NCAA Division II Basketball Committees

The NCAA Division II Men's Basketball Committee administers and supervises the championship each year. The committee's duties include selecting teams, choosing sites and host institutions, making the pairings and formulating the weekly rankings during the season.

Jerry Miles, NCAA director of men's championships, provides administrative assistance to the committee and serves as liaison to the NCAA Executive Committee. Miles has been with the NCAA since 1971.

Paul Rundell has been on the committee since 1977, and now serves as Chair. Rundell is a professor of physical education at San Francisco State University.

In his first year on the committee, Bud Elwell is director of athletics at Gannon University and currently the Chair of the NCAA Division II East Regional Basketball Committee.

Since 1977, Don Leahy, director of athletics at the University of Nebraska-Omaha, has been a member of the committee, and will complete his term this September.

Ed Markey brings to the committee a wealth of experience in Division II basketball. Having coached for 17 years at St. Michael's College, Markey is currently the athletic director there, and is in his third year on the committee.

Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association commissioner Bob Moorman has been on the committee since 1980, and offers a solid administrative background in athletics as well as military experience.

New to the committee is Jim Spalding, director of athletics at Bellarmine College. Spalding has spent over 25 years at Bellarmine as player, coach and now AD.

The Division II Women's Basketball Committee is as new as the championship itself, and performs the same functions as the men's committee.

Cindy Smith is the NCAA assistant director of women's championships, and organizes the committee's efforts with the national office and the Executive Committee.

Chair of the Division II women's basketball committee is Mary Zimmerman, women's athletic director at the University of South Dakota. Zimmerman also serves on the NCAA Executive Committee and is a member of the Amateur Basketball Association of the United States.

Head basketball coach Pat Baker of Grand Valley State Colleges has proven outstanding athletic skills in volleyball and softball as well as basketball.

Pam Gill has been women's basketball coach at the University of California at Davis since 1974, and assistant athletic director since 1978.

Representing Colorado School of Mines is women's head coach Gail Klock, who previously coached women's basketball at Brown University.

Women's athletic director Tiny Laster of Tuskegee Institute serves on the committee and offers his broad-based expertise in college athletics.

Rounding out the women's committee is Paula Mullen, head coach at Bentley College, who has compiled a 46-26 record in her three years at the helm.

THE ROAD TO SPRINGFIELD

Gina McNeal
NCAA

The road to Springfield, site of the 1982 NCAA Division II Men's and Women's Basketball Championships, is a familiar pathway to some and uncharted territory to others.

Of the eight teams participating in the 1982 championships, three have competed in the tournament before and five are new to NCAA post-season competition. The four women's teams—Cal Poly Pomona, Mount St. Mary's, Oakland and Tuskegee—are participants in the inaugural Division II Women's Basketball Championship. One of the men's teams—District of Columbia—is playing in the first post-season tournament in its school's history.

The remaining three men's teams are no strangers to the NCAA Division II championship. Cal State Bakersfield was a tournament team in 1973 and in 1976, but both times the Roadrunners lost in the regional championship. Florida Southern has made five appearances in the tournament, making it to the Final Four three times, including this 1982 appearance. The Moccasins are the defending champions. Kentucky Wesleyan has made the trip 14 times. Only four other teams have traveled to the Division II tourney more times than the Panthers. Kentucky Wesleyan has made it to the Final Four eight times and won the championship four times.

The paths leading to the road to Springfield contained obstacles that these eight teams have overcome. Teams gain entry to the tournament either by winning the championship of a conference with an automatic berth, or by being selected by the Division II Basketball Committee. Presently only the men may qualify as conference champions—all of the women's teams are selected by the six-member Division II Women's Basketball Committee. Eight conferences qualify champions as automatic entrants into the tournament; the remaining 24 teams are selected by the six-member Division II Men's Basketball Committee.

