OU administrators take first step in battle for college enrollments

By NAED YELNATS
Staff Writer

In what many observers termed as a justified "pre-emptive first strike", OU effectively destroyed Oakland Community College's educational capabilities Sunday.

Using plans from the Kresge Library and the engineering school's records, a crack team of Physicists working out of a small laboratory in Hannah Hall, in less than two weeks, developed the world's smallest nuclear device, said one insider.

"IT WAS ALL we could do to fit it (the device) into that tupperware bowl," said major George "Patt" Stormer, military advisor for the project.

Tupperware was chosen because of its proven sealing compared the price differences between the two, tupperware was the most cost-effective way to go," he said.

"THERE WAS no time to test any of the components, so when the word was given (to nuke OCC) we had no choice but to deliver it, cross our fingers, and cover our ears," Major Stormer said.

The blast which left Auburn Hills, OCC's outpost, an "educational nightmare" was slightly less powerful than 1200 sticks of TNT.

OU President, Joe (tiny) Bubbles, was unavailable for properties, and its availability on short notice. "Titanium was our second choice, but that stuff's so expensive and with the project's budget...well, you can imagine when we comment, early Monday and is rumored to still be living in the administrative fallout shelter; apparently he has not been notified of the crushing victory just south of Featherstone road.

A UNIVERSITY spokesman told a group of reporters and TV newsmen Monday evening of OCC's academic demise.

"Speaking for the university and everyone involved with this great achievement, I can say truthfully, that we are now in a position of world domination," he said.

"Furthermore, the administration feels that by using this first-strike on OCC we have shown other institutions in southeastern Michigan, and even surrounding states, that OU is a viable entity capable of academic excellence and awesome nuclear might," he concluded.

THIS ACTION constitutes the first use of a nuclear weapon by a public institution anywhere to date, which many experts say will cause an imbalance in higher education in Michigan and the world.

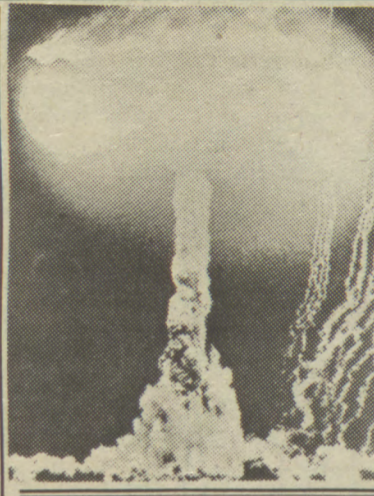

One reason given for the seemingly unprovoked attack was the fact that Auburn Hills was once a Nike missile base.

"We (the administration) weren't sure if the army had taken all the mobile units out when the base was taken over for conversion to educational activities," said the spokesman.

"WITH THE economy the way it is, we figured that it was either them or us...that and the chance they might still have one or even two of those missiles left over from the army's pull-out," he said.

Admissions at OU will probably take a big jump in the near future.

"As the area surrounding Auburn Hills' site will remain radioactive for the next 120 years, our admissions will increase markedly and you can take that to the bank," said one undergraduate advisor.

Rats angry over residence move, voice complaints

By STORMY WEATHERS

Two hundred rats camped outside of the Provost's Office last Tuesday night to protest their proposed move into Anibal Hall.

The rats are upset that they may have to pack up their belongings and move from their residence in Hannah Hall.

"SOME OF US have been living here all our lives," said one rat. "I like the idea that we were the only ones who lived there. I do not like the idea of having to move into a neighborhood occupied by... yeech, humans!"

"College students are the lowest form of life," said another. "That's why they have to wear coverings on their bodies. It's because they're so disgusting. My wife jumps up on a chair whenever she sees a human enter the room at Hannah. She'd go just crazy if she had to be around them all day long."

Provost Keith Krackers tried to calm the rats, who had been sleeping outside his office for eight hours, but only angered them more. (See Rats, page 2)

Hayakawa class to take subject laying down

By I.M. TIRED

Most professors assign a book for their classes to read, but next semester two departments will mix their disciplines to offer students an unique reading opportunity.

"Students complained that they wanted to know more about the authors of the books they read, so we're going to tell them," said Sam Antics, professor in Semantics, and Lynn Gystix, assistant professor of Linguistics, in a prepared statement to the press.

Antics and Gystix are teaming up with people in the Psychology Department's sleep lab to enhance students' readings in Language in Thought and Action, by S.I. Hayakawa.

"Students go to China to add to their Chinese studies, and go to GM for computer science, so why not have them go to sleep to enhance their studies of Hayakawa?" said Gystix.

Hayakawa was a U.S. Senator until the last general election, when he was ousted by Johnny Carson. He blames the last-night entertainer for the loss because of the repeated jabs he made at the ex-Senator's habit of sleeping through Senate sessions.

Students in the new course will re-enact Hayakawa's life. OU officials have received the go-ahead from various state and U.S. representatives from Michigan to begin construction of a replica of the Washington, D.C., Capitol Building.

Lecturers will read the book to the sleeping students, "just like S.I. listened to the Senate debates," said Antics.

Cost-cutting move results in death of dorm resident

By STORMY WEATHERS
Staph Infection

A residence hall student was killed last week when 100 pounds of potatoes exploded in his dorm room.

The student, Joe Joczdrap, had bought the spuds in order to reduce his food costs while residing at Hamlin Hall, but evidently they exploded when some of them began to ferment and fill the room with methane gas.

Fire investigators said any spark could have ignited the fumes and the victim's roommate offered a possible solution.

"JOE SUFFERED from chronic static cling," Peter Cupp said. "Sometimes at night he would read in the dark by rubbing the kness of his pajamas against the bedsheets. I blame faulty Cling-Free sheets for his death."

JOCZDRAP'S DEATH has spread a wave of fear among students. It was incorrectly reported last week that a freshman lost six toes when he accidentally dropped a french fry on the floor of the Abstention. Dr. Ives Gotznoshaim, professor of physics, offered his own theory for the volatile potatoes.

