Turkish Attack Sends Scare Through Island

10 Dead in Air Raid;
May Have Resulted
From Orders Mix-Up

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP)—Turkey and the Greek Cypriot government agreed to a U.N. Security Council call for a cease-fire on this embattled island today.

A brief Turkish attack on a northwest village before Turkey's announcement sent a new scare through Cyprus.

Greece said it hoped the strafing attack on a square in Polis was due to a mix-up in Turkish military orders.

Turkey said it will comply with the Security Council cease-fire resolution provided Greek Cypriots halt their fighting, withdraw from three Turkish Cypriot villages and pull back to positions they held before last Wednesday.

Government spokesmen said Turkish Air Force jets would continue to fly reconnaissance missions over Cyprus.

The Greek Cypriot government said it had ordered a cease-fire unilaterally as of Saturday. It made no mention of fighting that erupted yesterday around the Turkish village of Kokkina or around Nicosia last night.

"In a statement today Archbishop Makarios, Cyprus president, said the government of the Cyprus republic will fully respect a Security Council resolution on the cease-fire in Cyprus," government spokesman said.

NO FIGHTING
There were no reports of ground fighting between Greek and Turkish Cypriots in the tense northwest coastal strip between Polis and Xeros.

The Soviet Union assailed the series of Turkish attacks and warned Turkey that it is risking war.

The attack on Polis was the fourth consecutive day of Turkish air activity over Cyprus.

A government source in Nicosia said 10 persons were wounded in the Polis attack. Makarios messaged U.N. Secretary-General U Thant saying his government was "deeply grateful" for efforts to end the fighting on the island.

Then referring to the U.N. cease-fire resolution, Makarios said:

"For your information, your excellency, we have unilaterally ordered a cease-fire Saturday, Aug. 8."

Head Toward Red North

U.S. Fighters in Viet Air Alerts

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — U.S. jet fighters equipped with air-to-air missiles have been heading toward the Communist north the past few days to meet the threat of approaching Red Chinese MIG planes, U.S. military sources say.

Though no clashes have taken place, the opposing flights were reported close enough to make positive radar identification, the sources added.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman here denied Monday night that the planes had scrambled to meet hostile aircraft but had gone only to check unidentified radar blips.

SAIGON, capital of South Viet Nam, held an air raid alert yesterday, its first since World War II when U.S. planes bombed the Japanese-occupied city.

Communist propaganda organs renewed charges against the United States for its reprisal action against North Viet Nam last week. And North Viet Nam indicated it was rejecting a U.N. Security Council invitation to take part in a debate on the crisis.

Informants said the Chinese MIGs, flying from Hainan Island across the Gulf of Tonkin, halted short of the heavily-rimmed frontier and U.S. naval forces in the Gulf of Tonkin.

Ex-President Hoover Marks 90th Birthday

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Herbert Hoover, marking his 90th birthday today, says "Freedom of choice" is what made America great.

"Freedom is the open window through which pours the sunlight of the human spirit and human dignity," he said.

"With the preservation of these moral and spiritual qualities and with God's grace will come further greatness for our country."

Rewards Doubled in Boating Death

Rewards for the arrest and conviction of the parties involved in the hit and run boating death of Alan L. Akery doubled today with the announcement of offers from two private citizens.

Added to the $1,300 already put up were rewards of $1,000 from Detroit attorney Irwin I. Cohn, 3235 Interlaken, West Bloomfield Township, and $300 from Sylvan Lake builder Samuel G. Warwick, 2650 Island Court.

On Saturday, The Pontiac Press offered a $1,000 reward for the arrest and conviction "of any or all of the guilty parties."

Earlier, the Marina News, a weekly newspaper for boating enthusiasts offered a $300 reward for information leading to the conviction of persons involved in the "hit-run boat killing."

Akery, 20, of 2184 Park Circle, Keego Harbor, was killed by an inboard motorboat while swimming in a marked-off area at Dodge State Park on Cass Lake last Monday night.

Over the weekend, Sheriff Frank Irons placed additional men at the lake on the theory that if the craft is still on the lake, an attempt might be made to remove it without being seen among the hundreds of boats.

Many boats hitting the description of the hit and run craft have been checked by the sheriff's office, state and local police, but all have been cleared, Irons said.

He said no new information has been received that looks encouraging.

"We are still reviewing tips and each one is being investigated as we get it," said Irons. From a companion of the victim and several other witnesses at the scene, police gained information that the hit and run craft had a mahogany veneer and was equipped with a spotlight. There may have been four young men in the craft.

Akery's companion, Sheila Brennan, 17, of 125 Chevron, Bloomfield Township, has stated that the spotlight was shining directly on her and Akery just before the boat hit him.

She said Akery pushed her under the water just before the craft passed over them. She was not injured. The boat was speeding away when she surfaced and Akery had disappeared from sight. His body was recovered at 11:20 p.m., about two hours after the incident.

Steelworkers Set Meeting on Proposal

A crippling strike called one week ago by reinforced steel construction workers could be ended at a union contract ratification meeting tonight.

Proposals made by contractor groups will be put before the 500-member Reinforced Steel Local 426 of Detroit, an affiliate of the Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers.

Their walkout has tied up numerous heavy construction projects throughout Southeast Michigan, including completion of Pontiac's Clinton River drain enclosure.

Finishing two small stretches of the drain will clear the way for paving West Wide Track and unjamming the city's redevelopment program.

One union source said ratification appeared likely since contractors are past the midpoint of the building season and facing pressure brought by clients. The local's previous contract expired May 1 but membership continued working under a 90-day extension.

REP. BENNETT

Republican Dies at 60 of Cancer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. John Bennett, dean of Michigan's congressmen, died yesterday of cancer at his home in nearby Chevy Chase, Md.

The 60-year-old Ontonagon Republican had been a member of Congress for 20 years and was ranking GOP member of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

Just last week, he said he might withdraw from the Sept. 1 primary race against Rep. Victor Knox because of failing health.

Bennett had been seriously ill for about two months.

Cancer was first detected a month ago.

BLADDER CONDITION
Bennett recently underwent surgery for a bladder condition at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.

In addition to being the dean of Michigan's congressmen, Bennett had several other distinctions.

He prided himself on representing what he described as "the smallest in population but most important district" in the country.

Bennett was a winning Republican vote-getter in the western Upper Peninsula, regarded as a normally Democratic area.

ONE DEFEAT
Only once was he defeated by a Democrat in 11 bids for Congress.

That was in 1944 when Frank E. Hook, his perennial rival, regained the seat which Bennett took from him two years earlier.

Rain, Temperature Both to Drop Down

Showers will drop in on the area occasionally this week, says the weatherman, accompanied with below-average temperatures.

It'll be mostly cloudy and somewhat warmer tonight, the low 57 to 63.

Tomorrow will also be mostly cloudy with scattered thunder showers and little temperature change, the high in the low 80s. Fifty-four was the lowest mercury reading this morning. The temperature rose to 75 by 2 p.m.

Turkey Informs NATO of Air Unit Withdrawals

PARIS (AP)—Turkey has informed the North Atlantic Treaty Organization she is withdrawing some of her air force from the alliance "for use in her national interest," Supreme Allied Headquarters for Europe announced today.

The announcement was made amid reports of new Turkish aerial attacks on Cyprus.

The announcement said: "The military command of normal military channels of the Turkish intention to employ certain of her air defense units in her national interest on a temporary basis."

The military command in turn is notifying the NATO secretary general. Such action is permissible and provided for under the NATO treaty.

The announcement went into no further detail, nor would spokesmen elaborate on it. The air defense units were obviously among those committed to NATO's eastern flank defense.

The announcement came as — top political body of the 15-summed into special session to study the Cyprus crisis.

The meeting will be the council's third in six days on the Cyprus problem.

PROMOTE CIRCUIT JUDGE CARROLL COURT OF APPEALS

On Cyprus, SE Asia

LBJ and Aides Confer

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson conferred with his top advisers today on the Cyprus crisis. He was described as "encouraged" by the cease-fire agreed to at the request of the United Nations Security Council. "The President received reports on the situation in Southeast Asia and Cyprus," Press Secretary George E. Reedy told newsmen after Johnson met for about 45 minutes with Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and other advisers.

"The President was encouraged by the acceptance, by all parties, of the cease-fire, following the U.N. Security Council meeting," Reedy said. The President also scheduled a ceremony for later in the day to sign the resolution adopted at his request by the House and Senate which gives him full backing in steps he may take to resist Communist aggression in Southeast Asia.

Press Secretary George E. Reedy told newsmen that Johnson, who returned last night from a two-day trip to his Texas ranch, spent this morning "going over various reports on the world situation."

Reedy said Johnson called the (1:30 p.m. EST) meeting with Rusk, McNamara "and other senior advisers" to discuss Southeast Asia, Cyprus and "other matters affecting the world situation."

Reedy said he did not know whether Johnson had received replies to the strong personal appeals he sent yesterday to Greek, Turkish and Cypriot leaders for an end to fighting which could lead to mass bloodshed on Cyprus.

SPEAKS TO AIDES

State Department officials said Johnson was in telephone consultation with his diplomatic aides early today on the Cyprus problem.

Johnson also scheduled a luncheon meeting today with a group of business leaders—one of a series of such sessions he has had with delegations from various walks of life to discuss pending national issues.

From his ranch near Johnson

City, Tex., yesterday, the President held a series of emergency telephone talks with Rusk, Undersecretary of State George W. Ball and Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara.

He also called Canadian Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson to discuss the dangerous developments involving Cyprus.

Foes Okay Cease-Fire for Cyprus

EYE WITNESS

Alex Efty, an Associated Press correspondent at the scene, said the American-built F4s jets appeared while the townspeople were sipping coffee in the main square, most of them talking about the crisis. He said the villagers ducked for cover before the jets made two runs, firing into the square.

A U.S. Air Force C130 cargo plane evaded 35 American dependents and members of U.S. Embassy staff to Beirut from Nicosia.

Among them were Ambassador Taylor Belcher's wife and two teen-age sons.

A spokesman said the State Department ordered the evacuation.

SKELETON STAFF

The embassy has been operated by a skeleton staff since last February, when many Americans were flown out after a bombing of the building.

In Athens, Greek Foreign Minister Stavros Costopoulos called in the Turkish ambassador and said Greece could not restrain the Cyprus government from "necessary defensive measures" if Turkey repeated its warlike activities.

Costopoulos said he told the Turkish envoy that Greece hoped the attack on Polis was "due to the fact that not all Turkish forces have received orders of a cease-fire." Earlier, the Greek Cypriots charged that Turkish troops slipped ashore before dawn to aid the beleaguered Turkish Cypriot fishing village of Kokina, 30 miles west of Polis.

DENY LANDING

Turkey and the U.N. command in Cyprus denied there had been any landing.

But the Cyprus government demanded another urgent meeting of the Security Council to consider what it called "perhaps a limited invasion."

Costopoulos said the Turkish garrison at Kokina, the last Turkish Cypriot coastal stronghold, opened mortar fire on Greek Cypriot positions during the morning. But other sources said the situation there was quiet.

Turkey began the attacks last Friday to halt the Greek Cypriot advance on Kokina.

POUND POSITION

Sixty-four Turkish jets pounded Greek Cypriot positions with bombs, rockets and machine gun fire, as heavy fighting flared on the ground around the village of Kokina, stronghold on the Cyprus coast.

The Greek Cypriots claimed they suffered about 30 casualties, including more than 25 dead, in the Turkish raids. Turkey said its planes fired only on military targets.

Thousands Pay Tribute to Slain Rights Workers

NEW YORK (AP)—Joined hand to hand and chanting "We shall overcome," thousands of white and Negro mourners paid tribute Sunday night to two white civil rights workers slain in Mississippi.

In separate services and at an outdoor rally, the young men were eulogized as "martyrs" compassionate and totally committed to nonviolence.