After qualifying for or being selected to the 32-team (for the men) or 16-team (for the women) tournament field, both men and women enter regional competition. The men's teams play two games to determine the eight regional champions who will move on to quarterfinal competition. The women's teams play one game in regional competition to narrow the field to eight quarterfinal teams. The quarterfinal winners advance to the Final Four.

District of Columbia defeated Virginia Union and Mount St. Mary's in regional competition, then dropped Cheyney State in the quarterfinal. Cal State Bakersfield was victorious over San Francisco State, Cal Poly San Luis Obispo and North Dakota on its way to the Final Four. Florida Southern's victims were Northwest Missouri State, Livingston (Alabama) and Southeast Missouri State. Kentucky Wesleyan had to defeat Wright State (Ohio) and Central State (Ohio), then win over Sacred Heart in the quarterfinal for its Final Four berth.

On the women's side, the Cal Poly Pomona Broncos defeated San Francisco State and Fort Valley State (Georgia) in the West region to gain entrance to the history-making tournament. Mount St. Mary's battled Virginia Union and Norfolk to win the South Atlantic regional. Oakland won the Great Lakes region with wins over Northern Kentucky and Chapman (California), and Tuskegee Institute won the South regional by defeating Clark (Georgia) and Springfield.

The road to Springfield has been a tough and exciting one. All eight teams travel it in search of the ultimate prize—the national championship. Only two will attain it, but for the others, there's always next year!

NCAA Salutes the City of Springfield

JOHN W. O'DONNELL

THOMAS M. GLYNN

VAUGHN RIST

For the third consecutive year, John W. O'Donnell serves as Chair of the Springfield Committee for the NCAA Division II Basketball Championships. Only this time, women are competing for a national title as well as men. O'Donnell and his myriad of local committees have taken the challenge in stride.

O'Donnell, executive vice president of Milton Bradley Company, and president and general manager of the company's game and educational divisions, offers his experience and athletic background in conducting the championships.

O'Donnell is a former basketball star of American International College [hosting the events along with Springfield College] and was captain of the Yellow Jackets in 1956 when they won the New England Small College Championship. In 1968 he was named to the all-time AIC basketball team.

Assisting O'Donnell are Thomas M. Glynn, plant manager of Shulton Inc., and Vaughn Rist, director of employee relations of A.G. Spalding.

In addition to these gentlemen, the NCAA proudly salutes the people of Springfield for their dedicated efforts. The following is a list of committee leaders:

NCAA Is The Voice of College Athletics

Progress and growth have become familiar companions for the National Collegiate Athletic Association during its first 76 years as the major governing organization for intercollegiate athletics in the United States.

A call for stricter control of college football by President Theodore Roosevelt because of the violence in the game brought together 13 institutions in 1905, formulating the original communications base for college athletics.

This initial body called itself the Intercollegiate Athletic Association and was officially constituted March 31, 1906. In 1910, the name was changed to the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Seven progressive decades have molded this original 13-member body into a membership today of more than 880 colleges, universities, conferences and affiliated organizations.

Administration and rules interpretation occupied early efforts of the organization. Shortly after World War II, the NCAA adopted legislative and executive powers, changing its function into one dealing with virtually all issues concerned with intercollegiate athletics.

Many things have become associated with the NCAA during its colorful history. Highest priority goes to the service it provides to more than 880 members, acting as the true "voice" of college athletics today.

Each January, the NCAA membership comes together at the annual Convention to review, propose and amend legislation. The Convention presents the opportunity for the nation's institutions of higher learning to speak and act on athletic matters at the national level.

Acting in the best interests of its membership, the NCAA strives to perform these specific functions among its many other responsibilities:

- Conducts 43 annual National Collegiate Championships in 19 sports for men in three separate divisions. Three championships (Division I, Division II and Division III) are held in baseball, basketball, cross country, golf, lacrosse, soccer, swimming, tennis, outdoor track and wrestling. Two championships (Division I and Division II-III) are staged in gymnastics and ice hockey. Fencing, rifle, skiing, indoor track, volleyball and water polo hold single National Championships, while football is contested in Divisions I-AA, II athletes have competed in these events, with more than 12,000 earning the coveted title of "National Collegiate Champion."

