JFK, Macmillan May Meet Soon

They'll Be City Reds and Country Reds

MOSCOW (AP) — A drastic shake-up of Soviet party and government organs today divided the Soviet Communist world in two—city Communists and country Communists.

The object: to meet Premier Khrushchev's demands for more goods and more crops.

The Communist party's Central Committee, ending a week-long meeting in the Kremlin on Friday, ordered the sweeping measures to "correct serious shortcomings" in the economy.

A group of rising party leaders, of the generation just after Khrushchev's, emerged from the sessions as the men to make the program work.

The top-to-bottom reshuffling, one of the most thorough in Soviet history, aims also at leveling out differences between city workers and peasants.

Ever since the beginning of the revolution against the old Czarist regime, the workers who did most of the fighting have had the best of it.

By last year, the Soviet Union, once well above 80 per cent agricultural, had moved by a fraction of a per cent to the industrial side and had more city workers than farmers.

Under the new program a separate party agricultural organization split will extend from the Kremlin to the farthest outposts.

The aim is to permit those party members primarily concerned with farming to concentrate entirely in that field to get reluctant farmers to work harder and try to match European and American production.

INDUSTRY BUILDING
Party members concerned with industry—and these are almost entirely in the cities—will occupy themselves with industrial and building affairs.

The national economic council set up by Khrushchev in his 1957 decentralization program will be consolidated into larger units with light controls from Moscow.

The state planning committee will be virtually liquidated and its duties transferred to a central organ set up to administer the program.

The Pakistanis are worried lest the arms eventually be turned against Pakistan by India in the long-festering Kashmir dispute.

In the eyes of Pakistanis, the India-China undeclared war is a temporary conflict that will soon end.

AIRLINER WRECKAGE — This piece of fuselage from a United Airlines Viscount was one of the largest sections left after the four-engine prop-jet carried 17 persons to death 10 miles west of Baltimore yesterday. The plane was on a trip from Newark to Atlanta, with a stop at Washington.

Seek Cause of 17 Deaths

From Our News Wires
ELLIOTT CITY, Md. — The Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) today formed investigative teams to probe the mysterious death plunge of a United Air Lines Viscount into a wooded area near here, killing all 17 persons aboard.

Each of the six investigating teams will be headed by an official of the CAB's Bureau of Safety, with experts from the pilots' union, airline, Federal Aviation Agency and manufacturers assisting.

All aboard perished in the crash and fire yesterday of Flight 297, en route from Newark, N.J., to Atlanta, Ga., via Washington, D.C.

George Van Epps, veteran CAB crash investigator, met with nine other CAB experts and officials from United, the Air Line Pilots Association, Vickers — the manufacturer of the British-made prop-jet — and Rolls-Royce, maker of the plane's engines.

The crash of the four-engine airliner occurred in bright sunshine about 10 miles southwest of Baltimore.

Ed Slattery of the CAB said, "We are concerned because there was no weather connected with the crash."

Another piece in the puzzle was the report from the FAA that the Viscount's veteran pilot, Capt. Milton J. Balog, 39, apparently had no hint of approaching tragedy.

ROUTINE COMMUNICATIONS
The FAA said radio communications with the plane as it prepared to land at Washington shortly after noon yesterday were entirely routine.

The FAA said Balog had acknowledged instructions only three minutes before the Viscount, capable of carrying 44 passengers, disappeared from the radar scope monitoring its approach.

Witnesses said the plane suddenly nosed sharply into wooded farmland owned by Clark Gailher in Howard County. The descent of the airplane was so steep that it cut only a small swath through the hardwood forest.

Welfare Aide
Protests Firing
18 Women Employees Walk Off Jobs, Too

By JIM DYGERT
The Oakland County Social Welfare Board is expected to conduct a hearing within the next few days on the firing of Mrs. Helen E. Slayton from her post as deputy director of the welfare department.

Eighteen women employees left their jobs yesterday afternoon in protest of the firing.

John A. Macdonald, chairman of the three-man board, said he received a letter this morning from Mrs. Slayton requesting the hearing.

He said a hearing may be held the first of the week.

Meanwhile, George H. Williams, welfare department acting director, who fired Mrs. Slayton Wednesday for "insubordination" and "lack of cooperation," said he planned no disciplinary action against the protesting employees if they returned to work.

"I guess it won't be settled until we see who shows up Monday," Williams said.

West Agrees U.S.-British Talks Needed

Strategists Uncertain About What's Ahead in Cold War Relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan are expected to meet soon for a wide-ranging review of world affairs in a time of change.

Western strategists still are unsure of what lies beyond what Kennedy has termed a possibly "important turning point" in East-West relations. But they are agreed on the need to have the United States and Great Britain chart their course together.

Britain and the United States are both involved in major unresolved issues on the international scene — the India-China dispute, Berlin, disarmament and the Congo.

Both American and British sources agreed Friday on the likelihood of a Kennedy-Macmillan meeting in the near future, but said an exact time and place has not yet been worked out. London informants said Macmillan expects to cross the Atlantic shortly after Christmas.

At Hyannis Port, Mass., where Kennedy is spending a long Thanksgiving weekend, assistant presidential press secretary Andrew Hatcher would say only that "it is highly probable" that the two leaders will get together "some time soon."

Meetings between the American and British government heads are comparatively frequent. Kennedy and Macmillan have gotten together five times since Kennedy took office last year, the latest occasion being a visit by Macmillan to Washington last April.

The Washington consensus is that the President and the prime minister will be surveying a scene of great and unpredictable change in world events.

Assistant Secretary of State Harlan Cleveland, in a speech Friday night at Philadelphia, gave what aides described as a sum-up of U.S. government thinking on the current situation in the aftermath of the climatic U.S.-Soviet confrontation over Cuba.

In words that tended to sound optimistic on future prospects, Cleveland assessed the international situation this way:

The Soviet Union has become a major world power but international communism, after having hit a peak in the immediate post-war years, has gone into decline. Externally, the Communist world has been rebuffed by Western firmness. Internally, it is so split that the idea of a solid Communist bloc has become an "antique Communist dream."

Lawrence was killed at 6 while on his way to work at the Oakland County Road Commission garage, just a short distance from where the Flint-Bond Grand Trunk Western Railroad train, traveling at 55 miles per hour, smashed into his car.

State police said Lawrence apparently disregarded the flashing lights and bell signal at the crossing.

Lawrence, driving on Davisburg Road, was only 30 feet from the driveway of the road commission garage when the accident occurred.

It took the engineer of the train, Robert E. McCarrin, 62, of Flint, 3,500 feet to stop the 61-car train after the impact, police said.

Christmas Shopping Gets Into High Gear

Christmas shopping began in earnest yesterday with thousands crowding downtown stores and nearby shopping centers.

The traditional day after Thanksgiving buying spree left the impression in many of the stores that if things continue "there won't be any need for last minute shopping."

Traffic throughout the day at all stores was regarded as good.

Youngsters made up a good part of the crowd since they had the day off from school for the Thanksgiving holiday.

Santa was a big attraction at the Pontiac Mall and Tel-Huron Shopping centers. Over 60 youngsters met Santa when he arrived in the area at the Pontiac Municipal Airport and was driven to Tel-Huron.

Howard Nelson, manager of the Sears, Roebuck store in downtown Pontiac, exclaimed that "business was better than last year. In fact, it was a wonderful day."

Montgomery Ward's store at the Pontiac Mall was not open this time last year, but business was very favorable compared with other Ward stores in the Detroit area, according to Paul Louchart, operating manager.

A spokesman for the Tel-Huron Shopping Center said that stores there seemed crowded all during the daylight hours, but business dropped off slightly in the evening.

Weatherman

Unclear on Chinese Offer

India Asks Clarification

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—India has asked Red China to clarify several points of its offer to settle the undeclared Himalayan border war, the Foreign Ministry said today.

A spokesman said Foreign Secretary M. J. Desai, summoned the Chinese charge d'affaires in New Delhi Friday and "put to him several points about China's cease-fire proposal which required clarification." He said the Chinese diplomat is "obtaining clarification from Peking."

The Foreign Ministry spokesman declined to say what the points were.

Red China ordered its troops in the disputed border areas to cease-fire last Wednesday. It promised to pull its troops back on Dec. 1 to a point 12½ miles behind what it described as the line of actual control.

The Indian spokesman said the Chinese proposals are still under consideration, although Prime Minister Nehru has indicated he would not accept the Chinese terms. By acceptance, the Indians would have to give up claim to 12,000 square miles of disputed territory in Ladakh on India's northwestern border with China.

Nehru has indicated he believes the border fighting will erupt again and that he wants Chinese troops off what he considers Indian soil.

The Indians were believed taking advantage of the Chinese cease-fire to bolster their military strength.

U.S. and British military aid missions have continued their efforts of India's long-range military needs.

Nehru again predicted a long struggle with Red China as the Himalayan fronts remained quiet for the third day under the cease-fire.

In a message addressed to a rally yesterday, Nehru warned his nation of "a long struggle and a difficult one, and we must not imagine that the struggle will be over soon because of various diplomatic moves."

If India agreed to the pull-back suggested by China, it would have to give up 12,000 square miles it claims in Ladakh on the northwestern frontier.

China Woos Pakistan

Pakistan would like the CENTO and SEATO alliances if it found these pacts were "of no use."

Addressing the National Assembly, he said that any supply of arms to India is a great danger to Pakistan safety and sovereignty.

Similar sentiments were expressed by Foreign Minister Mohammed Ali to the assembly on Friday.

The United States and Britain have been working behind the scenes for an Indian-Pakistanist handi-pawt over Kashmir to help India beat back the Chinese invasion.

U.S. officials have been concerned that Pakistan accept Chinese Communist wooing and agree to a non-aggression pact such as proposed by the Peking government.

Such a pact could free the way for Chinese Communist troops to cut through the Chumbi Valley and snap the narrow Indian corridor to Assam and its northeast frontier territories.

Pakistan officials have said that Gen. N. M. Raza had been negotiating with Chinese Communist authorities merely to insure "that there is no border trouble between the two nations similar to the Indian-Chinese dispute."

The reported order came during an emergency session of the Pakistani National Assembly, which has heard strong criticism of the United States and Britain, Pakistan's allies, for rushing arms to India.

Pakistan feels these arms are a threat to its security.

In the disillusionment with the Western powers, he has been talking of adopting neutrality as a policy.

Red China's unilateral cease-fire on the border with India and the offer of a troop pullback has bolstered the Pakistani view that the present Indian-China conflict is only a temporary flareup which merits no Western assistance to India.

The reorganization struck some Western observers as a poor second choice forced upon the government and party leaders as an alternative to a much-needed capital investment program that has been made impossible by the demands of space rockets and national defense.

Yankee Store Will Relocate at Miracle Mile

The transfer of the downtown Pontiac Yankee Store to the Miracle Mile Shopping Center next March was announced today by Joseph Megdell, president.

The Yankee Store will move from 47 S. Saginaw St. into the location now occupied by the W. T. Grant Co.

A new merchandising policy will be inaugurated by Yankee at its new location, according to Megdell. Better quality merchandise will be featured, and many well-known name brands will be added, he said.

New departments such as health and beauty aids, jewelry, millinery and special foods will be added and the shoe department will be expanded.

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODY ISHMAEL

When Lutheran Bishop Otto Dibelius received an honorary degree from Southern Methodist University during a visit to America last year, the president of the Dallas institution called him "the symbol of the church's finest hour in our time."

Replied the doughty, 81-year-old bishop: "I am a simple, modest servant of the church."