"It is my guess that the potatoes in question were grown in an area of Utah where the government extensively tested nuclear bombs in the 1950's. Some of the fallout mixed with the soil in which the potatoes were grown; thus producing the world's first hydrogen spuds," he said.

HIS THEORY was found to be groundless after the professor was arrested for extortion. Gotznoshaim entered OU President Joe (tiny) Bubbles' office with a plate of hash browns and threatened to blow him up if Bubbles did not grant the professor a $20,000 raise.

Gotznoshaim was arrested and the hash browns were taken to Belle Isle, where a bomb squad attempted for three hours to detonate them. Upon their failure, the crew retrieved the plate and had breakfast.

Print shop to ease cash crunch

Oakland's budget is no longer in the red and the outlook for the future is brighter than it's ever been. The university has money again.

More money than it knows what to do with, say some insiders. "It's like a dream come true, this is better than windfall profits," said one university official.

"There's so much more revenue these days that we've considered contracting for two new science buildings, an entirely new library, and an upgraded theatre," said a spokesman for the president.

The question people have been asking is, where did all this money come from? Who's this financial savior, this benign benefactor?

The answer is, nobody in particular. The university has just become rich on a very simple idea: if you need more money than you've got, make it yourself. They did, and still are.

"We had an Executive Budget meeting last month and just brainstormed," said a member of the committee. "We needed more money so we said,

'what's the easiest way to make money, besides working for the administration? With paper and ink.'"

Since that meeting over five weeks ago, the university printshop has been working overtime. "It gets so hot in this place sometimes I wish I could chuck it all, but when they told us we could have whatever fell on the floor I decided to stay on at least a couple of days more," said one printshop employee who refused to be identified. "Yeah, I guess you could say I'm on easy street," he said.

Winged campus cruisers voice opposition to us

Dear Editor,

Most of the students complain about us, well, we'd like some equal time.

Go ahead and call us names for leaving things on the sidewalks around campus, but it's your faults to begin with. I can remember many years ago when we got real donations from students, good stuff to eat.

But nowadays, it's all junk. Our only recourse is to leave it for you people to pick up again. Granted it may be a little difficult to get back into some of the wrappers, but that's your problem.

So be snots, but just watch where you step.

Collective bargaining of this sort also has the potential to set up factory-like conflict between "workers" (professors) and "management" (administration)—hardly an atmosphere conducive to a smoothly-run university in any normal sense.

As time passed, the sectors became more important and conflicts arose. Another early introduction, this one to stress.

The problem is that the forms were received on Wednesday and due the following Monday. Late penalty being the Basketball would assume they wanted to use the 1982-83.

A spokesman for the president said that the only people who would even remotely be in the position of losing their jobs would be those in the Budget Office.

"It's ironic, but true; the Budget Office could be eliminated altogether. Why worry about balancing the budget when you can throw money at a deficit in less than 24 hours?" he said.

"The government's been doing it for years, and we're a state school. So we figure that if the Feds come in and bust up our operation it would be a case of the pot calling the kettle black," he added.

Officer is unlike the movie star

Dear Editor:

In your last issue an article mentioned that a police car drove past a lady who had fallen in the rain, and that the officer drove past without stopping.

It is our policy to recognize all potentially unsafe conditions, and to at least let the victims know we know of their problems. Even when we are busy, we at least give them a time when we will be there to help. Referring back to the article last week, that cop was me. I did see her and when I drove by, I splashed mud on her.

OOOOhh!

That's trite

Not like most , is best

Most Editors-in-Chief would have given you their swan song about six pages earlier, but I'd like to think I'm not like most editors.

This won't be a boring recap on the past few years of my college career, either. They get dull and put off a lot of people. Instead, here comes a sit-down style stand-up editorial.

I certainly hope you like this issue, as a break from the run of the mill Sails and for a bit of humor during the dark time of finals. So cheer up.

Look at it this way. Over four years you're gonna take a lot of tests. Then consider how insignificant the ones you have this week are, what with inflation they'll be worthless soon, and I'll see you at the bar and you can buy me a drink. No, eh?

Anyway, this is our April Fools issue/insert. Some people say we come out with an April Fools issue every week.

It would have been out in time for April 1st, but then it wouldn't have been much of an April Fools joke, now would it?

If you got that one, stop by and help me explain it to the staff.

We did win an award, a first place. Everybody is excited and there should be more in the future. Thank you.

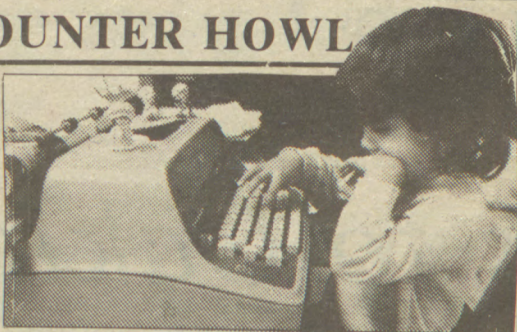

While I sit here, looking out of the Sail aquarium, there are many nameless people walking and running by. They're nameless to me, that is.

In the last year many others have become named, to me, but still OU has quite a few strangers. And in a few weeks, a couple hundred of us will be released into the macrocosm of nameless bodies.

One can only hope that some of us will become names and do something for the world. Because then, we wouldn't be like most names.

Well, Nicki, I really think you're barking up the wrong tree with that column of yours. You can't really expect me to love that James Watt, Secretary of the Interior, doesn't think of his constituents. I personally donated a lot to his campaign funds to make sure he gets rid of some of those trees out west. Fire hydrants are so much more modern. And to think people are making him lead the dog's life. Just because he doesn't want the Beach Boys to play at the party for his fourth celebrations. Watt is right, and I don't care what Nancy says (anyone who dresses in so much red must be a red. I don't trust her!)

If people want to hear the Beach Boys, let them go to the beach. Bring on the Bow Wow Wows, the Rovers and The Animals--I could howl along with them all night (if the neighbors would only let me).