- Maintains 14 rules committees to formulate, copyright and publish rules of play for the government of collegiate sports. Members of these and many other committees are elected by representatives of member institutions at the annual Convention.

- Publishes "official guides" annually for nine sports through the NCAA Publishing Service.

and III. And this year, the NCAA begin conducting 29 annual National Collegiate Championships in 12 sports for women in three separate divisions. Three championships will be held in basketball, cross country, field hockey, softball, swimming, tennis, outdoor track and volleyball. Two championships will be staged in gymnastics and one in fencing, golf and lacrosse. The National Collegiate Championship dates back to 1883 in tennis; and during this 99-year history, more than 85,000 student-

- Collects, compiles and distributes the official statistics of college football, basketball and baseball through its NCAA Statistics Service.

- Conducts studies as a means of developing solutions to athletic problems.

- Represents the membership in legislative and regulatory matters on the state and federal levels.

- Annually selects the College Athletics Top Ten and the Theodore Roosevelt ("Teddy") Award—the Association's highest honor.

- Administers an honors program which annually awards 80 postgraduate scholarships to recognize outstanding senior student-athletes who have excelled in the classroom as well as athletics. This scholarship is for $2,000. The program has provided $1,584,000 to 1,264 recipients since its inception in the 1964-65 academic year.

- Promotes and participates in international sports planning and competition through membership in the United States Olympic Committee, Amateur Basketball Association of the USA, Track and Field Association of the USA, and the United States Baseball, Gymnastics and Wrestling Federations, as well as through NCAA-sponsored competition with Japan.

- Maintains more than 80 full-time staff members at its national headquarters in Mission, Kansas, under the supervision of Executive Director Walter Byers.

American International College

American International College, which was founded in 1885, is an independent, private, co-ed college devoted to the education of individuals of all races, nationalities, and religious creed.

AIC has an undergraduate enrollment of 1600 students, with some 35 majors available in the four undergraduate schools; Arts & Sciences, Business Administration, Psychology & Education, and the Division of Nursing. As an AIC student, one may choose a program of study from any of these schools; majors include economics, public administration, pre-medicine, pre-dentistry, criminal justice, psychology, and the newest major, computer science—information systems.

Graduate level courses are offered through the College of Continuing & Graduate Studies. Graduate degrees include Masters of Arts (in Teaching, Human Relations and Educational Psychology), Master of Business Administration, Master of Education; Master of Science in Clinical Psychology and Criminal Justice; Master of Public Administration; and Certificate of Advanced Graduate Study in School Psychology.

The faculty at AIC hold their highest degrees from more than 30 different institutions throughout the U.S. and abroad; about 65% of the faculty have earned doctoral degrees or other terminal credentials in their fields. Although the faculty's major commitment is in teaching and guidance of the individual students, publishing and research are important activities, also, and the works of AIC faculty members have appeared in professional and academic journals throughout the nation and the world.

The college campus is comprised of two major areas, totalling 52 acres with shuttle busses running between the old campus and the Edgewood Gardens Campus. The old campus is the academic heart of AIC and is comprised of the James J. Shea Sr. Memorial Library, the Schwartz Campus Center, the Dining Commons, three dormitories, faculty and administrative offices, and three major classroom facilities: Amaron Hall, Breck Hall of Science, and Biology Hall. In 1980, the new library wing increased the collection capacity to 125,000 volumes. The Curtis Blake Child Development Center, a teaching and research facility, was built and funded by Curtis Blake, one of the founders of the Friendly Ice Cream Corporation.

Edgewood Gardens has 37 acres of athletic and recreational facilities including the Henry A. Butova Gymnasium, the John Homer Miller Football Field, tennis courts and dormitories. Athletics and recreation are an important aspect of college life at AIC. Intercollegiate sports include football, basketball, baseball, golf, hockey, soccer, and tennis for men and softball, volleyball, and basketball for women.