The FBI discovered the bodies of the New Yorkers — Andrew Goodman, 20, and Michael Schwerner, 24, — and James Chaney, 21, a Negro from Meridian, Miss., last Tuesday in a grave near Philadelphia, Miss.

The trio vanished near Philadelphia June 21 at the beginning of a summer drive to register Negroes to vote.

SOCIAL EVIL

At the memorial service for Schwerner at the Community Church in Manhattan, James Farmer, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, said that "One of the tragedies of our world is that evil societies kill their conscience and gentleness."

Earlier, Farmer had announced the appointment of Rita Schwerner, Michael's widow, as a field secretary for CORE. She will help establish a memorial community center in Meridian, Miss., Farmer said.

Another speaker, John Lewis, chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, said the "question is not who killed Mickey, James and Andy, but what killed them."

"Apathy," he said.

At the end of the memorial service, thousands inside and outside the hall joined hands and softly sang the civil rights theme: "We shall overcome, someday."

None is FREE

Earlier at the funeral for Goodman at the Ethical Culture Society, Ralph Engelmann, Goodman's college mate from Queens, said: "Andy taught us an old truth: None is free until all are free."

Another eulogist, Rabbi Arthur Lelyveld of Cleveland, Ohio, who was beaten on a civil rights mission in Hattiesburg, Miss., July 10, said, "We are not afraid, we are not alone, we shall overcome."

Leaving the service with Goodman's body in an oak casket, Mrs. Robert Goodman, his mother, clasped the hand of Chaney's mother, Fannie, who attended both services.

Chaney was buried Friday in Meridian.

Schwerner's body was taken to a Brooklyn funeral home to undergo an autopsy today.

The freighter Bifrost sighted the capsized boat and radioed the Coast Guard.

Three Armed Men Rob City Market

Three armed men robbed Hodge's Market, 1244 Mount Clemens, Saturday night, and escaped with $220, according to Pontiac police.

The men entered the store at about 10 p.m. on the pretense of buying some groceries. Drawing guns, they forced three employees to lie on the floor with their heads down, police said. The men then helped themselves to approximately $175 in the cash register and a purse containing $45.

Police Arrest Teen Burglars

Three juveniles, who police say were supposed to be in Sunday School, were arrested yesterday for burglarizing a Pontiac home.

Under questioning by Pontiac police, two of the Waterford Township teen-agers admitted to breaking-and-entering in the area recently.

Police said the two juveniles, 16 and 14 years old, were responsible for at least eight burglaries in the city, while the 14-year-old admitted to breaking and entering a Waterford Township home and Pierce School.

Another 14-year-old boy was only involved in yesterday's break-in at 66 Chipewa, the home of Frank Miller, according to police. The home was ransacked.

Sgt. John DePaue said the boys committed the break-in after slipping away from a Sunday school meeting.

The youths were arrested at Navajo near Voorhes at 11 a.m. after police received anonymous telephone calls that three boys were trying to open doors of homes on Chipewa.

A 38-caliber pistol that was taken from Miller's home was found on the 16-year-old, police said.

The boys were turned over to juvenile authorities after they were questioned.

BIRMINGHAM — The municipal court of Birmingham has granted condemnation from the American Bar Association (ABA).

At the 87th annual meeting of the group, which opened today in New York, the ABA Standing Committee on Traffic Court Programs cited 25 cities in nine jurisdictions for outstanding accomplishments in traffic court procedures and administration.

Birmingham was among those which received special commendation for the continuance of efforts to maintain better practices and procedures in traffic courts.

They are seeking court determination of who owns the 20-foot wide roadway and who should be responsible for traffic problems. Until then, they ask an order restraining the construction of the school. A show cause hearing will be held Aug. 31 before Judge Frederick C. Ziem.

The group claims the narrow road will be assaulted first by heavy construction machinery as work on the 1,200-student school begins, and later by up to 400 autos going to and from the building daily.

Don't Run to Beat the Band

Bovines Not Cow-Ardly, Say Scientists

LONDON (U)—Two American rocket scientists today cleared a British drum and bugle corps of killing cows with their martial music.

"The deaths of the cows must have some other explanation," said one of the scientists, Dr. Robert Brownlee, "because we certainly don't think they could have been caused by the band's music."

With Dr. Paul Mutschler, Dr. Brownlee made a special trip from London to suburban Horsham to listen to the Hornchurch drum and trumpet corps. After listening, the scientists gave this verdict: The band is innocent.

The background was this: In May last year the 35 youthful members of the drum and bugle corps were practicing near an open field. In the field were a number of cows, some in calf.

MISSILE INCIDENT

Around the same time, at the Los Alamos firing range in New Mexico, an American missile exploded. A section of the missile, said to be as large as a truck, crashed with a big bang amid a herd of cows.

According to the scientists, there was little effect on the American cows. They said the cows lifted their heads and slowly walked away. There was no stampede.

So, the American scientists wondered if British cows had more acute hearing. While visiting this country, Dr. Brownlee and Mutschler remembered the Hornchurch incident and showed interest in hearing the drum and bugle corps. The Hornchurch youths were delighted to play hosts.

"We found the corps very entertaining," said Dr. Brownlee, "and were pleased to reassure the boys that their music didn't seem likely to have harmful effects on animals, human or otherwise."

Suit Filed Against Village

Romeo Zoning Rift Reopens

ROMEO—Fire has been rekindled under an old hassle with the filing of a Circuit Court suit against the village.

Romeo is charged with—among other things—"unreasonable, capricious, arrogant and capricious" action.

Plaintiffs are Harold Fritz, local builder, and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence E. Howard, owner of the property at 377 N. Main.

The trio charges the village with denying Fritz's rezoning request for invalid reasons.

After two hearings, the council denied Fritz's request. In addition to the charges of "abuse of discretion," Fritz goes on to say that the Village Council acted in favor of owners of other property and acted to avoid losing votes in the election.

Fritz and the property owners are seeking a writ of mandamus ordering the village to approve the rezoning request.

North Main is presently zoned for single and two-family dwellings.

Village Clerk Norman Engel said today the municipality has not been served any papers regarding the suit, and he was not aware that a show-case hearing date had been set in Macomb County Circuit Court.

In a second suit which a group of Romeo residents has filed, seeking to restrain the village from paying more than $15 per meeting to the clerk, show-case hearing was set for today.

Plaintiffs base their case on the fact that the Village Council reduced clerk's salary to $15 per week prior to election of a new clerk and council.

The new council, in its first official action, hiked the salary back to its original figure, $4,525 annually.

ALL WET — A splashing good time was had by both teams in the water battle during Union Lake's Paul Bunyan celebration yesterday. Union Lake firemen (left) overpowered their White Lake Township counterparts, drove the barrel down the wire for two goals and won the event. But not before they and the more curious of the spectators had been thoroughly doused. The contest was one of several activities which kicked off the three-day celebration in Union Lake.

Fun Is Not Watered Down at Union Lake Celebration

UNION LAKE — The first day of the Paul Bunyan celebration here was noisy, colorful, fun and wet.

It served to kick off appropriately the event which was to continue for two more jam-packed days.

Yesterday's parade which officially started the celebration began at 1:30 p.m., marching up Union Lake Road from Clifford H. Smart Junior High School.

Union Lake firemen scuttled their White Lake Township counterparts in an afternoon water battle across from the public fishing site on Union Lake. They also were victorious in a softball game with local businessmen last night.

Throughout the 3-day event an art show is being held at 1515 Union Lake. The new activity attracted about 100 entries and produced 17 winners.

OIL CATEGORY
Jeff Carr of 7129 Glenburnie, Clarkson, won in the oil category with "Potter's Bench."

Watercolors, pastels and drawings were grouped together with Mike Muth, 251 Rustic, getting the top award for the untitled caskin drawing.

A wire sculpture entitled "Metamorphosis" won a first place for Mrs. Roger Knight of 360 Farnsworth, White Lake Township.

Cathy Hetherington of 7733 Locklin, West Bloomfield Township, won first place in the crafts division for her pottery teapot.

JUNIOR DIVISION

Judges for the show were Mrs. S. A. Ford, A. McClean, Clarkson art teacher; Mrs. Russell P. Foulkes, former color and design teacher; and Mrs. James Lobdell, interior decorator.

Persons attending the exhibit also voted for their favorites. Winners in the popular judging were Marva Simpson, 1401 S. Williams Lake, an oil painting entitled "Cat," Mike Muth in the mixed media for an untitled crayon pastel; and Ruth Cleveland of 493 Lakeview in crafts.

Lana Colcher of 5733 Oster took honors for her cat sculpture, and Lana Ewers of 1801 Oakley Park, Commerce Township, won the junior division prize for an oil painting called "Jumper."

The exhibit is open from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and from 7 to 9 p.m.

Proposal for Delaying of Reapportionment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., and several other senators plan a "little filibuster" in efforts to block a proposal that would delay court-ordered reapportionment of state legislatures.

Hart told interviewers Saturday that opponents of the proposal intend to speak at length against it in hopes they can marshal public opinion and stave off its attachment as a rider to the foreign aid bill.

Asked if this wouldn't be a filibuster, Hart grinned and replied: "Well maybe, but it will only be a little one."

The proposal to delay court-ordered legislative reapportionment by two to four years was introduced by Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois.

Dirksen has contended that district court orders for states to reapportion both bodies of their legislatures on the basis of the Supreme Court's June 15 one man, one vote decision have brought chaos to many states.

Hart said he considers the proposal an unconstitutional invasion of the Supreme Court's authority.

"If Congress can block court orders on reapportionment it could do the same thing on such matters as search and seizure or on voting rights," he said.

Device Gauges Space X Rays

ANN ARBOR — A satellite instrument to measure X rays from the sun has been delivered to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration by the University of Michigan's McMath-Hulbert Observatory.

Data collected by the instrument will be studied by U. of M. astronomer Richard G. Teske, initiator of the project, to extend knowledge of the physics of the sun.

Normally, the sun emits X rays only weakly. Prof. Teske explains, in addition to the vast amount of energy being emitted as visible light.

However, during solar flares and other active solar events, such as the eruption of prominences, the X-ray energy from the sun increases.

These X rays are responsible for short-wave radio fade-outs as they arrive at the earth, Teske notes.

"Study of these enhancements" should help to shed light on the physical processes which take place on the sun during active solar events," he said.

State Agriculture Expands

Farmers Need More Land

EAST LANSING — One of the chief problems facing Michigan's ever-expanding agriculture is the growing demand for more land, according to a trio of USDA agricultural economists working out of Michigan State University.

Melvin L. Colter, Myron E. Wirth and George D. Irwin drew this conclusion after surveying 265 farmers throughout the Thumb and South Central areas of Michigan. They noted the following about the future of farming in these areas:

• There is every reason to expect that demands for land for farm expansion will continue to increase.

• A higher percentage of younger and better educated farmers are likely to make up the farm community.

• There will be more part-time farming, but large dairy and livestock farms will continue to increase in size and number at a faster rate than other farm types.

RECLAMATION SUPPLY

The agricultural economists reported that some of the farmland needed for expansion can be supplied through clearing and other reclamation measures.

But the bulk of this demand for land will be satisfied by farmers going out of agriculture.

Colter, Wirth and Irwin also noted that the farm price and cost relationships in the future will influence the number of farmers that retire or more completely out of agriculture.

Thus, the land supply available from farmers who move out of the business will also depend to some degree on the availability of nonfarm jobs.

SLOW ADJUSTMENTS

"Adjustments to economic incentives are often slow," said the economists. "Many sociological factors tend to slow down the farm retirement and transfer out of agriculture."

"Farming is a special way of life and is considered a place to retire by many farmers who continue to farm on a small scale in their later years."

The economists added that part-time farming is now considered "a permanent occupation in Michigan, rather than a stepping stone into or out of agriculture."

They noted that part-time farmers will not release much land with which other farmers can expand their operations.

"And," they concluded, "retirement and transfer out of agriculture probably will not be rapid enough to avoid upward pressures in land prices."