Both descriptions are apt. In his simple but staunch way Bishop Dibelius, recently retired head of the Berlin diocese of Germany's Evangelical (Lutheran) Church, is one of the bitterest enemies the East German Communist regime ever had.

Before the Communists built their wall, Bishop Dibelius made monthly visits to preach to his flock in the eastern sector of Berlin. His sermons were studied with anti-Communist barbs which would have landed a lesser figure in a red prison cell.

Such a test of faith would have been nothing new to Dibelius. A generation ago he was jailed by the Nazis for attacking them fiercely — reminding them, among other things, of the Jewish origin of Jesus.

Before his retirement, Bishop Dibelius made a heartfelt plea to his colleagues everywhere:

"The church never to surrender to the powers of this world. . . I pray for all who hold office in the church that their courage may not fail . . ."

Days of All Faiths:

Roman Legend Is Story of Buddha

By DR. HOWARD V. HARPER

In the Roman martyrology Nov. 27 are two saints who never existed — St. Barlaam and St. Josephat. The story goes that in the western part of India, at some unknown date, there lived a king who persecuted those of his subjects who were Christians.

When it was foretold that his son Josephat would become a Christian, the king put the boy under close watch and brought him up in the strictest confinement. Nevertheless, a Christian named Barlaam, disguised as a merchant, managed to penetrate the guard, and he converted the young prince.

The king at first tried to talk his son out of his new religion, but in the attempt he was himself converted. He left his throne and went to live the life of a hermit in the desert. This made Josephat king, but he, too, renounced the throne and took to the desert with Barlaam.

It is pretty clear that someone has lifted the legend of Buddha and passed it off as a Christian story. Young Gautama Buddha was an Indian prince. And he was confined to quarters by his father to keep him from devoting his life to religion.

The Josephat story is simply the Buddha story with a little embroidery supplied by the imagination of some long-forgotten Christian who was more zealous than trustworthy. There is no evidence that this Josephat or this Barlaam ever lived.

There is a real Barlaam in the calendar. His day was observed last week, on November 19. But he was never in India. He lived and died in Antioch, in the fourth century.

SECHNALL, THE IRISH HYMNWRITER

It is hard to pick up a saint of the Irish church, even if he is not a very important one. Followers of this column should have learned by now that their writer is not rational about anything Irish and will write about the darlin' land on every slightest excuse.

In the fifth century, St. Sechnall was sent out from Gaul to help St. Patrick in his vast work of making the Irish nation Christian. Coming from Gaul he must have been a Frenchman, but apparently he was soon assimilated, which is only natural — it happened to everyone who stays any time at all in Ireland. Remember, the great Patrick himself was not born an Irishman.

Sechnall took the Irish name of Sechnall, and that is the name he is known by today.

St. Sechnall was 72 years old when he came to Ireland, but he lived long enough to establish a reputation as a top-flight hymnwriter. He wrote the earliest known Latin hymn in the Irish church, a lengthy composition called "Audite, omnes amantes Deum."

"Hear ye, all who love the Lord."

This hymn has twenty-three stanzas, with the initial letters of each stanza worked out in alphabetical sequence. It was called a "persever," which meant that it was especially effective when recited or sung in an emergency of some kind. One might guess that by the time you got through twenty-three complicated Latin stanzas, any real emergency would have taken a turn one way or the other.

Sechnall also wrote the lovely communion hymn "Sancti, venite, Christi corpus sumite," which is still sung at the point in the Mass where the priest receives his communion.

What of all this, you may well ask. And you may think Sechnall was not a saint worth writing about sixteen centuries after his death. Perhaps so, but he was a companion of St. Patrick and he had a hand in setting the character of one of the most charming, most Christian countries on earth. That makes him important to us Irishmen.

Washington Notebook:

Wit of Woodrow Wilson Lives On

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Adlai Stevenson, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, likes a story told about the late President Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey.

The state highway commissioner — he had just died. His deputy came into the governor's office and asked, "Can I take his place?"

"It's all right with me," replied Wilson, "if it's all right with the undertaker."

Stevenson also likes a remark attributed to Charles Lindbergh, just after he had flown the Spirit of St. Louis from New York to Paris.

"It would have been a much greater achievement," remarked the Lone Eagle, "if it had been done with a committee."

George Romney impressed a lot of people with his gubernatorial victory in Michigan, a tough Democratic bastion, but he may not find too many politicians adopting his tactics for dealing with hecklers.

The common technique is to ignore them — or give them a not a answer. That's not Romney's style. He told one noisy challenger:

"You're insolent. You have no self-discipline. Your parents didn't bring you up properly."

Voice of the People:

'Conservative Members in Congress Saved U.S.'

Northern and Southern conservative Republicans and Democrats will now control legislation even more effectively than during the last two years.

It was this coalition that saved us from such pseudo-Communist nostrums as medicare, Federal aid to education, inflationary tax cuts without corresponding reduction of wild spending, and many others. Conservative members, regardless of party stamp, applied brakes to the reckless dealing of the New Frontier.

'Once Lovely Pond Is Now a Menace'

Ten years ago I purchased property overlooking Hadsell Pond.

Each year I placed Pekin ducks in the lake for my own enjoyment as well as the children in the neighborhood and hundreds of people stopped to feed them.

Two years ago sewage started pouring directly into the lake. I notified the township office, wrote letters, made personal visits to the Oakland County Health Department, including a signed petition from the residents, all to no avail. Today it is a menace to the health and welfare of the community.

Every day the U.S. Public Health Department is making requests for individuals to help clean up our lakes, and I am sure the urban renewal program will not be enhanced by this mess.

I sold my property and now live in Florida.

'What Is ABC Trying to Do?'

So TV had Alger Hiss speaking on Veterans' Day. What next? "The Life of Judas" to be shown on Christmas Eve. "The Misunderstood Benedict Arnold" for Washington's birthday? Surely the Fourth of July would be perfect for "The Real Story of the Rosenbergs." What does ABC stand for anyway?

Today is Saturday, Nov. 24, the 328th day of 1962 with 37 to follow.

The moon is approaching its new phase.

The morning stars are Venus and Mars.

The evening stars are Jupiter and Saturn.

On this day in history:
In 1864, French artist Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec was born.

In 1869, women from 21 states of the union met in Cleveland, Ohio, to draw up plans for the organization of the American Woman Suffrage Association.

In 1944, superlactress members of the U.S. Air Force made their first raids on Tokyo, taking off from the American base at Saipan.

In 1961, the U.N. Security Council passed a resolution authorizing Secretary General U Thant to use force if necessary to arrest mercenaries and other foreign military and political advisers of the secessionist Katanga province in the Congo.

A thought for the day — Author George Bernard Shaw said: "The test of a man or woman's breeding is how they behave in a quarrel."

Could Next Congress Be Replay of Old Record?

Although the Nov. 6 voting set an off-year record, little change in the complexion of the Senate and House resulted.

The GOP gained two seats in the House while the Dems picked up four in the Senate. Since the Administration traditionally drops a sizable number of seats in both Houses in nonpresidential elections, this could be construed as a firm victory for President Kennedy.

But there were some congressional shifts with potential effect upon the White House.

In the House, there was a large turnover of Democrats—about 30 new ones being elected. The question here is, how many of them will be Kennedy men? And second, will JFK's old opponents of both parties see strong support for him in the election returns and change their pattern of voting?

Administration observers see a net gain of 10 Kennedy votes in the new House. This would have prevented defeats on two White House measures before the 87th Congress.

The President seemingly picked up support in the Senate. But since that body has consistently given him what he wanted anyway—the notable exception being the medicare bill—the gain there is more illusory than real.

There seems little likelihood of any extreme legislation being enacted. The mood of the electorate pretty well indicated reluctance to change materially the national status quo.

With skirmishing already under way for the big battle two years off, a safe prediction is that the new Congress will do little boat rocking during its tenure, with action on big issues deferred until the climactic showdown.

Games for All Ages

Now that the Cuban crisis has simmered down with the removal of Russian missiles, communists are turning their speculative dispatches on the war in India and the question of what move China will make next.

It looks like a good winter for armchair "generals." If you tire of Russian roulette, there's always Chinese checkers.

Underground Freight Transport Increasing

The transportation of the world was once relatively simple. Its base was two-dimensional — land and water.

Then, within memory, something new was added — the air. Now, although the pattern was set in the late 1800s with limited use for passage of natural gas and oil, the movement of freight has become four-dimensional. This is represented by the accelerating use of underground pipelines.

In addition to movement of the two products noted, pipelines are now carrying coal, wood pulp, helium, liquid oxygen, high-purity nitrogen and other chemicals on hauls from a few miles to hundreds of miles.

And there is talk of the day when such cargo as bauxite, forest products, milk and dry freight in bullet-shaped containers will move inside subterranean tubes.

Pipelines got their first big push during World War II when the "Big Inch" and "Little Inch" did such a tremendous job of carrying vital petroleum from southwestern fields to the oil-thirsty Midwest and Northeast. During the next 15 years, the pipeline network of the Country reached out to 450,000 miles.

The proportion of all intercity freight traffic moving through it rose from 5 per cent in 1930 to 18 per cent in 1961.

Pipelines now carry four-fifths as much intercity tonnage as trucks, about two-fifths the volume of railroads. And the upward trend is on the threshold of a new surge, as projects under way or in advanced stages of development total 3,755 miles and amount to $742 million.

Verily, transportation does not stand still.

A few people are wondering whether life is possible on Venus, but far more are wondering how much longer it will be possible on earth.

The Man About Town

It Peers to Me Rose-Colored Glasses Focus on Times Ahead

By HOWARD HELDENBRAND

Here are a few post-Thanksgiving items that call for sober thanks, in case they slipped by as you appetitically watched or heard the Lions take Green Bay.

The country's economy appears sound and thrifty, with analysts now seeing continued economic progress for the year ahead — a fast switch from projections of a few months ago that '63 would experience some slipage.

The international outlook, though far from tranquil, is the best it has been for years, with global patterns finally taking shape that promise at least managed peace in the years ahead.

And if stock market behavior is all that is cracked up to be (that thought is rather a barometer; the general state of mind is conspicuously lighter and again looking forward with confidence.

Complementing this, "Ward's Automotive Reports" for October opened both the MAT's baby blues, and might widen yours.

For with total car production the highest ever for October, Michigan's proportion is the greatest in recent times.

These pessimists (including your learned columnist) who had the idea that the automobile industry had all but run out on us, will be reassured to know that our state's volume of national production was 23 per cent . . . not bad at all.

And what state do you think was next? Missouri, by 10 per cent . . . So was I! And what did the two states that have reputedly been making car-making from under Ohio and Indiana—come up with respectively? Five and two per cent . . . So was I!!

Therefore, you can now get on with your Christmas shopping, secure in the knowledge that the sun is again smiling happily through the clouds that a short time ago loomed so dark.

In certain esoteric areas of human endeavor, three of a kind is not viewed with unbridled enthusiasm — particularly if they are numerically low! But Pontiac has the unique distinction of holding three of a kind that are unbeatable (Editor's note: Isn't that a pretty wild statement?) They are

Elliot M. (Pete) Estes
Calvin J. (Cal) Werner
Thomas F. (Tom) Withers
general managers respectively of GM's Pontiac Motor, Truck & Coach and Fisher Body Divisions.

Their affinity lies in the fact that all three claim the University of Cincinnati as alma mater.

Scientists May 'See' Space Ride

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Astronaut Leroy Gordon Cooper Jr. will be seen on scientists' television screens during portions of his scheduled 15-orbit space flight next April.

In an interview Friday, Cooper said a miniature transmitter will flash images of the inside of the spacecraft back to earth when it is within range of a receiving station.

