Kleckner Begins Tenure As Academic VP And Provost

Keith R. Kleckner has begun his tenure as academic vice president and provost with expressions of thanks for community support and with the promise of a general university address to be held in the near future.

The 45-year-old engineering professor and administrator was approved by the Board of Trustees Dec. 16.

He said "I sincerely appreciate the many expressions of support that have come from throughout the faculty and staff. I believe it is impossible to do the job expected of the provost without widespread and strong support of that faculty and staff. I am looking forward to being able to address the university community at large in the near future on the major academic issues facing the institution."

Kleckner's selection caps a national search for a replacement for Frederick W. Obear who resigned last summer to become chancellor of the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga.

Addressing the Trustees and the audience at the Dec. 16 board meeting, President Joseph E. Champagne said, "I wish to point out my view of the role of the provost. I believe that it is important for me to make these comments in a public forum officially at a meeting of the Board of Trustees that they may be incorporated into the minutes of this meeting. In this way, the Trustees and the university community at large shall understand clearly my expectation of a provost and my philosophy of the role of the provost in university management.

I believe that the most effective way to summarize the role of a provost is to contrast it to that of a president. In these extremely difficult times for higher education, the president must emerge as a university leader and spokesman at all levels of university life, internally and externally. Indeed, it might even be said that in these times when there is serious questioning about the role and mission of higher education in society, the president's greatest function may be that of external relations and development. I tend to agree with this latter position. We are at a time when the viability of many institutions of higher education is definitely in question. The president is the individual who must carry the banner forward in a credible, vigorous, aggressive, and acceptable manner. I stated in my interviews before I was selected as president and subsequently in numerous public comments that I view my role to a great extent as an external agent of the university. Therefore, many of the details of the internal management of the university must be delegated. It is simply not possible for me as president to carry out a vigorous external effort and at the same time give the time and effort for a close management of every detail of day-to-day operations. It is in this light that I reorganized the university during the past several months delegating to the various divisional vice presidents broad areas of responsibility and holding these officers publicly and internally accountable for their actions and their divisions. But the role of the provost is a special one. The provost, more than any other officer of the university, has the greatest responsibilities second only to the president. It is the provost who, indeed, is the program manager of the university. It is the provost who oversees the product of the university. It is the provost who is responsible for the delivery of a quality educational program of instruction, research, service, and student development. It is the provost who acts for the president in his absence. In many institutions, the provost serves as an executive vice president.

If I could sum up my position to define the functions of a provost, I would define them in this fashion. The president has the responsibility for defining the mission of the institution and keeping the institution viable. The provost has the responsibility of managing the process of the institution and ensuring that the product is of the highest possible quality. Therefore, with these considerations in mind, the selection committee places before this Board of Trustees the nomination of Keith R. Kleckner to serve as provost effective this date. Mr. Kleckner has demonstrated a loyalty and dedication to this institution during the past fifteen years and has worked admirably well as the interim provost in a difficult time. He has the universal respect of the administration, the faculty, and the student body as a man of character, intelligence, scholarship, and administrative leadership. Mr. Kleckner possesses the vision and the characteristics I believe are required for an incumbent to the position of provost at Oakland University. I have no hesitation whatsoever in bringing forth this recommendation to the Trustee body.

"I ask that you accept my recommendation, which is concurred in by other members of the Provost Selection Committee."

Kleckner has been at OU since 1966 when he joined the faculty as associate professor of engineering. He became a full professor in 1971.

The Bloomfield Hills resident was assistant dean of engineering for graduate study from 1969 to 1975 and he guided the university's first doctoral program, an interdisciplinary Ph.D. in systems engineering.

Kleckner was acting dean of graduate study in 1974-1975 and he became associate provost in 1975. On July 1, 1981, he was named interim academic vice president and provost. He holds the Ph.D. from Cornell University.

Academic Progress Report

The following university groups are working simultaneously on recommendations that could impact upon the Oakland University budget for 1982-83. They are:

1. The Committee on Academic Mission and Priorities, chaired by George Feeman, professor of mathematical sciences and acting associate provost.
2. The Committee on Student and Urban Affairs Mission and Priorities, chaired by Rosalind Andreas, dean of students.
3. The Committee on Academic Public Services, chaired by Jacqueline Scherer, associate professor of sociology.
4. The Executive Committee on the Budget, chaired by Robert McGarry, vice president for administrative affairs.

The first three committees are charged to report to President Joseph E. Champagne by March 15, 1982. The report of each of these committees may influence both short-range budget planning and longer term institutional configuration.