I'd like to lift my leg on that argument of yours too, Nicki, about putting the nuclear arms build up on freeze. What do you want, to see America whipped like a dog? Do you want us to come nose to nose with those huskie Ruskiies and end up having to go home with our tails between our legs?

I say keep escalating the arms build up. We'll show 'em one day that our bite is worse than our bark, and you can quote me on that.

I'd like to pick a bone with you too, Nicki, over your point about keeping politics out of the Olympics. Ridiculous! This is the best way the world can form the right packs - and everybody knows those that howl together play towel together.

I sense your heart is in the right place, Nicki, so keep trying. May you always find green grass and a fire hydrant when you need one.

Knife fighting comes to Oakland

By STORMY WEATHERS
Staff Writer

New athletic director, Saul Heartless, has revealed his plans to reshape the sports program.

Heartless, who served a previous term as athletic director at Leavenworth Prison in Kansas, indicated that several new sports will be added that he found successful in previous experiences.

"We were very successful with knife fighting at Leavenworth," said Heartless. "Of course it was an intramural sport so we quickly ran out of teams due to attrition. I hope that at Oakland we could have knife fights with several schools in the region. I hope I have no difficulty getting it approved by the NCAA but they're a bunch of cutthroats anyway."

Another sport that Heartless is enthusiastic about is wall climbing. "This sport consists of two teams engaged in totally different functions. One team tries to climb over a series of concrete walls and barbed wire fences while another patrols the area with dogs and weapons. The objective of the first team is to make it across all the walls while the second team's objective is to stop them by unleashing their hounds and rattling off a few rounds of ammunition."

Heartless said that there are some minor problems involved in these two athletic activities.

"We usually have a problem with keeping a full roster of players. After a bad game or two, they usually do not return to competition," he said.

Heartless said that he plans to eliminate certain sports at OU including all female sports participation.

"Where I come from, we don't have too many females and the ones that are smuggled in don't last long. I'm not used to feminine sports, only manly ones," he said.

Heartless also hopes to change the colors of the OU teams' uniforms.

"I would rather have something in basic grey than black and gold," he said.

"Instead of having players' numbers such as 5, 15, and 50, I would like to have numbers on the uniforms like CX144251."

Bubbles shanks golfers

By MIKE STEWART
Sports Editor

President Joe (tiny) Bubbles was outraged today, after Pioneer golfer Scott, "The Hook" Callfore apparently bounced a devastating tee shot off the side of O'Dowd Hall, causing a massive domino breaking effect on the building's windows.

Callfore lined up his tree shot on Katke-Cousins' 13th hole and lost sight of the drive as it zoomed over Meadow Brook Hall.

Just seconds later, the complete East side of O'Dowd collapsed, bringing the rest of the building with it, as the hall diminished into nothingness.

Upon arriving at the scene, Bubbles exclaimed, "This is a disgrace!"

The building?

"No! This golf ball. Look, a brand new ball with a slice in it already!"

Bubbles surveyed the situation and demanded that whoever duffed the errant shot should turn himself in.

"Geez, I've heard of cheap shots before, but this has gone too far," noted Bubbles.

"I'm not sure, but it may have been me," Callfore said. "I lined up my tee shot, noted that the wind was north-northeast, southeast, south west, at exactly 13 mph. Now, the sun was at exactly 27 degrees at the square of the earth's atmosphere and..."

"Wait! Oh no!" Bubbles said. "No wonder! It wasn't the ball; the architects warned me that if those exact conditions ever occurred it would cause O'Dowd to self destruct."

Still, because the golf team caused a possible hassle, Bubbles ordered the squad to piece together the entire building with Elmers Glue-All.

After some time, the golf team could be heard complaining. Pioneer coach George Caddie let Bubbles know how disgusted he was.

"Mr. Bubbles, this isn't the fairway of doing things. I mean, it's really rough trying to piece all these chips together. Why don't you get off your duff and drive to the store and buy some new windows before I Club you."

"I'm sorry I caused such a commotion over this crummy building," Bubbles said. "Those windows are a hazard. Why, just yesterday there was a hole in one."

Markston likes his Fanny

By MIKE STEWART
Staff Writer

John Markston, head coach of the 'swimmin' women', today announced the signing of the newest addition to the Pioneer swim team.

Fanny Firm, a transfer to OU from the Playboy Club and Hotel in Las Vegas, will be the Pioneer's number one ranked breastroker said Markston.

"This is just what I, ah, our team needed," said an ecstatic Markston. "Fanny gives our team a whole new look, a new shape."

Markston noted that with Firm, the team now has the depth to attain a national championship.

"Fanny does everything so well, when she gets in the water she looks so smooth, her form is perfect, and, in general, she just looks great," Markston panted. "Not only that, she swims quite well."

When Markston was reminded that Firm was 14 seconds behind the slowest breastroker on the squad and stops for periodic rests throughout races, the Pioneer coach just shrugged it off.

"Hey, OK, so she needs a little work. But just having her.... here gives our team such a big lift, she gives such support. I'd just be so happy to have her.... do well this year," Markston pleaded.

It was mentioned to Markston that some of the squad members were upset because Firm would be allowed to compete in her bikini instead of the traditional one piece suit.

"OK, so she'll wear one piece. Top or bottom? Ha Ha ho ho. No, really. C'mon, what's the difference? I mean, she's perfectly suited for a bikini. Besides, she isn't used to wearing clothes, I mean bulky clothes," Markston fantasized.

Markston watched intently as Firm practiced from the high dive board.

"Boy, she's such a well rounded girl, um, athlete. She's going to be one of the best divers this season as well. Oh! The thought of her going down...from the high dive is so exciting."

As Firm bellysmailed into the water, Markston took some time out to point out some helpful hints.

"No, no, dear! You must bounce much more on the board. Now, I'll have to spank you if you don't listen to me."

"The poor girl, she tries so hard," Markston desired. "But I'll tell you one thing, she never comes out to practice flat."