Alan B. Shepard Jr., the nation's first spaceman — who is Cooper's backup man — said the television picture of Cooper won't be on commercial networks — at least immediately.

DIFFERENT SPEED

"The transmitter will be operating on a different scan speed," Shepard said. "The pictures could be shown on commercial television later after the scan speed is converted."

The Russians saw their cosmonauts via television on their last two space flights but this will be the first time the United States has used such in flight transmitters.

Cooper said his Mercury spacecraft also will carry for the first time a ball with strobe lights, which will be released to test man's vision in space at night. Cooper said the ball, bearing two strobe lights, will be put into free flight from the Mercury capsule during one of the orbits.

Cooper will then find out how well he can see the blinking ball at varying distances ranging from a mile upward. He said the fuel expulsion test tank will be along just for observation. It will not be tied in to the attitude control jets of his spacecraft.

Cancel 'Security Guidance' on U.S. Military Topics

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department announced yesterday it has canceled a 12-point "security guidance" which forbade military and civilian personnel to talk to newsmen about a wide range of matters considered vital to national security.

However, controversial memorandum requiring defense personnel to report conversations with newsmen remains in effect.

A Pentagon spokesman said a message has been sent out to all defense agencies removing the security guidance which was issued on Oct. 24 at the height of the Cuban crisis.

"We're back where we were before the Cuban crisis," the spokesman said.

This action did not mean there will now be a free flow of information on such matters as aerial reconnaissance flights over Cuba and movements of troops or aircraft involved in the military buildup during the Cuban crisis.

Even in normal times there is a clamp on certain types of information considered to be sensitive — information that the Joint Chiefs of Staff feel would tip off potential enemies to things they shouldn't know about.

The 12-point security guidance prohibited any discussion of plans for using strategic or tactical forces, including types of equipment.

It also barred talk on estimates of U.S. military capabilities, discussion of targets, estimates of enemy plans or capabilities, degree of alert of U.S. military forces, estimates of vulnerability of U.S. installations to enemy action and the like.

The Pentagon spokesman said a memorandum issued by Assistant Secretary of Defense Arthur Sylvester during the crisis is still in effect. He declined comment on whether it will be altered.

This memo, dated Oct. 27, requires all military and civilian personnel to report in writing any contacts they have with newsmen and the subject matter discussed.

Reporters have protested that this memo tends to dry up legitimate news sources.

At his news conference last Tuesday, President Kennedy said that if he finds the memo has restricted the flow of essential news from the Pentagon "we will change it."

Sylvester declined yesterday to say whether he has had any conversations with the President on the subject. Sylvester said this is a matter for the White House to talk about.

Peace Corps Needs Windmills in Africa

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Peace Corps is looking for a million books, 5,000 street signs, six windmills and a fire engine to help its program in Africa.

So reports director Sargent Shriver, just back from a three-week trip to the continent.

Shriver said the Peace Corps hopes to have 3,000 volunteers in Africa by the end of next year and 2,000 of that number will be teaching.

"I want to put 500 books behind each of those teachers," he said, following his return to this country.

As a result, Shriver is seeking children's textbooks and basic reference works such as encyclopedias.

The street sign idea came to Shriver when he was trying to find his way around Addis Ababa, the capital of Ethiopia, and found there were no markers.

He said he thought erecting street signs might be a good project for Peace Corps volunteers.

The windmill request is designed to fill a need in the Somali Republic on the northeast coast of Africa. There is a shortage of power in the area and one city feels the windmills can be used to bring up badly needed water from 16 feet below the surface of the arid land.

The request for the fire engine came from a Peace Corps Volunteer teaching school in Ethiopia.

Richard Howrigan, 23, who once served as a fire chief in his own town of Fairfield, Vt., organized a volunteer bucket brigade for the city of Dessie in Ethiopia.

But the African city has no real fire-fighting equipment.

Meanwhile, Shriver said in a network radio broadcast yesterday that he has no plans to leave his present job, despite speculation he might be named to replace Fowler Hamilton as head of the U.S. Foreign Aid Agency.

Shriver, President Kennedy's brother-in-law, said that sometime in the future he might seek an elective political office, but "I'm not actively interested right now."

As for the Peace Corps, he said,

"I am going to stay in it as long as my service is satisfactory — I hope — and that depends, of course, on the President's desires."

Trade Group to Meet

Expect Waterford to Act on Grant

Action on an application for a grant from the Federal Aversted Public Works program is expected at Monday night's Waterford Township Board meeting.

Government funds will be sought for the interconnection of the township's existing water system.

A street light hearing for a portion of Watkins Hills subdivision and a hearing of intent to proceed on the blacktopping of Ahi Street are both scheduled from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

In other business the board will consider adoption of a proposed plumbing ordinance amendment dealing with shower pans and review a request to transfer a SDM (beer and wine) license.

Has 2nd Heart Attack

SALISBURY, Southern Rhodesia (UPI) — A spokesman for Federal Prime Minister Sir Roy Welensky's office said yesterday Lady Welensky was recovering from a mild heart attack.

It was Lady Welensky's second heart attack in recent weeks. But the spokesman said there was no cause for alarm over her condition.

100 Young People in Concert

County Youth Sing at Pontiac Northern

More than 100 young people of Oakland County Youth will sing in concert at Pontiac Northern High School at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Directed by Thuriow Spurr, president of Splendor Productions and known as Mr. Music to teen-agers, these young people will sing with the "Splendors," a 20-voice ensemble at the concert here.

Each girl in the program will have made her own dress of a special taffeta cloth for the occasion. The girls all use the same pattern.

"The young men will wear full-dress tuxedos, and the formal attire of the teen chorale will add color to the two-hour concert," said Richard Wynn, Oakland County Youth for Christ director.

Youth for Christ consists of many Bible clubs in Oakland County schools.

The clubs are aids to combat juvenile delinquency; to help raise scholastic and moral standards in the schools; and to create a sense of responsibility and purpose among the youth with respect to school and fellow students.

There are no membership dues. Young people plan the program with the help of the director.

The club philosophy is Christian fellowship in the school, to help young people live in school the things they are taught in church. Each club is urged to have a Bible Club Quiz Team for competition between clubs.

Other activities as talent contests, fundations and sing-alongs are held as club officers plan programs in a monthly area youth council meeting.

SEWING FOR CONCERT — Among the 100 local teen-agers singing in concert at Pontiac Northern High School Saturday evening will be, (from left), Penny Hart of 3071 Judah Road, Kay Granger of 2541 Auburn Road and Nancy Steward of 51-Kimball St. Each girl is required to make her own dress. The concert is sponsored by the Oakland County Youth for Christ.

REHEARSING FOR CONCERT — Seated at the grand piano in Pilgrim Holiness Church are, (from left), Dan Miller of 45 Strathmore Ave., Richard Wynn, director for Oakland County Youth for Christ, and Larry Beadle of 2331

Garland, Lake Orion. The three are running through chorus numbers to be presented in Pontiac Northern High School Saturday evening in the two-hour concert known as "Splendor of Sacred Song."

Astronaut in Mural

LUPTON, England (AP) — The Church of St. Francis in this Bedfordshire village probably has the distinction of having the first astronaut in a religious mural.

The 700 square foot mural, entitled "To The End of Time," is behind the church altar.

Its artist, Mary Adsead, says she included the figure of an astronaut to show the strength and permanence of the Christian religion from its beginning to the present day.

COLLECT CLOTHING — Bringing coats, galoshes, shirts, skirts, shoes and trousers to St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church are Paul Schmansky of 239 S. Parks St. and Kathy Slabinski of 444 Valencia St. With garments brought by other members of the parish their contribution will be distributed to the needy abroad through the annual Bishop's Clothing Drive.

Catholics Contribute Clothing

Thousands of homeless refugees from Communist tyranny will receive the generous donations of good used clothing that American Catholics are giving to the annual Bishop's Thanksgiving Clothing Collection this week.

In his letter formally launching the 14th annual drive for clothing, Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle of Washington wrote:

"There is no measuring the value of the clothing which is collected each year in our annual Thanksgiving appeal as far as the poor and needy in the distressed areas of the world are concerned."

"Clothing that we were able to ship as a result of last year's appeal made it possible for us to not only supply clothing to the unclad and the suffering in the countries of greatest need in every quarter of the globe, but to supply clothing to thousands who were deprived of everything in the numerous calamities which affected so many areas in the past year," the archbishop said.

PASTORS COLLECT Catholics desiring to contribute may take their clean, used clothing to pastors at St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church, White-more at South Parke Street; St. Michael Church, 120 Lewis St.; St. Benedict Church, 1160 Myrtle St.; and St. Joseph at Bagley and South Boulevard.

Waterford Township churchmen may take garments to Our Lady of the Lakes Church, 5481 Dixie Highway.

Other Catholic churches collecting in the area are Our Lady of Refuge, Orchard Lake; Sacred Heart at Auburn Heights; and St. Hugo in the Hills, 2401 Opdyke Road, Bloomfield Hills.

The report says that the CPRA is planning to receive up to 50,000 chicks by the end of next June.

Of the first shipment, which arrived when airplanes were being used for the military forces, 2,500 chicks had to stay in Leopoldville, but were subsequently distributed among Angola refugees and stations of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, said CPRA.

Plans are also progressing to procure large modern incubators to increase local production, while small kerosene incubators will be set up in village centers.

The report adds that vaccines have now arrived from the United States so that losses from disease are being cut down.

Valued for meat, eggs and feathers, the imported poultry is also helping to improve local breeds, said the report from Ernest Lehman, CPRA administrative secretary.

CPRA is a unit of the Congo Protestant Council, through which interchurch aid is channeled to the Congolese and the thousands of Angola refugees in their country.

Asks Church Bias Fight

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Urging more vigorous church action to overcome racial discrimination, Methodist Bishop A. Raymond Grant, of Portland, Ore., compared the Communist wall in Berlin to the "barriers to brotherhood that we have erected."

He told a youth conference here that "walls of separation, whether in Berlin or in the mind and heart," need to come down.

OK to Take Purse Into Living Room

By The Emily Post Institute

Q: When invited to someone's house to spend the evening, is it proper for a woman guest to take her handbag with her into the living room or should it be left on the bed with her hat and coat?

A: I think it is wrong to carry one's bag into the living room and that it implies mistrust of the people in the house. I would be very pleased to have your opinion on this matter.

A: It is quite proper and does not imply mistrust for a woman to take her handbag with her because she may need her eyeglasses, handkerchief or cigarettes from it while in the living room.

Q: Is it not proper for a woman to wear a hat when going to a funeral home to pay her last respects? My brother died recently and I was amazed at the number of women who came to the funeral home without hats.

A: I thought this in very bad taste. Even in this present day of hatlessness, there are times when a hat is necessary and in my opinion this is one of them.

Will you please tell me if I am right about this or am I just plain old-fashioned?

A: I agree with you. Correctly women should wear hats when going to a funeral home.

Q: I have been invited to a fashionable wedding and no doubt there will be champagne served to toast the bride and groom. I do not take alcohol in any form. How can I get around this without being conspicuous?

A: Have a little bit poured into your glass and lift it to your lips when the toast is proposed, but you do not have to drink a drop of it.

Health Fanatic Could Use Good Doctor, Says Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband's brother is a health food fanatic, but I never thought my husband would get that way.

Lately he won't let me give our children any candy, cookies, soft drinks or anything with sugar in it. He says sugar is pure poison.

He won't let me use white flour or regular milk. He buys whole wheat and macaroni products. I used to serve well-balanced meals and we were all healthy.

If this keeps up my husband will be just like his nutty brother.