State Dems Give LBJ Free Hand

EAST LANSING (AP) — On the advice of an old political warhorse, Michigan delegates to the Democratic National Convention resolved Sunday that President Johnson should have "a completely free hand" in selecting his running mate.

The sponsor of the resolution, Michigan AFL-CIO President August Scholle, a delegate-at-large, said he didn't want it to appear that he was "backing away from a fight."

But he told the delegates that one reason for the resolution "is the simple realistic fact that we ain't got any other choice anyway."

ON LOSING SIDE

Scholle recalled that twice in his long career in politics he'd been on the losing side in the selection of a vice presidential nominee.

The first time was in 1944, when a labor-liberal factor had backed Henry Wallace as President Franklin Roosevelt's running mate only to see Harry Truman win the nomination.

Scholle said he personally was appointed to carry the word to Wallace's headquarters but he'd stalled on delivering the news until someone else came in to report Truman's selection.

In 1960, Michigan Democrats opposed the selection of Lyndon Johnson as vice presidential running mate by the candidate for president, John F. Kennedy.

NO STOMACH

"Frankly, I'll tell you that I don't have any stomach for that again," Scholle told the delegates.

"But nobody can accuse me of running away from a fight. Today, I think John Kennedy knew what the hell he was doing when he selected LBJ."

NEWS OF THE AREA

Rochester Elks Continue Hunt for New Lodge Site

ROCHESTER — Local Elks are continuing their search for a new lodge site with the Ludlow Street lot still in the running.

Last month, the Michigan Liquor Control Commission set back plans for a temple on Ludlow by denying a liquor license.

However Edward F. Maloney, director of the commission's license division, said the group still could apply for a hearing if members thought the commission's decision was unjust.

At a general membership meeting last week, the problem was discussed, but no definite decision was reached, according to Harold Pepper, building and site committee member.

"We are still in a bewildered state," Pepper explained, commenting on the reaction of Ludlow residents at recent hearings.

Fifty-three protesting residents of the street petitioned the council and liquor commission, demanding the Elks locate elsewhere.

"We have not completely abandoned the idea of a lodge on Ludlow," Pepper said, "but are continuing our search for other sites."

William Parker, current exalted ruler of the organization, said the Elks "may have a public announcement in a couple of days," regarding their plans.

He declined to be specific, but said the group is definitely planning on building a building.

OBJECTIONS LISTED

Ludlow residents fought the proposed lodge on grounds that too many children played in the township park across the street, Ludlow had too heavy traffic already and there was a sharp turn near the proposed temple site.

Elks countered that Ludlow was already a major traffic artery, the area was not really all residential and attendance in the building would be limited to members and guests.

At the local government level, the Avon Township board went on record 6-1 questioning possible issuance of a liquor license

Church Unit Sets Oxford Gatherings

OXFORD — The Midwestern Association of Social Brethren Churches will be represented here this week at a series of organizational and worship meetings.

The Oxford Social Brethren Church will host the sessions, to take place daily and evenings Thursday through Saturday.

Organized last year in Marion, Ind., the association will concentrate on establishing new bylaws and future growth plans.

Evening services will be open to the public. Sermons and singing will be a part of the sessions.

Moderator for the three-day affair will be Rev. Edward Darnell of Marion.

Pastor of the Oxford Church is Rev. James Wright. The series of meetings will begin in the church, 32 Mechanic, at 2 p.m. Thursday.

Dem Picnic Is Saturday

WHITE LAKE TOWNSHIP — An afternoon of family fun is scheduled for Saturday by the White Lake Township Democratic Club.

The group's annual picnic will begin at noon at the Davisburg Park. The area's facilities — playground equipment, horse-shoe pits and baseball diamonds — will be put to use.

The club also has scheduled a Wednesday meeting at the Township Hall. All local candidates will be present at the 8 p.m. session.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Edward Nellor, an aide to Republican presidential nominee Barry Goldwater, confirmed Saturday that the Arizona senator talked with Gov. George W. Romney of Michigan here last Thursday. Michigan politics in particular, and politics in general, were discussed in the meeting, Nellor said. He did not elaborate.

Man 2-Time Winner at Penny Royal Fair

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky. (AP) — It's a pretty sure bet that few people enjoyed the 1964 Penny Royal Fair as much as Jack Brown.

During the fair, Brown's name was drawn in a lottery and he won $1,000. Two nights later, he won another drawing — this time for a new car.

House Unit Claims Red Agitation Led to JFK Murder

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Committee on Un-American Activities says the propaganda and agitation campaigns of the Communist party were responsible for the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. However, the committee said it takes no position on the question of "whether the assassination of President Kennedy was an individual act or the work of a conspiracy."

A presidential commission headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren is expected to conclude next month that accused assassin Lee Harvey Oswald was a loner who acted out of his own aberrations when he fired the bullets that killed Kennedy last Nov. 22 in Dallas.

The House committee discussed Kennedy's murder in its annual report issued Sunday. It recommended that Congress pass a law making assassination of the president or vice president a federal crime.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration

will require drugs containing the pain killer, Phenacetin, to carry labels warning that kidney damage may result from exceeding recommended dosage.

The regulation, effective in 60 days, was announced Saturday and applied to drugs sold without prescription.

When used as recommended, FDA said, Phenacetin is considered a safe and useful analgesic. The labeling change was recommended by a special advisory committee of scientists.

Deaf Elect Officers

Convention Without Talk

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (AP) — About 250 persons closed a three-day convention yesterday by electing a new president.

The politicking had the same nerve as a national party convention, but there was a big difference — not a word was spoken.

William Fanelor of Topeka, the new president of the Kansas Association of the Deaf, delivered his acceptance speech in sign language.

Mrs. Clem Dillenschneider of Kansas City sang "America" with her hands, and Howard Palmer of Jackson, Miss., drew roars of laughter with a pantomime act.

At a convention dance Saturday night, the floor was jammed with couples. The deaf explained they could feel the beat of the music through the soles of their feet.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon says the "explosive conflict" over civil rights will be a major issue in the presidential campaign.

Appearing Sunday on a taped television-radio program with Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., Nixon said the people will want to hear from the candidates how they plan to handle civil rights problems.

President Johnson and Republican presidential nominee Barry Goldwater have agreed to avoid during the fall campaign any statements that might inflame the rights issue and encourage renewed violence.

Nixon also said foreign policy issues would play a part, "particularly how we resolve this situation in Viet Nam without

It Seems to Me . . .

Will Nikita Khrushchev Pay His United Nations Dues?

ONE NIKITA KHRUSHCHEV has announced that Russia will not pay her U.N. dues, come November. The Soviet blackshades are $52 million in arrears on their share of the Gaza strip and the Congo. France is also deficient—and defiant.

Secretary-General U THANT says the U.N. may face a financial crisis.

The charter provides that those who are two years behind can be barred from voting and this fall Russia will be precisely in that predicament. U Thant has been discussing the situation with the head Red and has received the official brush-off. Khrushchev says he won't pay. Personally, I think he's a plain, unadorned, barefaced, gulleless liar. And if you want it in greater detail, just drop a note.

The international bully will storm, bluster and wave his pudgy arms. But if the U.N. means business, he'll divvy up. If he can, he will bulldoze ADLAI STEVENSON and force him to back away, back down, twist, squirm and conciliate, but if STEVENSON takes a few setting-up exercises, a dose of vitamins and develops more backbone than he has shown in the past he can lead the rest of the world in standing firm.

Already some of his minions are suggesting Russia should be "temporarily forgiven" if the big deadbeats don't toe the mark in November. This would be a monumental error.

There should be no mercy. "Forgiveness" is merely cowardice.

We could shut off the big tramp's monotonous vetoes, and much of his general flag waving.

The Wallendas had the worst fatal accident in high-wire history and now another performer falls 85 feet to his death in Detroit. A net doesn't detract one whit from the performance. It really makes it more enjoyable, as you know the Grim Reaper isn't leering from the side lines with one finger beckoning.

No one wants to see a performer killed.

If they won't protect themselves, let's let the law guard the spectators from the grisly spectacle.

Oh, No!!! . . . One of the really epic announcements lies in the news that CASSIUS LISTON and SONNY CLAY — or is it SONNY CASSIUS and LISTON CLAY — or maybe CASSONY CLAYSTON and LASSIUS TONNY — well, anyway, two of the all-time false alarms of pugilism, will "meet" somewhere, sometime, before the smallest audience in athletic history in a "fight" for the "championship."

I'll be seel' yuh — somewhere else.

Here are two cogent quotations that were made just five days apart from a couple of prominent gentlemen.

The first one runs: "Extremism in the defense of liberty is no vice; moderation in pursuit of justice is no virtue."

And the second says: "In the preservation of law and order there can be no compromise . . . just as there can be no compromise in securing equal and exact justice for all Americans."

The first has had scads of publicity and came from BARRY GOLDWATER. The second hasn't been quite as widely circulated but it emanated from LYNDON B. JOHNSON.

Do you agree with them?

And in Conclusion . . . Jotting from the well-thumbed notebook of your peripatetic reporter:

Chicago's Health Commissioner says when you're driving past the bathing beaches to keep your eyes on the road and not the bikini. . . . Bosses of British TV shook off "Hillbillies" for a year and a half and finally put on a couple experimentally. Now it has the highest rating ever accorded an American show over there. . . . Overheard: "The first Ten Commandments are the hardest."

Current issue of The Worker—official Communist paper—blasts, browbeats and assails BARRY GOLDWATER. That's one of his greatest compliments up to now.

Purely personal nomination for an especially attractive young lady in the area: KAREN VANDERKLOOT. . . . The President of the U.S. prefers to spell his daughter's name "Lucy" but the young lady has a yen for "Lued" and you know who lost — I. P. O. T. U. S. . . . Insider's Newsletter says the cost of marriages has soared beyond all reason. It far outstrips the advance in the cost of living. . . . Overheard: "There are too many people in this world who speak twice before they think."

Firearms of all descriptions are breaking every sales record, says The Wall Street Journal. It estimates 20 million citizens will be after ducks, deer, clay pigeons and club targets this fall. Many purchasers openly say: "With things as they are, we're going to feel better with a gun in the house, anyway." . . . Just from looking at our social pages, wouldn't you guess August is the second "most marrying" month? Well, it is. . . . WGN (Chicago) runs more color TV than any station in the world. But Still No Pushover

David Lawrence Says:

VP Elimination Poses Questions

WASHINGTON — President Johnson created a strange paradox the other day when he announced that he would not select any member of his own cabinet for the vice presidential nomination.

Yet if anything should happen to Mr. Johnson between now and LAWRENCE inauguration day on Jan. 20 next and if the speaker of the House and the presiding officer of the Senate should be incapacitated or unable to serve, the present law states specifically that, beginning with the secretary of state, each member of the Cabinet is in line of succession to the presidency.

Congress in the past has assumed that members of the Cabinet would be the kind of persons qualified to take over the White House.

Will the impression be conveyed now that not a single one of the 10 Cabinet members today is capable of being vice president or president?

President Johnson didn't explain why it seemed to him "inadvisable" to recommend any member of his Cabinet.

PARTY POLITICS One inference is that he meant "politically inadvisable." If so, it raises a question as to whether the present method of selecting the president and vice president is concerned with the meritorious qualifications of worthy individuals or only the devious factors of party politics.

Also, the episode emphasizes that national party conventions do not do the selecting of the vice presidential candidates but take orders from the presidential nominee.

This form of dictatorship is a far cry from the boast in the history books that, under the American system of government, the people always choose their president. It is true they vote for a particular ticket selected by a national convention of delegates, but the second place is the dictated choice of one man.

It has occasioned widespread surprise that President Johnson didn't adjudge a single member of his Cabinet eligible for recommendation to the second spot on the Democratic party ticket.

