“Our Career Camps help teens who know what career they’ve chosen for their future – as well as those who may not be as sure – understand what they’ll do when they’re working in these careers and the skills they’ll need to be successful. Some teen campers discover a career they were considering doesn’t really suit them,” said DanaMarie Carreon-Glinsey, OU manager of student success & community engagement. She added, “OU staff, students and faculty answer their questions so they’re college-ready before they go – and steady once they’re there. We want them to find their life’s pursuit and change the world.”

Nearly 900 teens from public and private high schools in Macomb, Oakland, St. Clair, Wayne, Huron, Saginaw and Sanilac Counties have attended an OU career camp since 2012.

Career Camp registration is underway. For detailed camp descriptions, registration information, photo and video highlights, a financial assistance application and more, visit oakland.edu/careercamps.