AIC also offers students many opportunities to increase cultural and social growth. Student Government is an important part of campus life; through this organization, students learn the democratic process. The college radio station, WAIC-FM and the student newspaper, the Yellow Jacket, are great opportunities for students with journalistic interest. The Afro-American Cultural Center has social, cultural, and academic activities promoting understanding and awareness. The Religious Center is staffed by clergy of different faiths, reflecting the interdenominational character of the College. Other campus clubs include Ski Club, a literary magazine, Hospital Volunteers, AIC Chorale, Garret Players theatre troupe, chess and Spanish clubs, and many others. Lectures, art exhibits, musicals, and dramatic productions give students several choices for involvement and participation.

American International College is accredited by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges.

... Springfield College

BOB MARX

Sports Information Director
Springfield College

When the sport of basketball is discussed the conversation usually begins with Springfield College. It was November of 1891 when Dr. James Naismith, then a young faculty member at Springfield, invented the game and introduced it to his Springfield College physical education classes.

Through the years the College has maintained a leadership role in the sport, producing more Hall of Famers (the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame is situated on the SC campus) than any other school in the country.

Winning basketball teams have been a tradition at Springfield, and no coach has won more than current mentor Ed Bilik. His team is seeking a third straight NCAA playoff bid for this season.

Springfield College was among the pioneers in women's basketball as well, and in 19 years the teams have compiled 17 winning seasons. Both teams are members of the Northeast-8 Conference and compete in Division II of the NCAA.

Through the years the College has placed emphasis on the education of the total person—the spirit, the mind, the body—for service to humanity that is international, intercultural, interracial and interreligious. This distinctive educational philosophy is known as Humanics.

Founded in 1885, Springfield College has educated more than 16,000 people who are at work throughout the United States and 62 nations of the world. They hold professional positions as teachers, physical educators, community recreation leaders, educational administrators, Boy and Girl Scout executives, YMCA and YWCA executives, coaches, guidance counselors, social workers and medical technicians. They are "people helpers." Today, Springfield is a small, private, nonsectarian, coeducational institution with an undergraduate enrollment of just over 2,000.

The Springfield College campus, while located in the geographical center of Springfield, Massachusetts, is approximately 2 miles from the business district of the city of approximately 160,000 people. Surrounded on three sides by residential neighborhoods, the main campus is also bordered by Lake Massasoit. Twenty-five buildings comprise our primary campus with such major facilities as our new $5.3 million physical education complex, the Art Linkletter Natatorium—one of the finest indoor aquatic facilities in the country—the 111,000 volume Babson Library, Bemis Science Center, Towne Student Health Center, Dana Fine Arts Building and many more.

In addition to our main campus,

DR. EDWARD S. STEITZ
Director of Athletics
Springfield College

Springfield is fortunate to have an additional 81 acres of woods and fields known as East Campus. About a mile from the main campus, this area provides an ideal setting for work in conservation, camping, recreation and natural sciences. It also includes a waterfront area for swimming and boating.

With the addition of three women's sports last year, Springfield College now participates in 25 varsity sports (13 men's, 12 women's). Two of these, basketball and volleyball, were invented by Springfield people.

Springfield College's new $5.3 million Physical Education Complex, featuring the domed Blake Arena, will be the site of a number of NCAA Championship events, including this year's NCAA Division II Gymnastic Championships.

History of Women's Basketball

TRICIA BROWN
Springfield College

Dr. James Naismith had no idea it would ever be played by women.

But, it didn't take the women long to catch on as they started playing basketball on a college campus one year after the first public men's basketball game was played in Springfield, Mass.