ELIGIBLE FOR VP

Atty. Gen. Kennedy, against whom the maneuver was obviously directed, made a comment on it when he spoke last Thursday to a school of congressional candidates of the Democratic party who were assembled to get some instruction in political techniques for the coming campaign. He said:

"I must confess I stand in awe of you. You are not members of the Cabinet, and you don't meet regularly with the Cabinet and therefore you are eligible for vice president."

The attorney general added that a lot of people had come to him asking whether he felt sad or glad. He said: "I sent a note to the various other Cabinet members and said that my one great regret was that I've taken so many other nice fellows over the side with me."

Whether all this was intended as sarcasm or just an expression of good humor, it has had a sequel.

After Mr. Johnson at a press conference said that he would welcome into the vice presidential race a whole gamut of able governors, senators and representatives, as well as mayors and other public men outside the Cabinet, Atty. Gen. Kennedy is reported to have decided to run for the U.S. Senate from New York State.

Maybe he hopes that, if elected Senator, he might thus have in 1968 a chance to be nominated, not just for vice president, but for president. Then he, too, could pick his own vice president.

Bob Considine Says:

LBJ's Vigorous Action Steals Barry's Thunder

NEW YORK — History could record that the worst thing that happened to Sen. Barry Goldwater's presidential chances was the nutty attack the North Viet Nam PT boats made on U.S. destroyers in the Gulf of Tonkin.

President Johnson reacted vigorously by ordering the PT bases bombed, Ambassador Adlai Stevenson spoke haltingly but eloquently in the United Nations, and Sen. Goldwater was thus deprived of an opportunity to make political hay by saying — as most Americans would have said if nothing had been done or said — "Hey, why are we letting bums like that push us around?"

Apparently, the President called his political opponent and alerted him as to the move.

Such knowledge is both valuable and inhibiting.

"I'll never forget the day we got the word about the fact that our cryptologists had broken the Japanese code even before Pearl Harbor," Tom Dewey's chief aide, Paul Lockwood, said to us the other day as he glanced at the headlines about the action in the Gulf of Tonkin.

GETS A LETTER

Tom got a letter from Gen. George C. Marshall telling him what he had more or less known for a long time, through cryptologist friends: that we had cracked the Japanese code in the months before Pearl Harbor and had a very good idea of what the Japanese fleet was up to long before it struck."

We asked Paul Lockwood why Dewey didn't use the information in the course of his campaign.

"He was in a bad bind," Paul answered. "If he accused Roosevelt of letting the 1941 attack occur, and thus condoning the death of those who died at Pearl and elsewhere, he would at the same time be telling the Japanese that we were still decoding their messages — which they didn't know even in 1941.

"That would have resulted in the changing of their code or codes and, in turn, resulted in the deaths of some untold number of Americans whose security depended on our advance knowledge of Japanese plans."

Mosquito vs. Giant

The Chicago Sun-Times

Any attempt to evaluate the attacks made by the North Viet Nam Communists on elements of the U. S. 7th Fleet in international waters makes little sense from a military point of view.

The U.S. 7th Fleet is perhaps one of the strongest naval striking forces ever assembled.

The People's Republic of China (the Communist regime) has a navy considerably larger in numbers but woefully inferior in capital ships.

There was, therefore, no hope of military success in attacks by these small craft against the United States. The only purpose that could be achieved would be political in nature.

The two brief naval actions in the Tonkin Gulf, could lead to a reassessment of types of ship armament for the U.S. Navy.

The destroyer Maddox, target of both torpedo boat attacks, is one of the few U.S. destroyers that still retains its World War II gun power.

Tells of Togetherness of Boat Victim's Family

Irene Akerley was a sweet-faced woman with soft brown eyes, who cooked like a chef, sang like an angel, and painted like an artist. She bore eight children and loved them all. They were good kids who lived at Cass. Although she was always cheerful, she must have suffered often, for cancer struck her down before she was 35.

Hugh Akerley, the father, never let anyone separate the family of eight. These were the lean years, when employment was shaky, but with the help of grandma, the father kept the five boys and three girls together. They grew up into fine young men and women, but Monday night someone ended this happy relationship, when Alan was tragically killed by a motorboat.

After hundreds of his "buddies," girls and boys, filed past the casket of "Al," the boy who never had "an enemy in the world," was laid to rest with his mother.

'Dismayed, Annoyed at Reader's Opinion'

I was dismayed and annoyed to read an opinion expressed by a lady of obvious intelligence. She fears the get-tough policy of Sen. Goldwater because as she put it, "He would probably cause World War III."

I don't consider myself qualified to render a judgment on the degree of probability of such an unfortunate event. However, I do feel that the alternative to standing firm to the point of getting tough is the making of one concession after the other until there are no more to make.

I am no less a coward than many of my fellow men when it comes to dying, but I would rather be dead than Red and if this be extremism then make the most of it.

'Dog Warden Doesn't Have Easy Job'

I'm tired of people who constantly gripe about the dog warden. His job is underpaid, undermanned, dirty and thankless. He has to comply with the laws that the state, city and county establish. If a dog is barking, running loose, or is without a license, it is a misdemeanor and has to be committed in the dog warden's presence. After he is summoned and he finds the condition still exists he can pick up the dog. However, if by the time he arrives the dog has stopped barking or has been taken inside, he can only take action if the complainant will sign a complaint and the courts will issue a warrant.

What we need is new legislation to support the dog warden and he must also have support from the people. I own a dog and no one likes dogs better, but to not properly take care of one is disgusting.

converted, wholly or in large part to offensive missile capability. This conversion is of dubious value against small targets.

Inasmuch as Communist countries have often attempted to assert sovereign rights to international waters that are partly enclosed by their land areas, the defense of such waters from unprovoked and aggressive attacks points up the need for ships armed with conventional weapons to meet such attacks, as was the case with the destroyer Maddox and the Turner Joy.

The latter still has part of its conventional gun system in operation.

Castro Pegged

The Miami Herald

Some groups may have members who drag their feet on the question of Communist Cuba but the Inter American Press Association displays an impressive unanimity as well as continuity.

A courageous battler for freedom of the press everywhere in the hemisphere, IAPAs has been denouncing the loss of this liberty in Cuba since 1960. It did so again this week in a statement by its president, John R. Reitenmeyer of The Hartford Courant. IAPAs' latest denunciation is aimed at Fidel Castro's cynical use of the free press of other nations to launch a campaign for an accommodation with the United States.

It is ironic that Castro in-seeking to create the fiction that they are free to gather facts and report them, while Cuban newspaper language in jail because they would not toe the Communist line. IAPAs records show between 21 and 28 Cuban editors and writers are in the Isle of Pines prison for terms up to 30 years. In his address at Santiago July 26, Castro confessed that press freedom does not exist in Cuba.

"His confession," says IAPAs, "is a resounding rebuff for those who accused the IAPAs of being obsessed with Cuba."

"The IAPAs will be obsessed with Cuba while Communist tyranny continues in power."

IAPAs makes it very clear that Fidel Castro is "enemy No. 1 of the free press of America."

Fidel, of course, returns the compliment.

Lord of the Manor

English Titles Up for Sale

LONDON (AP)—Opportunity knocks: you too can become a lord of the manor. And all by the simple procedure of spending about $2,000—and outbidding other aspirants.

Eleven titles are going under the auctioneer's hammer at the Moot Hall, Colchester, Sept. 30. The title lord of the manor goes back a thousand years or more. The ones on sale are comparatively new. They date from the 15th, 16th or 17th centuries.

The titles were bought up by Joseph Beaumont, grandfather of the present owner. Titles were a hobby of his. He bought more than 80 in Essex, Suffolk and Norfolk counties. His son bought more. Much of the collection already has been sold.

NO PRIVILEGES

Last anyone become confused the title lord of the manor has nothing to do with a peerage. It has almost no privileges connected with it. Further, there is no real property involved.

Unless you already have a title you are still going to be called mister.

In olden days, before the commoners came into Parliament and took rights unto themselves, the title meant lords of the manor could take back land for want of an heir. This fine practice was called escheat.

Manor lords could fine tenants whose daughters married outside the manor. The manor was not only the house, but also the estate around it where the serfs labored under the lord.

The manor lord could also exercise droit de seigneur—right of the lord to enjoy the first pleasures of the bridal bed of all marriages involving serfs with in his manor.

These rights are gone forever, but the title still yields the freedom of grazing sheep on common lands. Any commoner today has the same right, however.

The lord of the manor also is a true esquire and can write "Esq." after his name. A commoner can gain this courtesy simply by receiving a bill from his tailor.

The titles up for sale are well-documented. They include court rolls, surveys, court books, rentals and minute books which give a detailed account of their past histories.

C. M. Stamford and Son is selling the titles on behalf of J. L. Beaumont of Coggeshall, Essex.

They are the perfect gift—for someone who has everything.

Sore Feet Can Go to the Head

Got the Blues?—Check Your Shoes

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

One of the biggest but least-known causes of private melancholy is that people wear shoes too tight for their feet. You can't feel free in the head if your tootsies hurt. Walking with the Army infantry taught me that most of my life I had been wearing a shoe half a size too short—9½ instead of 10. This reminds me of the new joke about why the fellow wore pointed shoes. "They are a great help in stamping out cockroaches in corners," he explained learnedly. It also reminds me of an old joke—I believe it belongs to George Ade—about the shrewd advantage of wearing white shoes: "They don't show frost." Matches start more fires, kill more people, cause more property damage than volcanoes. Mother earth lives in eternal restlessness. She is like a fat lady with a tight girdle. Every day there is an average of 85 earthquakes, most of them harmless.

We seek to land on the moon before we have freed our own globe from the tyranny of ignorance and the fringe benefits of science. For example, despite the local popularity of the electric light bulb, most of the world's population is illuminated by the candle and the fire-place.

On the other hand, our choice of change at home is increased year by year. The best supermarkets now carry at least 6,000 items.

Our quotable notables: "We women don't care too much about getting our pictures on money as long as we can get our hands on it"—Ivy Baker Priest, former U.S. treasurer.

The first living U.S. president to have his likeness on an American coin was Calvin Coolidge. He and George Washington were portrayed on one side of the 1926 sesquicentennial half-dollar, now a collector's item. Only 141,120 of the coins were minted.

HELPFUL HINTS

Helpful hints for the old-fashioned housewife: Apples stored in the basement with potatoes will keep the potatoes from sprouting.

It's hard to figure why people still feel as bad as or worse than their grandparents, considering there are now 8,000 drugs in use. It could be just plain human contrariness.

Worth remembering: "Dentopodology," said Phillip, Duke of Edinburgh, "is the science of opening your mouth and putting your foot in it. I've been practicing it for years."

Folklore: Sunset in clouds rain tomorrow. Fresh-caught fish exposed to moonlight will spoil. If you dream of a funeral, it is a sign of a forthcoming wedding in the family. A dream about a snake means an enemy is closing in on you. But if you dream you kill the snake, you will defeat the enemy.

SOME QUICKIES

Quickies: Americans will sneeze into an estimated 100 billion facial tissues during the current hay fever season. Half the money that husbands spend to woo their wives with flowers is expended on roses. In Denmark, which has one of the world's highest literacy rates, one out of 10 children is born out of wedlock. Unless it is turned into a belt or a handbag, a heel-thy alligator has a possible longevity of about 45 years.

It was Gen. David Monroe Shoup, on retiring last year as commander of the U.S. Marine Corps, who observed: "We fight any enemy the president designates. We don't just keep talking communism, communism. You might build up hate against one enemy and find yourself fighting another."

Dr. Sam Faces Spine Surgery

Forced Into Hospital by Back Condition

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)—Samuel H. Sheppard, convicted of the bludgeoning slaying of his wife in 1964, has entered a hospital where he may have to undergo surgery for a slipped disc in his back.

The former suburban Bay Village osteopath, released from the penitentiary on $10,000 bond last month after serving almost nine years, entered Brentwood Hospital Sunday.