The fourth committee—the Executive Committee on the Budget—is charged to recommend by early May, 1982, a balanced budget for 1982-83. This committee will have the benefit of the reports of the other committees before it makes a final recommendation to the president.

"The extent of external economic pressures makes it necessary that we take a hard look at our long-term institutional posture at essentially the same time that we develop a constrained short-term budget for next year," President Champagne said. "I suppose some duplication of effort will occur as these groups proceed in their work, but I believe that with proper coordination, such duplication can be minimized. There is simply not time for a single group to study adequately these multiple facets of the institution."

The first three committees listed above were constituted by the president last term. The Executive Committee on the Budget has been in existence for several years.

COMMITTEE ON ACADEMIC MISSION AND PRIORITIES PROGRESS REPORT December 15, 1981

On November 5, 1981, President Joseph E. Champagne established the Committee on Academic Mission and Priorities (CAMP). The committee is charged with the task of examining each of Oakland University's academic programs with respect to quality, scope, areas of opportunity for the future, strengths, weaknesses, needs, and character which indicate how essential it is to the university. A report is to be presented to the president with recommendations concerning the academic mission of the university and program priorities, for the purpose of better allocation of scarce and/or declining resources. It is due on March 15, 1982.

The fall term is rapidly drawing to a close. It seems fitting at this time to present a progress report to the Oakland community to review the activities of the committee and to inform everyone of the events that are to take place during the first two months of 1982, leading up to the preparation of the report.

To date, the full committee has met seven times, including a full day session on Saturday, December 5, 1981. Several subcommittees have been meeting additionally to discuss key issues in the committee's charge and to formulate mechanisms to deal with them. In short, everyone on the committee has been working very hard to accomplish the task at hand. For those in the Oakland community who wish to have a complete reading of the discussions held to date, a set of agendas, minutes, and supplementary materials is available for your inspection in room 520 O'Dowd Hall. Gloria Schatz, who is serving as secretary to the committee, will be glad to make the file available to you.

The approach being taken by the committee has several facets. First, the committee is conducting a local analysis of existing programs. We are interested in learning how departments and other units view their own programs with respect to quality, scope, and trends. To accomplish this part of the process, the committee is working through the deans and directors. A questionnaire has been prepared to serve as the key instrument in the process. Copies of the questionnaire were distributed to the deans and directors on December 9, 1981. Responses have been requested to the nineteen questions for each academic program in each of the organized units. We have asked that these responses be compiled and presented to the committee, along with a summary prepared by the respective dean or director, by January 15, 1982. On receipt of the reports, the committee will meet with individual deans and directors to discuss in detail the information they have provided. A copy of the questionnaire is attached to this report for your information.

A second facet of the committee's analysis consists of the examination of a variety of cross-disciplinary activities. These are activities which generally cross school or college lines and which have similarities in program design and utilization of resources. The purpose of the examination in each case is to clarify program purposes and needs, in relation to others of similar type, and to determine possible areas of coordination and better allocation of resources. The process used in this part of the analysis will include discussions with designated area representatives, to be followed by discussions with appropriate deans and directors, in joint sessions.

Concurrently with these fact finding activities, the committee is taking a view of the university from a larger, more global, perspective. A statement of the university's academic mission and general criteria for the determination of priority levels for programs and activities is being prepared. To assist in accomplishing these tasks, the committee is studying and analyzing appropriate data and documents and interviewing key public officials, members of Oakland's Board of Trustees, and other persons who view the university in a broad fashion.

Alumni input is being obtained through utilization of a questionnaire and a mail survey. Toward this end, a random selection of about 10% of the alumni group has been made, and questionnaires were sent to this group of about 1,800 persons on December 11, 1981. Their responses are expected by January 10, 1982. Important student input will be obtained through a survey to be conducted by the Division of Student and Urban Affairs in early January 1982. Additional student perceptions will be available through existing evaluation data and the participation of the student representative on the committee. Finally, the committee believes that the perceptions of persons on campus, but not directly involved in academic programs, are important to the process. Thus, selected administrative-professional people in the university are being interviewed.

For completeness in the total process, specialized reports have been sought from other task forces, offices, and committees. These include reports on public and community service, general education policy, research institutes, faculty development, and the various academic services of admissions, placement, advising, cooperative education, registration, and records.

All of the above shows clearly that the committee is gathering information from a variety of sources in its attempt to conduct its business in a fair, broad, and open fashion. But time is short. The following brief schedule shows that January and February will be very busy months for the committee.

January 10-15, 1982—Deadline for alumni responses and for program information from deans and directors, in written form.

January 15-25, 1982—Review of information received by the committee.