The Pioneer leader noted that attendance should increase because of her presence. "Yes, she's a real crowd teaser, uhm, pleaser," Markston said.

"I'll tell you, this could be the biggest thing, ahh, thing to ever happen for this team. But in order for us to think seriously about the national title, Fanny will have to hold her own in the big events."

Spring invades campus

By PEGI RAMSEY
Staff Writer

In case you haven't noticed, Spring is back.

The tell-tale signs are easy to spot. For example, the candy bars from the vending machines are already melting in and/or on mouths, hands, and anything else they come in contact with.

It's Spring, because this is the time when the young student's heart turns to anything and everything but going to class. Daily attendance is shrinking rapidly.

Who wants to be educated when it's Spring, and the possibilities outdoors are limitless?

The cafeteria isn't nearly so crowded. Patrons are taking lunch outdoors now, eating their junk food in the fresh air.

As one diner put it, "It feels so good to be able to sit in the sun. Everything tastes better outside."

No longer are students rushing between classes. Now, they take their time (which sometimes leads to forgetting to go to class altogether). And once they get there, they gaze out the windows, instead of at the blackboards.

The manner of dress is changing with the seasons. Leg warmers, scarves, and layers of sweatsuits are being replaced with sandals, miniskirts, and windbreakers. A few daring souls have been spotted in shorts.

The Canadian geese should be here momentarily, making Spring the watch-your-step season. Maybe it's good to skip class, and enjoy a walk around campus while you can.

No one has reported any serious sunbathing yet, and the only true tans now are souvenir from Daytona or other far-away lands. But it's only a matter of time. The smart people realize that this is Michigan, and have gone no farther than finding their bathing suits.

A highly informal poll, taken at various spots around campus, showed that not everyone is convinced that this warm weather is the real thing. More than half the people questioned felt winter was playing a trick, and we would shortly be buried under two feet of snow.

Don't blame them for being skeptical. They're probably right. In Michigan, anything is possible.

Ode to OU

About this time every year, graduating journalists develop a compulsion to write silly stories about things they'll miss when they enter "the real world."

It's always the geese, or the parties where John threw up all over Mary; you remember that, right?

Being more practical and looking for a new angle (we journalists are always very concerned with angles, you know), I figured I'd try something different. How about all the things I didn't do at Oakland, and probably wouldn't if I were to do it all again?

I never studied for an economics test. Keynesian lines never did anything for me, and that math was all so ... confusing.

I've never gotten more than a 2.2 on an economics test (see above item).

I must be one of the few students on campus who hasn't painted the infamous "rock" at one time or another. (It seems to be a different color every week now).

I've never gotten really schnocked at a beer bash. Not that I haven't tried, but by the time I got through the beer line, I was always sober as the proverbial magistrate once again.

I've never been caught practicing my Nicki Lauda turns on the S bend near Sunset Terrace.

I've never learned how to type properly. I usually look at the keys. When I don't, my writing getza bot messesey. I'm up to three fingers now, which my mother says I should be proud of.

I've never taken a computer course, unless of course you count high school. Back then, a girlfriend and I spent the whole time making biorhythm charts, or playing Space Invaders. I flunked.

I've never skipped a class to play pool or go to lunch ... honest, ask anyone, would I lie?

I've never fully understood what the duties of a university provost are.

I've never used the weights in the Lepley Center. I did arm wrestle in the Iron Kettle once.

And finally, I've never stolen any books from the library, if you know what I mean.

I don't know how much I'll miss OU (I don't doubt that I will), but I think it will be as much for the things I didn't do, as for those I did.

Best musical picks of school year

By A.D. MILLER
Staff Writer

The following are some of the best releases of the 1982-83 school year. That's the 1982-82 SCHOOL YEAR!! So before you write me your hate mail, check the release date.

BERLIN: Pleasure Victim (Geffen/Warner Bros.)

As captivating as Blondie in their prime-steamy lyrics and melodies with Nembutal delivery.

The L.A. band, named for the world's most paranoid city, is self assured and seductive.

BOW WOW WOW: When The Going Get Tough... (RCA)

Annabella forsakes McLare and her Chicken image. Barbarosa and Gorman settle in a bit permitting guitarist Matt Ashman more exposure.

The material is more commercial yet by the same regard, more enduring.

CULTURE CLUB CULTUR CLUB: Kissing To Be Clever (Epic)

Boy oh boy. Are you kissing to be clever or craving to be controversial?

Ex-Ant Jon Moss holds together the somewhat divergent styles of guitarist hay and bassist Craig.

PRINCE: 1999 (Warner Bros.)

George Nelson grows up and cleans up just a bit, forsaking his dirty minded naivete for dirty minded existentialism.

1999 puts a finer edge on funk-rock and of the album's 8 radio hits, none is a throwaway.

THOMPSON TWINS: Side Kicks (Arista)

Comfortably bizarre British dance band featuring Tom Bailey who not only sports music's dandiest tail, but has a unique ability to write fairly commercial material that is complex enough to outlast its own fad.

BAMANARAMA: Deep Sea Skiving (London/Polygram)

Bananarama have little in common with parent band Funboy 3 and even less in common with their deceased grandparents, The Specials, the former kings of British ska.

Bananarama undertakes the difficult task of Anglicizing American music and the result is a light but important album.

SOUTHERN DEATH CULT (Kamera)

Nihilism without pretense. For Brits, SDC have the American self esteem and rugged individualism that the Sex Pistols, Siouxsie, etc...lacked.

Not that SDC are ersatz Ghandis, but they do represent somewhat more useful and constructive alternatives to the selfishness that preceded them.

SDC and the modern world survivalistic movement (Sex Gang Children, Bauhaus) have that illusive and frequently misidentified quality; attitude.

Some favorites excluded for their release date: English Beat (Specia! Beat Service), The Time (What time is it?) and Romeo Void (Benefactor).

HEAVEN 1& HEAVEN 17: The Luxury Gap (Arista)

Even slicker and funkier than their debut album. The Luxury Gap begins hot and maintains the intensity with the Earth Wind and Fire horn section.