"He has a back condition that has gradually worsened in the past six months," said Dr. Theodore F. Classen, the hospital's chief of staff.

Sheppard married Ariane Tebejenjohann shortly after being released from prison. He and the blonde German divorcee became engaged after correspondence she started while he was in prison.

RIGHTS VIOLATED

A U.S. District Court judge freed Sheppard, saying his constitutional rights were violated during his trial. Sheppard was convicted of second degree murder and sentenced to life imprisonment. The state has appealed the order freeing him, and a hearing will be held in October.

Dr. Classen, who called the surgery "major," said the operation would be this afternoon or Tuesday, if tests and X rays indicate it is necessary. The physician said he and his staff would perform the operation.

Dr. Arthur E. Miller of Glendale, Calif., an orthopedic specialist, flew to Cleveland Sunday to be a consultant. He and Sheppard have been friends since they both were residents at Los Angeles County General Hospital.

State Trooper to Be Transferred From City Post

Trooper Lawrence E. Miller, safety officer at the Pontiac State Police Post, will be transferred to East Lansing headquarters Aug. 23.

Miller was named "Trooper of the Year" in 1962, the same year he was recognized by the Pontiac Area Junior Chamber of Commerce as the outstanding young man of the year.

He joined the department in December 1964 and served at Bad Axe before being assigned to Pontiac in June 1960.

Miller is being assigned to the safety and traffic bureau in East Lansing.

Canada Will Ship Machines to Cuba

ELMIRA, Ont. (AP)—Twenty-five harvester machines and loaders worth $100,000 will be shipped to Cuba next Friday and another shipment worth $1.2 million could follow in October. McKee Brothers Ltd., farming equipment manufacturers in this community near Kitchener, said a second shipment, involving 400 unloaders and 150 harvesters, is being negotiated with Cuban officials.

Accidental Shooting

Kills U. of M. Student

ANN ARBOR (AP)—William Beckers, 23, a Flint man attending graduate school at the University of Michigan, was shot to death Saturday night in what police called an accidental slaying.

Police say Beckers was showing Miss Sandra Kelsen, 18, of Ann Arbor, a .45-caliber revolver in his apartment when, she said, "somehow it went off."

Asks Catholics for Integration

Bishop in Mississippi Issues Pastoral Letter

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Mississippi's Roman Catholic bishops have been asked to lower racial barriers in their parochial schools this fall.

Bishop Richard O. Gerow, in a pastoral letter read to all parishioners Sunday, called for integration of first grades.

Implementation of the pastoral letter will be voluntary.

"It is to be the policy of the Catholic schools in the diocese to admit qualified Catholic children to the first grade without respect to race," Bishop Gerow's letter said.

"I rely on your devotion," his letter continued, "and ask for your prayers that whatever adjustments ensue, they may result in the greatest honor and glory of God and the strengthening of the bond of charity which unites us all in Christ."

Implementation of his decision, the bishop said, "will be handled by each pastor in consultation with me" and begin in September.

A Catholic source said the diocese did not know how many students will be integrating classrooms.

The move follows a recent federal court action ordering public schools in Jackson, Biloxi and Leake County to integrate this fall — Mississippi's first public school desegregation below the college level.

Public school integration will also start with the first grade.

51 SCHOOLS
Bishop Gerow's order encompasses 51 white and Negro elementary parochial schools. They have an enrollment of 13,406 pupils.

There are an estimated 71,132 Catholics among the 2,170,141 Mississippians.

Crazy-Quilt U.S. Time Zone System May Be on Its Way Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — The words "daylight saving time" and America's crazy-quilt time system may be on the way out.

A House Commerce subcommittee will take up and likely approve a bill Tuesday that overhauls the U.S. time system and attempts to bring order out of what the Interstate Commerce Commission calls "increasing chaos" in American time.

A similar bill was approved by the Senate Commerce Committee. No public opposition has arisen so far, and there just may be enough time left to push the bill through Congress before the session ends.

Basically the bill would set up uniform areas that would move their clocks ahead and back at the same times every year. For the most part, the bill would do away with situations in which one community is on standard time and the town next door on daylight time.

According to testimony before the House subcommittee, the country has such situations galore.

The bill now before Congress would try to end the nation's confusing time situation with these provisions:

1. The United States, except for Alaska and Hawaii, would be divided as now into four zones: Eastern, Central, Mountain, and Pacific. In addition, a new Atlantic zone would be created. This would be off the East Coast and not over any mainland at all.

2. To save daylight in warm summer months, the Interstate Commerce Commission would create a single subzone in each regular zone. This zone would be a geographic whole and would connect with the full zone to the east.

3. Daylight saving time would begin for all subzones on the last Sunday in April and end on the last Sunday in October.

4. It would not be called daylight saving time at all. Instead, the ICC would assign each subzone to the full zone to the East.

In other words, a person living in the central time subzone would find that during the summer months he would use the term, Eastern Standard Time.

5. The bill would require all federal agencies, common carriers, and communications by wire or radio to use this time system. It is assumed that this would persuade all local communities to adopt the new system.

Running From Orchard

DETROIT (AP) — Willie Matthis, 18, of Detroit was struck and killed by a train Sunday night in Van Buren Township in western Wayne County.

Police said Matthis and six other youths were running from an orchard with sacks full of peaches in their arms when the mishap occurred.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Thorton B. Morton said today he thinks Sen. Barry Goldwater's name at the head of the Republican ticket will bring substantial GOP gain in the Senate and House.

Morton, Kentucky Republican who heads his party's Senate Campaign Committee, said this might be particularly true in the South, the border states, the Midwest and the West.

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson of Washington, head of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, said in a separate interview he believes that Goldwater's statements about "extremism" and on other issues will bring a record number of Democrats to the polls.

"If we can get out a heavy Democratic vote, it will help all of our candidates," Magnuson said. "I think that a lot of Democrats are going to turn out to make sure that Goldwater isn't elected and doesn't carry conservatives into office with him."

SEATS AT STAKE

The Democrats, who now have a 66-33 margin in the Senate, have 26 seats at stake in the November balloting. There are nine Republican seats up for grabs.

Calls Court Arrogant on Redistricting

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court's recent decision that state legislatures must be apportioned on a strict population basis was an "arrogant usurpation of naked power," a Michigan congressman said today.

Rep. George Meader, R-Mich., advocated immediate legislation plus a constitutional amendment to forbid the court to consider legislative districting cases. He charged the court, by its ruling, had destroyed the sovereignty of the American people in choosing their lawmakers.

Meader said the court, in its ruling on both legislative and congressional districting, acted in cases where boundaries no longer reflected population patterns. But he said voters already had the power to alter such inequities if they desired. "The power of the people is not alone to decide rightly or wisely; it is also the power to make mistakes or decide erroneously," he said.

Despite some public claims to the contrary, neither party expects any change in Senate control. The Democrats believe they will hold their own. Republicans privately hope to gain from three to seven seats.

In the House, which Democrats control 254-177, with four vacancies, there may be a substantial turnover in personnel but few observers believe the standings of the parties will be altered materially.

The Republicans view the Ohio senatorial race, where Rep. Robert Taft Jr. is contesting Democratic Sen. Stephen M. Young, as their best bet for a senatorial gain.

They list Oklahoma, Wyoming, Utah and Texas — all states in which Goldwater is reputed to be strong — as states where they believe their chances are better than average to take Senate seats away from the Democrats.

On the other hand, the Republicans are privately gloomy about holding on to Senate seats Wisconsin, Indiana, Minnesota and Michigan come next on

'Best Friend's Wife'

By VESTA M. KELLY

I said, "Stop and I'll clean the windshield."

Biff grunted. "Shoulder looks bad. Wait until we hit a straight stretch and I'll pull off."

I shifted my weight against the door and looked at my companions. Dusk and the storm had turned the car into a world of its own, a world that smelled of wet wool and leather, the faint scent of Linda's perfume.

I felt the car's movement, the joggle of wheels over the country road, the softness of Linda's weight against me.

My best friend, Biff, his big shoulders tense, leaned over the steering wheel, straining to see the road through the half-obscured windshield.

COMPLETELY UNAWARE

Biff's wife, Linda, sat between us, her eyes closed. All day she had been quiet and moody. Now, she seemed completely unaware of the difficulty Biff was having with the driving.

All in all, it had been a lousy day. The hunting wasn't a success. All day, rain soaked us. Now, coming home in the early dusk, the rain had turned to sleet.

I heard Biff's indrawn breath, felt his instinctive twist of the wheel. I pivoted to the fan-shaped opening where the wiper fought the rain.

A beat-up old truck was bearing down on us — straight down the middle of the road — its headlights gleaming like a tomato's eyes.

SEEMED TO CLIMB

I felt the car lurch as the shoulder gave way. We seemed to climb, clawing along the edge for a moment before the car pitched into the ditch. It slammed into the opposite bank and rolled back against the shoulder.

When it came to rest, I found Linda in my arms. The door behind me was sprung. I pushed it open and crawled out pulling Linda after me. I stood up cautiously. I didn't seem to be hurt.

"Are you all right?" I asked Linda.

"I think so . . . Biff?"

The truck was gone. Only a receding sound mingled with the hiss of falling sleet. The canted wheels were spinning around and around, crazily in the half-light.

CRAWLED BACK

I crawled back into the tilted car.

"Biff?"

"I'm caught," he grunted.

"Are you hurt?"

"I don't think so. Maybe if you pull . . ."

I reached for his hand.

"Linda . . . ?"

"She's okay. Come on, let's get you out of there."

NO USE

I pulled with all of my strength while he struggled to get free. It wasn't any use. Somehow the impact had wedged Biff's big body between the door and the steering column. Something was pinning him there.

The door! The one against the bank. If we could get it open.

"Hurry," Linda said. "The engine's on fire."

I ran around the car, slipping on the mud. If we could push the car onto its wheels. "Get at the door . . ."

"Help me, Linda. Push!"

I pushed and strained with all my strength. I couldn't quite make it. Linda was crying now. "What'll we do?" she sobbed.

I could smell smoke. Time was running out.

Suddenly, I knew what I was going to do.

"Biff," I shouted, "we can't get you out and it's okay. Linda and I are in love. This makes it easy for us."

With an ugly roaring sound, he began to struggle. Heaving his great strength against the side of the car. Making it rock with his effort.

"Now, Linda, now!"

ROCKED FORWARD

We both pushed. The car rocked forward, dropped onto its wheels. Miraculously, I could open the door.

Biff came out as big and sturdy as a mountain. He caught me on the side of the head with one big fist. I went down into the half-frozen mud.

"Get up and I'll give you another . . ."

But, I lay still in the sleety mud, feeling warm and happy. He was out! I hoped the car wouldn't blow up before we got this thing cleared up and got out of there.

Linda was hanging onto Biff's arm. "No, Biff, no! Don't you see, he had to make you mad enough to help us get you out! Oh, darling, you're safe."

Then, she was in his arms and he was kissing her.

NO OTHER WAY

I wouldn't for the world have had it any other way.

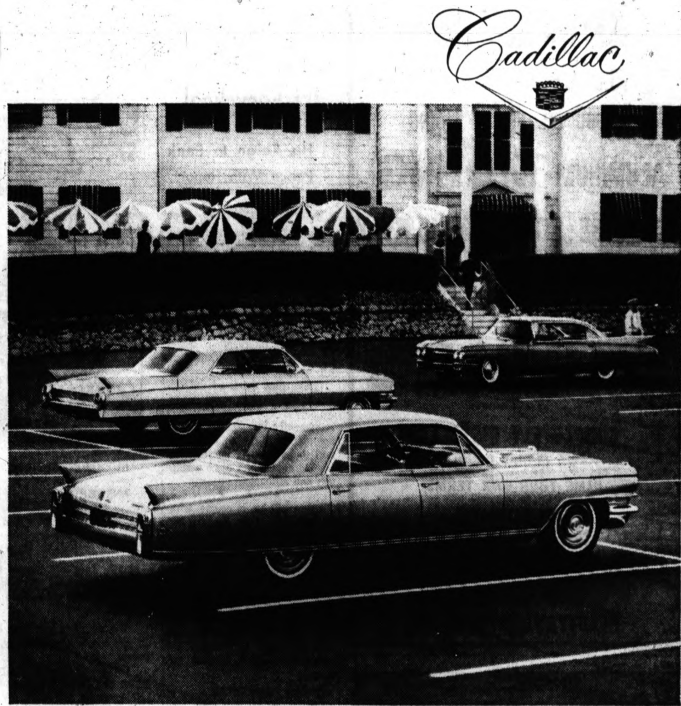

We all tried. But, the friendship just never was the same again. Having put it into words, I realized that for me, it was true. I loved Linda.