January 25-February 14, 1982—Discussions with deans, directors, and selected area representatives on their respective reports.

February 14-28, 1982—Further discussion and analysis of information received.

March 1-15, 1982—Preparation of committee report.

The full cooperation of the entire community will be necessary for the task to be done well and for the committee to fulfill its charge.

The report prepared by the committee and submitted to the president on March 15, 1982, on these important issues of direction and priorities for the university cannot be the final step in the process of university self-analysis. It will mark the end of the first phase of a much longer process of dialogue, analysis, and decision making. It is hoped that this interim report will help to inform the community of the committee's actions to date, of the strategies being used and of the magnitude of the task.

Priorities

Jan. 15 is Martin Luther King Day at Oakland University to mark the birthdate of the Nobel Prize winner and leader in the fight for freedom for black and poor Americans of all races, creeds, and colors.

The day has been set aside by proclamation of George T. Matthews. The proclamation, signed Jan. 15, 1981, provides that Jan. 15, 1981, and each year following, shall be recognized as Martin Luther King Day at Oakland University.

Special events that may be planned for that day or for the Black Awareness Month fete in February will be publicized on campus for information of the university community.

Odyssey, a journal of the humanities, is about to go to press. Founded in 1975 by Professor David Saint-Amour of Oakland University and several other members of the faculty of Arts and Sciences, the journal is dedicated to literary, art, and media criticism; creative endeavors; and historical and linguistic work.

The journal became well established under William White, professor of journalism, who assumed the editorship in 1977. Upon his retirement this year, the journal was turned over to Professor Robert C. Howes, director of the Honors College at Oakland. Professor Howes has reconstituted the former Advisory Board as an editorial board and expects its members to play an active role in soliciting and evaluating manuscripts.

The Editorial Board includes John Barnard, Carl F. Barnes, Jr., Jane Briggs-Bunting, Richard J. Burke, Adeline Hirschfeld-Medalia, Anne Lalas, and Richard Mazzara. The forthcoming issue includes contributions from John A. Rassias of Dartmouth College ("The Classroom as Theater"), Joseph DeMent of Oakland University ("Ritual and Myth in King Lear"), and poet Charles Fremuth of Detroit Country Day School. The board will consider exceptional work by undergraduates, but at this point does not foresee a permanent student section.

Odyssey has plans for increasing subscriptions this year. The subscription rate is $6.00 for the year (two issues), and checks or inquiries can be sent to Odyssey, c/o Honors College, 212 Varner Hall.

Energy Committee

Keith Kleckner, interim provost and academic vice president for academic affairs, has appointed an ad hoc committee to recommend future directions on OU energy-related activities.

Don Falkenburg, engineering, is committee chairperson, assisted by members Bhushan Bhatt, engineering, Isaac Eliezer, arts and sciences, Robin Hough, economics and management, and Don Wallace, physics.

"In order to understand the range of professional expertise at Oakland, the committee has polled the department chairpersons regarding research, teaching or service activities in energy-related matters," Falkenburg said. The committee invites interested persons to contact the committee for additional information about its activities or to provide any input they feel would be helpful to the committee's work. Falkenburg can be reached at 377-2218 or 377-2210.

Morscheck Named

William F. Morscheck, manager of systems and programming at Lansing Community College, has been named assistant vice president for computer and information systems at Oakland University.

Morscheck is a graduate of East Lansing High School (1965). He attended the U.S. Military Academy from 1965-1967 and Michigan State University where he graduated three years later with a B.S. in computer science.

He begins his new duties Jan. 4 and will be responsible for the university computer operations, data systems management, and the word processing operation.

The new position was authorized as part of an administrative reorganization approved recently by the OU Board of Trustees.

Morscheck and his wife Jennifer and two children reside at 1705 Chief Okemos Circle, Okemos, Michigan.

Dick Light's Duties Divided

Four OU administrators will split the duties that had been performed by Richard Light, assistant vice president for administrative services and risk management.

Light left the university Jan. 7 to become chief administrative service officer for the Southeastern Michigan Region of the American Red Cross.

The audit and insurance and risk management responsibilities will be carried out by Robert J. McGarry, vice president for administrative affairs; university services by George Catton, director of campus facilities and operations; purchasing department and contract/review negotiations by Ray T. Harris, associate vice president for administrative affairs; and workmen's compensation by Willard C. Kendall, director of employee relations.

OU Faculty Lecture And Publish

The American Psychological Association is concerned with issues regarding the clinical psychology of aging. These issues revolve about recruitment of specialists, of students interested in aging, of curriculum in the clinical psychology of aging and in suitable practica and internships available for such students.