Don't tell me to talk to my family doctor. We don't have one. My husband doesn't believe in them, either.

GOING MAD

DEAR GOING: Your husband has gone off the deep end on a subject that has some merit.

If you are interested in getting the facts, your local health department has loads of literature on nutrition. Too bad you don't have a family physician. I think your husband needs one.

DEAR ABBY: Our son (he is 29) is being married for the second time. For his first marriage our relatives were very generous and gave him and his wife some lovely and costly wedding gifts.

They were divorced two years later. He is being married in a church again to a lovely girl who has never been married.

We do not want our relatives to go to the expense of buying wedding gifts for our son again. Is it proper to make a note of "No gifts, please" on the wedding invitations?

PARENTS OF THE GROOM DEAR PARENTS: It is not proper to make a note of "NO gifts" on the wedding invitations. Say nothing, and let your relatives use their own judgment.

DEAR ABBY: The day we moved into the Mobile Park, one woman immediately took me over. She called on me and gave me the rundown on everyone in the trailer court, and according to her, there is something wrong with all of them except herself.

She has no friends here, and now no one will have anything to do with me because this woman is always in my place and people think I am like her. I would like to make friends with some of the others, but my chances are ruined.

I am miserable, but it's too late to undo the damage. What now?

SHUNNED

DEAR SHUNNED: Try to get acquainted with some of the others in your own. And make it plain that you are not like the trouble-maker who is "adopted" you on a whim. If you fail—move. And next time don't allow yourself to be taken over by the first person who rings your bell.

What's on your mind? For a personal reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, in care of The Pontiac Press.

Bloomfield Hills Branch of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association will hold its Christmas meeting Dec. 3 at the home of Mrs. George Russell, Lone Pine Road.

Featured on the program will be Bloomfield and Birmingham area musicians and story tellers. Members will exhibit their favorite Christmas home decorations.

Club to View Baroque Program

Dr. and Mrs. Ernst Scheyer of Detroit will present a program of Baroque art and music to members and guests of The Village Woman's Club at 2 p.m. Dec. 5.

The art of this period will be discussed and illustrated by Dr. Scheyer and Mrs. Scheyer will demonstrate its music on the harpsichord. Dr. Scheyer has authored books and articles published in English, German, Dutch and French.

He has earned magna cum laude doctorates from the Universities of Freiburg and Cologne and is retired curator of the Cologne and Breslaw museums.

CAME TO U.S. IN '35 Since coming to America in 1935, he has been a research fellow at the Detroit Institute of Arts, a lecturer at the Cranbrook Academy of Arts and guest professor at the University of Michigan. In 1950, he lectured in the western zone of Germany for the Department of Cultural Relations and Education under the High Commissioner.

Mrs. Scheyer was born in the Netherlands near Amsterdam, she attended Amsterdam Conservatory and studied with Godowski in New York and with Katja Andry in Chicago.

She played at the reception for Her Majesty Queen Juliana of the Netherlands in Detroit in 1952.

Hostesses for the afternoon will be Mrs. Neil Barber, Mrs. R. L. Bernhard, Mrs. C. B. Harman, Mrs. Brian Van Moos, Mrs. Hobart Andrus and Mrs. Jack A. Moses.

Mrs. James Barnwell and Mrs. John F. String are flower chairmen.

Mrs. C. L. Wilson and Mrs. M. D. Douglas Jr. will handle reservations for the luncheon which precedes the program.

New Emotions Can Grow

Happiness Is Percentage

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE
CASE N-484: Sarah Y., aged 19, is the girl who was jilted the day before her wedding. Although she had no interest thereafter in living, she still followed my advice about going through the proper motions.

So she went back to her job. And six weeks later, I browbeat her into accepting a date with a new man.

She protested it wouldn't be fair to him, for she was totally disinterested. But I insisted, so they went to a drive-in movie.

Fortunately, she shed a few tears as she remembered her dates with her former fiancé. But you cannot be thinking of two things at the same time, so a live escort at your side will usually monopolize most of your attention.

That's what happened, for Sarah's new escort engaged her in conversation so she didn't have much time to think backward into the gloomy yesterdays.

Two or three times in the next few weeks she would call my office. She still protested indifference to life. But she had accepted another date with the new boy friend.

"Go through the proper motions," I urged Sarah, "and you'll soon begin to feel the corresponding emotions."

She was a disbeliever but she followed my advice, anyway.

After another month, I received no more phone calls from her. Half a year passed by.

A WEDDING INVITATION

Then I received a wedding invitation. It was from Sarah. Yet she had vowed not nine months earlier that she could never again feel the slightest interest in living and would NEVER fall in love a second time.

Mrs. Crane and I attended the wedding. Sarah beamed happily.

Before we left the reception afterward, Sarah confided to me:

"Dr. Crane, I am happier than I ever was in my whole life! I can't understand the miracle that has happened."

"But, truthfully, I am more in love now than I was before and I think we are far more suited to each other." And that was true, for this new boy shared more interests and compatible background than Sarah's first fiancé ever had.

The reason I cite Sarah's case is to remind thousands of you teen-agers, as well as older lovers, who may be jilted or deprived of marriage by death of your intended mate.

And others of you worry unduly lest you remain forever an old bachelor or spinster.

Well, even so, that kind of existence is not totally devoid of joy or fun and happiness.

A MATTER OF DEGREE

Remember, life is never a case of 100 per cent happiness or else zero. Happiness is a matter of degree.

If you can't be 100 per cent happy, try for 99 per cent, or even 85 per cent or 60 per cent etc.

Ideally, if you find a perfect mate, I think you may shoot closer to that 100 per cent happy mark than if you remain single.

But if you marry unwisely, you may not rate 50 per cent happiness as contrasted with a spinster school teacher's 75 per cent or 85 per cent.

The theory of relativity thus holds true of human happiness! So let your brain be captain and always go through the proper motions.

A high degree of happiness will then follow, even if you don't reach the 100 per cent mark.

So send for my "Tests for Husbands and Wives", enclosing a stamped return envelope, plus 20 cents. It shows you the proper "motions" to follow.

Write to Dr. George W. Crane in care of The Pontiac Press, Pontiac, Michigan, enclosing a 10-cent stamp, self-addressed envelope and 20 cents to cover typing and postage when you send for his psychological charts and pamphlets.

Piano Virtuoso Feels

Resentment's to No Avail

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Some years ago a chubby 4-year-old girl caused a furor when she climbed up on a piano stool in an Oakland, Calif., concert hall and proceeded to give a dazzling concert which included works by Mozart, Bach, Schuman and Beethoven. She set the music world back on its heels and made headlines all over the world.

Her name was Ruth Slenczynska. Today, no longer chubby, petite Miss Slenczynska enjoys the status of a virtuoso, still commands headlines wherever she plays and teaches pupils of all ages. I found her interesting not only as a great musician but as a person. She has some interesting ideas which I will pass along to you today.

DISCIPLINARIAN

Much has been written about Ruth's childhood and it is well known that her father was a harsh disciplinarian when it came to the piano.

When asked if she is bitter about this she laughed, "Lord, no! He did the best he could to get the results he wanted so that I could have the kind of career he'd never quite been able to make for himself, and I'm sure he believed it would make me happy!"

"The older I get the more sympathetically I see my father—and anyhow, I think bitterness is a waste of time. People can make a career of righteous resentment, but even when it's justified, it doesn't get them anywhere."

Actually, Miss Slenczynska appreciates the advantages of the stern childhood she encountered. She can't imagine being happy as anything but a pianist and she feels that her zest for living today is partly due to the discipline she had as a child.

She admitted missing out on a lot of childhood fun, but said, "I think that's one reason why I have man in care of The Pontiac Press.

a lot of zest for simple pleasures today. I never had a chance to get bored with them as a child."

It is true that an overindulgent childhood may produce a bored teen-ager, and a bored teen-ager often turns into an unhappy adult. I certainly agree with Ruth that resentment and anger about the past are a terrible waste of energy which we should use to fulfill ourselves.

As she put it, "They're backward looking emotions and you're not likely to go forward if you are busy looking back."

Polly's Pointers

To Shoe Your Baby

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—When putting on baby's shoes, press the tendon on the back of his or her heel. This uncovers baby's toes and shoes go on every time.

FRUSTRATED NO MORE

DEAR POLLY—Before working in the garden or doing any rough work, rub your fingernails with a piece of soap. This will prevent the earth (or grime of any kind) from getting under the nails. When you wash your hands, the soap comes out easily.

MRS. W.

DEAR POLLY—An easy way to oil a lock is to dip the key in oil and then put it in the lock and work the key back and forth several times. That's all there is to it. The lock is oiled.

MR. M. D. A.

DEAR POLLY—When you hang a picture on a nail, make a V cut in the wallpaper so the paper can be turned back over the hole if the nail is removed later.

MRS. A. D. A.

DEAR POLLY—Insects add nothing to a paint job. Keep them from setting on painted surfaces that are still wet by adding citronella, cedar or pine oil to the final coat of paint. One or two teaspoonsful to a full pail of paint is enough and will not injure the consistency of the paint.

MRS. C. G.

DEAR POLLY—Cut the top "cuffs" off those worn socks, dye them to match the children's mittens and sew together. They make wonderfully long cuffs. No problem of getting them over heavy coat sleeves. So many of our short cuts are second nature that we hadn't realized they are helpful hints to others.

You also are aware that what may be a bargain to your neighbor is not necessary a bargain for you and know, too—if you don't need it, it's not a bargain.

House of Many Angles

By REBA HEINTZELMAN
Pontiac Press Home Editor
Angles!

That's what the John A. Landmesser's beautiful hillside house in Bloomfield Hills is made of. There are angles everywhere, from the sharp rugged peaks that thrust up and outward into the woods to the sunken Roman tub in the vine-trimmed bathroom.

The house doesn't appear to have any one particular front side. Because of the sharp corners, wide wide overhangs and intricate plate glass installations, any and every side could be the front.

The winding driveway ends on top of a hill in a balcony carport, spacious enough to not only house two cars, but also to shelter guests' cars near the main entrance.

Inside the double front doors there is an immediate atmosphere of friendliness. Multi-colored slate has been so artistically placed that it practically leads you four steps down into the magnificent living room. For those who enjoy the fresh, uncluttered beauty of modern decor—this is it.

Except where privacy is desired, the big rooms have a fluid continuity. All of the main living areas are a continuous whole. However, areas of use are defined, but not separated.

A mammoth round white chair in front of a ceiling-high hibiscus tree growing out of the floor, is the focal point of the room. Plate glass above the tree lets light in for coxing plants upward. Beyond this area, but molded to the house, is a greenhouse filled with fresh flowers.

The ceiling which starts low over an electric concert organ and sweeps up and out over the plate glass window-wall is covered with a natural colored matting. Only a hair-line on the floor gives a hint that there is plate glass at the far end of the room, and the over-all effect is a feeling of genuine intimacy with the wooded outdoors.

In the hexagon shaped kitchen, hundreds of shiny lead plants hang over the edge of an open shelf, like tiny gremlins watching what's going on below. Lights are concealed among the vines for soft night illumination.

A determined fig tree growing from the floor-planters separating the living and dining areas, reaches 15 feet up toward an offset window in the ceiling.