But Linda loved Biff!

So that's the way the cookie crumbled. And, that's why I'm sitting here on a sunny California patio — alone, reading a letter from Biff and Linda back home — together.

Well, I don't know. Here comes that cute blonde from across the hall with a pot of coffee. I don't think I'm going to be alone for long.

THE WORLD'S FINEST USED CARS ARE BUILT BY CADILLAC.

To prove our point, we offer as evidence the three Cadillacs shown above.

From top to bottom in our illustration are a 1960 Sedan de Ville, a 1962 Coupe de Ville and a 1963 Sixty Special. Each is unmistakably Cadillac. Each, regardless of vintage, will have special appeal to the man who desires the comfort, convenience and pride of ownership that only Cadillac can offer.

That's why thousands of wise car buyers favor a previously owned Cadillac over new cars of other makes. First of all, they realize that Cadillac engineering is so far advanced that "newness" becomes a relative term. In fact, there are features found on late model Cadillacs that are only now being offered on other cars. This is a major reason why a Cadillac retains its value through the years, from buyer to buyer.

Another thing to consider. Cadillac owners lavish the most meticulous care on the cars they are so proud to own. The "car of cars" almost always receives regular maintenance and servicing by highly skilled and carefully trained mechanics.

Your authorized Cadillac dealer's selection of one-owner models has never before been so appealing. And he can probably match one of these fine cars to your budget.

Who knows? Your used Cadillac could possibly be the "newest" car you've ever owned!

FLYING FASHION—Kenneth Manning, 14, 157 W. Columbia, leaps to the task as he heads back to the ninth grade at Lincoln Junior High School. He's wearing a Sears Fraternity Prep Jac-Shirt and continental style slacks from Sears downtown store.

Afraid of New Math? First-Graders Aren't

By BILL EASTHAM

Ever hear of commutative property, distributive property or associative property? Although they sound like something you'd find in the Communist Manifesto, these are merely some of the tools your first-grader will use in learning mathematics in most Pontiac area schools this fall.

He probably won't learn the terms until he's in the third or fourth grade. By that time he will have progressed to a level of math that his parents didn't attain until they were in high school.

The new system of teaching mathematics is so simple it makes you wonder why some body didn't think of it a hundred years ago.

And teachers using the new system report that their students no longer regard math as drudgery but consider it fun.

EDUCATORS CONFIDENT

Educators are confident that the current generation of elementary and secondary students will be so advanced in their knowledge of and ability to use mathematics by the time they finish high school that the college textbooks will have to be rewritten.

The drudgery of mathematics, if any remains, has now been transferred to the teachers, who must learn the new system right along with their students.

Even the youngest teachers, unless they attended advanced elementary schools, learned math by the "old" method.

The older ones must change thinking patterns they've used for a half century, more or less. It isn't easy.

NEW VOCABULARY

Today's elementary math teachers use a whole new vocabulary. Words like subtract, minus, dividend, divisor and quotient are as obsolete as the washboard.

"Little Cyanide" will never learn his multiplication tables because he doesn't have to. He will learn to multiply through the use of mathematical sentences, arrays of visual aids and multiplication charts.

From multiplication, it's just a short step to division and simple geometry, which he will also learn in the first grade.

The whole process is so advanced that by the time "Junior" is in fourth grade he will be working with square root, a level of mathematics that was only lightly touched in high school a few years ago.

One of the outstanding features of the new program is that students are permitted to proceed at their own speed.

Several texts may be used in one class and the progress from one text to the next is governed only by the individual student's ability.

The whole system is still so new that it isn't widely used in high school yet. But the sky will be the limit in how far a student can advance in mathematics before he is ready for college.

School administrators are already beginning to worry about obtaining teachers who can conduct mathematics classes on the level that may be required within the next few years.

IN-SERVICE TRAINING

Even elementary teachers are required to attend an in-service training program to learn the new method, and unless they majored in mathematics in college, few secondary teachers are qualified to teach calculus, which could soon become a standard part of the high school curriculum.

The "bible" for the new teaching method was compiled by the School Mathematics Study Group, a group of eight mathematicians and educators from colleges and universities throughout the country.

It consists of a teacher's commentary text, which parallels the text used by the students. Several may be covered in one grade during a school year.

The old "workbook" system has been discarded and the students work principally with visual aids and stated problems suggested to the teacher in her commentary text.

RETURN OF ABACUS

Ironically, one of the most important visual aids in the new system is one of the oldest mathematical devices known to man—the abacus.

There is hardly any limit to the number of familiar objects which may be used as visual aids, which is one of the reasons that the youngsters learn to like mathematics.

In fact, educators say, the key to the whole system is its simplicity and the fact that it is fun for the youngsters.

But you may not think it's so simple when "Junior" comes home and asks for help in his problems on tossing out nines, base 10 or deductive geometry.

"There was a little schoolhouse... a mile... from our dwelling. As the school was usually open during the winter season, we could not attend."

'GREATER VALUE'

"I have often thought, however, that the instruction received at the hands of my father and mother was of greater value than that which we would have been likely to receive at school."

Evidently this was true because records show that the public lost interest in schools until, in 1847, a group of Pon-

Truth About Past

History of County Schools

By MIRIAM NEAL

Most students are supposed to be waiting anxiously for school doors to open have been told time and time again how important education is and how "tough" it was "back in the good old day."

Okay, let's check. Let's review the history of education in Oakland County.

The first school in this county was started in 1821 in a little square room in the loft of Major Oliver William's sheephouse in what is now Waterford Township.

It had three small windows, a stove, some rough seats, a desk and Ohioan teacher named Brent. Its enrollment — seven.

FIRST IN PONTIAC

According to tradition, the first schoolhouse in Pontiac was a one-story frame building erected in 1824 or 1825.

But there was no public school system as such and it was not until 1831 that the first official school, called an academy, was established in Auburn village.

Pontiac started hers in 1833 in a two-story building—the lower part used for church services and the upper for classrooms.

The third school in independence Township was held in a small building built in 1837 and known as "pinery schoolhouse."

SLAB SEATS

Here, according to one of its pupils, "the writing desks were on the outside of the room against the wall, with seats made of slabs, flat side up, to face the desks."

"The pupil had to sit down on the bench and swing himself halfway around."

In the year 1836, the Pontiac's public school system was organized by John D. Marshall. Says Avery's history Oakland County! "But it was not for 10 or 12 years that the people began to pay much attention to the character of the buildings in which their children were instructed."

According to Sarah McCracken's account of the school in 1837, public education was not too attractive.

"There was a little schoolhouse... a mile... from our dwelling. As the school was usually open during the winter season, we could not attend."

'GREATER VALUE'

"I have often thought, however, that the instruction received at the hands of my father and mother was of greater value than that which we would have been likely to receive at school."

Evidently this was true because records show that the public lost interest in schools until, in 1847, a group of Pontiac citizens filed an official grievance.

The protest condemned public apathy and mentioned that "even" Rochester and Romeo schools were more advanced.

The protest brought action. In 1845, a high school had been started in the basement of the "Mills Building."

'OLD UNION'

This structure, housing a school financed by tuition and called the "Old Union," was purchased in 1849. It's first graduation class was recorded in 1867 and it was replaced in 1871 by a school built on the site of the current Pontiac Central High School.

Education, now firmly established as a thing of importance and quality, continued to thrive during the turn of the century. By 1888 there were 1,347 pupils enrolled in Pontiac.

World War I brought the county's first real involvement in a national conflict. Citizens led by those in Pontiac, established food production programs, canning, nursing, bandage-rolling and book-lending programs.

The "modern" outlook produced by world involvement is shown in the establishment of a junior college in 1918, a school savings system in 1923 and a county normal school in 1924.

VOCATIONAL COURSES

The first vocational course, one in auto mechanics, was started in 1922.

County schools established a visiting nurse program in 1926 and a "helping teacher plan" for rural schools in 1929.

The enrollment of Pontiac students in the 20s was 5,738 in 1921 and 12,210 in 1929.

But the 1930's were to be the real test for Oakland County schools. A financial crisis, exemplified by the Pontiac situation, was to try the county system and leave its red mark for many years.

In 1940, teachers' salaries would still be less than in 1923.

The story, as told in headlines, starts in January, 1933 when school payrolls were cut 29 per cent.

BANK HOLIDAY

During the imposed bank holiday, teachers were permitted to withdraw 5 per cent of any cash-on-hand and 20 per cent of their February Pay.

By March, the superintendent of schools, James H. Harris, was saying: "The banking situation has precipitated an emergency so acute as to threaten continuance of schools unless relief is found within a few weeks."

In May, $120,000 in scrip was issued to pay teachers. Other citizens could use it to pay delinquent school taxes.

The situation was relieved but only to the point of bare survival. The continuing problems can be seen in a sampling of news stories.

CLOSE EARLY

● In March 1935 — "Lack of money will compel the closing of Pontiac schools on May 24."

● February 1937 — "State Aid Vital to Schools Here."

● May 1937 — "Pontiac teachers will receive 1937-38 contracts... drawn on a monthly basis."

● A sign of improvement in July 1937 — "Teachers Get Raise in Salary."

● September 1938 — "Consider Double Classes Next Semester at PHS."

● As war stirred Europe, the situation eased as in March 1939 "Public Apathy Forces Board to End Meetings."

SLOW RECOVERY

During the war years, with their inevitable economic boom, schools and finances crept slowly back to "normalcy."

Headlines in the 40s and 50s reveal construction projects, new courses, and general improvement. Slowly the financial scar was healed.

● August, 1963 — "Despite the delay in the spreading of city and school taxes the Pontiac school district is in good shape with a cash balance of $470,000."

She'll Fit Self Into College

By JEANMARIE ELKINS

For the girl beginning her freshman year at college, there awaits a new life. One important consideration is a new wardrobe, to conform with her role in an adult environment.

A little unsure of herself as she looks toward the future, she wants to look "right" but still maintain her own personal fashion tastes.

Michigan State University will see Janice Marie Vallancourt, 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Vallancourt of 165 Baldwin, Orion Township, enrolled as a freshman this fall.

A slender 5'8", she cannot purchase clothing to fit her properly. It will often be too short, the waist will always be too big, and the outfit will be too short-waisted.

To solve this problem Janice makes the majority of her own clothing and is making many of her things for college.

FOR 10 YEARS

Sewing for 10 years, Janice first became interested in the project when she entered 4-H where she learned her skill. None of the rest of her family sews.

Mrs. Vallancourt says she never understands what Janice is doing when she begins with a pattern until she sees the finished product.

In 4-H Janice has won a dress ribbon for her talents and has earned trips to Maine and Traverse City.

The two-piece bathing suits have been a boon to Janice, who made three this year. One was created from an old pair of slacks.

MADE PROM DRESS

Janice also made her prom formal and a prom formal for a girl friend. She remembers sewing her girl friend into the gown as her date was waiting.

Her own prom formal featured a beaded top, on which she did all the work.

For any seamstress, material is the prime consideration. Janice likes to look around.

"Boy, does she look around! Don't ever go with her," Janice's mother warned.