Each track is substantial with a fat disco sound that moves closer to the technical funk standard The Crusaders established in the 1970's.

Evening

rest are mostly regular students."

Beardslee explained that dorm students often figure into statistics like this because night classes are not inconvenient for them.

Kevin Smith, a senior dorm resident agrees that evening classes are a good idea but concedes that they have drawbacks over their weekday counterparts.

"I have an accounting class on Mondays and one day this year we got snowed out. That means a whole week's tuition is gone and that's a big chunk out of the total number," he said.

Smith said that the night curriculum seems to be geared more toward professionals furthering their education.

"Even so," he said, "it's so nice to get a class over with on one shot rather than extend it over several days. Your concentration is more finely tuned for a continuous period rather than trying to pick up where you left off after two days."

SPORTS

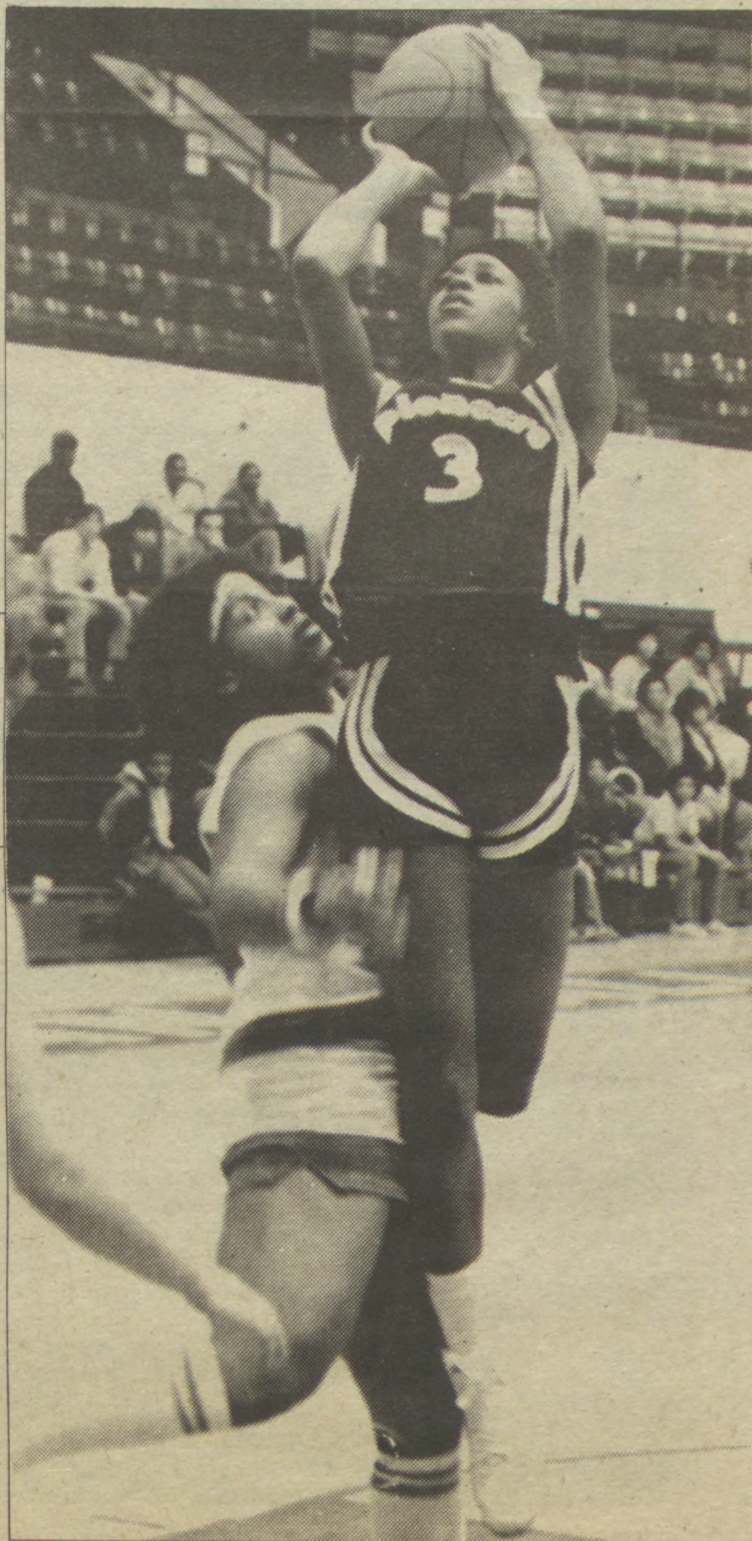

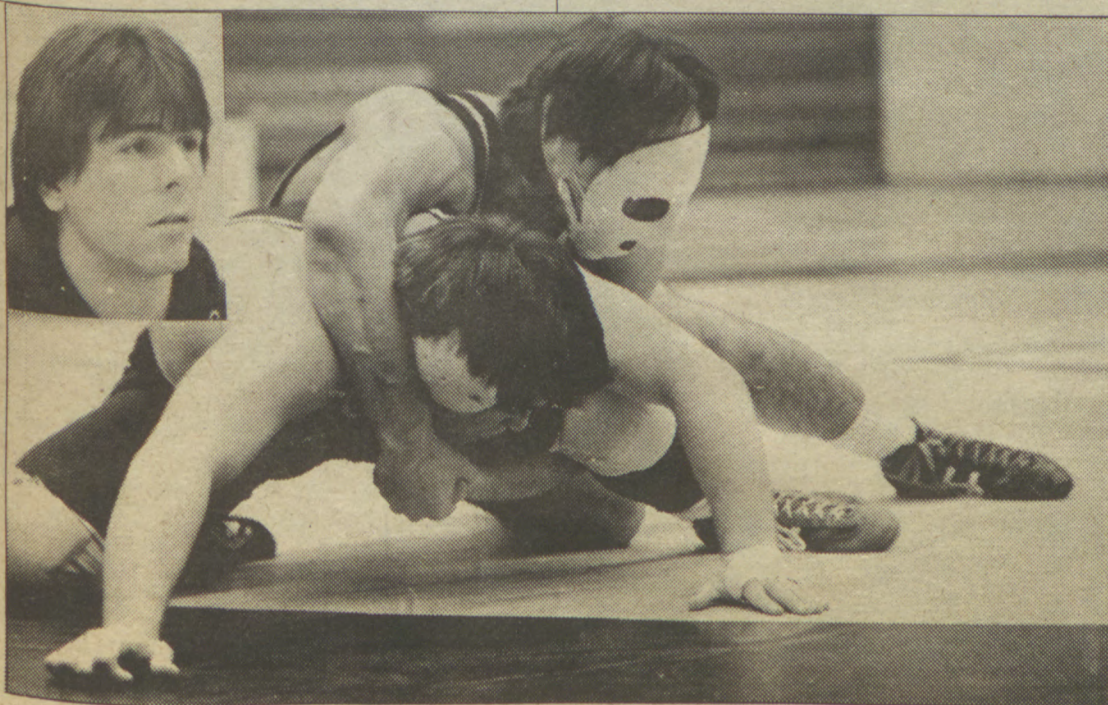

Soccer brought OU fans thrills, chills and a berth in the NCAA Division II semi-finals last fall. Senior co-captain Lou Voulovich (above) anchored a defense that was one of the stingiest in the nation, yet he was always a threat to score. Coach Gary Parsons also won recognition for his work receiving Division II Coach of the Year Honors.

Looking back on a great year in sports

The man in the mask (below) is not the 1950's film idol, Commander Cody, but Greg Mannino, OU All-American wrestler. He helped lead the Pioneer grapplers to their best season ever, and helped Coach Jack Grebauer snare GLIAC Coach of the Year honors.

Senior Forward Linda Krawford (at right) set OU records for points scored in a career and in a single game (52). Her team made it (for the second time in two years) to the NCAA Division II tournament. Coach Dewayne Jones (also Coach of the Year) has left for the University of Detroit.

McGuire; one of the unnoticed champs

By D.C. MOONS
Staff Writer

To most people, the phrase "roller skating" brings to mind images of a Saturday night at the local rink, listening to Top 40 hits and watching the mirror ball spin around. Not many people know that, just like ice skating, roller skating has its own artistic and speed skating championships.

Presently, the world of freestyle roller skating is dominated by Tim McGuire, a resident of Rochester and a prospective OU student. In 1981 and 1982, Tim made a clean sweep of the U.S. National Championships, U.S.

