pontiac School District are asked to support a renewal or an increase in the school millage," said Billings, "a definite course of immediate action should be revealed to the school community."

William H. Anderson, board president, denied Billings' charges.

"We have no segregated schools as such," Anderson said.

"If they are segregated, it is because of housing patterns and we have no control over housing patterns."

Billings replied that his group, which has "no more than 50 members," was "concerned with the condition, not the cause."

BOARD TO CONSIDER

Anderson, who was the only board member to reply, said the board would take the matter under consideration.

The school board president said that the only way to avoid segregation because of housing patterns would be to transport pupils. He did not think this would solve anything.

Dr. Guzman said he would present the board with a list of questions on the present racial pattern in Pontiac schools.

He said he would ask for a racial count of pupils and contracted personnel. He also will seek a count on the Negro dropout rate.

The Atlantic and Pacific oceans are about 50 miles apart at entrances of the Panama canal.

John Fitzgerald Kennedy

People of all lands are engulfed in shock and grief over the assassination of President JOHN F. KENNEDY, as messages of condolence deluge the White House.

Of the Nation's 35 Presidents, he was the fourth to die by the hand of an assassin.

Party and personal differences dissolved in the agonizing sorrow that clutched the hearts of all Americans at the fate suffered by their vibrant and brilliant leader.

In the prime of life, the 46-year-old President served his country with distinction prior to ascension to the Presidency. He played a noteworthy role in World War II and for 10 years gave his home state of Massachusetts outstanding representation in Congress.

With election to the highest office in the land, the President was methodically and effectively guiding the national ship of state through seas both stormy and perilous.

JFK had won the admiration and respect of the great majority of his countrymen, with growing potential for rank among history's most illustrious.

The ways of the destiny that

Coffee Economic Key in International Trade

For most Americans, coffee is nothing more than a brew that ranges from good to bad in homes and restaurants and an ubiquitous time-off refreshment in business and industry.

But in terms of value in international trade, coffee is the second most important in the world, exceeded only by petroleum.

It is cultivated in 70 countries, and in nine of these it accounts for more than 50 per cent of all foreign exchange earnings. Coffee holds particular significance for the vigor of Latin American economy.

Indications are that price of coffee is going up after the first of the year. The new boost is expected to restore only price cuts made a year ago, when major coffee roasters reduced wholesale prices by four cents a pound to a 13-year low. Half that cut was taken back last spring.

From World War II until 1958, the United States steadfastly refused even to talk about Latin American commodity price problems. But under the impetus of the Brazilian plan for Operation Pan America (the parent of the Alliance for Progress) — and of the rocks thrown at Vice President Nixon — a thaw began in U. S. attitudes and we agreed to participate in a study of coffee problems.

One result was the International Coffee Agreement worked out last year. Supporters of the treaty said that a decrease in the price of coffee of one cent per pound results in a loss of $70 million in the foreign exchange earnings of the 35 African, Asian and Latin American coffee-growing nations and was ample reason for stabilizing the world price.

Opponents said the treaty would "gouge" the American consumer for the benefit of special interest groups.

It seems as though whichever way the coffee bean bounces, one faction is bound to get its lumps—but not, unfortunately, the kind coffee is sweetened with.

look the young husband and father from his lovely wife and charming children and leadership of his country must be inexplicable to the mortal world. But that destiny has spoken, and it is for Americans to bow to it humbly and with compassion for the bereaved.

We join mourners everywhere in solemn faith that the soul of JOHN F. KENNEDY has found spiritual peace and fulfillment.

We have confidence that President LYNDON JOHNSON will rise to this monumental situation, taking up the reins of the most powerful nation on earth. It is a fearfully awesome task, but one he is well equipped to discharge.

American Dream Dies With JFK

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON — The hidden gunman who assassinated President Kennedy killed an American dream.

It was no wonder people cried in the streets.

Many Americans disagreed with Kennedy, some on one issue, some on another.

But there were many sides to him and, because there were, he meant different things to different people.

Each could find in him some part of his own dream of what is good, or rewarding, or to be desired, or to be striven for in American life.

In total he was a symbol for many millions of people, representing an ideal as a man and as a president.

YOUNG, VIGOROUS
He was young, trim, vigorous, rich, good-looking, witty, highly intelligent and always informed.

And he was concerned about people. He was a husband and father devoted to his wife and children, looking to a long and happy life ahead for all of them.

In his chosen field, politics, he achieved supreme success at an early age.

DEDICATED TO JOB
As President, no matter how anyone differed with him on a particular issue, he was absolutely dedicated to the job he people gave him. None could deny him this. He worked day and night.

The greatest tribute to him was the effect the news of his sudden, violent death had on Americans from coast to coast.

There was grief, dismay, shock at the death of Kennedy, the human being.

One man after another—in a restaurant, at home, in the office, on the street—said he just wept at the news.

Anger, if any, seemed to have only a small part in the first emotional reaction, yet flaming anger would seem a natural reaction to the killing of a President.

That anger could be lost or drowned in mourning at the first news of Kennedy's death was testimony that the people grieved for the death of the man first.

Politics Clouded by Tragedy

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP)—A stunned nation faced today a gradual but perceptible change of course under its new President, Lyndon B. Johnson.

Johnson can be expected to continue the international policies of John F. Kennedy, which he has said repeatedly have put the Communists on the defensive by giving the non-Communist world the initiative.

But domestically, a reorientation of policies and of political actions appears inevitable.

Labels always are inadequate to describe the complexities of political beliefs. But the assassinated Kennedy was basically liberal and his successor is fundamentally conservative.

NEW POLITICAL PICTURE

This puts an entirely new complexion on the 1964 presidential campaign, if Johnson is the Democratic nominee as he seems surely to become.

Instead of facing the certainty they will be opposing a Democrat who leaned toward the left and whose personal popularity seemed likely to remain high, Republicans will have the alternative of picking a candidate to contest a man whose roots reach deep in the conservative South but who has come around to espousing civil rights and almost every liberal cause.

This could be disappointing to the supporters of Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who counted heavily on their man's outspoken opposition to Kennedy's policies and Goldwater's conservative stance to win the Republican nomination for him.

It could lift the hopes of New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller in his bid for the nomination. Rockefeller could cite a long and consistent record of civil rights against Johnson's come-what-may declarations for equal opportunity.

NOT UNEASY

By and large, the passing of Kennedy could go a long way to removing the psychological fear of the Republicans that a President seeking a second term would be nearly unbeatable. This could result in a blossoming of other candidates such as Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania and Gov. George Romney of Michigan.

Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, who lost the presidency to Kennedy by a razor-thin margin in 1960, also could benefit, in that one objection to him was that he had lost to Kennedy once and probably would go down to defeat again.

Johnson has almost a year to build a record of his own, but he will have to stand mostly on the accomplishments of the Kennedy administration.

The new President has always been a hard driving but cautious politician. He found himself miscast in a secondary role as vice-president.

ADAPTS TO OFFICE

Characteristically, however, Johnson adapted himself quickly, if painfully, to the office. He knew, and said so frequently, that he would be only as big a man politically as the President let him be.

Consequently, he made himself subject to Kennedy's command.

Among Johnson's qualities is a kind of resignation to the inevitable and a patience to try to bend events his way. Although he once said, "I don't expect to live long enough to see a man from Texas become president," he set about immediately after his election as vice president to shoot for the top job in 1968.

STRONG HAND

Now that he has inherited the office through the tragic death of his predecessor, Johnson undoubtedly will run things with a strong hand, as he ran the Senate as majority leader during the presidency of Dwight D. Eisenhower.

But the presidency tempts every man who attains it, and Johnson will be no exception in recasting the administration's mold.

The resignations of all members of the Cabinet undoubtedly will reach his desk quickly — the usual procedure on the death of a President. But Johnson already has asked all of them to stay on, at least temporarily.

This invitation includes Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy, even though the attorney general and Johnson have restrained enthusiasm for each other.

ONLY OPPOSITION

Robert Kennedy probably could offer the only substantial threat to Johnson's nomination in 1964, in the unlikely event Kennedy would choose to run. Most politicians think Kennedy will go content to wait until 1968. The prospect that he will be in the running then has been strengthened by his brother's death.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk, primarily a technician under Kennedy, may attain higher policy status under Johnson.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara appears to stand as high with Johnson as he did with Kennedy. With the dead President McNamara was second only to the attorney general among Cabinet members.

McNamara and McGeorge Bundy, special assistant to the president on national security affairs, were the first to confer with the new chief executive when he returned to Washington.

Over the months ahead, the prospects are that a number of Kennedy administration's high officials will find it necessary to return to private affairs. They will be replaced by carefully screened Johnson men.

Days of All Faiths:

Ecclesiastical Year Near End

By DR. HOWARD V. HARPER
Sunday is the last Sunday of the ecclesiastical year, the end of the long season called Trinity by the Anglican Church and Sundays after Pentecost by Rome. Next Sunday the New Year begins with the season of Advent, which leads up to Christmas. Advent, the time of preparation for the Lord's coming, always begins on the Sunday nearest St. Andrew's Day, Nov. 30, which is only another way of saying it begins four Sundays before Christmas. St. Andrew's Day really has nothing to do with it — it just works out that way.

In the Anglican Church (Episcopal in America), communion on this day has for centuries been called "Sunday." The name, or nickname, comes from the lovely prayer for the day in the Book of Common Prayer which begins: "Stir up, we beseech thee, O Lord, the wills of thy faithful people."

Although Sunday marks the close of the year, the prayer obviously looks forward, not backward. The stirring up is for the approaching new year.

THE FIRST APOSTLE

In the British Isles the Big Four among the saints are Andrew of Scotland, George of England, David of Wales, and Patrick of Ireland. Nov. 30 is St. Andrew's Day, the big day for Scotland, and for Scotsmen wherever you find them around the world.

Mother of Injured Youth Concerned About Fine

What kind of justice do we have when a man, who drove his boat within 35 feet of a dock, injuring a 12-year-old boy, is given a fine of $15? Warren Baker was found guilty by a jury and the Independence Township judge fined him only $15.

Pictures of the victim were forbidden to be shown by the judge (they might sway the jury). Why? Pictures are evidence of fact.

Why waste taxpayers' money for police when judges who are supposed to uphold justice do not enforce the penalty to fit the crime? A driver of a car when found guilty of reckless driving, no injuries, is fined at least $100 and taken off the road. Mr. Baker should have been fined the maximum and taken off the waterways, which are becoming more dangerous than roads?

How can we enforce safety on waterways, which are becoming more dangerous than roads?

'Should Give Support to Central's Band'

For many years we have been interested in the Pontiac Central band as one of our sons and his wife participated in the band almost 20 years ago. We thought the band was very good at that time.

However, Director Richard Morse, in the few short years he has been here, has produced a band which is a credit to the school and the city. I watched Mr. Morse bring this group of musicians up from a very few members to the now very efficient and talented band.

Pontiac should give its support and admiration to Mr. Morse and these young people for a job well done.

While the United States spends billions on foreign aid and the race to the moon, there are millions of our fellowmen in all nations who do not know that Jesus Christ died on the cross for their sins that they may obtain eternal life. Where a man spends eternity is everything.

There is no reliable information about what Andrew did in the days after the Lord's departure. But there is so much agreement among the various traditions that scholars are inclined to accept them as fact.

On this basis we know Andrew went to Greece and was crucified there. He was tied, not nailed, to his cross, and he preached from the cross for two days before he died.

He is the patron saint of Russia, because of an unreliable story that says he preached in Kiev.

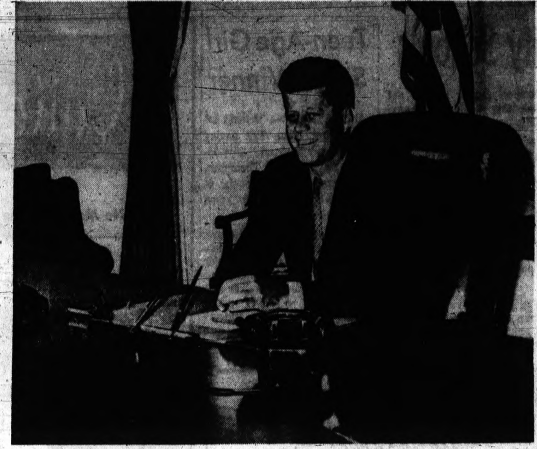

Scots will never stand for this, but the story that makes him patron of Scotland is just as unreliable. It tells that in the fourth century a certain St. Regulus, guided by an angel, carried Andrew's bones to the place now known as St. Andrew's and buried them there.

Bob Considine Says:

English Language Study Proves to Be Fascinating

NEW YORK—If you're looking around for a gift for the man, woman or child who has everything, give him a handy key to the most magnificent achievement attainable: mastery of the English language.

The newest Webster's "Unabridged" contains 430,000 words, many of them brand new and exciting words. But that a loss of about 20 per cent over the number of words in the same "Unabridged" of 22 years ago.

One consolation is that English words come and go and come again. The word "raid," for example, was missing for 200 years before Sir Walter Scott resurrected it in time for the Civil War.

270,000,000 as a first language and more nations than ever teach it as a second tongue. Only Chinese is spoken often during a day.

Jean Nicot, French ambassador to Portugal in the 16th century, gave us "nicotine." Spain gave us "hoosegow." France gave us "corduroy," the Dutch "caboose," the Mexicans "chocolate" and "tomato," the West Indians "hurricane" and "canoe," and the American Indians a host of arresting onomatopoeia.

Wars dumped upon us "quailing," "blitzing," "camouflage." Men were named "Yell," "Wall," "Sandwich" and hence before they will their names to the lower case.

Shakespeare used only 15,000 different words; Browning, 38,000. Today's college graduates have a knowledge and use of about 30,000. Some in the writing business about 40,000. Some Americans in this enlightened day get along with less than 300 words.

Uncertainty on Russian Reaction

Johnson to Follow JFK Foreign Policy

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — President Johnson seems strongly committed by his public statements of the past three years to carry forward the major lines of U.S. foreign policy developed by President Kennedy.

But the change in leadership of the Western alliance so suddenly wrought Friday by an assassin's bullets has inevitably opened a period of uncertainty about the future direction of U.S. relations with the rest of the world.

This applies particularly to relations with the Soviet Union and the Western Allies.

Johnson recently defended the East-West limited nuclear test-ban treaty and the proposed sale of wheat to the Soviet Union. He has also advocated formation of a NATO nuclear weapons force as urged by Kennedy.

RUSS AGREEMENTS

But now that he is President it remains to be seen how he will handle such issues, especially the possibility of any further agreements with Moscow. A critical related question is whether Soviet Premier Khrushchev will seek to promote friendly relations with the new U.S. chief executive at the outset or will embark on a strategy of probing and testing, perhaps by some new tension-creating move around Berlin.

The uncertainty about policy extends also to the future makeup of the inner circle of men, including of Secretary of State Dean Rusk, whose advice decisively influenced the course of diplomacy during the Kennedy administration.

On the larger issues of foreign policy Johnson has been a public advocate and defender of Kennedy's search for improved relations with the Soviet Union while maintaining a high state of military preparedness.

FAVORS BAN

Only last month in a New York speech he spoke out for the test-ban treaty and the Kennedy decision to sell wheat to the Soviet Union.

"We are not gambling with our national security," he said. "We are not taking any needless risks for peace. But neither are we foreclosing the future."

Johnson also has preached unity in Europe and an Atlantic partnership between Western Europe and North America. He has supported the foreign-aid program and promised the nations of Asia that the United States would "make any sacrifice and risk any danger" to protect freedom in the world.

SHAPED POLICY

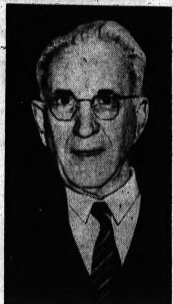

While vice president, Johnson spoke as a member of the Kennedy team. He participated in meetings of the National Security Council and various policy-making conferences and thus had opportunity himself to help shape policy. If he had any reservations on specific policies, he subordinated them to President Kennedy's final decision.

Because of his participation in policymaking, Johnson has been called the best informed vice president in U.S. history on foreign policy and related military questions. But his role was larger than that.

He was President Kennedy's most active goodwill ambassador, and during the three years of the Kennedy administration he visited at least two dozen countries, making speeches, shaking hands, and conferring with government leaders.

JOHN MCCORMACK

House Chief
Successor

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker John W. McCormack, 71-year-old veteran of nearly a half-century in politics, now stands first in the line of succession to the presidency.

There now being no vice-president, if President Johnson should be unable to serve he would be succeeded by the tall, white-haired Boston Irishman.

McCormack heard yesterday from newsmen on the Capitol beat about the attack on President Kennedy. They found the speaker at lunch — characteristically, not in the members' private dining room but in the outer reaches of the House restaurant, where clerks and reporters also can be served.

"My God," whispered McCormack, a devout man. He paused and said he knew Americans of all faiths were praying for the President.

Then he put a spoon down in a dish of ice cream and went with the newsmen to the House press gallery where an Associated Press teletypewriter was pouring out the increasingly desperate news of Kennedy's condition.

Eisenhower
Faced Two Death Plots

NEW YORK (AP) — There were two plots against the life of President Eisenhower while he was in office, says James C. Hagerty, his former press secretary.

Hagerty, now an American Broadcasting Co. executive, said last night both plots were traced to the Nationalist party of Puerto Rico, the same group accused of the abortive attempt on the life of President Truman.

In the spring of 1958, Hagerty said, secret service agents learned an attempt would be made to toss grenades into Eisenhower's car during a trip through a Midwest city.

The second plan to assassinate Eisenhower, he said, was reported to the secret service in the spring of 1959. Neither attempt came off, and no one was arrested in the plots, Hagerty said.

7 Serve Church for Youth

"Every Teen in Church" is the theme for the closing day of National Youth for Christ Week.

Serving on a committee of the Oakland Avenue United Presbyterian Church to invite all teenagers to services tomorrow are Jim Haun, Don Sweeney, Griff Verhey, Tom Shepherd, Suzette Weil, Cheryl Right and Pat Shepherd.

A special section will be reserved for the youth.

Speaking at the 10 a.m. worship hour will be Pastor Theodore R. Allebach. The Crusader Choir will sing "Sabbath Bells" by Stainer.

Youth groups will study and discuss "Pictures of Praise" at the Pioneer meeting. "Thanksgiving Transgressed" is the theme of the Builders' meeting. At 7 p.m. the pastor's message will be "Symptoms of Decline." Mrs. Don Shaw will tell the children's story and Mrs. Harold Weil and Nancy Giddings will sing a vocal duet. The youth Ensemble will present an arrangement of "Joshua Fight the Battle of Jericho."

Sunnyvale Chapel Has Guest Speaker

Dr. Henry Brandt, Christian psychologist, will speak at Sunnyvale Chapel, 5311 Pontiac Lake Road Sunday through Wednesday. Services are at 9:45 and 11 a.m., and 7 p.m. Sunday. Meetings will begin at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

A graduate of Houghton College, he received his master's degree from Wayne State University and a doctor's degree from Cornell University.

Kenneth Ish, Soloist Organ Recital at Central

Mrs. W. Henry Sink, organist, will present the first of a series of three recitals at 4 p.m. Sunday in the sanctuary of Central Methodist Church.

Organist at Central Church Mrs. Sink was a student of Albert Riemschneider in piano, organ and theory while attending Baldwin-Wallace College. Following graduation she continued her studies in music at Indiana University and the University of Michigan.

Mrs. Sink taught German and music in the public schools of Indianapolis, Ind. before coming to Pontiac.

She has had coaching with Dudley Vernon and Frederick Marriot of Detroit, and Philip Steinhuis of Bloomfield Hills.

A charter member of Tuesday Musicale, Mrs. Sink has served on the state board of Michigan Federation of Music Clubs for four years.

GUEST SOLOIST
Also featured will be Kenneth Ish, tenor soloist at Temple Beth El, Detroit and First Presbyterian Church, Birmingham.

A graduate of Waterford High School and Michigan State University, Mr. Ish served as choir director for Gethsemane Lutheran Church, Grand Rapids.