MAGAZINE IDEAS

Magazines provide many ideas for ensembles. Janice buys a size 12 pattern, makes the ensemble to the pattern and then adjusts the ensemble to fit her

Changing the original pattern with her own innovations is commonplace. For her interview Janice wore a dark cotton print sheath dress. The skirt and blouse had come from different patterns.

To brighten the plain top Janice made two rows of large ruffles which ran in a large V shape from shoulders to waistline.

Knitting is another hobby with Janice. She has knitted a number

PERFECT WARDROBE

Not only will Janice enter college this fall with a wardrobe of perfectly fitted clothing, but she will also have the satisfaction of knowing she won't run into her dresses or skirts on campus. No one will have duplicates of HER ensembles.

AMERICAN GIRL — Janice Manning, 16, achieves the all-America look in the Sears Perryteen jumper and its contrasting blouse. The outfits from Sears downtown store come in a choice of three styles in blends of gold, brown or dark green. Janice, a junior at Pontiac Northern High School, lives at 157 W. Columbia. Her bicycle is a Schwinn 10-speed from Scarlett's Bicycle Shop downtown.

Case of Flying Time

By JODY HEADLEE

Searching for the line of demarcation between too much and not enough homework particularly on the secondary level resembles Sir Galahad's quest for the Holy Grail.

The only difference being Sir Galahad finally realized his goal and educators have little or no hope of achieving theirs. There are too many intangibles involved.

Teachers have to take into consideration the subject content, the aptitude and ability of the student, the number of home duties each is required to perform, the pupil's general health, whether or not the student works outside the home, how long it takes the individual to settle down and actually get to the homework at hand, and on, and on and on.

On one hand, there is the conscientious youngster who is racking up a startling 75-hour work week while labor leaders are seeking a reduction from the currently acceptable adult schedule of 40 hours a week.

Up at 6 a.m., the boy or girl completes his or her toilet by 7 a.m. and heads for the bus stop or the hike to school.

ONE CLASS DAY

Classes begin at approximately 8 a.m., running through to 2:30 or 3 p.m., when it's time to retrace steps home.

The class day is a variable set by the individual school systems and schools.

A snack and a change of clothes usually finds the young people back at their books by 4 p.m.

Studies occupy their time until the "supper's ready" call is issued around 6 p.m. For the young ladies and many of the boys as soon as their forks are laid down, it's clean-up and dish-washing hour.

Withstanding the lure of the telephone and television, the dedicated resume study until bed curfew.

NEED NINE HOURS

According to "Advancing in Health" published by Scott Foresman and Company, secondary students need from nine to 10 hours sleep every night. This means the 6 a.m. risers must be in bed and lights out by 9 p.m.

In this schedule no time has been set aside for the teenager to enjoy a hobby, a sport or just vegetate.

It's no wonder these young people often issue the complaint to concerned parents, "There's no time for me!"

On the opposite end of the scale is the pupil whose parents berate the school system because their Johnny or Jane has "too much time on his or her hands."

These youngsters have a comparable day until after school hours. Then the schedule varies vastly.

Either the teachers have not issued enough homework, the work has been done during school hours, the individual is exceptionally talented scholastically or too frequently the student chooses to ignore the assignments.

Since young people like to hand together, the idle are apt to cluster at the corner hang-out, in front of the television or just drape over the furniture, phone in hand, for endless hours of conversation.

Many parents blame this juvenile idleness on teachers and school administrations.

"Schools aren't what they used to be," they claim. "Kids have too much spare time. Teachers ought to give more homework."

A vicious cycle, and one in which educators sometimes feel like squirrels in a cage.

MANY ANSWERS

"There are as many answers," said Dr. William J. Emery, superintendent of the Oakland Schools Board of Education, "as there are students."

"It's up to the teacher to determine the rate at which a class must travel. Some groups should be assigned only class work where the teacher will be present to guide and answer questions immediately."

"Others will benefit from home assignments. Only the teacher can choose."

With the advent of fall, good teachers everywhere will again buckle on their armor as they thread their way between verbal thrusts of "too much" and "not enough," never giving up hope that someday there will be an answer.

Average Teacher Has Four Years' College Training

More than four years of college figure in the training of the average school teacher among the 1.5 million on the job in the nation's elementary and secondary schools, according to a study made by the Ford Foundation.

Most of these teachers have a Bachelor of Arts degree and many have a master's degree which requires a fifth year of college work.

But comparatively few — though the number seems to be growing — have a doctorate degree.

An average of 100,000 teachers enter the profession each year, nowhere near enough to fill the ever increasing need for more of them.

Longest Day for Little Boy Was Last Fall

Last fall a little boy woke up very early one morning.

As he looked around his room his heart was pounding and his stomach kind of jittery.

It was THE day.

There were many clues. First, he was horribly clean. Second, a clean shirt and a new pair of pants were laid out on a chair. And he could just see a new pair of stiff, sturdy shoes.

He closed his eyes again so his mother could "wake him up."

IN THE CAR

All too fast, he was dressed and fed and sitting in the front seat of the car with his hands folded. His mother kept smiling at him while he concentrated on being brave.

The car started slowing down and he could see all the big kids on their way to school. Boy! Were they lucky, he'd give anything to be 9 years old.

Then the car pulled to a stop and he pretended he was having trouble opening the door. It didn't work.

His mother took him by the hand and led him toward the dark brick building that looked just like an old pirate's cave.

HUGE HALL

The wide doors were open and the hall inside was huge. He almost gave himself away when he pulled back on his mother's hand.

"Go ahead, son," said his mother and because there was a little girl looking at him he sort of had to.

The room was big with lots of windows and plants and bulletin boards, but it was most of all it was full of eyes. Blue and green and brown — hundreds of them seemed to be staring at him.

Someone took his coat and directed him to sit down with the "others."

WITHOUT A TEAR

Without a tear, he did it. Without a tear, he watched his mother leave.

With only a small tear, he turned to listen to the lady behind the great big desk.

Then, as the day went on, the eyes disappeared. They became parts of faces that belonged to friends.

He got fingerprint on his clean shirt and scuffed his shoes getting the storybook for his teacher.

But when his father asked, "How was your first day in kindergarten?" He replied, "Nothin' to it."

BOUNCING BELLE — Julie Smith of 134 Houghton, Milford, obviously intends to return to Avalyn Johnson Elementary School's fourth grade with a bang. She is wearing a one-piece cotton kit dress by Cinderella from the Tel-Huron Childrens Shop at Tel-Huron Shopping Center.

PRETTY PAIR—These two 10th graders from Milford High School will return this fall in high fashion from the R & B Shops at Tel-Huron Shopping Center. Sandy Sloven of 134 Houghton, Milford, wears a Villager corduroy jumper that can be worn without its haberdashery cotton shirt with its leaf and acorn print. Linda Meisel of 1065 Garner Road in Milford wears a low-belted Lassie Junior Camel coat.

County Teen-Agers Speak on Politics

Area teen-agers were given a chance recently to speak out on American government.

Their answers covered such varied topics as Kennedy, Johnson, Goldwater, civil rights, voting, elections, and county welfare.

Seventeen-year-old Bernie Tate of 47 North Ardmore chose to talk about civil rights.

"I think everybody should have equal rights but I also think a person who has a business should be able to turn away whom he wants," Bernie stated.

Sharon Brady, 17, of 172 East Iroquois felt differently about civil rights. She confined her views on the subject to the local level.

HAVEN'T CHANCES

"The colored kids in Pontiac haven't had the chances other kids have had. I think this would be a better place if they were given those chances."

Aid to Dependent Children (ADC) policies fell under the scrutiny of 16-year-old Linda Jackson of 44 Seminoles.

"I think the public welfare program is unfair and disorganized," declared Linda.

"Some people take money and just spend it on anything. Special cases should be investigated before they (welfare officials) hand money over to just anyone."

'TOTALLY UNFAIR'

"There are some families on ADC who spend their money on the children and the children don't receive anything. In a case like this children should be taken from the parents. It is totally unfair for the taxpayers."

Both voting and civil rights were on the mind of Linda's 17-year-old sister Janet.

"When it comes to voting in a presidential election, if the age were to be lowered I wouldn't vote for Goldwater. He's too quick to tamper with the national welfare."

"As far as being a community leader — he's probably capable but as far as civil rights, the United Nations; and foreign affairs are concerned, he has made some very childish statements and decisions."

'RESTING ON LAURELS'

Janet also thought that we were "resting on our laurels and keeping peace with other countries. As long as he (Goldwater) wants to pull out of the UN our prestige abroad will be lowered."

An uninformed population was the major concern of 16-year-old Howard Warren of 100 Henry Clay. "I wish they would inform us more. For instance like the South Viet Nam situation."

Johnson was the favorite presidential candidate of both John Carie, 19, of 3512 Pontiac Lake Road and Jim McLeer, 18, of 35 Auburn.

"Johnson — he's the man for President. I don't know why the other guys even want to run," said Carie.

JOHNSON — PRESIDENT

"I think Johnson will become President. Goldwater is too hasty. He'd have us in a war if he was President very long. He's too loud-mouthed," McLeer added.

Suzanne Vallencourt, 14, of 165 Baldwin, Orion Township, gave her impressions on the Presidents.

"To tell you the truth," she said, "I don't pay as much attention as when Kennedy was alive. But when I hear about Johnson I perk up and listen and I look up to him."

"But Kennedy was really everything. Everyone looked up to him."

'THEY'RE LOUD'

About the recent political conventions Suzanne said, "All I know is they're loud. I thought it was kind of sad when Scranton shifted his followers to Goldwater."

Tom Bartholomew, 18, of 2770 Middlebelt, West Bloomfield Township, expounded on elections, voting, and Goldwater.

"I feel the elections are unfair. Too many choices are put before the people on election day. They can't make a fair decision."

"Many people don't know anything about county officials, etc. The public can't be informed on all of these different people. This is out of the question."

VOTING AGE

Tom's attitude about lowering the voting age was this: "I don't feel the voting age should be lowered to 18 because many of my 18-year-old counterparts couldn't make a sensible decision."

"I don't like the position the United States takes in world situations. They aren't aggressive enough."

"When it comes to voting in a presidential election, if the age were to be lowered I wouldn't vote for Goldwater. He's too quick to tamper with the national welfare."

"As far as being a community leader — he's probably capable but as far as civil rights, the United Nations; and foreign affairs are concerned, he has made some very childish statements and decisions."

Janet also thought that we were "resting on our laurels and keeping peace with other countries. As long as he (Goldwater) wants to pull out of the UN our prestige abroad will be lowered."

Fashion at MSU

If you're worried about clothes to bring to Michigan State University — forget it. You'll see anything and everything on campus, so be brave. Bring your cotton clothes, if it's like last year, you'll be wearing them through October.

Michigan weather can really be crazy, so you've got to be prepared for anything!

Whatever you wear at home, even those sloppy levis, will be all right for school. Be sure you bring slacks, bermudas, and other sportswear, you'll have plenty of chance to wear them.

Comfortable shoes are a must. Instead of having a few feet to walk between classes, you'll have several hundred yards to cover, and if your feet begin to hurt, you'll almost wish you had someone to carry you!

Although you will see some pretty kooky attire in the classrooms, the 'good old' dress of skirts, blouses, sweaters and jumpers for the girls, and slacks and sport shirts for the guys is still predominate.

BRING UMBRELLA
Bring your umbrella and raincoat, too. Showers never announce themselves and you can get pretty uncomfortable sitting through a football game if the rains come and you aren't prepared.

Winters come hard and long to the MSU campus, so make sure you're ready for them. High boots, long coats, crazy hats, and furry mittens are worn by everybody. The wind whistles, howls, and literally blows you to your destination.

The spring and fall are as warm and sunny as the winter is cold. When the temperatures are soaring, there's nothing nicer than spending the afternoon at State's large, intramural pool. At this time of year Ft. Lauderdale and Daytona Beach have nothing on Michigan State! Studies hold the spotlight during the week, but when Friday rolls around, everybody is ready to take a break. Parties, movies, sports, campus activities, dances and anything else you can think of will be going on.