Sports Festival Competition, and the World Championships, and says: "If my right knee holds out, (Tim has had a minor problem with tendonitis) I shouldn't have any problem regaining my title." His new routine for 1983 includes traveling camel spins, some extremely high-speed footwork and several triple-revolution jumps. The third jump in the routine is a triple loop, which (according to Tim) is within the capabilities of only a half-dozen men in the world and has never been done at the state, national or world competition level. Tim describes his triple loop this way: "It's a free jump (not done in a combination or series of consecutive jumps) taken off from the right foot (while traveling backwards at about 15-20 mph) with the left foot off the floor, turning three rotations in the air and landing on the right foot. Right now I'm not landing it as consistently as I'd like, but it's getting better all the time. Since this is my last year of competition, my biggest goal right now (aside from a third consecutive World Championship Title) is to land clean triple loops at nationals and worlds."

Over the past few years, Tim's practice time has dropped from three to four hours a day to a 1 1/2 or 2 hour workout six days a week. A typical practice day starts with a 45-minute drive to the Rollhaven Skating Club in Flint. Tim's 'home rink' for the past eight years. After a few minutes of relaxing and some quiet meditation, 15 or 20 minutes of stretching exercises for the leg muscles, then a careful 'pre-flight' check of wheels, bearings, trucks and toe stops, he gets out on the floor and warms up with a few double-revolution jumps and a couple of sit spins. After working up to the triple Lutz, triple Mapes, triple toe walley and the triple loop, he's ready to put on his music (this year's routine opens with a fully orchestrated version of the Rolling Stones' Paint It Black) and goes through the full four-minute program under the watchful eye of his coach, Beverly Schien (to whom Tim gives a lot of the credit for his success). After receiving some corrections from his coach, he goes back out to polish up sections of the routine that need extra work, practicing until his right knee starts to hurt. Even after the musical selections are set and the two-month process of mapping out the choreography is finished, changes and improvements are always being made, because,

Tim says, "...the routine is never quite 'perfect'." In addition to all the hours of skating, Tim also lifts weights to maintain upper body strength and does a lot of bike riding to build up his stamina, because it takes a lot of power in the arms to snap around three revolutions in the air and a four-minute skating program (especially at the world-class level) takes more out of the human body than a four-minute mile. Tim also enjoys playing the guitar for relaxation and playing billiards "...both as an exercise in concentration and a study in physics."

We will be looking forward to seeing Tim around campus next January, and hope he enjoys his stay at Oakland. He ought to raise a few eyebrows at the next Hamlin Hall St. Valentines' Day Skating Party!