Currently vocal instructor in the Birmingham Public School System, Mr. Ish also served as soloist in Plymouth Congregational Church, Lansing and a Grosse Pointe Memorial Church.

Roland Richter will be accompanist.

Following the recital a tea will be held in Fellowship Hall. A nursery will be provided.

Mrs. Sink will present "Now Thank We All Our God" by J. S. Bach, "Chorale Preludes" by Brahms, and "The Bishop's Promenade" by Cuffe-Jephcott.

Mr. Ish will sing Dawson's "There Is a Balm in Gilead," "How Lovely Are Thy Dwellings" by Liddle and two selections from Handel's "Messiah."

Cuban Refugee Families in Homes for Christmas

More than a hundred Cuban refugee families will spend Christmas in new homes prepared for them by the churches in five U.S. cities. Flocking off from Miami airport on "Flights in Freedom" planes sponsored by Church World Service, they will go to St. Louis, Boston, Atlanta, the Greenville-Columbia, S.C. area and Chicago.

Two flights to Boston, sponsored jointly by CWS, the Baptists, Catholic Relief Services and the National Catholic Welfare Conference, and the other on Dec. 12, under mixed Protestant sponsorship, will bring total flights to Boston to seven. The Nov. 15 flight to St. Louis is the second to that city and the Dec. 8 flight to Chicago, the eighth this year.

Since Jan. 8, 1963, 22 "Freedom Flights" have taken Cubans out of their crowded, inadequate dwellings in Miami to new homes and jobs and schools for the children.

Los Angeles, with 11 "Flights" leads the American cities welcoming them, Church World Service reports.

Eight plane loads have gone to Pasadena, while other cities which have received two or more groups include Denver, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, and New York City.

American Bible Society Sponsoring Program

The 20th Worldwide Bible Reading program sponsored by the American Bible Society begins Thanksgiving Day.

It will continue through Christmas with millions of persons in scores of countries reading the same selection from the Bible daily.

Chief Justice Earl Warren in accepting the 20th anniversary poster said "It is good to know that the Bible is still the world's best selling book and it should also be the best read."

The program began during World War II when a lonely Marine on Guadalcanal asked his family to join him in reading identical pre-selected passages from the Bible each day as a means of maintaining spiritual ties.

Some 14 million bookmarks containing the selections are being distributed this year. Everett Smith of Scarsdale, N.Y. is president of the society.

Missionary Requisite

DETROIT (AP) — Future missionaries to Africa need to have "rubbed shoulders with Negroes who can think as well as they can" before they go to work as partners of the black man, the Rev. John R. Compton, a Cincinnati Negro pastor who recently spent a period in Africa, told a Disciples of Christ meeting here.

The sum of wisdom is, that the time is never lost that is devoted to work.—Emerson.

Family Holy Hour Set for St. Patrick Church

The Pope John XXIII Council No. 5496 of the Knights of Columbus in Waterford will participate in a family holy hour at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at St. Patrick Catholic Church, Oxbow Lake.

All Knights of Columbus members in the local area are invited, John R. Smith said.

Will Honor Assistant

An appreciation service will honor Rev. James R. Flemings at 3:30 Sunday afternoon at Macedonia Baptist Church Center. A fellowship hour with dessert will follow. Rev. Mr. Flemings is the assistant pastor. Mrs. Mary Bowditch is chairman and Rev. L.R. Miner, pastor.

Young people of Silvercrest Baptist Church will be in charge of the 7 p.m. service tomorrow in recognition of National Every Teen in Church Sunday.
This is the effort of the nationwide Youth for Christ movement to encourage every teenager to attend a local church tomorrow.

Featured in the service will be a vocal duet by Judy Blodgett and Terrie Dalby, an organ solo by Lane Morris, and a piano selection by Kathy Dalby.
Others participating will be the Silvercrest Teen-age Choir and James Kesselberg, Virginia Snyder and Nancy Hancock giving testimonies.

The main portion of the service will be given to the color film telling the story of one of Africa's outstanding youths, Sammy Morris.

This is a true story of an African boy and his struggle to reach our country to get a college education. It tells of his frustrations and accomplishments as a student at Taylor University.

In the morning worship service Pastor Wayne E. Smith will bring a message geared to the theme, "This Tense Generation."

Mrs. Kennedy Fourth First Lady to Be Widowed

Mrs. John F. Kennedy is the fourth First Lady in the history of the United States to be widowed, by an assassin's bullet while her husband was in office.

The other three were Mrs. Abraham Lincoln, Mrs. James Garfield, and Mrs. William McKinley.

The most famous assassination was that of Abraham Lincoln, which took place on April 14 (Good Friday) 1865, Lincoln was shot by John Wilkes Booth while he and Mrs. Lincoln were attending a performance of "Our American Cousin" in Ford's Theater, Washington. He died the following day.

Mary Todd Lincoln died in 1882. She survived her husband by some 17 years.

MRS. GARFIELD

"Lucretia Rudolph Garfield died in 1918, surviving her husband by some 37 years.

Tribute

This spontaneous tribute was written by a senior at Pontiac Northern High School within minutes of the announcement of President Kennedy's assassination. Shirley Romero is a student in Mrs. Ann Morrow's English class.

The earth is wet from the heaven's tears on this historical day. We, the people, of this day are reliving a part of the past. Our environment is not the same, our daily rituals are different from those of long ago; but there is something time can never change. The love of the President of our country. We feel sadness when he does, cry when he does and a little part of us dies when our President dies.

The whole of America feels the tremendous impact of this tragedy as did they when President Lincoln was assassinated.

Our President, too, has been shot and killed. That staunch, brave young man is gone forever, but his memory will linger on in the hearts of the people he so diligently served.

Garfield was shot by an unbalanced office-seeker, Charles J. Guiteau, while entering the old Baltimore & Potomac station in Washington. He died some seven weeks later.

Ida Saxton McKinley was with her husband on that fateful day of Sept. 6, 1901. McKinley was shot by Leon Czolgosz, an anarchist terrorist, while welcoming citizens at the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo, N.Y. He died eight days later on Sept. 14.

Mrs. McKinley survived her husband by only six years.

At approximately 1:30 Pontiac time Friday John F. Kennedy was shot by an assassin as his limousine left downtown Dallas, Tex.

The First Lady, who was riding in the open car with her husband, was not injured. She cradled her dying husband's bloodstained head in her arms as the Presidential limousine raced to Parkland Hospital.

"Oh no," she kept crying.

YOUNG GLAMOUR

Mrs. Jacqueline Lee Bouvier

She Had a Whirlwind Courtship

First Lady 'a Country Girl'

(UPI) — Her given name was Claudia, but she was nicknamed Lady Bird.

Lyndon B. Johnson completed the "LBJ" brand when they were married after a business-like, whirlwind courtship.

Claudia Alta Taylor Johnson's life has been busy, unpredictable and exciting ever since.

COUNTRY GIRL

The new First Lady is a country girl just as her husband is a country boy.

She was born at Karnack, in deep east Texas (pop. 100). A Negro nurse said she was as pretty as "a Lady Bird" and the nickname stuck.

Her mother died when she was five, and she grew up a shy girl in a family of men. The president, she has often said, helped her conquer her retiring personality.

"He saw more in me than I saw in myself," she said.

One day in 1934 she was introduced to Johnson, then secretary to U.S. Rep. Richard M. Kleberg, D-Tex.

The president made a breakfast date. He gave her a Dun and Bradstreet type account of his personal background and proposed.

Finally accepts Mrs. Johnson would not commit herself, but after two months of steady telephone calls from Washington she accepted.

She got her first taste of campaigning, and Johnson was on his way in politics. While Johnson became the protégé of the late president Franklin D. Roosevelt, Mrs. Johnson started taking charge of things at home.

BEGINS RANCHING She bought a small Austin, Tex., radio station in 1942, helped improve their sprawling hill country ranch near Johnson City, where the president was born, and took earnings from her expanding broadcast interests to acquire new ranch lands.

Four years before Johnson was elected to the Senate by a scant 87 votes in 1948, their first daughter was born. She was named Lynda Bird Johnson in keeping with the "LBJ" brand.

Lucy Baines Johnson was er Kennedy was the third youngest and one of the nation's most glamorous first ladies.

A tall, slender brunette beauty, she captured the imagination of people all over the world.

She even became an American good-will ambassador, commanding crowds and acclaim on trips abroad.

She set fashion's styles, relaxed some of the social protocol at the White House and helped her husband put the spotlight on cultural aspects of American life.

Across America and in foreign countries, Mrs. Kennedy's taste in clothes was copied — from the pillbox hat to the simple, sleeveless, bateau-necked dresses she preferred.

Mrs. Kennedy scored a personal triumph when she joined the President in May and June of 1961 on state visits to Canada, France, and Austria. This led President Kennedy to open his Paris press conference with the jesting comment:

"I am the man who accompanied Jacqueline Kennedy to Paris, and I have enjoyed it."

ference with the jesting comment:

"I am the man who accompanied Jacqueline Kennedy to Paris, and I have enjoyed it."

MRS. JOHN F. KENNEDY

One of Mrs. Kennedy's biggest assets — adding to her success abroad — was her ability to speak several languages, particularly fluent French.

WHITE HOUSE

The refurbishing of the White House was her major contribution as First Lady. It was her aim to fill the historic 54-room, 16-bath executive mansion with authentic reminders of the great Americans who have lived there.

The Kennedys celebrated their 10th wedding anniversary on Sept. 12.

John Fitzgerald Kennedy Jr. will celebrate his third birthday Monday. Caroline will celebrate her sixth birthday two days later, on Wednesday.

There will probably be no festivities. The nation mourns the loss of its President. The world mourns the loss of one of its greatest leaders.

And today one of the world's loved women, Jacqueline Kennedy, mourns the death of her husband, who only last August was by her side to comfort her on the loss of their second son.

Today two of America's most well known children are without a father.

Wives' Role Includes Bit of Worrying

Do the wives of county and city officials worry about the safety of their husbands? Mrs. Arthur E. Moore, wife of the circuit court judge, admitted that she sometimes worried but said she had always had "a better conception of human beings," more hope for mankind.

"That hope," she added "was shattered after today." (Meaning yesterday's assassination.)

She continued saying the people don't realize the risks involved in public office where one can be the target of any disturbed minds.

Mrs. Robert Landry, wife of Pontiac's mayor, said she "had never thought of it in that way (physical danger)." She noted, however, that she did worry "about his worrying so much, about urban renewal and everything."

"It would have made me sick if I had thought of (physical danger)," she added.

Mrs. Norman Barnard, wife of the juvenile court judge, admitted that she did worry about her husband's safety.

"You sometimes wonder," she said, "what people will do when they don't agree with you. You never know."

As Mrs. Moore said: "We are all concerned when our husbands are in office."

Sorrowful Pontiac Recalls President Kennedy

Some Stunned, Others Unaffected

Life Goes On in Downtown Streets

By PAT McCARTY

When news of the President's death hit Pontiac streets, people were engaged in their normal Friday afternoon activities.

Downtown they were shopping and going to or from work.

Some of them were stunned by the assassination. They voiced disbelief, finding it difficult to accept the death of a Chief Executive.

Others seemed unaffected, intent on their personal concerns.

ON BEAT

Patrolman Joe Wilson, 3588 Lotus, Waterford Township, picked up the news while walking his beat.

"I couldn't believe it at first," he said. "I thought he was just great. I can't imagine who would do it."

SARNOWSKI WILSON
Chester Sarnowski, 43170 Fother, Utica, suggested the motive might be "civil rights or something of that nature." The sales manager said, "I think it's just terrible for something like this to be able to go on."

MRS. BOYER MILLER
Harry Miller, an attendant nurse who lives at 580 E. Pike, was driving downtown when he heard the news.

"I hated to hear it," he said. "I don't think much of it."

MRS. GIBSON FIELDS
"I think it's terrible," said Mrs. Boyer, 184 Whittemore, voicing an oft-heard opinion.

Searman appreh. Harry Fields, 194 N. Berkshire, who was listening to developments on his car radio, concurred.

"PRETTY SHOCKED"
"At first I was pretty shocked. I don't see why it happened," he added.

"Terrible, terrible," said Mrs. Hugh Gibson of 4643 Charest.

working president — the best we've had yet."

"I just don't know," said Jack Pilkinton, 58 W. Hopkins, shaking his head. "It was a nasty break. It's too bad someone feels the way they do," the Pontiac Motor employee added.

Pontiac Feels Sense of Loss

Express High Regard, Shock Beyond Words

A great sense of shock and a feeling of personal loss was expressed by prominent Pontiac leaders on learning of President Kennedy's death.

While all expressed high regard for the man, they felt the tragedy would not hinder the orderly continuance of government.

At Pontiac Motor Division, E. M. Estes, general manager, was closeted with other company officials in a meeting when a secretary broke in with the news.

"I was shocked beyond words," was all Estes could say.

"No comment can be sufficient," said Andy Wilson, president of GMC Truck and Coach Division Local 594.

PLANNED VISIT
Wilson, who has met the President on several occasions, recalled when he as chairman, planned the then-Sen. Kennedy's visit here on Labor Day, 1960.

Wilson could vividly recall talking with Kennedy at a dinner which was a highlight of presidential campaign activity here.

"I feel hurt," said Wilson, who learned of the news during a negotiating session with Truck & Coach Division officials. "All of us were in shock."

A. C. Girard, Community National Bank president, said he learned of the tragedy while listening to his car radio on his way to attend a meeting in Detroit.

HEARD REPORT
By the time he arrived, it was reported President Kennedy was dead.

"So we called off the meeting. I knew everyone would have had something else on our minds."

"I think it's a shocking thing, but I feel the nation will continue to go on."

Girard said he also did not foresee much effect on the stock market or the nation's economic health.

BLOW TO ALL
"I am deeply shocked. This is a blow to all Americans," stated Dr. Dana F. Whitmer, superintendent of schools.

"In our country we have a great reverence for the office of president and the man who occupies this office. This is a great tragedy for all of us."

Calvin J. Werner, general manager of GMC Truck and Coach Division, said "We join the nation in mourning the death of our President. It is a great loss for everyone."

"This thing hit me as hard as did the news of Pearl Harbor," stated Monroe Ornum, general manager of Ornum's, Inc.

Shocked, Tearful Faces

Despair in County Courthouse

By JIM DYGERT

Shocked, solemn, tearful faces gathered in clusters around radios in Oakland County Courthouse offices and corridors, waiting and hoping that he wasn't dead.

Others moved about their work numbly, pausing to ask each other if it really could happen.

In a third floor courtroom, 12 citizens on jury duty gaped as Circuit Court Judge William J. Beer announced, "This court is recessed. President Kennedy is dead."

The women in the jury box broke into audible sobs. One had to be assisted from the courtroom.

"It was as if a bomb had hit the courthouse," said Judge Beer's secretary, Mrs. Reginald R. Bird, of 7661 Allen, Independence Township. "Everyone was just stunned."

"If it was one of those civil rights agitators, it isn't going to stop anything."

"It's tragic," said County Bar Association President Thomas J. Dillon. "It will have very serious repercussions."

"Unbelievable," was all that Circuit Court Judge Clark J. Adams, the senior member of the county's Circuit Court bench, could say.

"A national calamity beyond anyone's comprehension," said Circuit Court Judge Arthur E. Moore.

BEYOND COMPREHENSION
"I'm overwhelmed with grief and sadness for all of us that this could happen in America," said Judge Beer as he sat listlessly in his chambers.

Elsewhere throughout the courthouse, even the cynics were shaken.

Bar Patrons Gripped by Sad News

By DICK HANSON

Tears flowed in the bars of downtown Pontiac yesterday when people received word the President had succumbed to his bullet wounds.

Shocked comments gave way to grief as people bowed their heads in silent bewilderment and sorrow.

Earlier comments on what the attack meant to the nation were stilled by the latest news.

Someone said "we'd better lower the flag at the club to half-mast." No one turned or looked up. The remark hung on the air.

Initial reaction to news that President Kennedy had been shot was a stunned "that's terrible . . . how could it happen . . . must have been a crackpot . . . no, it was planned."

IST COMMENTS
Here are some of the first comments of Pontiac citizens both in the bars and on the streets:

"Who knows what will happen now; it's just terrible, that's all!" — Herbert Radtke of the sheriff's department.

"You're telling me about it is the first I've heard. I'm shocked. It's hard to believe." — Bill Spain of 279 E. Wilson.

"It's a terrible shock to the country, comparable to when President Roosevelt died" — Philip Sauer, proprietor of Griff's Grill.

"How could it happen," queried George Arkellian, proprietor of Wolverine Lumber & Wrecking Co. of Pontiac, on first learning the news. "I'm shocked."

Ann Howick, a barmaid at Griff's Grill, said "It must have been some drunk — they must have been aiming at the president."

"IT'S SOMETHING ELSE"
"No crackpot can shoot like that, it's something else," declared Douglas Mardis of 20 Cross. "One h-l of a thing."

opening in this city had to have the crowd with him.

That day in Oakland Park, the men, women and children of Pontiac heard a man who was not satisfied that his nation was doing the best it could.

"I am not satisfied to see the people of Latin America who looked to us for leadership, now looking to Khrushchev and Peiping," he told the exuberant picnickers.

"I am not satisfied that all who want jobs cannot find them."

DISSATISFIED
Kennedy was dissatisfied with the average amount of Social Security checks, with wages, with unemployment compensation checks and medical care for the aged.

It was a political speech aimed at the Republican administration.

But the man doing the talking wasn't promising any handouts on a silver platter. He stated

'Kennedy Girl' Distraught

"It's so unbelievable it tears you up," said Mrs. Daisy Johnson, 538 Linda Vista, last night.

Mrs. Johnson was one of "The Kennedy Girls" when the President spoke in Pontiac on Labor Day 1960. She has remained a devoted admirer of Mr. Kennedy ever since.

"I thought he was great, ever since I met him that day and got his autograph."

"He was our leader, the one we had so much feeling for. He had dedicated his life to us and then this had to happen!"

Mrs. Johnson, who works at UAW Local 594, was getting into her car to return to the office when a neighbor called the news to her.

Death Stirs Memories

The shock of the President's assassination cut deeply into the memories of a former chief executive's daughter now living in the area.

Mrs. James A. Halsted of Beverly Hills could recall the attempt made on the life of her late father, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Her immediate reaction to the news of President Kennedy's death was one she found hard to put into words.

"I'm just completely knocked over by news of this sort," Mrs. Halsted said. "You can't even express your feelings—they're too deep."

"You think of the man who died, his wife, his parents, his family. But at the same time you can't help but think of the country."

"I have the greatest sympathy for the Vice President who now has to take over the burdens. And to take them over in this way would cause an even greater burden."

One of the three unsuccessful assassination attempts against Presidents of the United States was made against Mrs. Halsted's father.

Anarchist Joseph Zangara shot at the president-elect in Miami Feb. 15, 1933. A woman grabbed Roosevelt's arm and the bullet missed him, fatally wounding Mayor Anton J. Cermak of Chicago.

Living in the White House, Mrs. Halsted said she had learned to adapt to the constant threat to the lives of the president and his family.

"You get used to it," she said. "You know you wouldn't have the Secret Service if you didn't have to be protected against people like that, who surely must have something wrong with them."

Waterford Sombre at News of Death

News of President Kennedy's tragic death yesterday afternoon cast a somber spell over Waterford Township employees.

Huddling around a radio in Clerk Elmer Fangbner's office, several sobbed openly when the death was confirmed.

Then the group dispersed and township personnel went quietly about their tasks.

Township Supervisor James E. Seesterlin said most had been hopeful while listening to the account of events before the shocking revelation.

"We are all extremely grieved by the tragic loss of the leader of our country," Seesterlin said. "We are too shocked to say anything more about it."

City Remembers Kennedy in 1960 Labor Day Speech

By DICK SAUNDERS

"Decent homes, decent schools and a decent hope for the future — that is what we are fighting for. This nation must move ahead."

Some 15,000 people gathered at Oakland Park on a hot, sweltering Labor Day in 1960, to cheer these words from a dynamic young senator from Massachusetts whose destiny made our 35th president.