Women's basketball has come a long way since the first official game was played at Smith College on March 22, 1893. The Classes of 1895 (Sophomores) and 1896 (Freshmen) played each other in a game closed to men because the young ladies were clad in bloomers and long-sleeved, button-up blouses. The game, which was a low scoring affair, 5-4 with the sophomores winning, thereafter became an annual event on the Northampton, Mass., campus.

In less than 85 years, basketball for women, was played throughout the world and became an official Olympic sport in 1976.

Most responsible for bringing basketball to Smith College was Miss Senda Berenson. A Lithuanian, born in 1868, she was the Smith physical education director from 1892 to 1911. Miss Berenson stressed that she felt "We should encourage the instinct to play, not necessarily competition." Playing for the joy of playing was enough. As a result of this feeling, she was against intercollegiate play. "Mild competition is good, and, indeed necessary, but this can be brought about in inter-class play," she said. Thus, Smith did not compete in intercollegiate basketball until 1971!

In his book, Basketball, by Dr. James Naismith published in 1941, he noted that Miss Berenson attended a physical education convention at Yale in 1893 where she first approached the game's inventor. She inquired as to whether women could play the game and Dr. Naismith informed her Miss Maude Sherman of Springfield, later to become Mrs. James Naismith, had organized a group of clerical workers and faculty wives who were playing basketball on an informal basis in Springfield at the old Buckingham Grade School.

Miss Berenson organized the inter-class game at Smith College immediately upon her return from Yale. Soon after, Bryn Mawr took up basketball, and in April, 1893, it was introduced in Greenville, Texas, by Mrs. H.L. Carver. One of the first intercollegiate games was played April 4, 1895, between California and Stanford.

In the blossoming years of women's basketball, physical and moral self-control were emphasized. "Physical education should not only produce health and endurance, and poise and self-control, but it can be made the most direct way of bringing out ethical, mental and moral forces—making the human body a splendid instrument with which to meet all life's activities more easily, more vitally and more joyously," according to Miss Berenson.

"Enthusiasm without hysteria" was what she wanted.

From the beginning, many saw basketball, with or without rule changes, could be played by women, but it was Miss Berenson who was most responsible for the major rule changes in women's basketball which influenced women's physical education for the next three-quarters of a century.

Soon after the game was introduced, it was obvious there was a great tendency toward roughness. Therefore, Miss Berenson made a few rule changes:

- A player could not snatch nor bat the ball from opponents' hands;
- A player could not hold the ball more than three seconds; and,
- The court was divided into three areas with each player limited to one of the areas.

Each of these changes, with which minor modifications exist into the mid-20th century, were accomplished at Smith College within two years of the origin of the game. The fact that the Senda Berenson-Smith College rules were the basis for 20th century women's basketball does not imply that these rules were quickly adopted.

In 1899 a women's basketball committee of four was formed by representatives of Oberlin, Radcliffe and Smith Colleges and the Boston Normal School of Gymnastics. Miss Berenson, the Smith representative, became editor of what the committee agreed upon as the official rules. Even though the committee got A.G. Spalding Co. to publish the official rules as late as 1914, one authority believed one-half to two-thirds were playing at least five different versions of women's basketball.

By the 1920s leaders of women's physical education were in rather general agreement the promotion of women's intercollegiate basketball was an evil practice. In a 1923 survey of 50 colleges it was found only 11 allowed intercollegiate competition, while 93 percent of the physical educators opposed it.

The direction women's basketball would take in the colleges for the next generation had been set by the 1920s. The game was to differ from the men's in terms of rules, and was not to be played intercollegiately. If women still desired some type of athletic relationship with other colleges, then some type of sporting activity other than intercollegiate competition had to be found.

So, by 1930, it was reported 80 percent of all colleges had "play days." This consisted of girls from a number of schools gathering together for a day of sports activities ranging from basketball to tennis. Individual schools would not compete against each other. Teams composed of players from a number of schools would play. Thus, "play days" were the means by which girls from different institutions could socialize athletically.

