Innovations studied

The university is selectively studying teaching innovations at other institutions to see if these techniques can be used to strengthen the university's curricular offerings.

Three awards were made for 1977-78 by the OU Teaching and Learning Committee for special study programs by the Departments of Communication Arts, Learning Skills, and Physics.

Representatives from these disciplines will visit selected institutions with programs or segments of programs that may be worth adding to the Oakland University department offerings.

Frederick Obear, academic vice president and provost, said the Oakland University departmental study grant program is based on the belief that greater access to the experience of other institutions can stimulate and strengthen efforts at improvement of Oakland University's curriculum.

Communication arts personnel are considering the addition of an undergraduate theatre arts major. Visits will be made to a number of institutions of similar size which have strong theatre arts programs. They include Catholic University in Washington, D.C., and the University of Toledo.

The Department of Learning Skills wants to add a fully staffed writing center. The new writing center would use a one-to-one student and tutor relationship to help students who want to improve their ability in composition and to aid students referred to the center from standard classes. Faculty will visit two outstanding writing centers, one at the University of Iowa and the other at the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana.

The Department of Physics is interested in improving its equipment and instruction techniques in the important area of electronics, an area of rapid technological changes. Faculty will visit the University of Arkansas and bring a leading proponent of electronics education to campus.