Yesterday that nation stopped moving. It stopped in homes, schools — everywhere — to weep a bitter tear of grief and disgust.

That "decent hope for the future" had been snuffed from its champion, John F. Kennedy.

BIG DAY
It was a big day for Pontiac. A presidential candidate was coming to town and the welcome was warm and hearty.

It was even a bigger day for Oakland County Democrats and local labor organizations. Kennedy spoke at the AFL-CIO Labor Day picnic.

As Kennedy's motorcade traveled up Woodward Avenue to Pontiac, crowds gathered along the road to catch a glimpse of the man who hoped to occupy the White House come January.

Former Gov. G. Mennen Williams and Lt. Gov. John B. Swainson, then nominee for governor, were with him.

DEM CANDIDATE
So were Sen. Patrick V. McNamara and James Kellis, Democratic candidate for the 18th District seat in Congress.

The Kennedy caravan moved up Saginaw Street, lined with onlookers.

But it was at Oakland Park, in the shadow of Pontiac Motor Division's sprawling plants, that Kennedy was greeted by the wildly cheering throng of 15,000.

A group of teen-age girls squealed in delight and threatened to swoon upon sighting the handsome presidential hopeful.

MANY YOUNGSTERS
There were many youngsters in the crowd.

One of the children, Charles Phillips Jr. of Madison Heights, an Ottawa Indian, was boosted to the speakers platform.

Big Thunder (his Indian name) presented an Indian headpiece to the man who, in a few short months, was to become a chief.

Kennedy was welcomed by a bevy of labor leaders headed by Walter Reuther and Andy Wilson, president of GMC Truck & Coach UAW Local 594 who was chairman of the big picnic.

PUT AT EASE
The smiling easterner had a way of disarming people—putting them at ease.

He began by telling his audience he was "at home in Pontiac, I drive a Pontiac car. I'll bet some of you make them."

John Kennedy's Last Day: Rendezvous With Destiny

DALLAS (AP) — President John Fitzgerald Kennedy arrived early and exuberantly Friday morning, the 22nd day of November, 1963, the day he kept a rendezvous with his final, harsh destiny.

He was in the Texas Hotel in Fort Worth, midway in a quick tour of the state, with speeches in a number of cities.

Kennedy, with his wife, Jacqueline, had flown to Texas Thursday and, already behind them were John and Jacqueline Kennedy and Houston. They had spent the night in Fort Worth.

Ahead of them lay Dallas, then an afternoon flight to the state capital in Austin for a Democratic fund-raising dinner, and a night at the Johnson City Ranch of Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATIONS

Then it was to have been back north for Thanksgiving at Hyannis Port, Mass., and a celebration of the birthdays of both their children, John Jr., who will be 3 on Monday, and Caroline, 6 next Wednesday.

At 8:45 a.m., bareheaded and without a coat, Kennedy left his Fort Worth hotel and walked briskly through a misty rain to a parking lot across the street, where several thousand persons were held behind a rope barricade.

The President moved up to them and began a round of handshakes. Mrs. Kennedy was not yet with him.

"Mrs. Kennedy is busy organizing herself. It takes a little longer, you know, but then she looks so much better than we do," he said.

As police in yellow rain gear stood by, the crowd became enthusiastic, but with no loss of order. The people seemed warm and friendly as they craned for a look at Kennedy or stretched out their hands toward him.

VERY GLAD

"All this makes me very glad to be here," the President remarked.

Breaking it off finally, Kennedy turned back to the hotel for a 9 a.m. breakfast sponsored by the Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce. There he was joined by Mrs. Kennedy, in pink wool suit and pill box hat.

At the head table, the President was presented with Texas boots and a broad brimmed Texas hat.

Asked to try on the hat, Kennedy laughed and declined, saying: "I'll put it on at the White House Monday. If you all come up, you'll have a chance to see it."

At 10:35 a.m., with the breakfast at an end, the President and his party left the hotel by auto for nearby Carswell Air Force Base and the next stop on their itinerary, Dallas.

The skies were clearing and by the time the plane landed at Love Field in Dallas at 11:37 a.m. A bright, November sun beamed down on Kennedy and his party.

Mrs. Kennedy emerged from the plane to shake hands with airport greeters. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

The President and his wife entered Kennedy's familiar White House limousine, a dark blue bubble-topped convertible. It had been flown from Washington for the tour and its shiny surface sparkled in the sun. Because the weather had turned fair, the transparent bubble had been removed for the Dallas motorcade.

TEXAS GOVERNOR

Stepping into the car with the Kennedys were Gov. John B. Connally of Texas and his wife. The President was natty in a business suit. He carried but did not wear a soft felt hat. He also carried a speech he was scheduled to deliver to 2,500 luncheon guests who awaited.

In the speech were references to vibrant strength—individual strength and strength of this nation as a free world leader.

It read in part: "America today is stronger than ever before. If we are strong, our strength will speak for itself. If we are weak, words will be of no help."

CROWD LINES ROUTE

As the motorcade sped along an 11-mile roundabout route to the trade mart, thousands massed along each curb in the business district. They cheered the President and without rancor, although Dallas is a center of political conservatism.

The crowds thinned and then nearly vanished as the presidential limousine approached a triple underpass which feeds into a five-lane expressway leading toward the trade mart.

The President chatted with his wife and the Connallys as his car approached the Texas book depository, a six-story structure that overlooks the underpass.

"You can't say Dallas isn't friendly today," Mrs. Connally told the President.

STARTS TO REPLY

Kennedy started to reply.

At that moment, 12:30 p.m., suddenly from a fifth floor window of the book depository building came three sharp, explosive cracks. They might have been firecrackers and some in the motorcade thought at first they were.

In the presidential car, Kennedy fell back on the back seat with an assassin's bullet in the neck just below the Adam's apple, and a wound in the back of his head.

"Oh, no!" gasped Mrs. Kennedy. Then she tried to cradle her husband's head.

SEEK PROTECTION

Beside the highway, people ducked for cover that did not exist. A Negro family covered their child on the grass. A policeman fell to one knee. A man pushed a woman in an orange dress to the ground and huddled protectively above her.

The motorcade picked up speed, the presidential car leaping ahead in a breakneck dash through the underpass and onto the broad freeway. Police sirens hitherto silent at Kennedy's request, suddenly shrieked with eerie volume.

The presidential limousine careened around a turn and into the emergency entrance of Parkland Hospital.

Mrs. Kennedy was still trying to hold up the head of the President. Mrs. Connally was helping her husband to keep semierect in his seat.

ON BACK SEAT

Still face down, the President lay full length on the back seat of the car as Secret Service men helped Mrs. Kennedy away.

Then the President and Connally were carried into the emergency room of the hospital. Kennedy was unconscious. The suit he wore appeared oddly unrumpled as he was delivered into the hands of doctors.

Behind on the floor of the limousine, side by side, lay the President's felt hat, and Connally's light-colored, wide-brimmed Texas hat.

Between the seats lay three twisted and torn roses from Mrs. Kennedy's bouquet.

CHEST SURGERY

Connally was taken to an operating room for chest surgery and there from a table he told an aide to "take care of Nellie"—a reference to Mrs. Connally.

Dr. Malcolm Perry, 34, attending surgeon at the hospital, entered the emergency room, to note at once that the President's condition was critical. There seemed to be little heart beat, no palpable pulse beat.

Other doctors rushed into the emergency room to assist among them Dr. Kemp Clark, 38, a brain surgeon.

Oxygen was administered to the President. Blood and other fluids were injected. A tracheotomy—a slitting open of the windpipe—was performed in an effort to aid the President's breathing.

An electrocardiograph machine was ready to record the President's heart beat. Inside the hospital with Mrs. Kennedy was Johnson, the man immediately in line for the presidency. He and his wife grasped hands with Mrs. Kennedy in a deeply moving tableau. The First Lady's clothing was stained with her husband's blood.

Two Roman Catholic priests hurried into the emergency room where the President was sinking rapidly. They administered the last rites of their church to the first Catholic President of the United States. They gave him the conditional absolution of his sins, in a ritual the church provides for those unable in their last extremity to undergo vocally the sacrament of confession.

Amid frantic medical activity, Perry busied himself trying to repair the wound on the President's neck. Then he stopped. It was over. The President was dead.

"We never had any hope of saving his life," said one of the doctors.

Thus ended the last day in the life of the nation's 35th President, John Fitzgerald Kennedy, the first White House martyr in 63 years.

The time was 1 p.m. on the 22nd day of November, 1963.

Scene of Assassination Is Described

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Jack Bell, Associated Press White House correspondent, was in the fourth car behind President Kennedy's on Friday when an assassin killed the President from ambush. Here is what Bell saw.)

BY JACK BELL

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—There was a loud bang as though a giant firecracker had exploded in the caverns between the tall buildings we were just leaving behind us.

In quick succession there were two other loud reports.

The ominous sound of these dismissed from the minds of us riding in the reporters' "pool" car the fleeting idea that some Texan was adding a bit of noise to the cheering welcome Dallas had given John F. Kennedy.

The reports sounded like rifle shots.

MAN SCREAMS

The man in front of me screamed, "My God, they're shooting at the President!"

Our driver braked the car sharply and we swung the doors open to leap out. Suddenly the procession, which had halted, shot forward again.

In the flash of that instant a little tableau was enacted in front of a column toward which the velvet green grass swelled upward to a small park near the top of an underpass for which we had been headed.

A man was pushing a woman dressed in bright orange to the ground and seemed to be plunging protectively over her. A photographer, scrambling on all fours toward the crest of the rise, held a lensed camera trained in their direction.

SAW NO SIGN

As my eye swept the buildings to the right, where the shots—if they really were shots and it seemed unbelievable—might have come, I saw no significant sign of activity.

Four cars ahead, in the President's Presidential limousine, a man in the front seat rose for a moment. He seemed to have a telephone in hand as he waved to a police cruiser ahead to go on.

The presidential car leaped ahead and those following it attained breakneck speed as the caravan roared through the underpass and on to a broad freeway, police sirens whining shrilly. These sirens had been silenced by presidential order throughout the Kennedy Texas trip.

Up to the highway we turned.

One such plaque is in recognition of her service as chairman of the national group for the year 1962-63. In this capacity, Mrs. Randall represented the U.S. Style Committee at the International meeting of the Official Hair Fashion Committee at the International Coiffure Committee held in Amsterdam. But the shop itself does not revolve completely around its owner; she encourages each of her "girls" to develop their own talents and often brings in training assistants from the outside. Currently the shop is turning its combined talents to the working with and servicing of wigs and wiglets.

Fox Cleaners

One of the better known firms in the Pontiac area is Fox Cleaners at 719 W. Huron. Established in 1929 by Aaron Fox it was one of the first businesses in this section. Mr. Fox has been seen in many changes in the growth and development of the city since that time. Aaron and his wife, Betty, have watched their business grow to its present size and have 16 employees. They have one of the most modern and up-to-date dry cleaning plants in Pontiac and their word is guaranteed to give satisfaction. After thirty-five years in business Mr. Fox is turning the management over to his two sons, Kenneth and William. Ken is a member of the Junior Chamber of Commerce and Bill is with the West Side Kiwanis.

Paul's Seat Covers

It has always been the pride of the average American that he can, if he wishes, embark upon a business enterprise without asking a group or political party. He can start in a modest way and with ingenuity and perseverance build his business up to any proportions.

Here in Pontiac we have Paul's Seat Covers and Auto Tops at 256 S. Saginaw which opened its doors just three years ago and is now the largest Trim Shop and Seat Cover Company this side of Detroit.

Paul Reimenschneider the owner employs nine people and his congenial manager "Easy" Ed Jones is always on hand to handle any problems his customers may have. The Reimenschneider name will be remembered by many as the Reimenschneider Brothers were Dodge Dealers for many years and associated with many other businesses.

Paul and his wife Sally Ann are the proud parents of Kurt, Sally Ann, David and Susan their home is located at 3630 Burning Tree Drive in Bloomfield Hills.

The World Mourns a Champion of Peace

Destiny: Greatness

BY UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

On a bitterly cold and snowy day in January 1961, when he was inaugurated 35th president of the United States, John Fitzgerald Kennedy sounded a call to action that in many ways summed up his own remarkable career.

"Let the word go forth from this time and place, to friend and foe alike," he said, "that the torch has been passed to a new generation of Americans — born in this century, tempered by war, disciplined by a cold and bitter peace."

Kennedy was all these, and he bore the torch of world leadership in a society where the old order was changing fast.

On that January day, no man had ever flown in space. On that day Negroes in southern cities such as Jackson and Birmingham were not yet demonstrating.

NOT AS CLOSE

On that day the world had not come consciously close to nuclear destruction as it did in the great Cuban crisis of 1962.

"Sure, it's a big job," Kennedy once said. "But I don't know anybody who can do it better than I can. I'm going to be in for four years. It isn't going to be so bad. You've got time to think — and besides, the pay is good."

He later found out—and conceded—that it was a bigger job than he originally believed. But it is most unlikely that he ever once wavered in the belief that no one could handle it as well as he could.

To think otherwise would have been a negation of his whole life.

IRISH IMMIGRANT

The presidency of John Fitzgerald Kennedy was born in the fierce pride of an Irish immigrant family. It was carefully nurtured in the training stages by a multimillionaire father, and brought to fruition by the man himself through a distinguished career in the House and Senate and on the tricky campaign trails of America.

The man who took the troubled U. S. helm was born at his family's Brookline, Mass., home outside Boston May 28, 1917.

He had an older brother, Joseph P. Kennedy Jr., who was killed in World War II. After John's birth, four girls, Rosemary, Kathleen, Eunice and Patricia, followed before the third son, Robert F. Kennedy, was born in 1925.

He became attorney general in his brother's administration. After Robert, there was another girl, Jean, and then Edward F., the last of nine children, born in 1932. The youngest of the family continued the tradition of successful politics by being elected U.S. senator from Massachusetts in 1962 at the age of 30.

POLITICAL ATMOSPHERE

The family grew up in an atmosphere of politics, fired by two grandfathers whose scurried as Irish immigrants from the east Boston shanties of potato famine refugees to lace certain respectability underscored the American dream.

The two energetic grandfathers who put long-lasting political steam in the family were:

Patrick J. Kennedy, born in Boston in 1862, 12 years after his father fled impoverished Ireland. Patrick was a saloon keeper and ward politician who prospered, became a political power in the city and sent his son Joe to Boston Latin School and Harvard.

John F. Fitzgerald, born in Boston in 1863, first native American of Irish descent to become

COURTED 7 YEARS

Joe Kennedy, Patrick's son, courted Rose Fitzgerald for seven years and married her in 1914 at a ceremony in the private chapel of William Cardinal O'Connell.

Properly married and a large family on the way, Joe Kennedy set out to be a millionaire before he was 35—a goal which he met handily after becoming the country's youngest bank president at 25.

While the elder Kennedy rammed his way to the top, he demanded the same performance from his sons. Being unable to make the presidency, himself, there was no doubt in the minds of many contemporaries that Joe Kennedy wanted Joe Jr. to become president.

HAD JOE JR. SURVIVED THE WAR, THE ELDER

Kennedy might have made his mark at the White House with his firstborn. As it was, Jack was relatively in Joe's vigorous shadow as he followed him through school and college.

WRITING CAREER

Quieter, more introspective than his brother, John learned toward a career in writing or teaching. Perhaps this would have been his life if his older brother had lived for the political career he intended — and which his father intended for him.

In fact, some years later it was John who said, of his own political career, "If I had been killed, it would have been Bobby."

Jack was luckier in surviving his wartime ordeal dumped in the South Pacific near New Georgia Island in August 1943, he and his crew were rescued after spending many hours in the water and five days on a tiny island.

After the war, Kennedy dabbled in Boston congressional seat being vacated by the incumbent. Only 29, he campaigned hard, talked pocketbook issues and won the nomination over a field of nine other Democrats.

DEFEATED FOR

Running in a normally Democratic district, he easily defeated his Republican opponent in the election.

In Congress, Kennedy kept the home political fences in good repair. He was identified with the liberals but was viewed more as an independent than a doctrinaire Democrat.

He generally supported President Harry S. Truman's domestic policies and the Greek-Turkish aid bill and the Marshall Plan as well.

But in 1948, he was blaming White House and State Department for the loss of China to communism.

ORGANIZATION

By 1948, Kennedy was beginning to seek statewide recognition in Massachusetts with an eye to running against Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. in 1952. For the campaign against Lodge, he again relied on a personal political organization as he had done when he first ran for the House.

Lodge lost his Senate seat to Kennedy while President Eisenhower carried the state by more than 200,000 votes.

Kennedy was married Sept. 12, 1953 to Jacqueline Bouvier, then 23, at a fashionable wedding at Newport, R.I. Like Kennedy, she

Johnson Part of JFK Team

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lyndon B. Johnson, coming into the presidency on the assassination death of John F. Kennedy yesterday, enjoyed Kennedy's high esteem and confidence.

From old political foes — within the Democratic party — they became a close working team.

Johnson tried in 1960 for the presidential nomination. When Kennedy won, Johnson accepted second place on the Democratic ticket.

Accepting, too, the Kennedy leadership, he became extraordinarily active in behalf of the Kennedy policies. This activity included work for the civil rights program. Kennedy laid down — setting that lessened Johnson's popularity in the South — and there was some talk this year that Johnson might be bumped from the ticket next year.

But on Oct. 31, Kennedy was asked whether, if he ran next year, he would again want Johnson as the vice-presidential nominee, and whether he expected Johnson to be on the ticket. He replied:

"Yes, to both of these questions. That is correct."

Johnson is a former Democratic senator from Texas, best known for the vigorous, aggressive way he handled the job of Democratic leader of the Senate before he quit to become vice-president.

What direction may the Johnson administration take?

In one of the numerous speeches he made in recent years — this one in Washington April 28 — Johnson offered a broad view of what he thought the Democrats should attempt in next year's presidential campaign and thereafter.

He said the Democrats must demonstrate that they are a party of action offering solutions for the new kinds of problems brought about by population increases and concentration, and by the lengthening of life expectancy.

"We have new capacities," he said. "We have new potentials. We stand at the edge of a new era of human progress in our own country and in the world."

"At this decisive moment of opportunity, the party of the opposition offers only the slogan 'America cannot do it.' America cannot afford the programs that we need."

He called for a full and enthusiastic support of Democrats everywhere for Kennedy's foreign and domestic programs.

"The American majority is constructive — and our party

K Conveys Sadness Over Loss

MOSCOW (AP) — Dressed in black, Premier Khrushchev

drove to the U.S. Embassy today to personally convey his "deep sadness" on the assassination of President Kennedy.

The Soviet premier, accompanied by Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, visited the embassy shortly after sending a telegram to President Johnson.

Khrushchev, who met Kennedy in Vienna in 1961, rushed back to Moscow to offer official condolences and to keep close touch of government affairs during the change of the presidency in Washington.

The Soviet premier was in Kiev earlier this week.

"The death of President Kennedy is a heavy blow to whom ever the cause of peace is dear," Khrushchev said.

TELEGRAMS OF CONDOLENCES

He and his wife, Nina, sent telegrams to Mrs. Kennedy expressing their condolences at her husband's death.

The Soviet premier signed a book that was placed in a hall of the embassy residence by Ambassador Foy D. Kohler for condolence signing by diplomats. He then entered the embassy for a brief conversation with Kohler.

The Soviet officials were accompanied by two uniformed body guards, one of them a major. It was the first time that uniformed guards have been seen accompanying Khrushchev, who is normally guarded by plainclothesmen.

Near the book was a picture of Kennedy with a black mourning band across one corner. The photograph was signed by Kennedy to Kohler — "with high esteem and warm personal regards."

TWO MARINES STOOD AT ATTENTION before the book. Nearby was an American flag, draped with black crepe.

Gromyko had telephoned Kohler at midnight last night at the embassy residence. Spodkovsky, to express his respects he said that "Official condolences will be conveyed later at the highest level."

Leaders of Many Nations Bow in Grief for 'a Friend'

By The Associated Press

Word of President Kennedy's assassination struck the world's capitals with shattering impact, leaving heads of state and the man in the street stunned and grief-stricken.