The American Psychological Association conducted a four-day conference on these issues, entitled "The Older-Boulder Conferences" and invited specialists and trainees in clinical psychology of aging.

Professor Boaz Kahana, Oakland University psychologist, has been invited to co-chair the committee on recruitment. Kahana presented a paper entitled "Recruitment Issues in the Clinical Psychology of Aging" which will appear as an article in the proceedings of the A.P.A.'s Older-Boulder Conference.

Math Notes

Louis Bragg has recently had two articles published in the SIAM (Society for Industrial and Applied Mathematics) Journal on Mathematical Analysis. The first one entitled "Vector Lifting and Factorable Differential Operators" appeared in the September 1981 issue, while the second one entitled "The Radial Wave and Euler-Poisson-Darboux Equations with Singular Data" appeared in the July 1981 issue. In addition, he has had an article accepted for publication. The article, entitled "Abstract Cauchy Problems that Involve a Product of Two Euler-Poisson-Darboux Operators," will appear in the Journal of Differential Equations.

Charles Cheng has recently had an article, jointly authored with B. Mitchell of Rutgers University, accepted for publication. The article, entitled "Posets of Cohomological Dimension One with Finitely Many Tails," will appear in the Journal of Algebra.

Subbaiah Perla has recently had an article, jointly authored with G.S. Mudholkar of University of Rochester published.

The article, entitled "On a Multivariate Analog of Studentized Range Test" appeared in The Journal of American Statistical Association, September 1981, vol. 76, No. 375.

Jerrold Grossman presented an invited talk, entitled "Alternating Cycles in Edge-Partitioned Graphs," to the Michigan-Indiana Graph Theory Conference at Ann Arbor in October 3.

Scholarly activities of the Department of Political Science faculty are reported below:

Karen Beckwith chaired the panel "Women, Women's Movements, and the Challenge to the State" at the American Political Science Association meetings in New York City in September. Her chapter on "Women and Parliamentary Politics in Italy, 1946-1979" was recently published in Howard R. Penniman, ed., Italy at the Polls, 1979 (Washington, D.C.: American Enterprise Institute, 1981).

Vincent B. Khapoya's paper, "A Critical Assessment of 'Independent' Bantustans in South Africa," was published in The Western Journal of Black Studies, Vol. 5, No. 2 (Summer, 1981). His essay "A Wise Decision," is a comment on the Kenya Government Commission on the Establishment of a Second University in Kenya, The Weekly Review (Nairobi, No. 320) (April 24, 1981). In addition, he delivered a talk: "Liberated Zimbabwe: A Socio-Political Overview," to the plenary session at a conference on The Re-creation of Zimbabwe: Prospects for Education and Rural Reconstruction, held at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. The plenary session was broadcast on radio WUOM on September 11. Other speakers at the session were Professor Ali A. Mazrui of the Department of Political Science, University of Michigan, and Mr. T. Mudariki of the Ministry of Education and Culture, Government of Zimbabwe. A written version of the talk, retitled "Zimbabwe: A Peek at the Future, Reconstruction or Re-Design?" will be published in a special edition of Issue, an opinion journal of the African Studies Association, devoted to Zimbabwe, this coming winter.

James R. Ozinga's article "Genetic Altruism" appeared in The Humanist, Vol. 41, No. 3, May-June, 1981.

Uwe Reischl, associate professor and program director, Program in Industrial Health and Safety at the Center for Health Sciences, participated in a fall public health study-tour of the Soviet Union. Professor Reischl visited Moscow and Leningrad with a group of 18 public health specialists, physicians and nurses to observe selected health-care facilities and to meet with his public health counterparts. One week was spent in Moscow and one week in Leningrad including a two-day visit to the Bay of Finland. The public health study-tour was coordinated by the Soviet Medical Workers Union to promote understanding between Soviet and U.S. public health professionals. Recently Professor Reischl was elected to the Permanent Commission and International Association on Occupational Health. The commission is a long-standing international scientific society which promotes the science and the development of occupational health on an international basis. The membership of the commission has world-wide representation. Professor Reischl's membership in the commission is based on his academic contributions in the field of occupational health and safety and his professional interests in international health. He has published another scientific paper related to his research work in fire fighter occupational health and safety. The paper focuses on an audiometric investigation assessing permanent threshold shifts due to fire apparatus noise overexposure. The publication is cited as follows: "Reischl, U., T.G. Hanks, P. Reischl. Occupation Related Fire Fighter Hearing Loss. American Industrial Hygiene Association Journal, Vol. 42, No. 9, pp. 656-662, (Sept., 1981).