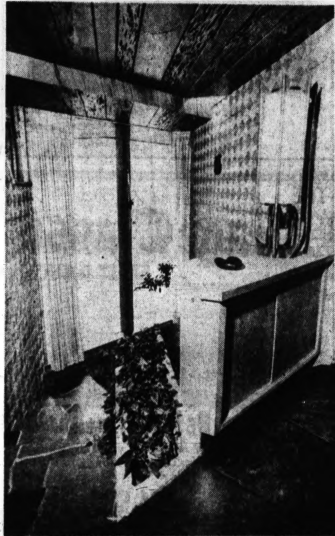

A giant five-angled wall fireplace tempts quiet relaxation in the master bedroom. Here, slate flooring has been covered with thick orange carpet and is accented by a royal purple bedspread and a blue side chair.

One of the most interesting rooms in the house—oddly enough—is the master bathroom. What appears to be a large un-curtained shower room, is really a sunken Roman tub. It is so designed that a door is unnecessary for taking a shower.

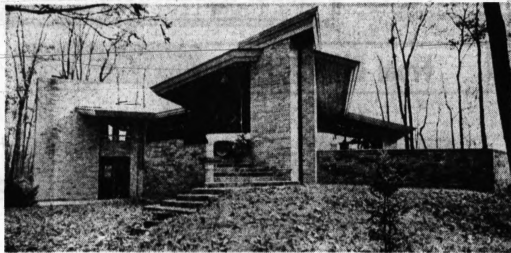

A bather could fill the step-down area with a soothing warm bath, or stand up for a brisk shower. A dryer and sun lamp are installed in the ceiling.

Down on the lower level of the Landmesser's house, it's like walking into an exotic cafe in Hawaii, bamboo, matting, a palm tree and a huge picture of the beach of Waikiki set the theme.

The spacious openness, healthy, vigorous growing plants, the brick and plate glass walls and artistic placing of accessories make this one of the most unusual homes in the area. But most of all, the interest centers on the hundreds of unique angles.

GOING DOWN — The wide slate stairway curves around a real live-filled planter to a delightful Hawaiian room on the second level. Regular floor matting has been installed on the walls both in the hallway and in the tropical appointed room. Here again, the ceilings angle in every direction with a recessed light in the right corner.

SWEEEPING ANGLES — Angles of the John Landmesser house jut out into the sky like a giant shark in a sea of blue. Because the house is built into a hill and sets back from the road in a thick woods, it is hard to detect from the road. Inside, the slate floors continue out through plate glass onto curving terraces.

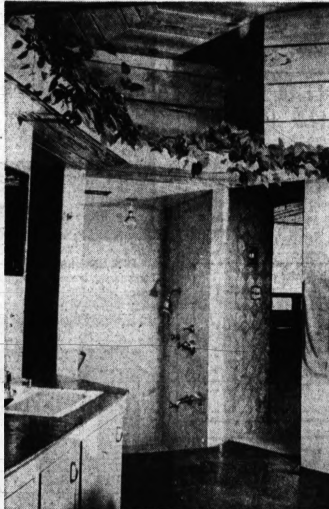

background for LIVING

Pontiac Press Photos by Phil Webb

OVER-ALL OPENNESS — This view is seen from the brick wall-way of the Landmessers' guest bedroom. Most everything is built in, particularly in the kitchen. Open counters allow the hostess to be with her guests in preparing ing meals or refreshments. The sunken living room is four steps down beyond the dining table, and the long-chained hanging lamp over the table adds to the drama of this scene.

UNUSUAL BATH — The angles in this ceiling were a nightmare for workmen doing the construction work, according to Landmesser. There isn't a normal 90-degree angle in the entire house — most are 40-degrees for unusual interest. Fresh green vines peek over the edge of the pecky cypress shelf. The four-step-down "shower" is really a Roman bath tub. Water fills the step-down area as if it were a regular tub.

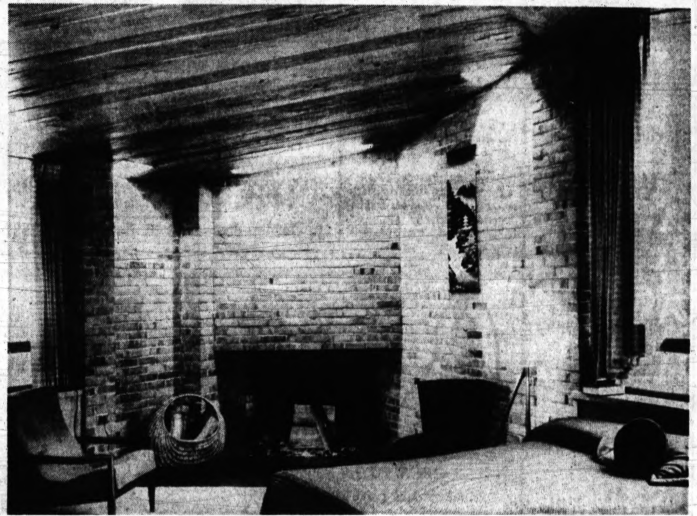

"DOWN BOY!" — The Landmesser's playful pup Caesar, is one pet that cannot be ignored. Like the huge "Marmaduke" of comic strip fame, he is friendly, lovable, playful and a great Great Dane. Caesar has learned to manipulate his big bulk around the smooth slate floors with the easy grace of a gazelle. He never attempts to hop on that beautiful white over-sized ottoman, occupied by Landmesser.

DRAMATIC COMFORT — The huge round ottoman-chair invites sitting in. Just out of view of the picture to the right is another big fuzzy white ottoman to balance the area facing an electric concert organ. It's hard to tell where the inside ends and the outside begins at the far end of the room because of the unbroken expanse of plate glass.

FIREPLACE ANGLES — Hexagon angles are featured on three walls that make up the fireplace area in the master bedroom. Rather than a beam, down the center of the ceiling, 40-degree angle creation reaches from one end of the room to the other. With so much plate glass, brick and wood it would seem that this type of house would have a rather cold feeling. The Landmessers' is anything but that. Bricks and wood have a warm appearance, and the colors melt together in perfect harmony.

Students Need Good Study Spot

School days are here again, and with them comes the inevitable homework.

The home furnishings industry committee reminds you that your children's study needs should be reviewed.

Teachers regularly report that many students lack good study habits at home, and therein lies their less-than-best grade problems.

The checklist for an ideal study is short on space and furniture, but long on importance. See that your children have the following available to them:

Number one — a good quiet atmosphere to work in. This means freedom from household distractions, of which television heads the list. Most families find a child's own room best houses his study.

With more than one child, you may have to give some thought to arranging an adequate place for study.

Maybe a playroom, family room or den could be made off-limits to everyone but the student during study hours.

Second in importance is a desk. Investment in a good desk will pay off many times in better study habits, consequently better grades. And don't forget your young scholar will need a comfortable desk chair.

The next item on your list should be a convenient storage unit for keeping books, supplies and reference materials.

A bookcase, hanging wall cabinets or modular units that can be arranged in a variety of ways could serve this purpose and be used elsewhere later.

Any doctor will tell you that good lighting is an absolute necessity.

The purchase of a good desk lamp is an investment in the child's health as well as his education.

When decorating the student's room, keep in mind that a bright, pleasant color scheme will be conducive to producing good work, as will an orderly uncluttered room arrangement.

STRIKING ROOF LINE: A dramatic raised living room provides a bold departure from traditional two-story construction in this four-bedroom home, as well as giving it a distinctive exterior. Upstairs sun deck, over the entire garage, adjoins the master bedroom for exquisite private relaxing.

Living Room Highlights Two-Story Home

By JULES LOH

The soaring roof line of this house is a tipoff there's something unusual inside. You won't be disappointed. It's a dramatic raised living room, and the graceful exterior is only one of its exciting features.

The house clearly is classified as a two-story. But it has a split-level variation in that the living room, at the extreme left, is four steps up from the downstairs level.

The room has an assortment of features of the kind unseen in all but the most imaginative two-story designs.

Throughout the house, in fact, the design is characterized by a crisp freshness. It contains four bedrooms, all on the upstairs floor, two full baths plus a downstairs lavatory, and a number of other features such as a rear entry mudroom and an upstairs sun deck which make the house truly livable.

It is design J-49 in the House of the Week series, the product of architect Samuel Paul.

One of Paul's most intriguing (as well as cost-reducing) innovations is his treatment of cellar space.

The basement is located only under the raised living room, combining it to be lifted out of the ground enough to provide full natural light and ventilation — the same principle used in the new bi-level type of construction.

The entry foyer is roomy enough to prevent congestion, has more than adequate coat closet space, and is perfectly placed so that you can go to any room in the house without having to pass through another.

Equally efficient is the rear entry, a well designed "decontamination chamber," as architect Paul calls it, which also serves the garage entry.

The lavatory (as well as the laundry) is located in this area so it is convenient not only to the kitchen and family room but also to the outdoor play area and garage workbench.

The kitchen likewise is a model of well ordered design. It has one full wall, away from the work area, for an informal dining arrangement.

GOOD LIGHT
Two pairs of easy-to-open sliding windows are over the double-bowl sink to provide natural light and good backyard supervision. Counter space is abundant; there are plenty of cabinets; and note the pantry.

Shell Home Use Popular in Suburbs

A relatively new American phenomenon — the shell home — is making its appearance in growing numbers in the suburban areas of many cities.

According to James E. Tobin, manager of sales promotion for a brass company, the popularity of shell homes is on the increase both for year-round and vacation housing.

"Although most homeowners prefer to buy a home complete," Tobin says, "growing shell home sales indicate that there are a sufficient number who prefer to supervise the finishing themselves."

Basically, Tobin explains, a shell home manufacturer makes available all exterior parts of the house ready for assembly on the buyer's land.

Cost of the shell (which includes framing lumber, joists, rafters, flooring, sheathing, roof shingles, windows, doors, etc.) will range from $2,000 to $7,000, depending on size. The price will be higher if the manufacturer does the assembly as well.

OTHER ITEMS

Not usually included in the initial cost are heating, plumbing, wiring and interior finishing materials.

There is a considerable difference, Tobin adds, between the shell homes available today and those of the past.

Today's shell homes are offered in a wide variety of styles ranging from a simple vacation cottage to elaborate four bedroom ranches.

Financing, formerly difficult to obtain, is now usually available through the manufacturer.

In addition to possible lower costs, one big advantage of building the shell way, according to Tobin, is the many custom options afforded.

The quality-conscious buyer can specify such features as vinyl floor covering; all-copper plumbing, including water and drainage lines; ceramic tile baths; radiant panel heating; and other features that might not be available in some development homes.

Methods of finishing a shell home vary, Tobin says. Usually, local contractors are called in to do the bulk of the work. Some finishing jobs, such as applying resilient floor tile, plastic wall tile, ceiling tile and wood paneling can be done by the do-it-yourselfer.

However, operations such as excavating the site, pouring foundation walls, or installing plumbing, heating and wiring demand professional skill and conformity with building regulations. For such jobs, licensed contractors should be called in.

How to Clean Stains on Floors

Most Marks Caused by Accident Not Fatal

If you're familiar with recommended first-aid treatment for your fine oak floors, there's no need to cry over spilled milk — or spilled grease or ink or even cigarette burns, for that matter.

Such is the advice of floor maintenance experts, who point out that most stains and other marks caused by household accidents can be removed so that the natural beauty of the wood remains unmarred.

Here are remedies for a few of the more common floor "injuries." The treatments are recommended in a new booklet, "How to Keep Oak Floors Beautiful," published by the National Oak Flooring Manufacturers' Association.

Milk or food stains — Rub the spot with a damp cloth. Rub dry and re wax.

Grease or oil stains — Saturate cotton with hydrogen peroxide and place it on the stain. Then saturate a second layer of cotton with ammonia and place it over the first. Repeat until the stain disappears.

INK SPOTS
Clean the spot and surrounding area with No. 1 steel wool dampened with a good floor cleaner or mineral spirits. If the spot remains, rub with fine sandpaper, feathering out three to four inches into the surrounding area. Rewax and polish.