While messages of condolence poured into the White House from presidents, premiers and crowned heads, the little people of many lands reacted with numb disbelief.

Pubs in London and cafes in Paris fell silent, as the news came over radio and television.

In Moscow, a Russian girl walked weeping along the street.

At U.N. headquarters in New York, delegates of 111 nations bowed their heads in a moment of silence.

SOUND SIRENS

In Buenos Aires, newspapers sounded sirens reserved for signs of the utmost gravity.

Minister Douglas-Home sent condolences and Sir Winston Churchill brandished the slaying a monstrous act.

The loss to the United States and to the world is incalculable," Sir Winston declared.

"Those who come after Mr. Kennedy must strive the more to achieve the ideals of world peace and human happiness and unity to which his presidency was dedicated."

VERSE MESSAGE

Douglas-Home issued this verse statement: "The prime minister has learned with the most profound shock and horror of the death by assassination of the President of the United States."

France's President Charles de Gaulle issued a brief tribute:

"President Kennedy died like a soldier, under fire, for his duty and in the service of his country. In the name of the French people, a friend always of the American people, I salute this great example and this great memory."

In the Soviet Union, Moscow radio broke into a broadcast to announce that the President had been shot. It then began playing funeral music.

Pope Paul VI, who kept vigil at his Vatican quarters from the time he heard the first news of the attack, prayed for the President's soul when word of the end came. New York's Francis Cardinal Spellman, in Rome for the Ecumenical Council, said he was deeply grieved.

ADLAI GRIEVES

Adlai E. Stevenson, chief U.S. delegate at the United Nations,

said that the tragedy was "beyond instant comprehension."

"All of us who knew him will bear the grief of his death to the day of ours," said Stevenson. "And all men everywhere who love peace and justice and freedom will bow their heads."

U.N. delegates clustered near radios and jammed the offices of the news services to get the latest word on the President's death. Many diplomats had

U.S. Newspapers Decry a 'Blemish on America'

By The Associated Press

The nation's newspapers today expressed the people's grief at the assassination of President Kennedy, and said the murder was "a blemish on American civilization."

Editorial comments included: Richmond Times-Dispatch: "The assassination, 'coming as it does as the latest in a series of violent deaths of heads of state, is a disgrace to the United States and a blot on the good name of this country.'"

Indianapolis Star: "We never believed that any American could stoop to the dirty job of murder of the President. John F. Kennedy always stood for what is fine and good in the American tradition."

A MARTYR

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: "The President is a martyr to American democracy. His murder is a blemish on American civilization."

St. Louis Post-Dispatch: "The assassination is 'a national tragedy of incalculable proportions. What is wrong with the U.S. that it can provide the environment for such an act? There is a sickness in the nation when political differences can not be accepted and settled in the democratic way. Our democracy itself is in hazard.'"

Baltimore Sun: Yesterday's first shock of horror gives way this morning to a depth of sorrow beyond expression. There is, the tragedy of great tasks unfinished, of the plow stopped part way down the furrow, the house left standing in frame-work, the story checked mid-sentence. No one can now say what Mr. Kennedy's accomplishments would have been had he lived."

JFK Courageously Faced Nuclear War, Racial Strife

WASHINGTON (U) — In almost three years as President of the mightiest nation on earth, John F. Kennedy was beset by problems the likes of which few men in history have faced — domestic turmoil over the race issue and economics, turmoil in Europe, Southeast Asia, Africa, South America.

These were troublesome years. He never found a panacea, never conceded there were pat answers to the times or the problems.

But whatever else he did, Kennedy will be known for so long as Americans write history as the President who faced squarely the threat of thermonuclear war over the presence of Soviet atomic missiles in Cuba.

That was in October 1962. He warned the Soviet Union — and the world — that there were matters over which the United States would fight, and the removal of those missiles from Cuba was one of them. In the end, the missiles were removed.

TEST-BAN TREATY

But while the threat of nuclear war hung over the entire Northern Hemisphere, a treaty to ban atomic explosions in the atmosphere was also pushed by Kennedy to an ultimate agreement with the Soviet Union.

His guidance of the United States through these turbulent years included, of course, the fiasco at the Bay of Pigs in Cuba when a band of refugees attempted to force their way back into their homeland with sparse, but barely concealed, U.S. support.

That was shortly after Kennedy took office in January 1961. Although the operation had been planned long before he assumed office, Kennedy publicly took the blame for the failure.

And in the aftermath of that failure he exerted every effort — however hidden — to rescue those captured by the Cuban Communists during the invasion. They were finally brought out in 1962 after payment of a $53 million ransom in medical goods.

It was Kennedy who pronounced what came to be known as the "Alliance for Progress," a Latin America from economic disaster by helping them help themselves.

Whether it worked successfully is something else again, but he tried.

By executive order, Kennedy established a Peace Corps to aid undeveloped nations and Congress appropriated money for its existence.

He was confronted with a Russian threat over the presence of the Western allies in Berlin — and over access to that beleaguered city. He told the Russians in 1962 and again in 1963 that the United States was in Berlin by right and intended to stay.

He committed the United States prestige to a settlement of the Communist problem in Laos — and finally won a truce, however temporary.

FESTERING SORE SPOT

In Viet Nam, he inherited a festering sore spot in the Communist attempt to take over that nation, key to domination of Southeast Asia.

In Viet Nam, he committed not only U.S. prestige, but nearly 17,000 U.S. servicemen in an effort to stem the Communist tide.

This effort was hindered by the recalcitrance of the government of Ngo Dinh Diem to institute reforms for the sake of the people. Just this month, Kennedy had seen that government overthrown in a military coup and an easing of internal tensions to permit more vigorous prosecution of the war against Communism.

In Europe, Kennedy saw a weakening of the Western alliance and the rise of fears that perhaps the United States would abandon Europe in a time of nuclear crisis.

OFFERED SHIPS

These fears he sought to allay by proposing an international nuclear force. He even offered the use of U.S. nuclear missile ships manned by an international force.

He saw a revolt in Africa — the Congo especially — against the colonialism of European powers — and he sided with the wish of men to be free of foreign masters.

In the Congo, at least, he has seen a government rise in the wake of U.S. support which gave promise of stability and which, even as he left for Dallas, had broken with the Soviet Union.

Kennedy followed the United States' efforts to conquer space closely.

He had expressed hope that the United States would land on the moon by 1970. He suggested that Russia and the United States make a joint expedition, but Russia rejected the idea.

But it was on the domestic scene that Kennedy outraged a good many Americans — while others applauded.

CASTIGATED STEEL

In one of the bluntest, most bitter news conferences on record he castigated the steel industry for an across-the-board price increase.

That was in April 1962, and Kennedy decried the steel price move as undermining his effort to expand the economy. The price hike was withdrawn though it left some scars.

But the problem which plagued him the most on the domestic scene was the racial issue — the effort by Negroes to integrate themselves into all aspects of American life.

There were protest marches through the South and riots, picketing and riots in the North.

WORST TIME

For Kennedy, the worst time in this aspect came in September 1962 when a young Negro sought admission to the University of Mississippi on the strength of a federal court order that his entrance could no longer be denied.

There were subsequent riots and bombings in Birmingham over integration, and federal marshals and guardsmen were used to integrate the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa.

For Kennedy, the South was a political thorn; and the race issue was becoming one throughout the nation.

When he died, the administration civil rights bill was having tough sledding in Congress; indeed, had almost brought work to a standstill.

PURCHASING POWER

Stalled along with the civil rights proposals was Kennedy's proposal to cut taxes by $11 billion on the grounds that consumers needed more purchasing power to stimulate the economy and forestall a recession.

Kennedy clearly had concluded his political fences needed mending. He had just undertaken a swing through Florida and was embarked on one through Texas when his life and career came to a tragic end.

Dallas Asks: Why Here?

DALLAS, Tex. (U) — AS some of the shock wore off, sorrow and anger deepened today in this city where President Kennedy was cut down by an assassin's bullet.

Over and over its citizens asked: "Why did it have to happen? Why did it have to happen here?"

"I thought Texas had grown out of its wild days, but I don't know," said a doorman at a downtown hotel. "Maybe Texans are actually different."

"God, what a town," said a man parked in an automobile. "I've lived here about three months, but I'm going to look for a job in another place. He wiped his eyes with the sleeve of a woolen sports shirt."

Dallas stores closed as the tragic news floated downtown from the edge of the business district where Kennedy was shot.

FELL SILENT

Pubs in London and cafes in Paris fell silent. In Moscow a Russian girl walked weeping along the street. In Vatican City Pope Paul VI prayed for the soul of the dead President.

Scars of past political strife were forgotten as old foes joined with old allies and the three living former presidents in a unity of grief.

Richard M. Nixon, who lost the presidency to Kennedy in 1960 in a razor-thin race, said in New York: "The assassination of the President is a terrible tragedy for the nation. Mrs. Nixon and I have sent a personal message expressing our deepest sympathy to the members of the family in this hour of sorrow."

GOLDWATER SYMPATHY

Another old political opponent, Republican Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, considered by many the front-runner in the race for the 1964 GOP presidential nomination, learned of Kennedy's death at a Chicago airport and telephoned his Washington office: "The President's death is a profound loss to the nation and the free world."

Tragedy Shocks, Stuns Residents of Michigan

By The Associated Press

Michigan residents went into mourning for President John F. Kennedy today, prayerfully and "with a sense of helplessness and despair."

Flags were lowered to half staff almost immediately after reported. And citizens all over Michigan asked, "Why? How could this happen in the United States?"

From government officials and men on the street, the reaction was one of sadness, bitterness, sympathy and even fear.

"The events of Friday are uniquely the American tragedy of the century. President Kennedy truly gave his life for his country," said former Gov. John Swainson.

GOVERNOR ROMNEY

Gov. George Romney heard the news at the Midwestern Governors Conference at Omaha, Neb. and promptly expressed Michigan's heartfelt grief and sympathy to the Kennedy family.

His voice breaking, Lt. Gov. T. John Leinski said "He was a great President with a certain quality that was out of the ordinary."

Religious leaders of all faiths deplored the assassination.

Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., told a newsmen, "There isn't any word combination that catches this. I think we're all burdened with a sense of helplessness and despair."

DAY'S SHOCK

"No words can describe the shock of this day," said Rep. Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich.

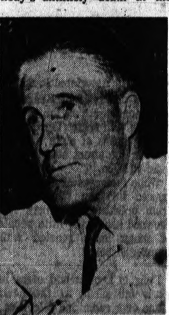

In St. Peter and Paul Academy at Joliet, high school students in one class spontaneously began reciting the rosary after learning the news.

Foreign students at Grand Haven High School joined their American classmates in expressing grief.

At Burt School in Detroit, one girl reported that teachers wept as they told the pupils what had happened. Pupils wept, too.

On behalf of the Michigan AFL-CIO, president August Scholle said: "President Kennedy's untimely death at the hards of an assassin is one of the world's most terrible tragedies."

Former Michigan Gov. G. Mennen Williams, now assistant secretary of state for African affairs, said:

"No man in recent times so affected the lives and aspirations of the people of our country and the world."

Michigan Republican National Committee member John B. Martin, Mo. He said: "Every man and woman in the country must be grieved beyond measure at this frightful incident."

Joy Is Changed to Grief at Family Summer Home

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (U)

Plans for a joyous, typically American, Thanksgiving Day reunion for the Kennedy family changed to grief today.

The family's most illustrious member was slain by a lurking assassin yesterday in Dallas, Tex.

President John F. Kennedy never again will gaze on, swim in, or sail on the waters of Vineyard Sound he loved so much.

Neither will Caroline, almost 6, nor John Jr., approaching 3, ride the store for candy with Daddy and other neighborhood youngsters aboard a little electric car.

NO LONGER

No longer will smiling crowds await the presidential jet which landed, almost every summer weekend, at nearby Otis Air Force Base.

No longer will Secret Service men and extra state police and town police patrol the area to afford the large Kennedy family's privacy.

The assassinated President's sister Eunice and brother Edward flew in last night to be with their bereaved parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy.

All but the ailing father will go to Washington today for funeral ceremonies.

CRIPPLED

The father, former U.S. ambassador to the Court of St. James, has been crippled some two years from a stroke.

Edward is a Massachusetts Senator, holding the seat his late brother once occupied.

Eunice is the wife of Sargent Schriver, head of the Peace Corps founded by her brother, the country's youngest President.

The town of Barnstable, of which Hyannis Port is a village, grieved today as much, probably more, than some communities.

For Jack Kennedy grew up here summers and none have a poor word for him.

The permanent residents voted against him, 2-1 — 4,515 to 2,783 — in the 1960 Presidential election. But those who voted against him did so because they are Republicans.

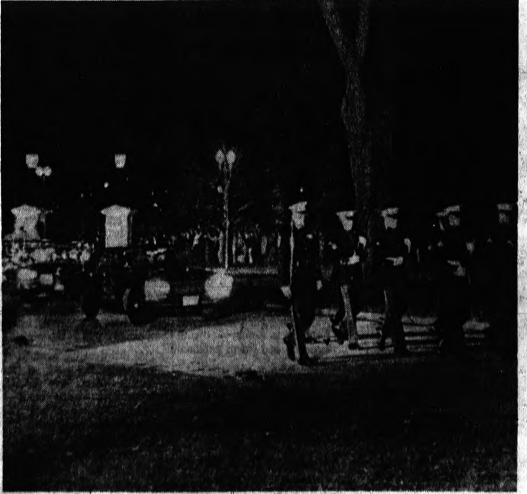

Born-and-bred Cape Codders generally are taciturn folk. But they are kindly and charitable in their quiet way. As one elderly man said: "I voted against him, but he was a fine man, a fine boy and he was our President. Who, how could anyone do that?"

bullet can etop this inexorable march of human rights; no murder, however tragic, can make it falter. In death as in life, the words and spirit of this our most nearly martyred president will lead the nation ever closer toward fulfillment of the ideals of domestic brotherhood and international peace by which his administration has been guided from the start."

Philadelphia Bulletin: "We pride ourselves that we are a people who have accepted the law of democracy; that we thrust out our differences through open discussion and accept the verdict of the ballot. But in our pride, we forget perhaps that there are those among us who do not accept this law. People who cannot accept honest debate and who resort to the gun as the final arbiter. We have had a bitter lesson."

TAKE CONSOLATION

New York Herald Tribune—"Americans take consolation from the fact that the assassins of their presidents have, in nearly every case, been crazed individuals. The heat of normal politics has its reflex on the lunatic fringe. There will, doubtless, be memorials to John F. Kennedy. The best one that the nation could create, however, would be the thorough investigation of the causes of the crime, the resolute determination to see to it that never again should under be re-steered around that might lead to such an evil blaze."

New York Times: "All of us — from the country's highest leaders to the humblest citizen — all of us are still in a state of shock from this stunning blow, that even now seems unreal in its grotesque horror. John F. Kennedy died in and for the belief of those human rights to which this nation has always been committed. No madman's

During his absence, he wrote "Profiles in Courage," which won a Pulitzer Prize for biography. It was a series of essays on acts of political courage by senators.

In strenuous campaigning for reelection to the Senate in 1962 and for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1960, Kennedy gave no evidence that his back ailment still bothered him.

Kennedy won his first burst of national attention at the 1960 Democratic national convention. An active candidate for second place on the ticket, Kennedy lost it by a whisker to Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee in a convention floor battle packed with drama.

LAUNCHING DAP—In 1958, Kennedy easily won reelection to the Senate and then a prized seat on the foreign relations committee.

He also was a member of the special Senate committee set up to investigate racketeering practices in labor-management relations. His younger brother, Robert, was counsel for the same committee.

As a candidate for the 1960 presidential nomination, Kennedy was criticized on grounds that he was too young and inexperienced. But his biggest problem was the religious issues which stirred some Democrats to recall the 1928 defeat of Catholic Alfred E. Smith.

MET HEAD-ON

Kennedy met the issue head-on, declaring his support for the constitutional provision requiring separation of church and state.

After taking an oath to support the Constitution, he said, a president who took orders from the pope would be guilty of a crime and subject to impeachment.

His toughest convention position came from the forces of Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas. The Kennedy organization was too much for old pro Johnson, however, and the Texan accepted second place on the Kennedy ticket.

There were times when his policies seemed as middle-of-the-road as those of his predecessor, Dwight D. Eisenhower. This was highly annoying to the advanced liberals of the party.

There were major administration accomplishments legislatively, but not one was gained without extensive effort and close margins. Relations with Congress were not helped when the Democrats scarcely held their own in the 1962 mid-term elections.

ECONOMY ISSUE
During his early years, the President devoted most of his domestic efforts to the state of the U.S. economy.

The state of the economy, he felt, was the nation's foremost problem.

But this feeling went out the window in the spring of 1963 when the Negro population exploded in demonstrations and riots which became so grave that the President called the movements a threat to public order.

From that moment on, President John Fitzgerald Kennedy brought all the force of his powerful personality to bear in a continuing effort to secure equal rights for all peoples of the United States. . . . just as he had sought universal freedom and peace for all mankind.

HAPPIER DAYS—The late President Kennedy, his wife, Jacqueline, and their children, John Jr. and Caroline, leave the Kennedy home in Palm Beach, Fla., last April 14 for a private Easter service.

Leaders of Many Lands Grieve for Good Friend

tears in their eyes as they trooped into the assembly hall for a minute of silent tribute.

People stood outside the headquarters building watching mutely as the flags of 111 nations were struck and the U.N. banner lowered to half-staff.

LATINS SHOCKED

From Latin America, where Kennedy will be remembered for his visits and his Alliance for Progress program, the reaction was similar—first shock, then grief.

Venezuela's President Romulo Betancourt was speechless when informed. He cabled condolences to Washington, then later tried to read the message to newsmen. Midway, Betancourt broke into tears, unable to speak.

Betancourt's message said that, "With his death the United States lost one of its best chiefs of state it has had in this century."

Employees at two of Rio de Janeiro's strikebound television stations returned to their jobs to transmit the sad news.

POPULAR IN BRAZIL

Kennedy, a Roman Catholic, was especially popular in Brazil, a predominately Roman Catholic country.

President Joao Goulart interrupted his participation in a public ceremony at Niteroi to dictate a message of condolences from the Brazilian people to Mrs. Kennedy and Americans.

Sirens screamed in Buenos Aires signalling news of utmost gravity. The sirens are owned by two newspapers. A spokesman for Argentine President Arturo Illia said that he was "painfully moved" by the news. Illia canceled all his appointments for the day.

ASSASSINATION WEAPON—Dallas detective J. C. Day holds aloft the bolt action rifle with telescopic sight which was used by the assassin of President Kennedy yesterday.

today is serving that constructive," he said.

HEART ATTACK

Johnson, 55 years old, suffered a severe heart attack in 1955, but came back strong and is one of the most vigorous politicians ever on the Washington scene.

As Senate majority leader, he was all over the political scene, but some thought he would have to slow down when he became vice-president—ordinarily just a ceremonial job.

But he took on so many chores he needed three offices from which to operate—in the capital, in the new Senate office building and in the White House. He kept 17 staffers hopping.

At 6 feet 3, weighing close to 200 pounds, Johnson has always been supercharged with energy.

HIS CHARACTER

He has been called self-centered and considerate; a humanitarian and power-hungry; a shrewd opportunist and a political genius; tough and yet vulnerable; vain, friendly, sensitive, flamboyant.

Friends and others who watched him on his rise over the decades agreed that he was just flexible enough, or human enough, to have been all of those things at one time or another.

Johnson once said of himself: "I am a free man, an American, a United States senator, and a Democrat, in that order."

LIBERAL CONSERVATIVE

"I am also a liberal, a conservative, a Texan, a taxpayer, a rancher, a business man, a consumer, a parent, a voter and not so young as I used to be nor as old as I expect to be—and I am all those things in no fixed order."

Arthur Edson, Associated Press writer who has specialized on politics and personalities, once commented that a person's opinion of Johnson would be swayed by where that person met him. He wrote, on the basis of personal knowledge of Johnson in all his phases:

Prayers Go to Johnson

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—A group of executives of President Lyndon B. Johnson's church, Disciples of Christ, telegraphed him their best wishes and prayers today.