Budweiser® KING OF BEERS® ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

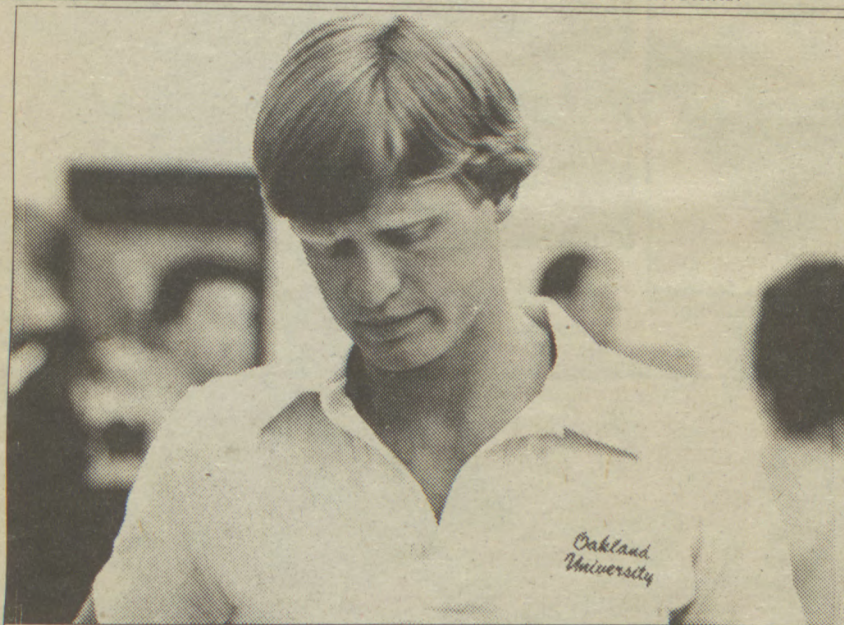

The Oakland Sail / Bob Knoska

Clockwise from upper left: Pete Hovland, men's swim coach; Gary Parsons, soccer coach; Jack Gebauer, wrestling coach; and the then women's basketball coach, Dewayne Jones, all get athletes of the week for leading their teams to such successful seasons. All four were voted Coaches-of-the-Year this season!

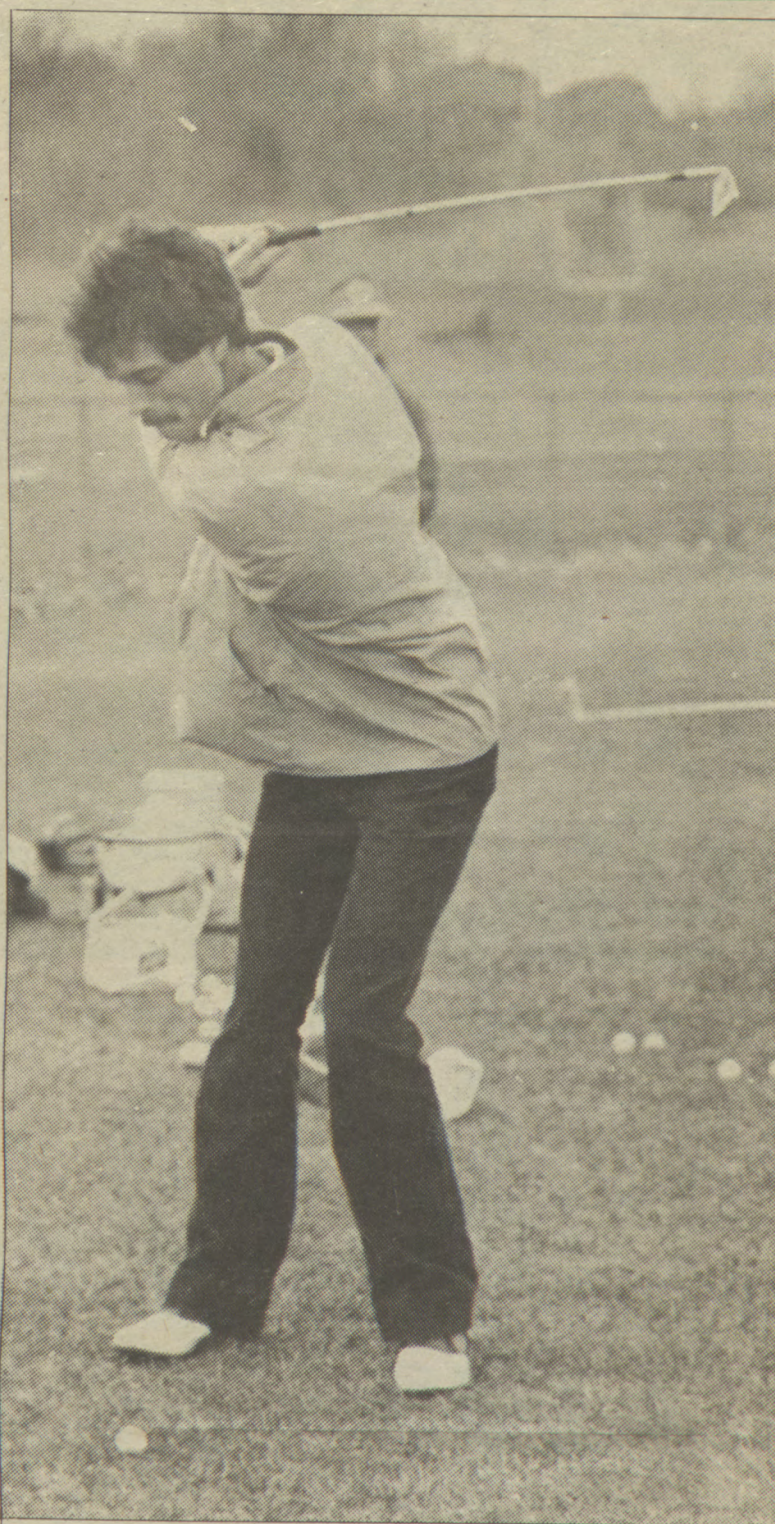

this Bud's for you!