Should this be ineffective, apply a solution of one ounce of oxalic acid to one quart of water. The solution is poisonous, so wear rubber gloves. Let it stand one hour, then rinse with clear water. Repeat if the spot remains.

Should the second application fail, sand the area with No. 00 sandpaper and apply a matching finish, feathering out into the surrounding area. Buff lightly with No. 00 steel wool after finish is dry. Then apply a second coat of finish, let dry and re wax.

If the spot resists this treatment, replace the affected flooring piece.
Cigarette burns — Unless they are too deep, they often can be removed merely by rubbing them with steel wool. Soap and water on the steel wool make it more effective.

Alcohol spots — Rub with a cloth treated with liquid paste wax, silver polish or boiled linseed oil, or with a cloth dampened slightly with ammonia.

Animal and diaper stains — If not of long standing they often can be removed by the same treatment used for ink stains. Should they resist cleaning, replace the affected flooring pieces.

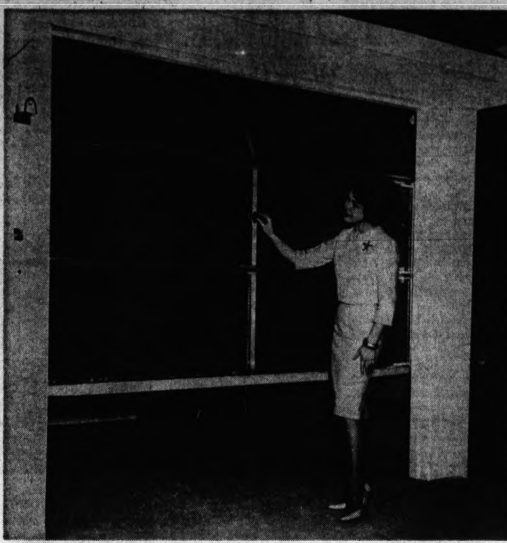

HEEL AND CASTER MARKS
Rub vigorously with fine steel wool dipped in floor cleaner. Wipe dry and polish.

Stains caused by standing water — Rub the spot with No. 00 steel wool, then re wax. If this fails, sand lightly with fine sandpaper, then clean the spot and surrounding area with No. 1 steel wool dipped in mineral spirits or floor cleaner.

When the flooring has dried apply matching finish, feathering out into the surrounding area. Rewax after the finish has dried thoroughly.

Most stains can be prevented or minimized, the booklet points out, by keeping your oak floors well waxed and by wiping up spilled liquids immediately. Wax prevents stain-causing agents from seeping into the wood and penetrating the fibers.

For a free copy of the booklet write the National Oak Flooring Manufacturers' Association, Dept. CN, 814 Sterick Bldg., Memphis 3, Tenn.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

JACOBY

1. The first part of the document is a letter from the author to the editor, dated 10/10/1910. It discusses the author's recent visit to the United States and his observations on the state of the country.

AFL-CIO Feud Just Frustration

WASHINGTON 493 — George, to the other. Meany shifted his cigar stub from one side of his pugacious face to the other. "We meet next on the front line of Miami Beach Feb. 17," he cracked. "Bring your own barber wire."

The durable old leader of the AFL-CIO, his baby-blue eyes peering through black horn rims, had just finished telling how he and his long-time enemy, Walter P. Reuther, had patched up their differences — at least temporarily — to avoid what could be a fatal split in organized labor.

PROSPEROUS MOVEMENT

His remark about the next meeting of the AFL-CIO's governing body was apropos of the state of the American labor movement today. It is prosperous and secure enough to meet in luxury, but it still faces a fight both within and without.

The Reuther-Meany feud now seems more symptomatic of frustration within the federation than of a deep cleavage within the ranks.

Their present argument is over who to put in a vacancy which has been created on the 28-member AFL-CIO Executive Council. But this issue was not in itself cause for the row that erupted in the last several weeks and which now has been temporarily smoothed over.

The problem goes deeper. Meany, 68, the former New York plumber who headed the AFL before the merger in 1955, is conservative and holds like a bulldog to what he believes.

Reuther, 55, President of the United Automobile Workers and leader of the old CIO group, is bristling with ideas for moving labor forward. He also is said to have aspirations for Meany's job.

As a result, there has been a constant conflict between Meany and Reuther ever since the merger of the AFL and CIO in 1955. But it was these two men who so painfully hammered the federation together and they are not expected to let it fall apart at a time when division could be so costly.

LOSS OF MEMBERSHIP

The AFL-CIO's problems are three-fold. First, it is faced with a loss of membership. In 1957 membership reached a high mark of 14.7 million.

Subsequently, the federation expelled James R. Hoffa's Teamsters and other unions on charges of corruption or subversion for a loss of 1.5 million. Today its roll of dues-paying members stands at 12.5 million.

Meany says the federation is about holding its own now, but as fast as it can organize new members it loses old ones to automation. Faced with this situation, neither Meany nor Reuther wants to return to the old days when AFL and CIO unions expended time and resources raiding each other with no net gain for either.

Second, Hoffa's Teamsters are still a threat. The nation's largest union, entrenched in an industry (trucking) that is continuing to grow, the Teamsters are trying to branch out in all directions and become a rival organization to the AFL-CIO.

When the AFL and CIO joined, they stopped raiding each other. As a result, when a dissident group grew up in the Communications Workers of America (CWA) it had no other AFL-CIO union to turn to.

So it called on the Teamsters, who were more than glad to move in. As a result an election is expected soon to determine whether the CWA or the Teamsters represent 17,200 equipment installers for the Western Electric Co.

The third problem is a new drive being carried out by managerial groups who think organized labor has gone far enough. An example of this is the Right to Work Committee, which is trying to eliminate the union shop. No new "right to work" state law has been enacted since 1959 but organized labor recently suffered a setback in three aerospace plants.

After labor leaders worked hard for a union shop provision in the aerospace industry and won the approval of a presidential fact-finding board, employees in three California missile companies rejected the proposal, which required a two-thirds vote to go into the union.

Under a union shop workers must join the union after a specified length of time. On the other side of the ledger, several factors are working in the AFL-CIO favor. Perhaps the chief of these is political. Union leaders have established a rapport with the White House reminiscent of New Deal days. Labor leaders also were encouraged by the outcome of the recent congressional elections. Meany said the AFL-CIO gained four friends in the Senate and five in the House in an election that historically should have gone the other way.

SPACE CHAT — Astronauts Alan B. Shepard Jr. (left), a commander in the U.S. Navy, and Air Force Maj. L. Gordon Cooper Jr. look at a model of a Mercury space craft in Houston, Tex., yesterday at an interview for newsmen. Cooper is scheduled to orbit the earth 18 time in April. Shepard is his backup pilot.

All U.S. Systems Nearly 'Go' for Mercury's Longest Orbit

HOUSTON (R) — Astronauts Le-rooy Gordon Cooper Jr. and Alan B. Shepard Jr. said yesterday practically all Project Mercury's problems have been overcome. Cooper is on schedule to make the nation's longest space trip — 18 orbits of the earth in 24 hours — in February or March.

"We have pretty well rattled all of the skeletons out of the closet," said Shepard as the two were interviewed at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's manned space-craft center here.

"There are problems, of course, but all of the major ones have pretty well been solved," Cooper said.

Shepard, the first American spaceman, is the backup pilot for Cooper's flight.

Cooper said he is delighted with his selection and said he was not discouraged by his lengthy wait in drawing the assignment.

"I am very happy over the mission," Cooper said.

"Each astronaut has always been eager to make each flight, but it is primarily a realistic team effort. Each astronaut has contributed to each succeeding flight," he added.

Cooper is the sixth of the original group of seven astronauts to be selected for a space flight. A heart flutter eliminated Maj. Donald K. Slayton from Project Mercury's flight status.

Cooper and Shepard said they training for the flight at Cape

Canaveral, the latter part of January or in early February.

Cooper said there is no particular phase of the mission that he is looking forward to more than any other.

"The main thing is success in making it into a good orbit," he said.

Both Cooper and Shepard agreed that no radical changes have been made in the Mercury capsule since Shepard made his 15-minute, 302-mile flight over the Atlantic from Cape Canaveral on May 5, 1961.

"There have been many changes in design within the capsule but it boils down to gradual modifications resulting from one flight to the next," Shepard said.

"Most of the changes of a major nature were made between my flight and that of Gus Grissom, including enlarging the picture window."

Astronaut Virgil I. Grissom made a 303-mile downrange flight from Canaveral July 21, 1961.

The Old Testament books of Daniel and Ezra were originally written in Aramaic as was the New Testament gospel of St. Matthew.

800-Plus Expected

More than 800 entries from 24 P.N.H. The Pontiac Swim Club is sponsoring the meet in conjunction with the city Parks and Recreation Department. The meet is expected to be the largest in the state. Pflugerville Bites Dust Finally PFLUGERVILLE, Tex., (AP)—Tiny Pflugerville was shrouded in gloom today. Its football team that set a national scholastic record for consecutive victories has finally bitten the dust.

End of the string that stretched through 55 games came Friday night as Pflugerville bowed to Holland 12-6 in a class B school B-District playoff.

Pflugerville broke the record of Abilene, Tex., which won 49 straight from 1954 to 1957.

A crowd of 7,000 saw Pflugerville, a town of 300 population, fall at last.

Seaholm Easily Tops Groves, 52-33

Birmingham Seaholm parlayed a strong defense with a steady offense last night to pin a 52-33 defeat on intra-city rival Birmingham Groves before an estimated 2,000 noisy fans at the Groves' gymnasium.

Seaholm jumped into an early lead and continually built it as the host team couldn't untrack its offense against the hustling defense of the Maples.

The Maples displayed a balanced offense as three shooters hit double figures and nine of the 10 players used by coach Lou Parry scored. John Slater had 13 for the game high while Mark Fritz had 11 and Chuck Hatten scored 11 for the losers.

Falcons' coach Tom Carson had four of the five starters back from the squad that handed Seaholm a 45-40 beating last year, but the visitors had too much height and defensive strength this time.

The Maples led 13-8 after one quarter, increased their margin to 15 points, 25-13, at halftime and continued to build the score in the final two quarters. The biggest lead came in the final minute of play at 53-31 with reserves playing for both squads.

Groves never led in the contest. The homesters were held to a total of five points in the second quarter and couldn't amass more than nine in any stanza except the final one when they picked up 11.

In a junior varsity contest, Seaholm grabbed a 43-36 victory after leading only 19-16 at halftime. The losers' Dick Balgarnoth led all scorers with 15 points.

The temporary White House said that the President will fly to Hunter Air Force Base outside Savannah, Ga., visit nearby Ft. Stewart, go on to Homestead Air Force Base south of Miami, Fla., and then to military installations around Key West, Fla.

At Homestead, Kennedy will inspect the war room — the command post for the entire Cuban operation.

Kennedy plans to end his week-end on Cape Cod and return to Washington late Sunday.

It seemed appropriate to the day that the man reportedly having the inside track was Francis Keppel, dean of the Harvard Graduate School of Education.

Kennedy is not only a Harvard grad but also one of the university's overseers.

Kennedy's decision to go to the Harvard-Yale game, and to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia next Saturday, was still another indicator of the degree to which the Cuban crisis has waned.

The President did review the Cuban problem with top administration advisers Friday. And it is certain to be a key item of discussion in his next conference with Prime Minister Harold Macmillan of Britain. The temporary White House all but confirmed Friday that another Anglo-American summit session is in the making.