Executives of the International Convention of Christian Churches, who were in session here when he was sworn into office, sent "their expression of confidence and assurances that you are in their prayers."

The church executives also sent a telegram of sympathy to Mrs. Kennedy.

JFK Eucharist Offered

DALLAS (UPI)—A Requiem Eucharist "for the repose of the soul" will be offered for President Kennedy, the Rev. C. Avery Mason, Bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Dallas, said yesterday.

"There's Johnson in the Senate, buttonholing a colleague, talking, cajoling, arguing, persuading."

EVERY ISSUE

He usually knows who's for and who's against him on almost every issue, and he quickly moves in and tries to convince those who are not on his side.

"Johnson isn't the world's greatest speaker. He is at his best when speaking casually and humorously.

Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon was once asked about Johnson. He replied, "You should never count Lyndon out. He is one of the ablest political craftsmen of our time."

SORROW—Grief masks former President Dwight D. Eisenhower's face as he strides from a United Nations committee meeting room after learning of the death of President John F. Kennedy.

WEDDING DAY—Democratic Sen. John F. Kennedy, Massachusetts, leaves the church with his bride, the former Jacqueline Bouvier, in Newport, R.I., Sept. 12, 1953.

FRUSTRATION—A Secret Service agent strains in frustration, pounding his fist on the presidential auto, moments after the Chief Executive slumped to the floor of the car, mortally wounded. Mrs. Kennedy leaped up at the sound of the shot (right of agent).

background for LIVING

PLAYROOM'S SPACIOUS—Two big outside double doors lead into this extra-large playroom on the top level. It isn't often that full-sized pool table stands unused, or that the big electric organ is not being played. The five Wright children and their friends find this the BEST room in the house. Guests don't linger in the formal living room but head for this informal play area.

Pontiac Press Photo by Edward R. Noble

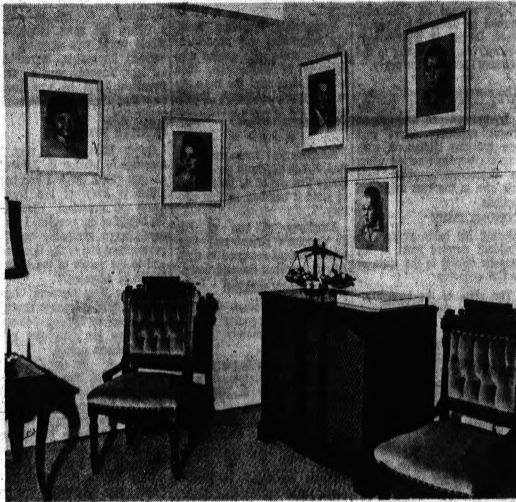

ROOM FOR PLAY—Eight-year-old Kathy and Douglas, 6, roll their bikes up the long driveway to get a good start down, around and into the open garage during these fall days. The house is keyed for fun for both children and adults, and there is never a dull moment in the Wright household. Situated on 2½ acres of hills and woods—what better place for growing up and living.

ALL PINK AND WHITE—Eight-year-old Kathy's room resembles frothy spun sugar candy. The unique and extensive use of white fringe on the canopy and curtains is a delightful contrast to the solid pink curtains and pink-and-white striped wallpaper.

FAMILY CORNER—In one corner of the big third-level living room are soft lifelike water colors of the Wrights' five handsome children. The entire room decor was keyed to blend in with these paintings and the overall effect is one of personal individuality.

Wright's' Home Is Full of Fun

By REBA HEINTZELMAN
Pontiac Press Home Editor

Couples who have more than two or three children romping all over the place sometimes become confused trying to provide various activities for every age.

Not so with the Bruce A. Wrights of Tator Court, Bloomfield Township. Their 2½ acres on the edge of Sodon Lake are packed full of fun both inside and out, every season of the year.

When the walls of the rambling house began to close in on the growing family, the Wrights' brought in an architect who doubled the size of the house.

A big porch was enclosed to make a cozy light room with plate glass windows from floor to ceiling.

Because the house was started on a hill, construction "went to the east" up a higher incline so that every outside door opens onto a patio or porch.

The new playroom measures 30 by 30 feet and the massive fireplace fits just right near a corner of the room. A black bear rug lies contentedly in front of the hearth. Practical, earthy-green burlap draperies with a matching valance swing around three sides of the plate-glassed room.

Here, the Wright children, Douglas, 6, Kathy, 8, Ruth, 17, and Dorothy, 19, bring their friends for a game of pool, community singing and hamburger roasts. The two older girls are accomplished organists.

In the winter, groups of all ages ice skate, sled down the steep hills onto the frozen lake and broil steaks in the outdoor barbecues.

INSIDE BREEZEWAY—As the Wright family grew, so did the house. This inside breezeway was formerly a porch. Because the contour of the land was higher, six steps were installed to the new recreation room and a planter installed under the windows along the entire roadside wall. This makes a quiet place for playing cards or a quick coffee break.

GREAT-GRANDMA'S TREASURES—The pride and joy of Mrs. Wright's home is the newly upholstered velvet furniture inherited from her great-grandmother. This room is three steps down from the dining area, and overlooks sparkling Sodon Lake. Four chairs in this room are a rich rose color and is a dramatic contrast to the royal velvet love seat.

It's Not Too Late to Do Remodeling

So, you put off that remodeling project all summer and here it is winter again and nothing done. You may be lucky that you delayed, one building expert believes.

The reason: you can get better service from builders and it is easier to get skilled help during the winter months than during the summer rush season.

Any indoor remodeling such as converting a waste attic space into a quiet retreat, a basement into a playroom, or an old style porch into a family room, can all be done during the winter months.

The attic space is sometimes rather easy to convert. The stud walls are generally in place and the floor joists. If the attic is well lighted with dormer windows, remodeling during the winter time can be a cinch.

PLASTIC SHEETS

If you have to cut out a space for windows, this can still be done by using heavy plastic sheets around the opening.

Attic remodeling steps are simple. Put down shipplap for a sub flooring because it is easy to handle in a small area.

Then put down your floor but be sure to use deadening felt in between the subfloor and the regular floor. West coast hemlock or Douglas fir flooring is ideal for this use and it finishes nicely.

Test Water Quality

If you get your water from a private water system, it's a good idea to have it tested regularly.

NEW, PRACTICAL — The cutaway design makes it possible for participants to sit closer to the play. It eliminates stretching when you play the dummy hand in bridge. The protruding corners give each player more arm room with adequate and out of the way space for ash trays, drinks, score cards and the like.

The pattern for building the card table pictured also shows how to make a permanent checkerboard on the top for you chess and checker fans. This table was built of birch plywood and has folding legs for easy storage.

The pattern for building the table is full size. You need only trace the pattern on wood, then saw it out.

After that, you install the folding legs and you are ready to take on all comers for a fast game of cards or checkers.

To obtain the full-size card table pattern number 365 send 50 cents in coin, check or money order to:

Get That Furnace Ready for Winter

Now's the time to make certain the furnace is in working order. If you haven't had it done yet, get a service man to check it over.

If you have a furnace filter, make sure you start out with a clean one, and have a spare on hand.

Clean warm air registers—dirt cuts down on heating efficiency.

Enhance Pewter Items

To dramatize and complement that pewter saucer or tray, and to make sure that it shows to its fullest advantage, top it with a pewter-white Chinese evergreen plant in a new red clay pot.

CONTEMPORARY STYLING—A free and uncluttered exterior facade is in perfect harmony with the open floor plan of this elegant little two or three bedroom home. The breezeway between house and garage could be screened or enclosed if desired.

This Little Ranch Home Ideal for Small Family

This stylish little ranch-type home was designed especially for modest-sized families with modest-sized incomes, but its contemporary design and straightforward room arrangement make it ideal for two other uses as well.

The house would make an excellent second home—a lakeside or mountain retreat suitable for any time of year and any type of climate.

Or it would be ideal for retirement; not so large it would burden a housekeeper, but with plenty of room when the grandchildren come to visit.

A key feature of the design is an optional wall which would convert it from a two-bedroom to a three-bedroom home.

COULD BE DEN

If a master bedroom and a small second bedroom is all that a family requires, the wall still could be built and the additional room converted into a den.

The house is design H-4 in the weekly series, a product of architect William G. Chirgots.

Its basic area is 1,000 square feet not counting the breezeway and garage; dimensions are 32 feet 10 inches deep by 50 feet 4 inches wide including the 14-foot breezeway, and the angled garage projects another 16 feet.

The architect's treatment of the garage and breezeway deserve special mention.

MAIN FLOOR LEVEL

The breezeway is at the level of the main floor, a few steps above grade level, and can be screened or enclosed as an extension of the living area.

Placed at an angle, the garage adds interest to the contemporary facade of the house, becoming a part of the design rather than merely an appendage.

The free and uncluttered exterior of the house is in perfect harmony with the open living pattern within—a pattern characterized by maximum use of every square foot of floor space.

A cathedral ceiling, which follows the roof line, increases the feeling of spaciousness in the combination living room and dining area.

PICTURE WINDOWS

This is further enhanced by floor-to-ceiling four-sectional picture windows with bottom ventilating hinged sashes at the rear of the living room.

The kitchen is located at the front of the house, an ideal arrangement which puts both the main entry foyer and a side service entrance only a few steps away.

An excellent feature and fine example of Chirgots' space-saving skill is the kitchen serving counter. It provides handy access to the dining room, works additional counter top, gives area, and can be used as a built-in breakfast bar.

Another benefit of the open serving counter is that it permits a view of the backyard directly across the living room.

FRONT VIEW

The front yard, of course, is visible through the window above the double sink.

The bedroom area is nicely laid out with an abundance of closet space, excellent ventilation and just enough hall space to permit easy circulation.

The house contains a full basement—but it isn't just another dreary cellar; far from it.

This basement has sliding glass windows above grade level, allowing plenty of natural light and air so that it becomes, in effect, bonus living area.

TO TASTE

The area can be developed to the owner's taste for recreation, storage and laundry facilities.

The garage is single-car width, but it also has built-in storage space because of its extra length. A separate door at the rear is handy for putting away garden tools, lawn chairs and the like.

A cedar-lined closet does not require any finishing. An occasional dusting is the only maintenance required.

Professionals Speed Moving

Pack Items Safely, With Little Disrupting

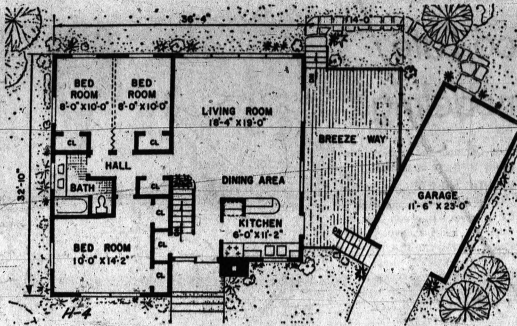

To pack or not to pack is a question that bothers most people faced with the job of moving, bag and baggage, from one home to another. Should you undertake it, or have the mover pack for you?

Packing is for many families a time-consuming, exhausting and messy job and it may well be worth the additional cost if left to skilled movers.

Professional movers will pack your items with speed, safety and a minimum of household disruption, which can be important when there are several children or a working wife. For the average household, the packers arrive on moving day.

This is possible because of advances that have been made in recent years in moving techniques. The packer arrives with his own work table equipped with rolls of specialized wrapping material in various sizes.

China, glass and other fragile items are packed in corrugated paper and interliners and then stapled for additional protection. Barrels and cartons are designed for specific items.

FLOOR PLAN—The basic area of this house is a modest 1,100 square feet. Optional wall divides the two family bedrooms, or else designates one of the rooms as a den. Basement is located beneath the entire living area of the house.

It Insulates, Beautifies

New Finish More Than Wallcover

Beautiful embroideries of silk and moire delicately soften the rich color tones and prints of a new budget-priced vinyl wall-covering.

Priced much lower than conventional vinyl and plastic coated wallpapers, the new decorating medium introduced by Richo Inc., New York, combines rich surface luster with outstanding resistance to scuffing and soiling.

The new Richtex materials have all the values associated with a new Union Carbide vinyl film—it's scrubbable and rescrubbable, color-fast, and resistant to scuffing, mildew and wear.

Solid or party-colored patterns in cheerful striped, floral and figured prints are made to create congenial surroundings for kitchen, living, dining, bed or bathrooms, hallways, or nursery.

Textures add plush, deep tones and rich sheen to the home decorator's selection for creating the right atmosphere in every room. A wide choice of 114 separate wall coverings is style-keyed to 35 patterns and 114 colors; in many delightful combinations.

Do-it-yourselfers can quickly become "professionals" at handling the pliable and tear-resistant vinyl films by Union Carbide. They are backed by a sturdy wallpaper stock to prevent stretching or wrinkling. No taping of painted or paper walls is required prior to hanging the new Richtex with an inexpensive vinyl paste adhesive.

The pre-trimmed 24-inch wide rolls, without selvage, butt squarely at the seams to form a smooth surface that hides wall scars and cracks.

Soft and warm to the touch, the vinyl film with its paper backing actually helps to insulate the wall it is put on.

Popular Home Adjusts Easy

One reason for the popularity of "H" or "U" shaped floor plans is ease of addition.

Extra rooms may be provided — as family growth requires — simply by enclosing the open ends of the "H" or "U". Such additions are further simplified when wood plank-and-beam construction is used in building the home. The wood decking of the roof system can be extended at comparatively small cost to bring new area under cover.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, more than a million people are employed by timber based activities in 12 southern pine producing states.

PLAYROOM GROWS UP — Big favorite in any home is a playroom which can grow with children from diapers through denims and converts for parents' use as well. This one in daylight basement features walls of glowing, durable west coast hemlock paneling, comfortable furniture and tough tile floor. Window seat is an ideal clutter catcher.

Get Optimum Use From Utility Room

When you design a family room or playroom for the children, you have to be mighty careful. Sometimes the family room is so much oriented to youngsters' roughhousing that it's quickly outgrown and must be redecorated in a couple of years to meet the family's changing needs.

Obviously, this can get costly, so it's smart to take a long-range approach at the outset and plan a family room that will be as good fifteen years from now as it is today.

This means creating a permanent, hard-wearing shell in which furnishings and accessories can be added or changed as needed.

There are a number of excellent, truly tough flooring materials on the market today which give long years of service while retaining their good appearance.

CAN BE MOPPED

These can be wet-mopped to take care of spills and scuffs contributed by small fry, but will also be sophisticated enough for the family later, as the children outgrow their rambunctious stage. Color and pattern can also be selected with an eye toward using an area rug in the future.

Walls can be wood paneled to give warmth and character to the room and, again, to insure adaptability. Prestige woods like vertical grain west coast hemlock can be used without worry when finished with one of the new clear plastics.

These new plastics are entirely washable, though fingerprints and other smudges won't show up on natural finished wood as they do on a flat, painted surface.

In addition, many of the plastics have a hand-rubbed appearance which will give the family room walls living room loveliness.

ANOTHER ESSENTIAL

Storage built-ins are another essential of the family room's basic shell. There should be spacious cupboards designed to take anything from an ash tray to a card table or the music equipment, without interior clutter.

They can be built with doors flush with the walls, or designed to look like a grouping of bunched chests, topped by a counter.

A window seat is another good idea. It will store the children's assortment of toys and games and, later, their sports equipment. Always, it will provide additional, permanent seating in the room.

Just remember, when planning that family room, that children's diapers soon become denims, and denims turn to frilly dresses or white shirts even quicker.

Roof Weighty Matter

The average house is bombarded with 100,000 pounds of rain and snow each year. This is one reason why a few extra pennies spent on heavier roofing shingles can pay big dividends in comfort and security.

Building Boom to Stay

This year's building boom will continue into 1964, when an all-time record $28.6 billion worth of new buildings will be put in place, according to Forum Building Magazine. Expected increases in house construction and heavy building will raise the over-all total to over $65 billion.

Continuing the recovery from the 1960 "sinking spell" (the only postwar year of decline in building), these dollar gains translate into a 4.2 per cent increase in building construction, and a 2.6 per cent rise in total construction.

Actually, these gains will be modest, relative to last year's spurge (a 13-per cent rise in new buildings) and probably will reach no higher than this year's levels.

Moreover, perhaps half of the dollar rise in the volume of new construction will result from rising costs.

WILL BE STABLE

By and large, however, building costs in 1964 will be stable — that is, they will only rise slightly, with hikes in labor costs and some materials being partially offset by slight declines in the prices of other materials and some gains in productivity.

Evidence points to a growing slackening of demand for some types of building, notably of offices, hotels and even apartments, which have provided the major impetus for the boom of the past three years.

To date, demand for these building types has been strong, not only because of basic market factors, but because of the generally favorable building climate: the federal tax structure as favored building investment, and mortgage credit has been relatively easy to obtain.

Annual House Checkup Real Need in North States

An annual "how's the house?" checkup is important in any climate — and especially important where winter gets in its chilling clutches.

In any case, wherever you live, many of the suggestions below can apply to your diggings.

First step: make yourself a check list.

Turn off the water supply to outside faucets. Drain them completely. Waiting until a freeze can be a costly delay.

2ND CLEANING

You may have put gutters and downspouts in perfect condition, but don't forget to clean them once more after the last leaves have fallen.

GUTTER ICE

It's a small job, but it will prevent water from backing up, freezing under the roof and eventually leaking through.

If you've had trouble with ice-filled gutters, consider the use of special heating cables made to prevent this condition. But install them right away.

Your house won't be weather-proof unless it's tightly caulked. Check for cracks, open joints, space around window and door frames.

Use plenty of caulk in those big openings. If it dries out or shrinks this winter, there'll still be enough to keep out air and moisture.

DON'T JUST CAUT

If the crack is too small to caulk, don't just coat the surface with caulk compound.

This won't do any good, may even form a base on which moisture will accumulate. Widen the crack, then fill.

Very deep cracks should be filled with oakum first, then with caulk on top of that.

A caulk job is only as good as the surface to which it is applied. It should be clean, and should NOT be wet, greasy or dusty.

PRIME SURFACE

Don't talk over raw wood. It will soak up the oils in the caulk. Prime the surface before caulk.

Caulking is available in stiff grades to be applied with a putty knife, or in a special "gun grade," to be applied with a caulk gun.

There also are throw-away cartridges for guns or tubes that can be squeezed like toothpaste tubes.

Do your caulk when it's above 40 degrees, or warm the caulk if it's too cold out.

Aid Sought to Remodel Old Homes

EAST LANSING — Michigan families are looking for help in remodeling old rural nonfarm homes, old farm houses and poorly planned new homes in housing developments.

This is what extension agents from eight counties reported this week at a "House Remodeling Workshop" conducted by the Michigan State University Cooperative Extension Service.

Over a two-day period, these professionals met with MSU specialists and commercial representatives to discuss house plans, building materials, landscape development, insulation, lighting and other aspects of remodeling.

Their object? To turn up their own counties equipped to eventually set up similar workshops using local talent to help do the teaching for families desiring help on remodeling projects.

NO. 1 PROBLEM

In a discussion of the housing problems they face most often, the agents agreed that soundly-constructed but out-of-date rural nonfarm homes pose a number one problem.

They need to be modernized in terms of conveniences and arrangements to meet the needs of today's family.

Old but salvageable farm homes are a second common problem. And, quite often, agents also get requests for remodeling help from families living in suburban homes that need an extra bedroom or other alteration.

State-Owned Lots on Auction Block

The Conservation Department announced today small parcels of state-owned land in Oakland, Macomb and Wayne Counties will be auctioned to the public in Pontiac and Detroit Dec. 9 and 10.

The Pontiac sale will include 40 plotted lots in Oakland and Macomb Counties and the Detroit sale will include 300 parcels in Wayne County.

Money from the sales is returned to the counties where the parcels are located, according to conservation officials.

Perimeter Road in North Section Opens Tuesday

Opening of the downtown perimeter road from Mt. Clemens to Cass by Tuesday was announced yesterday by the State Highway Department.

