

Monday, March 29, 2010

OU advances tradition of welcoming provocative discourse on campus

Press Release

Contact: Dave Groves
(248) 370-2759
groves@oakland.edu

For Immediate Release
Monday, March 29, 2010

Oakland University advances tradition of welcoming provocative discourse on campus

Rochester, Mich. – Oakland University will host a stimulating exploration of American's status and stature in the world when it welcomes Canada Research Chair in Social Justice Shadia B. Drury to the 2010 Richard J. Burke Lecture in Philosophy, Religion and Society.

Drury, director of the masters program in social and political thought and a professor in the departments of political science and philosophy at the University of Regina in Saskatchewan, will present "American Exceptionalism?" at 8 p.m. on Thursday, April 15, in the Oakland Center Gold Rooms on the campus of Oakland University.

She defines American Exceptionalism as the distinctive form that American nationalism has assumed, but is careful to distinguish between a moderate version of American nationalism that provides the country with ideals and aspirations and a more radical one that can lead to the pursuit of global dominance.

Now in its fifth year, the Burke Lecture provides a forum for discussion of compelling and controversial topics among scholars, students and members of the community.

"We haven't avoided controversy in the past and I don't think this year's lecture will avoid it either," said Dr. Richard J. Burke, charter faculty member and emeritus professor of philosophy at OU. "It shows that a university is a place where controversial issues can be talked about openly."

The lecture is free and open to the public. To make reservations, call (248) 370-2650 or e-mail to kicark@oakland.edu.

#

SUMMARY

The 2010 Richard J. Burke Lecture in Philosophy, Religion and Society will feature a stimulating exploration of American's status and stature in the world.

Created by David Groves (groves@oakland.edu) on Monday, March 29, 2010

Modified by David Groves (groves@oakland.edu) on Monday, March 29, 2010

Article Start Date: Monday, March 29, 2010