Kennedy has been spending a long holiday weekend at his summer place at Hyannis Port. He plans to lock it up for the winter Sunday night or Monday morning and head back to Washington.

For today, Kennedy was returning old school ties.

The President, a Harvard graduate, class of '40, never made the varsity, but he played freshman football in 1936 and was on the junior varsity in his sophomore year. He did better in another intercollegiate sport at Harvard, sailing, in which he made the team.

Repeat Movie Angers Inmates at San Quentin

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (UPI) — Death row prisoners at San Quentin Prison turned into angry movie critics yesterday.

The 31 prisoners shouted and banged on their cell bars to protest the showing of a movie they had seen before.

They usually see a film every Thursday. Since Thursday was a holiday this week, they were offered a bonus movie yesterday.

But they had seen the picture, a gangster movie called "City of the City," and the prison had no new films to offer.

Associate Warden Louis Nelson and guard Capt. Karl Hocker quelled the disturbance when they arrived with tear gas guns.

Nelson said that ended "a small insurrection that could have blossomed into something big."

Running Over a Deer Easier Than Shooting

GAINESVILLE, Va. (UPI) — Charles King is considering renting his car to deer hunters.

King struck and killed a deer with his car last week on a rural road near here. A week later, his wife ran down another deer on the same road within two miles of the same spot.

Harvard vs. Yale

JFK Goes to Game

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP) — Harvard man John F. Kennedy is easing up today and going back to the campus for the big game.

It's Harvard versus Yale in the Crimson's big stadium beside the Charles River in Cambridge, Mass. President Kennedy will be there for the kickoff at 1:30 p.m.

The President banned all but a minimum of business at his Hyannis Port home on the Cape Cod coast in order to fly to Boston by helicopter, take in the game, and fly back.

One bit of business reportedly on tap was the appointment of a new U.S. commissioner of education, a position that has been vacant since June.

It seemed appropriate to the day that the man reportedly having the inside track was Francis Keppel, dean of the Harvard Graduate School of Education.

Kennedy is not only a Harvard grad but also one of the university's overseers.

Kennedy's decision to go to the Harvard-Yale game, and to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia next Saturday, was still another indicator of the degree to which the Cuban crisis has waned.

For today, Kennedy was returning old school ties.

The President, a Harvard graduate, class of '40, never made the varsity, but he played freshman football in 1936 and was on the junior varsity in his sophomore year. He did better in another intercollegiate sport at Harvard, sailing, in which he made the team.

Repeat Movie Angers Inmates at San Quentin

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (UPI) — Death row prisoners at San Quentin Prison turned into angry movie critics yesterday.

The 31 prisoners shouted and banged on their cell bars to protest the showing of a movie they had seen before.

They usually see a film every Thursday. Since Thursday was a holiday this week, they were offered a bonus movie yesterday.

But they had seen the picture, a gangster movie called "City of the City," and the prison had no new films to offer.

Associate Warden Louis Nelson and guard Capt. Karl Hocker quelled the disturbance when they arrived with tear gas guns.

Nelson said that ended "a small insurrection that could have blossomed into something big."

Pontiac Boy Injured by Rifle

A 16-year-old Pontiac boy suffered an eye injury when his rifle exploded on Beaver Island last night.

Flown to a Traverse City hospital by Coast Guard helicopter was Robert Tricker Jr. of 204 Dick Ave.

A hospital spokesman said extent of his eye injury would not be known for several days until the danger of infection is past.

Tricker was treated at Munson Hospital in Traverse City and released.

Coast Guard authorities, who removed the boy from the island, said Tricker was either loading or unloading his gun when it exploded, lacerating the white of the eye.

Tricker was hunting on the island.

A helicopter from the Coast Guard air station at Traverse City transported Tricker to Munson Hospital.

State Still Grows, Census Bureau Says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Michigan has grown 2.1 per cent since the 1960 census, Census Bureau figures indicated yesterday.

All regions in the country showed population increases. The West had an 8 per cent rise, the South 4 per cent, the North Central States 2.1 per cent and the Northeast 2.2 per cent.

Reflections

It Didn't Cost Anything

That is a fallacious premise of economics: "The beggar who receives your dime paid a fantastic price for it—several more dimes. The thief pays with his freedom, goes to prison to live a lousy term with his twisted J. L. VOORHEES thoughts. We pay for whatever we get.

The position premises, "I'll give you—." He can't give us anything we don't pay for. First, we individually pay for that, and school, federal power—you name it, and put your dollar sign in front of it. A free society pays for everything it wants.

We give our children basic training in citizenship, good manners and inspire them to rise above the lowest rung of the economic ladder; when they spend enough energy they achieve their goal—it was not free. Freedom isn't free; we fought for it. We defend it. Air we breathe isn't free; we pay for food to keep our heart beating to use it.

They'll Be City Reds and Country Reds

MOSCOW (AP) — A drastic shake-up of Soviet party and government organs today divided the Soviet Communist world in two—city Communists and country Communists.

The object: to meet Premier Khrushchev's demands for more goods and more crops.

The Communist party's Central Committee, ending the sweeping measures to Kremlin on Friday, ordered a week-long meeting in the "correct serious shortcomings" in the economy.

A group of rising party leaders, of the generation just after Khrushchev's, emerged from the sessions as the men to make the program work.

The top-to-bottom reshuffling, one of the most thorough in Soviet history, aims also at leveling out differences between city workers and peasants.

Ever since the beginning of the revolution after the old czarist regime, the workers who did most of the fighting have had the best of it.

By last year, the Soviet Union, once well above 80 per cent agricultural, had moved by a fraction of a per cent to the industrial side and had more city workers than farmers.

Under the new program a separate party agricultural organization split will extend from the Kremlin to the farthest outposts.

The aim is to permit those party members primarily concerned with farming to concentrate entirely in that field to get reluctant farmers to work harder and try to match European and American production.

Party members concerned with industry and there are almost entirely in the cities will occupy themselves with industrial and building affairs.

The national economic councils set up by Khrushchev in his 1957 decentralization program will be consolidated into larger units, with tight controls from Moscow.

The state planning committee will be virtually liquidated and its duties transferred to a central organ set up to administer.

Pakistan's Foreign Minister Mohammad Ali refused to comment on the report. But he said he had received and accepted an offer from Premier Chou En-Lai to visit China at an early date.

All made the remark to newsmen in the lobby of Parliament House. There was no comment immediately from any other official source.

Reliable parliamentary informants said, however, that the Chinese offer was not being considered by the government.

BIG PLAY IN PAPER
The Karachi English-language Daily Dawn carried the report prominently. It said a point of the proposed pact was an offer by China to help Pakistan "against aggression from any quarter."

It added that the Chinese had raised no objection to Pakistan remaining a member of the pro-Western CENTO and SEATO alliances if such a pact were signed.

Pakistan has shown increasing irritation over the American and British arms buildup of the Indian army requested by the New Delhi government to fight the Chinese Communist border invasion.

The Pakistanis are worried lest the arms eventually be turned against Pakistan by India in the long-festering Kashmir dispute.

In the eyes of Pakistanis, the India-China undeclared war is a temporary conflict that will soon end.

AIRLINER WRECKAGE — This piece of fuselage from a United Airlines Viscount was one of the largest sections left after the four-engine prop-jet carried 17 persons to death 10 miles west of Baltimore yesterday. The plane was on a trip from Newark to Atlanta, with a stop at Washington.

Seek Cause of 17 Deaths

Teams Probe Air Crash

From Our News Wires
ELLIOTT CITY, Md. — The Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) today formed investigative teams to probe the mysterious death plunge of a United Air Lines Viscount into a wooded area near here, killing all 17 persons aboard.

George Van Epps, veteran CAB crash investigator, met with nine other CAB experts and officials from the FBI's Bureau of Safety, with experts from the pilots' Association, Vickers — the manufacturer of the British-made prop — and Rolls-Royce, maker of the plane's engines.

All aboard perished in the crash and fire yesterday in Flight 297, en route from Newark, N.J., to Atlanta, Ga., via Washington, D.C.

A United spokesman said 13 of the 17 bodies had been identified by 9:30 a.m. EST.

AUTOPSIES STARTED
FBI fingerprint experts were on the scene aiding with the identification process. Autopsies already are under way — a usual procedure in air crashes.

Such post-mortems may determine whether fire was present before the crash, whether there was any crew incapacitation or other factors that may shed light on an accident.

Each of the six investigating teams will be headed by an official of the CAB's Bureau of Safety, with experts from the pilots' Association, Vickers — the manufacturer of the British-made prop — and Rolls-Royce, maker of the plane's engines.

The crash of the four-engine airliner occurred in bright sunshine about 10 miles southwest of Baltimore.

Ed Slattery of the CAB said, "We are concerned because there was no weather connected with the crash."

Another piece in the puzzle was the report from the FAA that the Viscount's veteran pilot, Capt. Milton J. Balog, 39, apparently had no hint of approaching tragedy.

ROUTINE COMMUNICATIONS
The FAA said radio communications with the plane as it prepared to land at Washington shortly after noon yesterday were entirely routine.

The FAA said Balog had acknowledged instructions only three minutes before the Viscount, capable of carrying 41 passengers, disappeared from the radar scope monitoring its approach.

Witnesses said the plane suddenly descended sharply into wooded farmland owned by Clark Gifford in Howard County. The descent of the airplane was so steep that it cut only a small swath through the hardwood forest.

West Agrees U.S.-British Talks Needed

Strategists Uncertain About What's Ahead in Cold War Relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan are expected to meet soon for a wide-ranging review of world affairs in a time of change.

Western strategists still are unsure of what lies beyond what Kennedy has termed a possibly "important turning point" in East-West relations. But they are agreed on the need to have the United States and Great Britain chart their course together.

Britain and the United States are both involved in major unresolved issues on the international scene — the India-China dispute, Berlin, disarmament and the Congo.

Both American and British sources agreed Friday on the likelihood of a Kennedy-Macmillan meeting in the near future, but said an exact time and place has not yet been worked out. London informants said Macmillan expects to cross the Atlantic shortly after Christmas.

At Hyannis Port, Mass., where Kennedy is spending a long Thanksgiving weekend, assistant presidential press secretary Andrew Hatcher would say only that "it is highly probable" that the two leaders will get together "some time soon."

MEET FREQUENTLY
Meetings between the American and British government heads are comparatively frequent. Kennedy and Macmillan have gotten together five times since Kennedy took office last year, the latest occasion being a visit by Macmillan to Washington last April.

The Washington consensus is that the President and the prime minister will be surveying a time of great and unpredictable change in world events.

Assistant Secretary of State Harlan Cleveland, in a speech Friday night at Philadelphia, gave what aides described as a sum-up of U.S. government, thinking on the current situation in the aftermath of the climactic U.S.-Soviet confrontation over Cuba.

In words that tended to sound optimistic on future prospects, Cleveland assessed the international situation this way:

"The Soviet Union has become a major world power but international communism, after having hit a peak in the immediate post-war years, has gone into decline. Externally, the Communist world has been rebuffed by Western firmness. Internally, it is so split that the idea of a solid Communist bloc has become an 'antique Communist dream.'"

SPRUCED UP — The season's spirit was signaled last night with the annual tree lighting at Saginaw Street and Oakland Avenue. The switch was thrown by Mrs. Marcella Williams of 2523 Garland Ave., Sylvan Lake, 1962 Downtown Pontiac Christmas Clerk. Here she's presented with an early Christmas gift by Pontiac Mayor Robert A. Landry.

Christmas Shopping Gets Into High Gear

Christmas shopping began in earnest yesterday with thousands crowding downtown stores and nearby shopping centers.