Simultaneously, both sides of Mt. Clemens are expected to be restored to normal traffic flow. Opening of the new section of the perimeter road intended to divert traffic around the central shopping district.

Yet to be completed is the section from Cass south and west and key crossings of the Clinton River.

Construction work on the southern portion still restricts traffic on E. Pike and Auburn.

Charley and Peggy Solomon of Philadelphia have managed to acquire over nine thousand master points between them.

This is the most master points held by any married couple.

Of more importance, they are great ornaments to the game of bridge and just about as delightful a couple as it is possible to be. The strongest point of their partnership is accurate bidding. Today's hand shows them at their best. Anyone can reach a minor suit slam with their cards, but when the hand came up in the Philadelphia regional they were the only couple to bid it.

A few pairs played a club or diamond game, but most people reached three no-trump and promptly went down one trick.

The club opening, diamond response and club rebid were normal. Peggy's two no-trump rebid was also normal, although most players jumped to three no-trump with her cards.

Peggy felt that such a jump should indicate better stuff in the majors and she sure was right.

Charley's bid of three diamonds told Peggy that at least one major would be wide open so she went to four clubs.

Charley bid four spades. He saw slim possibilities and had nothing to lose. Peggy surely would not pass.

The four-spade bid gave Peggy a chance for a fine defense. Charley had bid three suits. Surely he would not have shown the ace of spades if he held two losing hearts. As for spade losers, Peggy had that (five card diamond suit, so Peggy closed the bidding at six clubs.

Bowlerama Qualifying Postponed

Officials of the Press Bowlerama late Friday announced the postponement of Sunday's qualifying rounds at six county keg establishments.

The action was taken following the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and follows the example set by most athletic events in the country this weekend.

The final qualifying slated for tomorrow at 200 Bowl, Alway Lanes, North Hill Lanes, Winderland Lanes, Montcalm Bowling Centre and Howe's Lanes will be delayed until next Sunday.

Registration will continue at the various establishments.

All those registering before 5:30 p.m. Friday either at a participating house or the Press sports department will be listed on the squads that will be published in next Saturday's Press.

The finals slated for 300 Bowl have also been moved back from Nov. 30-Dec. 1st to Dec. 24; and the awards banquet also will be delayed due to the postponement.

Any additional changes will be announced in Monday's Press.

Golf Tourney Play Delayed

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP)—Mourning for a slain President cast a pall over the $20,000 Cajun Classic Golf Tournament today and third round play was postponed until Sunday.

"Tournament players and officials of the Professional Golf Association are deeply grieved by the loss of the President," said Joe Black, PGA tournament supervisor.

The final day will be a 36-hole round instead of 18.

FIVE-UNDER PAR

After two rounds over the 36-72 Oakbourne Country Club course, angular Bob Goetz led the field, firing a five-under par 67 to go with his equally gaudy first round 68.

Rain and the shock of the assassination of President Kennedy in Dallas affected the play of many of the 150 pros. A first round leader, Duke Matthews of Eugene, Ore., zoomed to an 80 and failed to make the cutoff.

Dave Marr Jr. and Jack Rule Jr. stood a stroke behind Goetz with 73. Jack Nicklaus, ace of the field, had a par 72 for 141.

Sports Sounds Still in Memorial Tribute

By The Associated Press

The sounds of sports crowds were still today in memory of a vigorous, sports-loving President.

Dens of big Saturday football games were canceled. A few others were still scheduled to be played because the people in charge said they felt that President Kennedy would have wanted it.

But half-time shows were replaced with memorial services for the slain President.

ALL TV OFF

All national television sports programs were canceled today and Sunday.

The annual, Yale-Harvard game was one of the first to be called off.

The late President played junior varsity football at Harvard.

Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick spoke for sports when he said:

"We all feel a deep loss and at the same time a great sense of shame and unhappiness that this should happen in our country. We are all shocked and in sorrow."

Friday almost all sports events were cancelled or postponed after word was received of the President's death.

Most basketball and hockey games were not played. The National television fight was cancelled.

Night racing was called off. The remainder of the day racing card was cancelled at Narragansett Park after the third race, after the fifth at Pimlico, after the seventh at Aqueduct.

Most tracks will stay closed until Wednesday.

Golfers in the Cajun Classic Tournament at Lafayette, La., played badly and said they didn't care. Today's third round was postponed a day.

North Carolina State beat Wake Forest 42-0 Friday night at Raleigh, N.C., after John T. Caldwell, chancellor at N.C. State said he "deeply believed that President Kennedy would have wished the game to go on."

CANCELLATIONS

Saturday football cancellations poured in throughout the night.

A joint Yale-Harvard statement said:

"Out of respect for the memory of the late President of the United States, we have decided that athletic and social activities between Harvard and Yale universities which were scheduled for New Haven shall not take place this weekend."

The 80th football game between these storied rivals since 1875 may be played Saturday, Nov. 30.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association left it to the colleges involved to do as they saw fit.

Only the Southeastern Conference offered a complete schedule. Most other schools cancelled or postponed their games.

The Southeastern games were: Florida State at Auburn, Tennessee at Kentucky, Tulane at Louisiana State and Florida at Miami.

The Oklahoma-Nebraska game at Nebraska was the only Big Eight game that was not postponed. The game will decide the host team in the Orange Bowl.

Two Michigan games, Illinois at Michigan State and Ohio State at Michigan, were scheduled to be played, despite a request by Gov. George Romney that they be postponed.

Other Big Ten games were put off. So was Notre Dame-Iowa.

All major games in the East were called off. Big Six games on the West Coast were postponed a week. They will settle a Rose Bowl bid.

No Wrestling Tonight

There will be no wrestling program at the National Guard Armory tonight. Local match promoter Paul Parks has set up a four-bout schedule for Wednesday, Nov. 27, at 8:30 p.m.

4 NHL Games Receive Go Ahead for Weekend

The National Hockey League is going ahead with its full slate of four weekend games.

President Clarence Campbell said from league headquarters in Montreal Friday that he was prepared to postpone three Sunday night games in the United States.

But he said that would be only under the condition that the U.S. government called for special mourning for President Kennedy.

No such proclamation was forthcoming from the White House Friday night.

Campbell then said the NHL would follow the lead of the National Football League. But he was unable to get in touch with NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

"WE'LL GO TOO"

Told later of a report from New York saying the NFL's seven games set for Sunday would be played as scheduled, Campbell declared quickly:

"Then we'll go too."

The three games send Montreal Canadiens against the Black Hawks in Chicago, Toronto Maple Leafs against the Rangers in New York and Detroit Red Wings against the Bruins in Boston.

Campbell said no thought was even given to postponing tonight's Maple Leafs-Bruins game in Toronto.

The death of a head of state was the reason for the postponement of a National Hockey League game in 1953. That was in Canada.

EAST LANSING (UPI)—Today's Michigan State-Illinois football game, which would have decided the Big Ten title and the Rose Bowl bid, has been postponed until 1:30 p.m. EST Thursday because of the President's death.

From Our Wire Services

Despite the request from Gov. George Romney, asking state schools to cancel their respective football games the Michigan State-Illinois and Michigan Ohio State games were to go on as usual today.

Romney was in Omaha for a Midwest governors conference when news of President Kennedy's assassination reached him.

When he forwarded his statement to the Michigan schools, the presidents of MSU, Michigan, Illinois and Ohio State met and issued a joint statement which said, "in the best national interest and tradition, the games would be played and that half-time entertainment would be cancelled and the time taken to pay tribute to the memory of the late President."

Michigan State president John A. Hannah conferred with the board and announced that "the decision was made that we would proceed with the game."

The MSU-Illinois game will decide the Big Ten title and the Rose Bowl participant. A win or tie would give MSU the title and the Rose Bowl bid. Illinois must win to take both.

MSU Ousted in Soccer

Playoffs by St. Louis

LANSING (UPI)—St. Louis University defeated Michigan State in soccer yesterday 3-0, eliminating the Spartans from the NCAA regional playoffs.

It was Michigan State's first loss of the year after running up a 9-0 record in regular season play.

Chicago Pair in Lead

World Keg Match Stays on Schedule

CHICAGO (AP)—Despite the death of President Kennedy, the seventh annual World's Invitational Bowling Tournament continued today.

In the second day of qualifying the grueling test, 128 men and 64 women were prepared to bowl.

After the first day, a pair of Chicagoans—J. Wilbert Sims, the only Negro in the men's field, and Olga Gloor, the 1959 champion—were on top in the standings.

The men are shooting six-game blocks through Monday when the field will be cut to 47 top performing champion Don Carter of St. Louis. Carter is seeded into the match game finals, which begin Wednesday.

Sims, a 42-year-old postal clerk, set a first-day record of

1,402, which gave him a 37-pin lead over Fred Lening of Fairless Hills, Pa.

TAILED OFF

Sims seemed bent on setting a tournament record when he opened with a 749 series for his first three games. But he tailed off to 633 for the final six games and collected 43 out of a possible 67 strikes.

Bob Strampe of Detroit was third with 1,350, thanks to a 290 closing game, high for the tournament. Strampe opened with a spare and then strung 11 strikes for his 290.

In the women's division, Mrs. Gloor averaged almost 200 with her 635, but needed a miss in the 10th frame by Joanne Chapman of Blencoe, Idaho, to keep the lead. Mrs. Chapman, a southpaw, finished with 629 after a 683 start. She rolled a 146 in her last game.

In third place among the 64 women who are shooting for 500 in the finals was Donna Zimmerman of Los Angeles, who had 801. Only three women averaged better than 200.

The two defending champions were well back. Marion Ladewig of Grand Rapids, Mich., tied for 18th place with 738, and Carter in a tie for 72nd with 1,196. But both are just going through the motions since they are seeded into the finals.

Tournament officials decided to continue the $48,000 contest despite the President's death because they must vacate the building by Dec. 1.

SISTER AND BROTHER—Mrs. Eunice Shriver and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, sister and brother of the slain President, arrive at Andrews Air Force Base in Washington yesterday for a flight to Hyannis Port, Mass., to be with their father, Joseph P. Kennedy.

Cautious Secret Service Did Thorough Job in Vain

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Tragedy struck in Dallas on Friday despite extensive and painstaking precautions made by President Kennedy's renowned Secret Service protectors.

Agents had checked minutely into all aspects of Kennedy's Dallas visit — the food he would eat, the flowers he would sniff, the roads he would travel, the buildings he would enter.

The quiet-spoken, confident men of the Secret Service made a strong impression on local law enforcement officers as they went about their task.

The security experts were reluctant about permitting the President to speak in the Trade Mart, which has tiers of balconies around its main court. But they finally agreed, after intensive investigation, to let the local sponsors have their way.

KNOWN AGITATORS

A list of known agitators in Dallas—anyone who might conceivably stir up trouble — was obtained. The Secret Service men made themselves familiar with these people and their patrons.

The motorcade route was thoroughly checked out. Trouble spots were noted, where traffic or crowd situations might get out of line.

All employees of the Trade Mart were given a once-over, along with those in the greeting party at Love Field in Dallas.

Press passes were issued only to those newsmen who were approved by news media executives.

ROSES INSPECTED

The 5,000 yellow roses flown in for the luncheon were checked to insure no bombs or damaging material was included.

An order was issued that the President would receive the same steak as the 2,500 guests. And his would be selected at random. Only by poisoning the entire crowd could anyone succeed in poisoning the President.

All this planning and checking was done well in advance of Kennedy's arrival.

Networks Suspend Programs

NEW YORK (AP)—The nation's three major television and radio networks scrapped all commercials and entertainment programs out of respect for the death yesterday of President Kennedy.

The National Broadcasting Co., American Broadcasting Co., and Columbia Broadcasting System all said they would devote their entire network radio and television programs to news of the assassination and all allied incidents.

The Mutual Broadcasting system said it would ban commercials and entertainment features on its radio network until after the President's funeral.

ABC said its commercial and entertainment ban would remain in effect indefinitely. NBC said it would observe the commercial and entertainment blackout until "sometime Saturday night."

AFTER BURIAL

CBS said it would not return commercials or entertainment programs to its network until after the President's burial.

All networks said they would continue broadcasts on radio and television through Friday night.

Board Eyes New Policy on Buying

A new purchasing policy, aimed at effecting a greater economy, will be introduced to the Waterford Township Board Monday.

The new policy calls for department heads to submit purchase orders to the clerk's office for approval on all proposed expenditures under $100.

Under present policy, department heads are allowed to make purchases up to $100 at their discretion.

In the new policy as now, expenditures over $100 must be approved by the township board.

NEW POLICIES

Township Supervisor James E. Seeterlin, who is proposing the revised purchasing policy, also will ask the board to act on two suggested new policies.

One calls for the police chief to be responsible to determine when overtime work is necessary.

Before authorizing overtime, the new policy directs the chief to first exercise due diligence in requesting police service from state police and the sheriff's department.

The other suggested policy would prohibit uniform employees (police or fire department personnel) from wearing a township uniform when off duty.

LIBRARY PROGRAM

In other business the board will consider a course of action on the township library program.

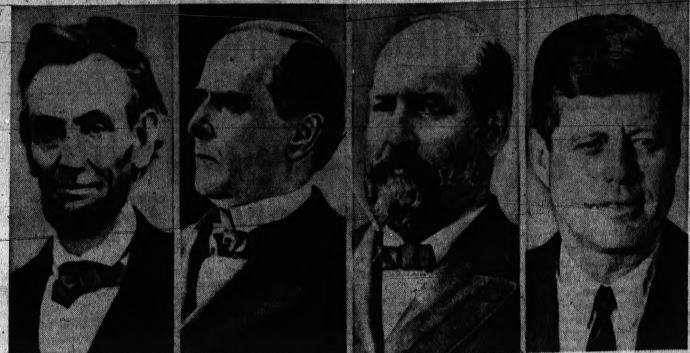

A proposal to join the North Oakland Library Association will be discussed and nominees for a seven-member library advisory committee will be considered.

Also slated in conjunction with the meeting is a street light hearing for residents of Hatchery Road.

South's Last President

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Lyndon B. Johnson is the first Southerner to hold that office since Andrew Johnson of Tennessee, who also succeeded an assassinated President.

Andrew Johnson was not nominated to full term. As the Republicans in 1868 elected a war hero President, Gen. U. S. Grant. His running mate was Schuyler Colfax of New York.

Networks Carry Tragic Word

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK — After the assassination of the President of the United States Friday, network broadcasting was devoted completely to news of the event.

The three television networks scuttled their regular programs, their commercials and their regular station identifications from the moment first word of the shooting of John F. Kennedy was received.

The top news men of each network took over the handling of the story—NBC's Huntley and Brinkley team, and Frank McGee and Bill Ryan; Walter Cronkite and Charles Collingwood of CBS and Ron Cochran and Jim Hagerly, on special assignment for ABC. They had assistance from staff members all over.

At first, for about an hour, coverage was confused and confusing. They grabbed at teletype bulletins, telephoned reports, news from their affiliated stations and reporters in Dallas. Every scrap of real news, second-hand information, rumors and eyewitness stories came to the stunned listening public as fast as they could read them into a microphone.

Radio was doing the same thing. But gradually, the networks began to get organized. By late afternoon, film shot during the fatal motorcade had been developed and was rushed on the air. None of the television cameramen had caught the tragic moment in the open-car car.

LIVE COVERAGE
All networks provided live coverage of the arrival of the funeral plane in Washington Friday evening. Millions of sorrowing, shocked Americans in their homes saw the coffin as it was removed from the plane, and heard Lyndon B. Johnson in his first public appearance as President. His face was drawn, strained and tired and he spoke briefly and humbly.

In the confusion, some erroneous information reached the air. Within a couple of hours, the rifle believed to have been used in the shooting was identified as being of British, German, Japanese and Argentine origin. Eyewitnesses interviewed moments after the shooting told widely varying stories.

FATIGUE EVIDENT

As the day wore on, fatigue was visible in the faces, words and voices of the men who had been repeating the same terrible story over and over, fitting in new details, large and small, as they became known. All of them commendably handled the arrest of a prime suspect in a calm, restrained way.

As the tragic day moved on, developments slowed down and the expressions of sympathy and grief, the analyses, the chronologies and the obituary tributes dominated the home screens.

It is expected that this will continue this way through Monday. CBS and NBC will eliminate all entertainment programs and commercials until after the funeral. ABC scrapped such programs indefinitely. Mutual also banned such programs until after the funeral.

Stroke Kills Publisher

HAMPTON, Va. (AP)—Sutton Christian, 60, former San Francisco Bay area publisher, died of a heart attack yesterday while listening to broadcast reports of President Kennedy's assassination.

Christian, a native of Tennessee, was editor of the Shenandoah, China Press in the early 1930s.

Two Careers Were Similar

Kennedy McKinley

Alike in Many Ways

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI)—A little more than 62 years ago, at Buffalo, N.Y., William McKinley, the 25th President of the United States, former Ohio governor and one-time member of Congress, was shot and fatally wounded by an assassin.

McKinley was a Republican. Yesterday, at Dallas, Tex., Democrat John F. Kennedy, the 35th President, was murdered by a sniper.

There were striking similarities in the careers of these two men, although each belonged to a rival party.

McKinley, a native of Niles, Ohio, was a military officer, rising to major in the final year of the Civil War. Kennedy commanded a PT boat in World War II.

McKinley was a member of the House of Representatives. Kennedy served in the Senate.

Both, ironically, were involved in massive problems with Cuba. McKinley at first was hesitant about intervening in Cuba, but the sinking of the Maine in 1898 provided the spark and the result was the Spanish-American War.

Kennedy, only little more than a year ago, forced the Soviet Union to remove missiles from the same island in a "brink of war" power play.

The 25th President was a Methodist and a lover of peace. The 35th president was a Roman Catholic and a lover of peace.

Both men knew tragedy. McKinley married Ida Saxton, a cashier in a Canton, Ohio, bank owned by her father. McKinley was a lawyer there. The McKinnies had two children — both died in childhood.

Kennedy married Jacqueline Bouvier. Mrs. Kennedy suffered one miscarriage and one stillbirth. A third child died last August only hours after his birth. Two other children survive.

'JFK Lacked Protection in N.Y. Visit'

NEW YORK (AP)—President Kennedy's assassination recalled for Police Commissioner Michael Murphy the President's last visit to New York City.

On that occasion, a week ago, Kennedy had insisted that he be driven from LaGuardia Airport in Queens to his Manhattan hotel without a police escort.

At least twice during the trip, the Kennedy car stopped for traffic lights.

Murphy had objected to the trip without the usual motorcycle and police car escort.

DEEP SORROW

On learning of the President's death, Murphy expressed deep sorrow and said "Maximum security has to be maintained at all times."

The President was sensitive about the fuss his arrivals with a siren-screaming escort always created.

Dear in New Zealand are so numerous they are regarded as pests.

Area Boy, 13 Struck by Car

A 13-year-old Waterford Township boy was seriously injured last night when struck by a car on Telegraph as he was pouring gas into his mother's stalled automobile.

Russell J. Brooks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Olga Brooks of 5891 Aylebury, was standing at the rear of the car, which was stopped on the inside northbound lane just north of the Bloomfield Miracle Mile Shopping Center.

Edmond N. Potere, 26, of 53 Easy told Bloomfield Township Police he saw the boy and the car to late to avoid crashing into him due to a heavy rain.

Potere, of Bloomfield Township, was released after questioning.

Brooks remained in serious condition today at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, Pontiac, with leg and head injuries.

Neither his mother nor his 8-year-old brother, Robert, with her in the car, were injured.

City Workers Are Hit Hard

Acting Police Chief Describes Shock

"... a funny feeling like butterflies in the pit of your stomach," was the comment yesterday of Acting Pontiac Police Chief William K. Hanger.

The police chief was reacting to the news of President Kennedy's assassination.

Typewriters were silent. Offices were vacant. And secretaries and clerks huddled around transistor radios at city hall.

At the fire station, firefighters stared at a television describing the shooting. A dispatcher, John Nestrick, sat quietly in the glass enclosure fronting East Pike listening to a radio.

"I was stupefied," Nestrick said.