As the years rolled on a change in thinking concerning the amount and type of physical activity in which women could participate took place. This reflected the influence that men's intercollegiate athletics had on women's athletics.

The first National Women's AAU Basketball Championship was held in 1926 at Pasadena, Calif., and became an annual event in 1929.

A survey in 1951 and another in 1954 revealed the "play day" concept was still the most popular form of athletic competition for women in college. Attitudes, however, were changing toward intercollegiate athletics. By 1955, half of the women physical educators avored intercollegiate team sports, while 70 percent favored individual sports on an intercollegiate basis. In the Eastern area of the United States, about one-third of the schools sponsored intercollegiate basketball. It was a startling change from that of the period dominated by "play days."

The 1960s saw, not only a change from "play day" toward greater intercollegiate competition, but also rule changes which made the women's game resemble the men's game. By then the Division for Girls' and Women's Sports was working closely with the influential AAU Basketball Committee on the standardization and modification of rules.

Among the notable events in recent history of women's basketball are the following:

1969—West Chester State (Pa.) hosted the first national invitational college tournament for women; first time college women squads competed in a national tournament without AAU teams; provided impetus to form the AIAW.

1969—Denise Long, an Iowa school girl scored 1,968 points to close out her career at Union-Whitten High School in which she scored 6,250 points from 1965 through 1969.

1971—Women's rules changed size of team from six to five players.

1972—Beginning of national collegiate championship for women (AIAW). Immaculata defeated West Chester State 52-48 for title at Illinois State.

1974—Immaculata won third straight AIAW title in third annual national championship 68-53 over Mississippi College at Kansas State University.

Basketball's 90th Anniversary Year

JERRY HEALY
Basketball Hall of Fame

Ninety years ago this month—March 11, 1892—a product of Presbyterian College and McGill University from Bennie's Corner, Ontario, would never have dreamed what he accomplished in a gymnasium in Springfield, Mass., would become an international sport!

In this, the 90th Anniversary Year of Basketball—the only major sport founded in America—Dr. James Naismith's experiment is played in almost 150 nations throughout the world, and, plans are well under way to construct an all-new Basketball Hall of Fame in the city where it was first played.

A crowd of over 200 spectators attended the first public game played between students and teachers at the School for Christian Workers, now known as Springfield College. The students won 5-1. Before the end of that year the game was played in Mexico and by 1920 basketball was being played on all continents! No other sport's popularity can match the spread of basketball internationally.

Some of the most outstanding personalities in the 90-year history of the cage sport are directly involved in planning the new museum and shrine dedicated to basketball and its inventor, Dr. James Naismith. All-America (Holy Cross) and all-Pro (Boston Celtics) Bob Cousy, a member of the Hall of Fame, heads a campaign to raise $2.5 million to construct the facility in Basketball City, U.S.A.

Since Dr. Naismith put up his first peach basket in December, 1891, the game has achieved great heights, climaxed by the official recognition of the sport in the 1936 Berlin Olympics.

It is significant that the 1936 Olympics, attended by Dr. Naismith, served as the catalyst for the Basketball Hall of Fame.

Following his return from Berlin, the National Association of Basketball Coaches decided to build a memorial to Dr. Naismith in the city where he invented the game. Plans were put aside during World War II and interrupted several times, but NABC's dream became a reality in February, 1968, when the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame opened on the Springfield College campus.

NABC President Dean Smith of North Carolina, through the group's executive director Joseph Vancisin, has continued to support the Basketball Hall of Fame. The coaches' association has contributed $50,000 to the new facility and members are contributing individually. NABC has annually donated funds to pay the mortgage on the Naismith Memorial.

The Basketball Hall of Fame is one of the major tourist attractions in the Northeast. Average annual attendance is 40,000 people visiting the museum and shrine to "The American Game" from all corners of the world.