The traditional day after Thanksgiving buying spree left the impression in many of the stores that if things continue "there won't be any need for last minute shopping."

Traffic throughout the day at all stores was regarded as good.

Youngsters made up a good part of the crowd since they had the day off from school for the Thanksgiving holiday.

Santa was a big attraction at the Pontiac Mall and Tel-Huron Shopping centers. Over 60 youngsters met Santa when he arrived in the area at the Pontiac Municipal Airport and was driven to Tel-Huron.

Howard Nelson, manager of the Sears, Roebuck store in downtown Pontiac, exclaimed that "business was better than last year. In fact, it was a wonderful day."

Montgomery Ward's store at the Pontiac Mall was not open this last year, but business was very favorable compared with other Ward stores in the Detroit area, according to Paul Louchart, operating manager.

A spokesman for the Tel-Huron Shopping Center said that stores were densely crowded all during the daylight hours, but business dropped off slightly in the evening.

Only at the Miracle Mile Shopping Center was shopping off slightly from last year.

Weatherman Says Warmer for Tomorrow
Warmer weather is scheduled for the Pontiac area tomorrow. Sunday's high will range from 44 to 52, with partly cloudy skies predicted.

Fair and cool is tonight's forecast; the predicted low is 24 to 32. Fair and mild is Monday's outlook.

Today's northwesterly to westerly winds at 10 to 15 miles per hour will become southerly at 10 to 15 miles per hour on Sunday. The lowest temperature in downtown Pontiac preceding 8 a.m. was 29. At 1 p.m. the thermometer registered 42.

Protest Firing of Welfare Aide

18 Women Employees Walk Off Jobs

By JIM DYGERT
Some 18 women employees of the Oakland County Social Welfare Department walked off their jobs yesterday afternoon in protest over firing of the department's deputy director, Mrs. Helen E. Clayton.

Mrs. Clayton, 30, deputy director since 1958 who had been with the department for 20 years, was given notice of termination Wednesday by Acting Director George H. Williams.

Williams said Mrs. Clayton was let go because of "insubordination" and "lack of cooperation."

Mrs. Clayton said today she was "amazed" when the women let her yesterday. "I didn't know they felt that strongly," she said.

REQUESTS HEARING
She said she has sent a letter to Social Welfare Board Chairman John A. Macdonald requesting a hearing.

India Asks Clarification

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—Indian diplomat is "obtaining clarification" from Peking.

The Foreign Ministry spokesman declined to say what the points were.

Red China ordered its troops in the disputed border areas to cease fire last Wednesday.

The Chinese charge d'affaires in New Delhi Friday and "put to him several points about China's cease-fire proposal which required clarification." He said the Chinese Chinese proposals are still under consideration, although Prime Minister Nehru has indicated he would not accept the Chinese terms. By acceptance, the Indians would have to give up claim to 12,000 square miles of disputed territory in Ladakh on India's northwestern border with China.

Nehru has indicated he believes the border fighting will erupt again and that he wants Chinese troops off what he considers Indian soil.

The Indians were believed taking advantage of the Chinese ceasefire to bolster their military strength.

U.S. and British military aid missions have continued their appeals of India's long-range military needs.

Nehru again predicted a long struggle with Red China as the Himalayan-fronts remained quiet for the third day under the ceasefire.

In a message addressed to a youth rally Friday, Nehru warned his nation of "a long struggle and a difficult one, and we must not imagine that the struggle will be over soon because of various diplomatic moves."

minister enlarged economic councils.

The reorganization struck some Western observers as a poor second choice forced upon the government and party leaders as an alternative to a much-needed capital investment program that has been made impossible by the demands of space rockets and national defense.

Two economic and production experts, Alexander P. Rudakov and V. I. Polyakov, were made members of the Central Committee and placed in charge of the two new bureaus dealing with industrial and agricultural management.

Rudakov, 52, who heads the Industry Bureau, is a graduate of the Leningrad Mining Institute and worked in the coal and iron fields of the Donetz Basin for several years before starting up the party ladder.

Polyakov, also in his early 50s, will head the agricultural farm magazine and, from his biographical sketch, appears never to have put his hand to a plow.

After graduation from a second-level agricultural institute, he switched to journalism and for a time served as farm editor of Pravda, the Communist Party organ.

He accompanied Khrushchev to the United States in 1959 as one of the correspondents invited to make the tour.

Pakistan feels these arms are a threat to her. Some Pakistanis, in the disillusionment with the Western powers, have been talking of adopting neutralism as a policy.

Red China's unilateral cease fire on the border with India and the offer of a troop pullback has bolstered the Pakistani view that the present Indian-Chinese conflict is only a temporary flareup which merits no Western assistance to India.

West Says E. Germans Giving In

BERLIN (UPI) — Western officials believe a new East German Communist document indicates the Communists may be backing down on their demands that the Allies withdraw their troops from West Berlin.

This cautious belief was based on expert examination of a statement published in the East German press yesterday. Called a program for the "age of socialism," the official statement was drafted at a meeting of the East German party's Central Committee last month.

Officials said the program played down the demand, first advanced in November 1958, that East Germany be given a peace treaty providing for West Berlin's conversion into a "demilitarized free city," which would mean Western garrisons would have to leave.

The peace treaty demand was included in the statement, but it was not stressed as an immediate objective. It appeared instead to be a long-range goal.

The statement did include a demand for "eradication of the occupation regime" in West Berlin and establishment of the "free city."

U.S. Expected to Reject Parts of Red Cuba Plan now is to seek "some live-and-let-live formula."

"If Soviet leaders are prepared to finish the job of liquidating the Cuban crisis," he said, "we may find ourselves at an important turning point in history—at a watershed of the cold war as we have known it."

"For the Soviet leaders hold in their hands one of the world's most powerful weapons—the simple decision to live at peace with their neighbors..."

U.S. and Russian negotiators are currently meeting in New York on carrying out remaining terms of the proposed Cuban settlement.

No new Western initiative for a Berlin settlement is in the offing, although U.S. officials said a wider range of negotiations with the Soviets on cold war issues is now possible. During the issue of the Cuban crisis, Washington concentrated its dealings with Moscow on just that issue.

18 Walk Off Jobs in Protest of Firing

Slayton was a "nice worker," said last night she was entitled to a hearing by the three-man board but he had not yet received her request.

Williams asked Mrs. Slayton to resign, both of them said, but Mrs. Slayton refused.

Mrs. Slayton charged Williams with being "unreasonable," and having told her he "would lie" in order to get rid of her.

She said she demanded and received a written notice of termination, in which Williams referred to her "attitude and resentment" and said she went over his head and talked to one of the board members.

She said the notice accused her of being unable or unwilling to respect Williams' position as director.

TOOK POST IN '61

Williams has been acting director since July 1961, and worked parttime as assistant to director George H. Hurt for two months prior to that. He was formerly business manager of the TB Sanatorium.

Burt has been ill and is expected to retire soon. Williams will become director when Burt retires, Macdonald said.

Mrs. Slayton denied the insubordination charge. She said she never indicated she wouldn't follow a directive from Williams.

She said she always was informed she could talk to a board member at any time, but she never complained about Williams to any of them.

The employees who acted in protest represented about half of the staff at the Pontiac office, which employs about 60, according to Williams. Another 23 are headquartered in Royal Oak.

Williams said he wasn't sure of the exact number that walked out, because some of the women may have been out on field work. Most of them were welfare case investigators.

WON'T HAMPER OPERATION

Williams said the incident would not hamper the department's operation. "No welfare people will be deprived of any services," he said.

He said Mrs. Slayton showed resistance to changes he was making in the department. He was looking into the department's $75,000-a-year emergency salary budget, he said.

The $75,000 was first appropriated in 1958 by the County Board of Supervisors to hire temporary employees to handle a heavy case load brought on by the economic recession that year, Williams said.

The department staff has been used for temporary employees and the $75,000 a year allowance for case load has dropped from 4,500 to 1,700, he said.

Mrs. Slayton began her years of service with the welfare department with the old Emergency Relief Administration.

"I had my heart and soul in the agency," she said.

Death on the nation's highways continued to mount today as the 102-hour Thanksgiving holiday entered its third day.

Traffic accidents involving more than one fatality increased the death toll.

There were no National Safety Council predictions for the holiday, which ends at midnight Sunday.

A council spokesman said traffic is not as heavy on Thanksgiving as other holiday periods, although he said 400 persons would normally die in traffic accidents during a Thursday to Sunday span.

An Associated Press survey of accidental deaths for the 102-hour period from 6 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 7, to midnight Sunday, Nov. 11, showed 458 highway fatalities. The survey also showed 30 killed in fires and 113 deaths in miscellaneous deaths, an overall total of 602.

Brother-in-Law Crash Fatality

Doctor Fails in Rescue Try

Desperate rescue attempts by a badly injured West Bloomfield doctor failed to save his dying brother-in-law after a plane crash southwest of Alpena yesterday.

However, quick thinking by 35-year-old Dr. George W. Kantzler, medical director of Palmer Osteopathic Hospital in Detroit, is believed responsible for preventing the crash from being more tragic.

Seeing he was about to crash, Dr. Kantzler, an Air Force pilot during World War II, shut off all the controls on the plane.

State police told the doctor's wife today that the plane may have exploded if the switches hadn't been turned off. Live wires easily could have ignited the plane's flammable high octane fuel, they said.

Although suffering several injuries, the doctor remained at the scene to direct rescue operations after the accident.

INSTRUCTED RESCUERS

Dr. Kantzler, walking with one ankle fractured and the other sprained, instructed rescuers on how to remove his brother-in-law from the wreckage.

The doctor's efforts later proved to be in vain.

His brother-in-law, Willis E. Rothgeb, 65, of Detroit, died in the ambulance on the long ride to the hospital.

The crash occurred on a small landing field about 40 miles southwest of Alpena.

State police told Mrs. Kantzler yesterday that the plane was caught by a sudden gust of wind. It flipped over on one wing and crashed into the trees.

Dr. Kantzler's 9-year-old son, Mark, the only uninjured passenger, went for help. His other son, Paul, 10, and Rothgeb's son, Dean, 10, were treated and released at Alpena General Hospital.

When the doctor was hospitalized

ized later, it was discovered he suffered a broken nose, a broken spinal vertebrae, broken kneecap and facial lacerations in addition to his injured ankles.

The Kantzlers, who live at 5786 Bloomfield Glens Road, have taken several trips together in their six-passenger plane.

Mrs. Kantzler remained home yesterday with their other child, 3-month-old Kris.

"It must have been a freak accident because George is an excellent pilot," she said. "I've flown with him when he's landed in a jungle in Mexico."

Mrs. Kantzler said her husband, his brother-in-law and the boys had planned to go hunting near Paradise Ranch in Alpena County where the plane crashed, but Biggest changes in the Nov. 6 election vote totals as a result of official figures completed by the Oakland County Board of Canvassers occurred in the 3rd District state legislative contest.

Incumbent Republican Henry M. Hogan Jr. increased his total by 4,511, giving him an official count of 39,711 in his victory over Democratic challenger John F. Foley.

Foley gained 2,700 votes, but still trailed Hogan by almost three to one. His official total was 14,855.

Minor changes were made in the vote totals of most races in which county residents voted.

None of the changes had any bearing on the outcome in contests for county offices, state legislative posts or congressional seats.

As previously reported, Clarence Reid, Republican candidate for lieutenant governor who has said he may seek a recount in his loss to incumbent T. John Lesinski, picked up 119 votes in Oakland County while Lesinski's total remained the same.

Reid received 146,393 votes in the county to Lesinski's 104,104.