"UNBELIEVABLE" Capt. Charles Mariox said Kennedy's death was "unbelievable."

"Stunned, couldn't believe it," said firefighter Jim Finley. He said a group of firemen had been playing cards when the news reached them.

"We were speechless, stunned. It hit like a bolt of lightning."

City manager Robert A. Carver, who met Kennedy on a couple of occasions, said: "It takes a nut to do this thing."

Everywhere—in the city hall, fire station, and police station—workers and executives stood silently listening to radio or television. Not much was said, no one wanted to miss anything.

John Reineck, assistant city manager, was concerned about the international repercussions. His son, John Jr., a captain in the Army, is on his way back to Vietnam where he is stationed. "It's the worst tragedy that could happen to the country. It's a disaster," Reineck said.

Mrs. Charles Pace, of Clarkston, secretary to the city manager, said, "Isn't it horrible?"

"You think it would happen overseas, not in America," said Mrs. Nicholas Motchak, 52 Delaware, clerk-typist in the city clerk's office.

'Unbelievable Tragedy'

Loss Grieves Lawmakers

"This tragedy is unbelievable. There are no words to convey the grief we all feel."

So spoke Oakland County's congressman, William S. Broomfield, in Washington yesterday after hearing the news of President Kennedy's assassination.

Broomfield was thoroughly shaken, according to a member of his staff.

Though a Republican, he was known to have a high regard for the Democratic president.

"There is nothing but sorrow in our hearts," said the congressman.

"The world has lost a champion of liberty and justice. Our hearts and prayers are with Mrs. Kennedy in this tragic hour."

In Pontiac, State Sen. Farrell E. Roberts, R-Oakland County, said he was "appalled" by the shocking event.

Roberts was in a dentist's chair when he first heard the news of the shooting.

At Final Homecoming

Crowd Stricken With Grief

WASHINGTON (AP)—By the hundreds, they had waited in the chill darkness outside the White House grounds.

And the grief of a mourning capital was mirrored in the tears that stained their faces, their young and their old faces, their white faces and their black faces.

John Fitzgerald Kennedy was coming home for the last time and as the small procession of cars turned into the west gate, they reacted together, as if by unspoken command.

Conversation ended. Men removed their hats. Teen-agers removed their hands from their pockets and women clutched the iron picket fence as though the pressure of their fingers might stem their tears.

MEASURED CADENCE

Two lines of Marines, glistening rifles at port arms, led the way, marching up the curving drive in slow measured cadence. Behind them rode the gray naval hearse in which Jacqueline Kennedy was bringing her husband home.

They moved slowly under the handsome bare elms elicited against the White House and all that could be heard was the slow click of marching heels on the pavement.

Jacqueline Kennedy emerged and stood on the steps waiting long minutes for the flag draped casket to be removed. Then she turned in behind it and walked steadily between the honor guard, on the arm of her husband's brother, Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy.

OTHER FAMILY MEMBERS

Behind them came some other members of the family and White House aides.

The small group soon passed from sight, through the glass doors draped in black crepe. They passed into the lobby and followed the casket down the long lovely corridor, between two lines of honor guard, and finally reached the East Room.

Here the casket was laid gently on a black catafalque, similar to that which held Abe Lincoln on another dark incredible night almost 100 years ago. Two lighted candles flickered on each side of the casket, and the soft glow two priests began night-long prayers for the first Catholic President of the United States.

Outside, it was now time to go but the crowd along the picket fence and across the street in Lafayette Park appeared reluctant to leave. Slowly they finally drifted off in small muted clusters.

And through the fence and between the high elms the big White House seemed bathed now in a soft serenity, having made its last cruel demand on John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

Murder Rifle Is One of Cheapest Arms

By DON VOGEL

Outdoor Editor

The rifle used in the assassination of President Kennedy is one of the cheapest military surplus weapons on the market.

It is an Italian Carcano—6.5 mm caliber—that can be purchased from one leading mail-order firearms dealer for $12.78.

With a telescopic sight attached, the Carcano sells from the same firm for $19.96.

Other dealers offer this rifle in about the same price range.

The Carcano rifle is held in low esteem by a majority of the nation's gun experts.

BLOW BACK IN FACE

They claim the firing pin is weak and may blow back in the shooter's face. The detractors also claim the bolt-action rifle cannot be converted to handle modern sporting calibers because of design problems and a low-working pressure limit, about 40,000 pounds per square inch.

As designed for military use, the Carcano uses a 162-grain bullet that measures .255 of an inch in diameter.

This load leaves a 24-inch barrel at about 2,500 feet per second and has a striking force of 2,100 pounds at the muzzle. The velocity and energy drop as the bullet moves farther from the rifle.

The rifle, with scope, weighs about nine pounds. The magazine holds six rounds.

Although there has been no official announcement, it is believed that the bullets used by the Dallas sniper were military style with full-metal jackets.

Soft-encore hunting ammunition for this caliber is not readily available in this country.

The three bullets fired in yesterday's shooting were triggered in rapid succession with deadly accuracy. President Kennedy suffered fatal head wounds and Gov. Connally of Texas was wounded in the chest.

Only a person very familiar with a bolt-action rifle could accomplish such a feat. The bolt is considered the slowest of the various actions available.

HOURS OF PRACTICE

The gunman would also have needed hours of practice with a bolt rifle to develop the speed and marksmanship shown in the Dallas shooting.

Although the distance between the muzzle of the death weapon and the President's limousine has not been revealed, photos of the scene and the reports of witnesses place the assassin less than 100 yards away.

Any expert shooter who is familiar with the rifle he is handling would have no difficulty scoring fatal hits at such a range.

Acid Stolen at School Dangerous

Two five-gallon jugs, containing a dangerous acid, were stolen from a storage building at the Waterford Kettering High School yesterday.

Waterford Township Police Sgt. David Putnam warned that the chemical, sodium hypochlorite, could cause serious burns. Fumes from the acid could cause eye irritation.

The chemical when highly diluted is used as a disinfectant and deodorizer. Each gallon is diluted with 18 gallons of water.

Milk, muckilage and raw egg whites are used for an antidote.

GOP, Democrats Mourn President

President Kennedy's death by an assassin's bullet was "as tragic for all of us," Oakland County Democratic Chairman Sander M. Levin said after learning of the President's death yesterday.

"It's impossible to believe that such greatness and vitality as the President possessed could be snuffed out in a matter of seconds," said Levin.

"It's a terrible, terrible thing," said County Republican Chairman Charles L. Lyle.

Lyle said, "Regardless of political affiliation, the heart of every American and everyone in the world must go out to Mrs. Kennedy and her family."

Killing Stuns Finance Center

Numb Disbelief Grips World Business Hub

By PHIL KEUPER

AP Business News Writer NEW YORK (AP)—A burst of shocked reaction, then numb disbelief, gripped the world's financial center after the assassination of President Kennedy.

For stockbrokers, secretaries, bank messengers, runners, clerks and other laborers in New York's business world, the experience of national tragedy was jolting and strange.

At the New York Stock Exchange, Walter N. Frank, vice chairman of the board, stepped out on a small marble balcony jutting from the south wall of the big room yesterday afternoon.

He struck a gong once, the rarely heard but traditional sound of "closing," and then, "the market is closed." That was at 2:10 p.m. (Pontiac time), an hour and 20 minutes before the usual closing time.

He struck a gong once, the rarely heard but traditional sound of "closing," and then, "the market is closed." That was at 2:10 p.m. (Pontiac time), an hour and 20 minutes before the usual closing time.

LOOKED UP

Carmine Trovato, a stock clerk from Brooklyn, looked up. For about 30 minutes after word of the shooting was received, he had worked feverishly, like the others, trying to keep pace with the wave of selling that swept the market. He said it was worse than the stock crash of May 1962.

"There was no comparison," he said, "I heard somebody near me say he hadn't seen anything like this in 40 years. I'm thinking: How could this happen in this country? Who would want to shoot the President?"

Word of the assassination reached many of New York's businessmen at lunch. Two well-known to the President were eating together: Gen. Lucius Clay, former U.S. commander in Berlin, and Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange.

They were eating at Lehman Brothers, an investment banking firm where Clay is a partner.

"Someone brought in a radio and said the President had been shot," said Clay. "Then we heard he was dead."

"We both felt the same shock. I was heartstruck that such a thing could happen in our country."

Lyndon Johnson Begins Duties as Nation Mourns for Kennedy

Ex-Defector Denies He Killed Kennedy

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—A man who once tried to renounce his country is charged with firing the two bullets that killed President Kennedy.

"No, I didn't kill the President," Lee Harvey Oswald, 24, said after he was charged last night with murder in the President's assassination.

Oswald swore allegiance to the Soviet Union four years ago and tried to renounce his American citizenship. Police termed him arrogant.

President Kennedy died 30 minutes after the assassin's bullets crashed into his neck and head as he neared the end of a triumphal motorcade Friday.

WOUNDS CONNALLY

A third bullet wounded Texas Gov. John Connally. His condition was reported satisfactory.

Dist. Atty. Henry Wade of Dallas was asked if authorities were looking for anyone else in connection with the world-stunning murder.

"There is no one else but him," Wade said.

Taken before microphones and cameras early today, Oswald insisted in a loud voice that he was innocent of the death of Kennedy.

'HE'S INSANE'

Wade was asked if he regarded Oswald as Communist-inspired or "just a nut."

He replied: "Well, put it this way, I don't think he is a nut. I think he's insane."

Oswald was taken into custody soon after Kennedy was fatally shot and Connally was wounded by three bullets fired from a high-powered rifle.

Kennedy and Connally had been riding side by side in the presidential limousine; their wives sitting just ahead of them.

The key factor that led to Oswald's arrest at 2 p.m. — an hour after the President's death — was the apparently senseless killing of a Dallas policeman.

CLEAR TRAIL

Authorities said a clear trail led to Oswald and he was charged with murder in the death of the officer.

If the massive manhunt for Kennedy's assassin was ended, the investigation by city police and agents of the FBI and Secret Service continued.

Wade said additional information would be sought before presentation of the case to a grand jury. He said a grand jury probably would get the case next week, possibly on Wednesday.

The prosecutor said the case could come to trial within three weeks, or could be delayed for as long as two months.

STRANGE CIRCUMSTANCES

A trail of strange circumstances led authorities to bear down on Oswald as the prime suspect in the killing:

He worked in a textbook warehouse which police pinpointed as the place from which a high-powered rifle with a telescope sight was aimed at the head of the chief executive as he drove past in his open limousine. Police said Oswald was in the building at the time.

Within 45 minutes after the assassination a policeman who tried to pick up Oswald as a suspicious person four miles from the warehouse was shot to death.

Police said the bullet that killed the officer came from a (Continued on Page 2, Col. 8)

SWEARING-IN CEREMONY — Lyndon B. Johnson is sworn in as President of the United States by Judge Sarah T. Hughes in the cabin of the presidential plane yesterday. Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy stands by his side.

'I Will Do My Best' Says New Executive

WASHINGTON (AP)—Asking God's help, Lyndon B. Johnson gathered up the monumental problems of the presidency today as the world, the nation and his family mourned John F. Kennedy, dead by an assassin's bullets.

"I will do my best—that's all I can do. I ask for your help and God's," said the new President, numbed and haggard, after accompanying the slain Chief Executive's body back to Washington from Dallas.

A few hours after the slaying, Dallas police charged a 24-year-old man who professed love for Russia with murder and said he was the assassin. He was identified as Lee Harvey Oswald.

As arrangements were made for family, friends and dignitaries to view Kennedy's body at the White House today, Johnson set about getting advice on the troubles that abruptly were thrust into his hands.

Johnson, who fought a losing fight against Kennedy for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1960, automatically became the 36th President of the United States the moment Kennedy's life ebbed away in the emergency room of a Dallas hospital.

Johnson was in the car behind Kennedy's when three bullets from a sniper ripped into the open presidential limousine, striking Kennedy in the head and throat and wounding Texas Gov. John Connally.

Blood sprang from the President's face and he fell face forward in the back seat of the car. Mrs. Kennedy, who had been riding with him, tried to life his head, crying, "Oh no!"

YOUNGEST MAN

Half an hour later John F. Kennedy, 46, the first Roman Catholic and youngest man ever elected to the presidency, was dead.

It was stunning, almost unbelievable news that flashed around the country and to the far reaches of the world.

Expressions of grief, sorrow, surprise poured in from friends and antagonists, allies and foes, from the Kremlin and from the Vatican.

Wife Bids a Touching Farewell

WASHINGTON (AP)—Mrs. Kennedy said goodbye to her husband with a kiss on his lifeless lips and then slipped her ring on his finger.

From then on — from the emergency room in the Dallas hospital through the sad flight home, to the naval hospital where he was prepared for burial until she brought him home in death to the White House early today — she was at his side.

As she passed through the somber portals of the Executive Mansion she still wore the pink suit stained with the blood of his fatal wounds and carried herself with self control.

It was a harsh day and it left Mrs. Kennedy dazed and tearless, almost unable to show emotion.

ASKS PRAYER

In the hospital, she bade her handsome 46-year-old husband a goodbye that was so touching a witness, Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Tex., "couldn't bear to watch."

"Pray for him," Mrs. Kennedy asked a Roman Catholic priest who administered last rites to the President.

New President Has Busy Day

WASHINGTON (AP)—Solenn-faced Lyndon B. Johnson shouldered the full massive burden of presidential duty today in the tempo set by his first order as Chief Executive—"Now let's get airborne."

But he left the White House to John F. Kennedy, the predecessor whom he served and for whom he mourned, now lying in state in the magnificent East Room as a national martyr.

For his own first full day in the high office Johnson chose to go back to his old suite in the executive office building across the street.

But it was a day of full presidential duty nevertheless, starting before 9 o'clock with arrival at the executive mansion. The first official business was a conference with Secretary of State Dean Rusk at 9:30 to deal with worldwide problems that may have been multiplied by Kennedy's assassination Friday.

First MOVE

The "get airborne" directive was Johnson's first move after he was sworn in aboard the presidential jet airplane at Dallas yesterday amid beside the body of the man he was succeeding.

And he kept the pace going last night with a series of conferences here after flying back.

Today Johnson left his northwest Washington home, the Elms, at 8:45 a.m. for the five-mile drive down Massachusetts Avenue to the White House.

The skies were gray and a slight drizzle had just ended when the wrought iron gates of the Johnson estate were swung open and the black limousine rolled through.

Through the day, his family, his close friends and high officials of the government, including former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, were scheduled to view the body of the Chief Executive who was assassinated, yesterday in Dallas.

Tomorrow it will be borne by solemn cortege to the rotunda of the Capitol where for 24 hours it will lie in state, to be seen by the public.

Funeral service will be held at noon Monday at St. Matthew's Roman Catholic Cathedral with Richard Cardinal Cushing, Archbishop of Boston and a long-time friend of the Kennedy family, celebrating a Pontifical Requiem Mass.

STILL UNCERTAIN

The final resting place for the President, 46, gunned down as he rode in a motorcade, remained uncertain early today.

In the early morning hours, the flag-draped casket of the fallen President was brought to the White House.

A Navy ambulance carried the casket from the Bethesda Naval Hospital, in suburban Maryland, where the body had

60 Are Dead in Ohio Fire

NORWALK, Ohio (AP)—About 60 persons were trapped and killed in a fire today at a nursing home for the aged and infirm in Fitchville, the Ohio Highway Patrol reported.

A patrol spokesman said the blaze swept through the one-story concrete home in the pre-dawn hours. Eighty-four patients were reported residing at the home when the fire broke out.

Twenty-one patients and three nurses were safely accounted for at Fisher-Titus Hospital in Norwalk.

Fitchville is a community of about 200. It is 20 miles southeast of Norwalk, the Huron County seat.

Rose Kennedy Stays for 2 Requiem Masses

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP)—The mother of assassinated President Kennedy went to church this morning and stayed through two Masses of Requiem for her son.

Rose Kennedy, 73, wife of former Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, arrived alone for the regularly scheduled 7 a.m. daily Mass at St. Francis Xavier Roman Catholic Church in Hyannis.

St. Joseph Hospital's dance, which was scheduled for Saturday, November 23 at 7:30 at the Forest Lake Country Club, will be cancelled due to the President's death.

Winds Blow Cold Weather Into the Area

Wintry winds blew into the state last night and early today plunging temperatures to a low of 39 this morning. At 1 p.m. the mercury stood at 42 in downtown Pontiac.

Tonight's forecast is partly cloudy with scattered snow flurries and much colder. A low of 26 is expected.

Tomorrow's outlook is partly cloudy and cold. The predicted high is 38.

Weather will be warmer on Monday with continued partly cloudy skies.

Winds today are west to north-west at 25 to 40 miles per hour, slowly diminishing tonight.

MOURNER — A weeping woman wipes the tears from her eyes as she leaves St. Patrick's Cathedral (background) in New York where she and hundreds of others had hurried to offer prayers for President Kennedy. Flags on the cathedral had already been lowered to half-staff, and the bells of the church were being softly tolled.

Priest Says JFK Dead During Rite

DALLAS (AP) — President Kennedy appeared to be dead when he received the last rites of the Catholic Church, the priest who administered the sacrament said.

"I didn't see any sign of life," said the Rev. Oscar Huber, C.M., pastor of Holy Trinity Catholic Church in Dallas.

"I couldn't tell if it was real death," he said. "I administered the sacraments conditionally. We do this when we don't know for sure if a person is actually dead. Real death doesn't come until the moment the soul leaves the body."

"But we don't know just when the soul leaves the body so we administer the rites conditionally," he said.

RUSHED TO HOSPITAL

Father Huber, 70, said he and the Rev. James Thomson, C.M., rushed to Parkland Hospital as soon as they heard a television bulletin that Kennedy had been taken there.

"Parkland is in my parish so we went right over in case we were needed," he said.

The priest said he talked briefly with Mrs. Kennedy after her husband's death.

"I expressed my sympathy from myself and my parishoners," he said. "I told her I was shocked and very sorry."

"PRAY FOR HIM"

"She thanked me for coming down and administering the last rites," he said. "She asked me to pray for him and I told her I would say Mass for him."

"Our 5:30 Mass this evening was for him. We'll have a solemn Requiem High Mass Tuesday evening," he said.

"She, like everyone else around there, had a paralyzed look," he said. "We just couldn't believe that this could happen."

Ex-Governor of Texas

Relates State's Grief

HOUSTON (UPI) — "The people of Texas are grief-stricken over the terrible tragedy and great loss to our nation and the world," former Texas Gov. Price Daniel said yesterday. "It is impossible to comprehend that this assassination of the President and attempted assassination of our governor could occur in the midst of what had been the warmest and friendliest reception that any president has received in Texas within my memory."

British Chief at Mass

Former VP Shaken by JFK Death

UVALDE, Tex. (AP) — John Nance Garner, the former vice president who may have been the last man to talk on the telephone with President Kennedy, was badly shaken by the news of Kennedy's assassination.

"He took a nap after lunch and they didn't wake him up," Garner's son, Tully, said. "They told him about 3 p.m. when he got up and it shook him so bad he went back to bed."

Kennedy called Garner at 10:15 a.m. Friday to congratulate Garner on his 85th birthday. Kennedy was in Fort Worth at the time.

HOOR LATER

About an hour later Kennedy flew to Dallas for the motorcade that ended when the President was shot in the head.

"God bless you," Garner told Kennedy during the conversation.

"You're my President and I love you. I hope you stay in there forever. God bless you."

"He was very happy to talk to the President," Garner's son said. "He was very saddened by his death."

Sweden's constitution was drafted in 1809 and is said to be the oldest written constitution in Europe.

Phone Company Calls Extra Crews

DETROIT (UPI) — The Michigan Bell Telephone Co. called in emergency crews yesterday to handle the flood of telephone calls to the news media and take care of cable troubles should they crop up.

A telephone company spokesman said the President's death led to what was referred to as a "condition yellow" or what would be an unexpected heavy load of telephone cable use by radio, television and wire service.

The only higher priority rating used by the telephone company is a "condition red" indicating a national emergency.