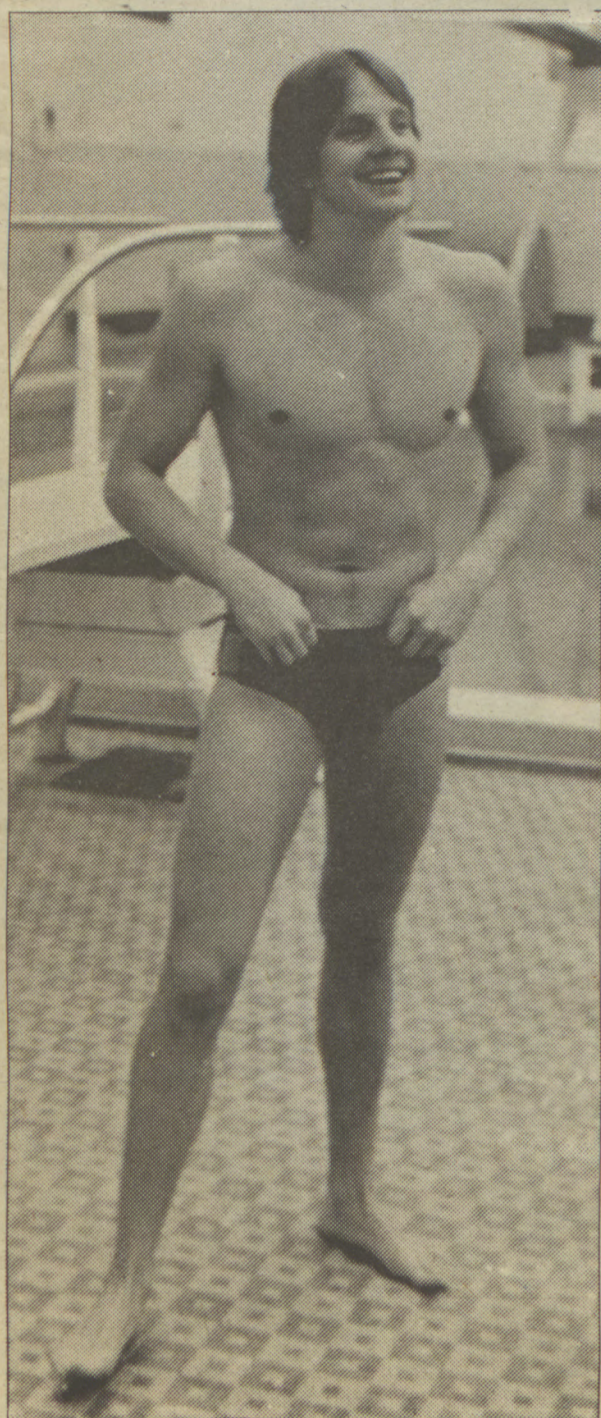

Breastroker Karen Enneking (above) can almost do her work on the "Nautilus" machine while thinking of other things out there in dreamland. Still, other colleges thought of her winning races in California at the Division II Nationals.

'Swimmin' Women' coach Mark Johnston, however, was thinking his team could have placed better than fifth at Nationals.

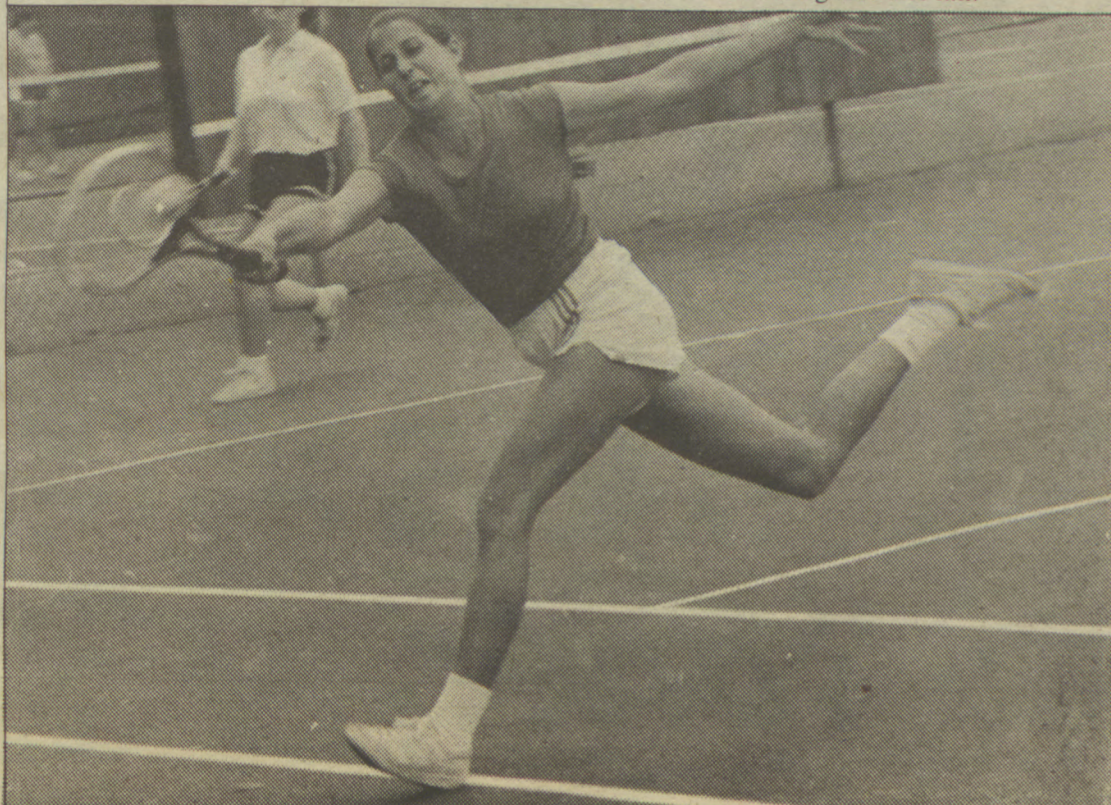

Joe Walker wants to lead the Pioneer golfers to the GLIAC crown this year. He should, he's the team captain, of one of the best golf squads OU has ever had.

Tracy Huth (left) can afford the last laugh, the way he swam at Nationals (4 firsts, 2 seconds, and a national record). The junior from Yakima, Washington was a major reason this year for the Pioneer's third place at Nationals.

Faye Schilkey, (below) the upperclass veteran of the women's tennis team as a sophomore. Hard as the team tried, the women came out on the losing side last fall.

Protesters to the psychology department move to Pryale House, took their complaints to bed with them during an overnight sit-in on O'Dowd's fifth floor.

Some students actually found time for themselves. Paul Amaranth's answer to get away was a quiet corner and a good book.