On its three floors the entire history of the game is dramatically displayed. The most popular section, naturally, is the Honors Court where 125 individuals and four teams are enshrined as members of the Basketball Hall of Fame. Twenty individuals have been nominated for induction to be held Monday, May 3, in Springfield, Mass. A special Honors

Committee of 16 will select the new electees, who must receive at least 12 of the 16 votes to be enshrined in the world's only Basketball Hall of Fame. Enshrinees are selected in four categories: player, coach, referee, and contributor.

"Basketball is a world sport and it is only fitting we highlight the entire game in the Basketball Hall of Fame," Lee Williams, executive director, said. "We trace the growth and development of basketball into an international sport as the only major sport founded in America."

The Basketball Hall of Fame is open 362 days a year; closed only Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Days. The hours are: September through June, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and July through Labor Day, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

It is interesting to note that basketball is the only major sport that can be played 12 months a year, both indoors and outdoors, by men and women.

The Basketball Hall of Fame is a memorial to Dr. James Naismith who founded the game in 1891, as the national and international museum to the only major American sport founded in America. Basketball is now played in 142 nations around the world.

History of Women's Basketball . . .

1975—First women's collegiate game in Madison Square Garden; attendance 11,000-plus saw Immaculata play Queens.

1975—Delta State upset Immaculata 90-81 to win AIAW national championship at Madison College, Harrisonburg, Va. Immaculata had not lost an AIAW tournament game in four years.

1976—Women's basketball became an Olympic event with the U.S.A. winning a silver medal, bowing to USSR 112-77 in the championship game at Montreal.

1978—Carol Blazejowski of Montclair State became the first recipient of the coveted Margaret Wade Trophy as the nation's most outstanding female collegiate basketball player. It is named for Coach Margaret Wade of Delta State, a pioneer in the establishment and advancement of women's collegiate basketball.

1978—At Milwaukee Arena, a crowd of over 7,000 turned out for the official opening of the Women's Professional Basketball League. The final score: Chicago Hustle 92, Milwaukee Does 87.

1979—Ann Meyers, former Olympian and four-time UCLA all-America, became the first woman to sign an NBA contract; signed with Indiana Pacers but didn't make the team. Her UCLA uniform is on display at the Basketball Hall of Fame.

1980—Old Dominion defeated Tennessee 68-53 at Mount Pleasant Mich., to win its second straight AIAW championship. The game was nationally televised.

1980—Nancy Lieberman of Old Dominion received the Margaret Wade Trophy for the second straight year as the most outstanding player in women's collegiate basketball. The Wade Trophy is on display at the Basketball Hall of Fame with color photographs of each recipient.

1981—Annette Kennedy, five-foot-nine,

(SUNY-Purchase) scored 70 points in 116-21 win over Pratt breaking the women's collegiate single-game mark of 60 set by Pearl Monroe of Francis Marion College in 1978.

Collegiate women's basketball had for the first seven decades of the 20th Century been in many ways a dominating physical activity and sport. It had seen many transformations. Rules had been changed and later returned to almost their original form. The early examples of intercollegiate competition, which had nearly been given a death knell, returned to thrive again.

With the introduction of the first National Invitational Collegiate Women's Basketball Tournament in 1969, the development of the AIAW, and now the major role of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, it is probable that basketball, the only American-born major sport, will continue to play an important role in the sporting activities of women throughout the world.

Our best keeps getting better.

For over 121 years we've been doing our best to educate and entertain you and your children. We established our reputation for excellence with our fine board games, card games, skill and action games, and puzzles. We have applied the newest scientific and technological advances to bring you electronic games and toys that open up new dimensions of fun and excitement. At the same time, our traditionally fine teaching aids continue to be relied upon by educators from coast to coast.

Our Playskool pre-school toys and puzzles provide your child with a wonderful play-and-learn world that rewards creativity and enhances active involvement.

Every day we are working to give you even more fun and excitement, even greater challenges, keenly aware that our reputation tomorrow depends on our performance today.

As we were saying, our best keeps getting better. For you. Thanks to your appreciation of quality.