Sorrow Is Expressed

by Cuban Ambassador

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The Cuban ambassador to the United Nations, Carlos Lechuga, tonight expressed the "deep sorrow" of his country at the death of President John F. Kennedy.

Lechuga said: "In spite of the existing antagonism between the U.S. government and the Cuban revolution, we have heard with deep sorrow the news of the tragic death of President John F. Kennedy."

The Cost of TLC

There's an ingredient in hospital care that nurses call TLC (Tender Loving Care).

It's the indefinable quality in hospital people that sustains you when you are flat on your back—physically and emotionally—in a hospital bed.

TLC cannot be manufactured and it cannot be bought. A nurse is born with it, and it's as much a part of her as her very heart.

Yet, TLC does cost money. For it represents the time and the hard work of more hospital people to provide today's better hospital care.

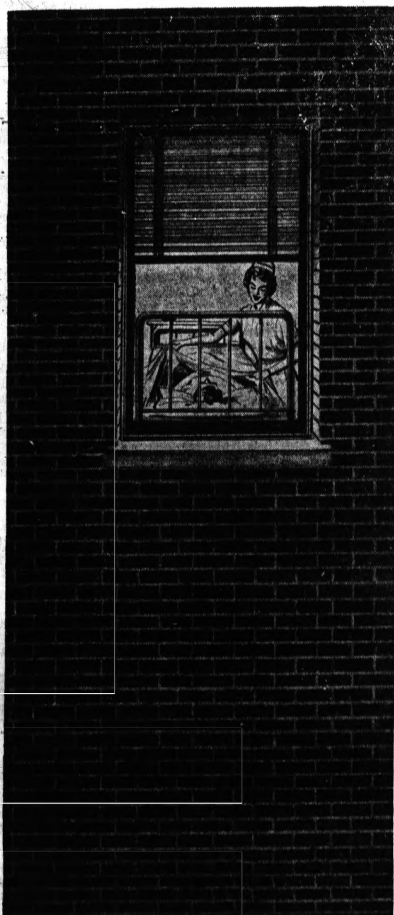

Good hospital care does cost more money today. Good health is worth it.

Modern hospitals mean so much to you and your family.

Our community hospitals provide more health for your money than ever before.

Destiny: Greatness

BY UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

On a bitterly cold and snowy day in January 1961, when he was inaugurated 35th president of the United States, John Fitzgerald Kennedy sounded a call to action that in many ways summed up his own remarkable career.

"Let the word go forth from this time and place, to friend and foe alike," he said, "that the torch has been passed to a new generation of Americans — born in this century, tempered by war, disciplined by a cold and bitter peace."

Kennedy was all these, and he bore the torch of world leadership in a society where the old order was changing fast.

On that January day, no man had ever flown in space. On that day Negroes in southern cities such as Jackson and Birmingham were not yet demonstrating.

NOT AS CLOSE

On that day the world had not come consciously close to nuclear destruction as it did in the great Cuban crisis of 1962.

"Sure, it's a big job," Kennedy once said. "But I don't know anybody who can do it better than I can. I'm going to be in for four years. It isn't going to be so bad. You've got time to think — and besides, the pay is good."

He later found out — and conceded — that it was a bigger job than he originally believed. But it is most unlikely that he ever once wavered in the belief that no one could handle it as well as he could.

To think otherwise would have been a negation of his whole life.

IRISH IMMIGRANT

The presidency of John Fitzgerald Kennedy was born in the fierce pride of an Irish immigrant family. It was carefully nurtured in the training stages by a multimillionaire father, and brought to fruition by the man himself through a distinguished career in the House and Senate and on the tricky campaign trails.

The man who took the troubled U. S. helm was born at his family's Brookline, Mass., home outside Boston May 29, 1917.

He had an older brother, Joseph P. Kennedy Jr., who was killed in World War II. After John's birth, four girls, Rosemary, Kathleen, Eunice and Patricia, followed before the third son, Robert F. Kennedy, was born in 1925.

He became attorney general in his brother's administration. After Robert, there was another girl, Jean, and then Edward F., the last of nine children, born in 1932. The youngest of the family continued the tradition of successful politics by being elected U.S. senator from Massachusetts in 1962 at the age of 30.

POLITICAL ATMOSPHERE

The family grew up in an atmosphere of politics, fired by two grandfathers whose scramble as Irish immigrants from the east Boston shanties of potato famine refugees to lace curtain respectability underscored the American dream.

The two energetic grandfathers who put long-lasting political steam in the family were:

Patrick J. Kennedy, born in Boston in 1862, 12 years after his father fled impoverished Ireland. Patrick was a saloon keeper and ward politician who prospered, became a political power in the city and sent his son Joe to Boston Latin School and Harvard.

John F. Fitzgerald, born in Boston in 1863, first native American of Irish descent to become Boston's mayor. His daughter, Rose, went to convent colleges in New York and Europe.

COURTED 7 YEARS

Joe Kennedy, Patrick's son, courted Rose Fitzgerald for seven years and married her in 1914 at a ceremony in the private chapel of William Cardinal O'Connell.

Properly married and a large family on the way, Joe Kennedy set out to be a millionaire before he was 35 — a goal which he met handily after becoming the country's youngest bank president at 25.

While the elder Kennedy rammed his way to the top, he demanded the same performance from his sons. Being unable to make the presidency, himself, there was no doubt in the minds of many contemporaries that Joe Kennedy wanted Joe Jr. to become president.

Had Joe Jr. survived the war, the elder Kennedy might have made his mark at the White House with his firstborn. As it was, Jack was relatively in Joe's vigorous shadow as he followed him through school and college.

WRITING CAREER

Quieter, more introspective than his brother, John leaned toward a career in writing or teaching. Perhaps this would have been his life if his older brother had lived for the political career he intended — and which his father intended for him.

In fact, some years later it was John who said, of his own political career, "If I had been killed, it would have been Bobby."

Jack was luckier in surviving his wartime ordeal, dumped in the South Pacific near New Georgia Island in August 1943, he and his crew were rescued after spending many hours in the water and five days on a tiny island.

After the war, Kennedy dabbled in newspaper work, then decided to try for a Boston congressional seat being vacated by the incumbent. Only 29, he campaigned hard, talked pocketbook issues and won the nomination over a field of nine other Democrats.

DEFEATED FOE

Running in a normally Democratic district, he easily defeated his Republican opponent in the election.

In Congress, Kennedy kept the home political fences in good repair. He was identified with the liberals but was viewed more as an independent than a doctrinaire Democrat.

He generally supported President Harry S. Truman's domestic policies and the Great Turkish aid bill and the Marshall Plan as well.

But in 1948, he was blaming White House and State Department for the loss of China to communism.

ORGANIZATION

By 1948, Kennedy was beginning to seek statewide recognition in Massachusetts with an eye to running against Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. in 1952. For the campaign against Lodge, he again relied on a personal political organization as he had done when he first ran for the House.

Lodge lost his Senate seat to Kennedy while President Eisenhower carried the state by more than 200,000 votes.

Kennedy was married Sept. 12, 1953 to Jacqueline Bouvier, then 23, at a fashionable wedding at Newport, R.I. Like Kennedy, she

Johnson Part of JFK Team

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lyndon B. Johnson, coming into the presidency on the assassination death of John F. Kennedy yesterday, enjoyed Kennedy's high esteem and confidence.

From old political foes — within the Democratic party — they became a close working team.

Johnson tried in 1960 for the presidential nomination. When Kennedy won, Johnson accepted second place on the Democratic ticket.

Accepting, too, the Kennedy leadership, he became extraordinarily active in behalf of the Kennedy policies. This activity included work for the civil rights program Kennedy laid down — something that lessened Johnson's popularity in the South — and there was some talk this year that Johnson might be dumped from the ticket next year.

1964 TICKET

But on Oct. 31, Kennedy was asked whether, if he ran next year, he would again want Johnson as the vice-presidential nominee, and whether he expected Johnson to be on the ticket. He replied:

"Yes, to both of these questions. That is correct."

Johnson is a former Democratic senator from Texas, best known for the vigorous, aggressive way he handled the job of Democratic leader of the Senate before he quit to become vice-president.

What direction may the Johnson administration take?

In one of the numerous speeches he made in recent years — this one in Washington April 25 — Johnson offered a broad view of what he thought the Democrats should attempt in next year's presidential campaign and thereafter.

He said the Democrats must demonstrate that they are a party of action offering solutions for the new kinds of problems brought about by population increases and concentration, and by the lengthening of life expectancy.

NEW ERA

"We have new capacities," he said. "We have new potentials. We stand at the edge of a new era of human progress in our own country and in the world."

"At this decisive moment of opportunity, the party of the opposition offers only the slogan 'America cannot do it' — America cannot afford the programs that we need."

He called for a full and enthusiastic support of Democrats everywhere for Kennedy's foreign and domestic programs.

Leaders of Many Nations Bowed in Grief for 'a Friend'

By The Associated Press

Word of President Kennedy's assassination struck the world's capitals with shattering impact, leaving heads of state and the man in the street stunned and grief-stricken.

While messages of condolence poured into the White House from presidents, premiers and crowned heads, the little people of many lands reacted with numb disbelief.

Pubs in London and cafes in Paris fell silent, as the news came over radio and television. In Moscow, a Russian girl walked weeping along the street. At U.N. headquarters in New York, delegates of 111 nations bowed their heads in a moment of silence.

SOUND SIRENS

In Buenos Aires, newspapers sounded sirens reserved for news of the utmost gravity.

Britain's Prime Minister Douglas-Home sent condolences and Sir Winston Churchill branded the slaying a monstrosity act.

"The loss to the United States and to the world is incalculable," Sir Winston declared. "Those who come after Mr. Kennedy must strive the more to achieve the ideals of world peace and human happiness and dignity to which his presidency was dedicated."

TERSE MESSAGE

Douglas-Home issued this terse statement: "The prime minister has learned with the most profound shock and horror of the death by assassination of the President of the United States."

France's President Charles de Gaulle issued a brief tribute: "President Kennedy died like a soldier, under fire, for his duty and in the service of his country. In the name of the French people, a friend always of the American people, I salute this great example and this great memory."

In the Soviet Union, Moscow radio broke into a broadcast to announce that the President had been shot. It then began playing funeral music.

Pope Paul VI, who kept vigil at his Vatican quarters from the time he heard the first news of the attack, prayed for the President's soul when word of the end came. New York's Francis Cardinal Spellman, in Rome for the Ecumenical Council, said he was deeply grieved.

ADLAI GRIEVES

Adlai E. Stevenson, chief U.S. delegate at the United Nations,

said that the tragedy was "beyond instant comprehension."

"All of us who knew him will bear the grief of his death to the day of ours," said Stevenson. "And all men everywhere who love peace and justice and freedom will bow their heads."

U.N. delegates clustered near radios and jammed the offices of the news services to get the latest word on the President's death. Many diplomats had

U.S. Newspapers Decry

a 'Blemish on America'

By The Associated Press

The nation's newspapers today expressed the people's grief at the assassination of President Kennedy, and said the murder was "a blemish on American civilization."

Editorial comments included: Richmond Times-Dispatch: "The assassination, 'coming as it does as the latest in a series of violent deaths of heads of state, is a disgrace to the United States and a blot on the good name of this country.'"

Indianapolis Star: "We never believed that any American could stoop to the dirty job of murder of the President. John F. Kennedy always stood for what is fine and good in the American tradition."

A MARTYR

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: The President is "a martyr to American democracy. His murder is a blemish on American civilization."

St. Louis Post-Dispatch: The assassination is "a national tragedy of incalculable proportions. What is wrong with the U.S. that it can provide the environment for such an act? There is a sickness in the nation when political differences cannot be accepted and settled in the democratic way. Our democracy itself is in hazard."

Baltimore Sun: Yesterday's first shock of horror gives way this morning to a depth of sorrow beyond expression. There is the tragedy of great tasks unfinished, of the plow stopped part way down the furrow, the house left standing in framework, the story checked mid-sentence. No one can now say what Mr. Kennedy's accomplishments would have been had he lived."

Bowlerama Qualifying Postponed

Officials of the Press Bowl-rama late Friday announced the postponement of Sunday's qualifying squads at six county keg establishments.

The action was taken following the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and follows the example set by most athletic events in the country this weekend.

The final qualifying slated for tomorrow at 300 Bowl, Airway Lanes, North Hill Lanes, Wonderland Lanes, Montclair Bowl and Centre and Howe's Lanes will be delayed until next Sunday.

Pre-registration will continue at the various establishments.

All those registering before 5:30 p.m. Friday either at a participating house or the Press sports department will be listed on the squads that will be published in next Saturday's Press.

The finals slated for 300 Bowl have now been moved back from Nov. 30-Dec. 1 to Dec. 7-8; and the awards banquet also will be delayed due to the postponement.

Any additional changes will be announced in Monday's Press.

Golf Tourney Play Delayed

Death of President Stuns Professionals

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP)—Mourning for a slain President cast a pall over the $20,000 Cajun Classic Golf Tournament today and third round play was postponed until Sunday.

"Tournament players and officials of the Professional Golf Association are deeply grieved by the loss of the President," said Joe Black, PGA tournament supervisor.

The final day will be a 36-hole round instead of 18.

FIVE-UNDER PAR
After two rounds over the 36-72 Oakbourne Country Club course, angular Bob Goetz led the field, firing a five-under-par 67 to go with his equally gaudy first round 68.

Rain and the shock of the assassination of President Kennedy in Dallas affected the play of many of the 150 pros. A first round leader, Duke Matthews of Eugene, Ore., zoomed to an 80 and failed to make the cutoff.

Steve Marr Jr. and Jack Rube Jr. dived a stroke behind Goetz with 68s, Jack Nicklaus, ace of the field, had a par 72 for 141.

Romney's Grid Plea Is Accepted

Sports Sounds Still in Memorial Tribute

By The Associated Press
The sounds of sports crowds were still today in memory of a vigorous, sports-loving President.

Dozens of big Saturday football games were canceled. A few others were still scheduled to be played because the people in charge said they felt that President Kennedy would have wanted it.

But half-time shows were replaced with memorial services for the slain President.

ALL T/O OFF
All national television sports programs were canceled today and Sunday.

The annual Yale-Harvard game was one of the first to be called off. The late President played junior varsity football at Harvard.

Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick spoke for sports when he said:

"We all feel a deep loss and at the same time a great sense of shame and unhappiness that this should happen in our country. We are all shocked and in sorrow."

Friday almost all sports events were canceled or postponed after word was received of the President's death.

Most basketball and hockey games were not played. The National television fight was canceled.

Night racing was called off. The remainder of the day racing card was canceled at Narragansett Park after the third race, after the fifth at Pimlico, after the seventh at Aqueduct.

Most tracks will stay closed until Wednesday.

Golfers in the Cajun Classic Tournament at Lafayette, La., played badly and said they didn't care. Today's third round was postponed a day.

Wake Forest 42-0 Friday night at Raleigh, N.C., after John T. Caldwell, chancellor at N.C. State said he "deeply believed

CANCELLATIONS
Saturday football cancellations poured in throughout the night.

A joint Yale-Harvard statement said:

"Out of respect for the memory of the late President of the United States, we have decided that athletic and social activities between Harvard and Yale universities which were scheduled for New Haven shall not take place this weekend."

The 30th football game between these storied-rivals since 1875 may be played Saturday, Nov. 30.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association left it to the colleges involved to do as they saw fit.

Only the Southeastern Conference offered a complete schedule. Most other schools cancelled or postponed their games.

The Southeastern games were: Florida State at Auburn, Tennessee at Kentucky, Tulane at Louisiana State and Florida at Miami.

The Oklahoma-Nebraska game at Nebraska was the only Big Eight game that was not postponed. The game will decide the host team in the Orange-Bowl.

Two Michigan games, Illinois at Michigan State and Ohio State at Michigan, were scheduled to be played, despite a request by Gov. George Romney that they be postponed.

Other Big Ten games were put off. So was Notre Dame-Iowa.

All major games in the East were called off. Big Six games on the West Coast were postponed for a week. They will settle a Rose Bowl bid.

No Wrestling Tonight

There will be no wrestling program at the National Guard and Army tonight. Local match promoter Paul Parks has set up a four-bout schedule for Wednesday, Nov. 27, at 8:30 p.m.

4 NHL Games Receive Go Ahead for Weekend

The National Hockey League is going ahead with its full slate of four weekend games.

President Clarence Campbell said from league headquarters in Montreal Friday that he was prepared to postpone three Sunday night games in the United States.

But he said that would be only under the condition that the U.S. government called for special mourning for President Kennedy.

No such proclamation was forthcoming from the White House Friday night.

Campbell then said the NHL would follow the lead of the National Football League. But he was unable to get in touch with NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

"WE'LL GO TOO"
Told later of a report from New York saying the NFL's seven games set for Sunday would be played as scheduled, Campbell declared quickly:

"Then we'll go too."

The three games sept Montreal Canadiens against the Black Hawks in Chicago, Toronto Maple Leafs against the Rangers in New York and Detroit Red Wings against the Bruins in Boston.

Campbell said no thought was ever given to postponing tonight's Maple Leafs-Bruins game in Toronto.

The death of a head of state was the reason for the postponement of a National Hockey League game in 1952. That was in Canada.

Spartans Play Illinois Thanksgiving Day for Big 10 Title

ANN ARBOR (AP)—Today's Michigan-Ohio State Big Ten football game has been canceled because of the death of President John F. Kennedy. The University of Michigan announced the cancellation shortly after 9 a. m.

EAST LANSING (UPI)—Today's Michigan State-Illinois football game, which would have decided the Big Ten title and the Rose Bowl bid, has been postponed until 1:30 p.m. EST Thursday because of the President's death.

Despite the request from Gov. George Romney, asking state schools to cancel their respective football games the Michigan State-Illinois and Michigan State-Illinois games were to go on as usual today.

Romney was in Omaha for a Midwest governors conference when news of President Kennedy's assassination reached him.

When he forwarded his statement to the Michigan schools, the presidents of MSU, Michigan, Illinois and Ohio State met and issued a joint statement which said, "in the best national interest and tradition," the games would be played and that half-time entertainment would be cancelled and the time taken to pay tribute to the memory of the late President.

Michigan State president John A. Hannah conferred with the board and announced that "the decision was made that we would proceed with the game."

The MSU-Illinois game will decide the Big Ten title and the Rose Bowl participant. A win or tie would give MSU the title and the Rose Bowl bid. Illinois must win to take both.

Chicago Pair in Lead

World Keg Match Stays on Schedule

CHICAGO (AP)—Despite the death of President Kennedy, the seventh annual World's Invitational Bowling Tournament continued today.

In the second day of qualifying the gruelling test, 128 men and 64 women were prepared to bowl.

After the first day, a pair of Chicagoans—J. Wilbert Sims, the only Negro in the men's field, and Olga Gloor, the 1959 champion—were on top in the standings.

The men are shooting six-game blocks through Monday, when the field will be cut to 47 plus defending champion Don Carter of St. Louis. Carter is seeded into the match game finals, which begin Wednesday.

Sims, a 42-year-old postal clerk, set a first-day record of

TAILED OFF

Sims seemed bent on setting a tournament record when he opened with a 749 series for his first three games. But he tailed off to 637 for the final six games and collected 43 out of a possible 67 strikes.

Bob Strampe of Detroit was third with 1,350, thanks to a 290 closing game, high for the tournament. Strampe opened with a spare and then strung 11 strikes for his 290.

In the women's division, Mrs. Gloor averaged almost 200 with her 835, but needed a miss in the 10th frame by Joanne Chapman of Blencoe, Idaho, to keep the lead. Mrs. Chapman, a southpaw, finished with 829 after a 683 start. She rolled a 146 in her last game.

In third place among the 64 women who are shooting for 15 spots in the finals was Donna Zimmerman of Los Angeles, who had 801. Only three women averaged better than 200.

The two defending champions were well back. Marion Ladevig of Grand Rapids, Mich., tied for 14th place with 738, and Carter in a tie for 72nd with 1,156. But both are just going through the motions since they are seeded into the finals.

Tournament officials decided to continue the $48,000 contest despite the President's death because they must vacate the building by Dec. 1.