Color Reveals Two Faces

Color for back-to-school is two-faced... one side of the palette is as bright and bold as a child's brush stroke from a new box of paints — features primary reds, blues, yellows and greens.

The other is inky dark with such unlikely tones as burgundy, bottle green, ebony brown and navy being used importantly with white in sportswear.

Surprise of the season is very-grown-up "black and white" in a multitude of little girl dresses and separates, most often spiked with a neon bright.

You'll never be bored for lack of something to do! When making the final decision as to what clothes will be traveling to MSU with you, don't forget, everything you own may be old, but it will be new to everybody at school. It's not necessary to buy a new wardrobe for school.

In winter when you wear coats all the time anyway, you could wear the same outfit to classes for a whole week and nobody would notice.

Girls, be extra conservative in what you bring. Dorm rooms aren't too big and with too much stuff you'd have the same trouble as someone trying to squeeze an elephant into a Volkswagen!

Be brave and experiment with your clothes if you have a hankering to, you'll see anything and everything on campus.

BE VERSATILE

If you will be buying some new clothes, get ones that can be worn lots of different ways so you won't get quite so tired of them.

Just bring the clothes that you liked and wore at home, if you didn't like that orange and purple sweater last month, you probably won't like it any better next month!

REAL SWINGER—Paula Hamilton, '61, of 2551 Auburn, is ready for action in this outfit from the Lion Store at Miracle Mile. Returning to the sixth grade at Auburn Heights School, she'll be all set in an A-line jumper-by Love and a white pique blouse.

A Report on U. of M. Styles

A walk across the diag—the University of Michigan's central campus path—reveals the students to be interested in diverse, comfortable and casual back-to-school fashions.

Whether you are a "tweed," "beat" or "in-between" you'll always have many comparitios on campus.

"The 'beats' will model their perennial, year-round favorites—white levis, sandals and jerseys.

Their friends, the "tweeds," will be seen in ultra-conservative "typical collegian" dress.

A-line skirts are favorites for the girls and khaki trousers, for the boys. Both are worn with loafers without socks.

The "in-betweens" will wear a little of each, mixing the two styles.

ALL MINGLE

Even though everyone seems to dress differently, all will be found mingling in the Michigan Union Grill, the League Snack-bar and the Little Shop, wearing their universally essential "shades" or sunglasses.

The "beats," "tweeds" and "in-betweens" will probably attend the same concerts at Hill Auditorium and the same plays at Lydia Mendelsohn Theater too.

The "tweeds" will switch to afternoon dresses and dark suits while the "beats" will stick to their perennially favorite outfits.

Rarely does anyone wear formal attire. Dressy campus occasions are practically nonexistent. Dresses that can either be played up or down will suit any occasion. The fellows only need a dark suit for most social affairs. Sport jackets will take the young gent most places.

SOCIAL GATHERINGS

Most social gatherings are only as dressy as the students wish them to be. The majority seem to prefer comfort over fashion so casual sweaters, skirts and slacks get the most wear.

Classroom wear is the same with the only exception being that girls may wear slacks or knee socks with their skirts to class in cool weather.

Ann Arbor is known for its excessive number of rainstorms so both girls and boys should come prepared with black umbrellas and green, yellow or red slickers. High boots help keep the girls' feet dry in those South University and State Street puddles.

Since the campus is spread throughout the town, the amount of walking the students do from the various housing units—the Hill, Quads, fraternities, sororities and apartments—alleviates most interest in high-style fashions. Comfort is of the essence.

Along with the comfort goes the casualness of the campus. Whether it's dancing to the Beatles, going to class or a movie students seem to prefer informal attire.

Getting D in Shopping?

Mom, have you been flunking out on Back-to-School Shoe Shopping with a big "D" — for dazed, dissatisfied, and dead tired?

With a little homework, advises Shoe Fashion Service of Leather Industries of America, you can convert that failing mark into an "A" — for alert, agreeable, and assured that your child is well shod for fall. Here is how to make the grade:

Choose your shoe retailer with care. If you've received satisfactory service at one particular shop, continue to do your trading there.

In the store, check shoe materials. According to foot specialists, an all-leather shoe is best for growing feet. Because it is soft and supple, leather molds to the shape of the foot, giving a firm support without binding.

In addition, circulation of air is permitted through leather's millions of tiny pores, keeping active feet dry and comfortable in all temperatures.

SOLES 'GIVE'

Flexible leather soles "give" with each step, yet are tough enough to take up the shock of running on concrete pavements.

Check the fit. Have the salesman measure each foot while it is bearing the youngster's full weight — then fit the larger foot.

You can check by pressing the toe of the shoe until you feel the tip of the big toe and the second toe. There should be three-quarters of an inch between the toe and the shoe.

The widest part of the foot should be at the widest part of the shoe. As the child walks about the store, check to see that the shoes do not gap at the sides nor ride up and down at the heel.

CHECK CONSTRUCTION

Check shoe construction. Make sure the counter of the shoe is firm enough to keep its shape, but not so hard that it will rub blisters on the heel.

Also, slip your hand inside the shoe to see if there are any rough seams that could cause discomfort. A leather lining is preferable because it's smooth and easy on the foot and gives longer wear.

The Rio Grande River was established as the United States-Mexican boundary by the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo in 1848.

Mannish Look 'Out' but Fabrics Are 'In'

The strictly mannish look is out, but men's wear fabrics such as peerless meltons, herringbones and hard- finish tweeds.

Tiny School Can Create 'Big Man'

Young people who have their hearts set on going to a "big" college or university, where admission is becoming more difficult each year, have good reason to take a second look at some of the smaller institutions.

Many of the "big names" listed in Who's Who also are listed as graduates of "small" colleges.

A sampling starts with the best known of all, the President of the United States Lyndon B. Johnson graduated from Southwest Texas State Teachers College.

His Secretary of State, Dean Rusk, was educated at Davidson College in North Carolina, a private Presbyterian college.

From the business world comes the name of Roger N. Blough; Chairman of the Board of U.S. Steel, who was graduated from Susquehanna University in New York State, and later studied law at Yale.

CONRAD HILTON

Another from this area is Conrad Hilton, president of the chain of hotels that bears his name.

He attended St. Michael's College in Santa Fe, N.M., and later the state school of mines.

Famed Civil War historian Bruce Catton is an Oberlin (Ohio) College man.

In the realm of sports, Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick was a student at De Pauw University in Greencastle, Pa.

Males Can Do Wash Without Mom's Help

Laundry isn't strictly a woman's job. Ask the Army, Navy, Marines. Since males take to machinery and precision-products, why not to a washer and dryer?

Male patronage at self-service laundries is enormous. Look around next time you visit your college laundry center. Take a hint, back-to-schoolers — give Mom a hand!

Student Aid by 3 Groups

Three non-profit organizations offer students help in selecting their college and getting admitted. For information about their admissions services write:

Robert L. Lincoln, executive director, College Admissions Assistance Center, 41 East 65th St., New York 21, N.Y.

Catholic College Admission and Information Center, Box 4582, Brookland Station, Washington, D.C.

PIPE DREAMS — Classmates have nothing to do with Kathy Jones' thoughts right now. But when she starts as a freshman at Michigan State University she will check in with style. Her black and white wool jumper with empress waist and her white crepe blouse are made by Carol Brent and available at Montgomery Wards at the Pontiac Mall. The 18-year-old lives at 2688 Lincolnshire.

Adults Create Party Rules

In self-defense and in desperation, parents are banding together to establish codes of teen behavior. These social codes are worked out under the joint auspices of the P.T.A., the Church, the "Y," and other mutually respected community services. Codes cover matters of dress, dating, drinking, driving, telephone behavior and parties. Here are a few of the recommendations:

• All teen-age parties should be attended by responsible adults. No party-crashing allowed. Control of numbers and selectivity is essential. If a party is crashed, don't hesitate to call the law. Young people should return home from the function direct unless otherwise specifically authorized by a parent.

• Life can be easier both for parents and adolescents when they know what is expected of them. Establishing definite rules of conduct is considered a great step forward in good parent-teen relationship.

Patch Saves Knees

Skinned knees are an "occupational" hazard of the active gradeschool boy. To save wear and tear on both knees and clothing, try sewing a latex foam rubber patch inside the knees of slacks or jeans.

College Tests Are Examined

The College Entrance Board Examinations taken by high school juniors and seniors to help get admitted to college are ... Fill in the blank with either: A. Useless, B. Necessary, C. Nervewracking, D. Misused, E. Overemphasized.

That is a multiple choice question high school juniors and seniors may never get to answer, but it is one that is prominent in the minds of both students and educators as some 1.5 million college applicants prepare for the tests this year.

For most students the tests with their multiple choice questions are "B. Necessary." Many students will spend hours cramming and will seek intensive coaching to get a high score.

Neither coaching nor cramming will make much difference, however, according to studies of the test results by the College Entrance Examination Board, which is constantly revising and improving the exams.

What may help the student is taking the test a second or third time and that is what many of them do in an effort to get a score that will favorably influence the admission officer at the college of their choice.

Scores from the tests are used in varying ways by colleges, depending on the emphasis each feels the tests deserve in relation to their knowledge of the student.

EMPHASIS VARIES

But while the emphasis varies, the use of the test scores has grown by leaps and bounds until more than 800 colleges now require them of their applicants.

The tests consist chiefly of a three-hour scholastic aptitude test composed of multiple choice questions concerning verbal and mathematical abilities and achievement tests lasting from one to three hours.

Stripes Go to School

Roman stripes, stretch stripes, banner stripes, satin stripes banded in white against contrast darks — classic "back-to-school" stripes and plaids (even the clans) are newest on textured cotton grounds.

WELL, HELLO! — This umbrella handle seems a little surprised to see these smart children's shoes up at his level. Appropriately enough, they are called Jumping Jacks and are sold by the Shoe Box at Tel-Huron Shopping Center.

Nine of every 10 women marry, according to the Federal Commission on the Status of Women.

The number of general practitioner physicians in the nation has declined from 112,000 in the 1930's to 58,000 today.

"NICEST PEOPLE" — Perched on two Honda bikes are (from left) Patricia Platz, 19, 205 Exmoore and Clayton Woodward, 28 Pearl, Oxford. Patricia's bike is a Honda 50 with speeds up to 45 miles per hour; Clayton's is a Honda 90 with speeds up to 60 m.p.h. Both are from Anderson Sales and Service. Patricia, a junior at Michigan State University, is wearing an outfit from Peggy's at Miracle Mile. Her deep pile suede cloth jacket is coordinated with a check wool pleated skirt and orion turtleneck shell. All are made by Miss Pat. Clayton is wearing black trousers by Levi in the new "diapers" fabric crease. His sweater by Furilan is a V line. Fullover in antique gold with grey and charcoal. Both are available at Monarch Men's Wear at Miracle Mile. He is a student at Pontiac Business Institute.

Adolescents in a Traffic Jam

The much discussed "population explosion" plus national "affluence" combine to prompt school and police authorities to re-emphasize the responsibility of motorists for the safety of all the children in traffic as a new school term approaches.

The "population explosion" has carried school enrollments to astronomical heights at all levels of education.

This means that more youngsters than ever before will be on the streets and highways.

The national affluence has vastly increased car ownership bringing many new and comparatively inexperienced drivers into the scene.

No small portion of these new drivers are "school children" in their own right — teenagers who have acquired licenses to drive one of the family cars, and many who have acquired cars of their own.

MORE NEW SCHOOLS

Not only will there be more school children in the streets and more cars in traffic; many children and many motorists will be traversing comparatively unfamiliar routes to newly constructed school buildings.

This in itself adds complexity to the problem of traffic safety for school children.

Special "School's Open — Drive Carefully" signs will, of course, amplify the permanently erected "School Zone" signs which frequently proclaim lower speed limits and other safety measures as a matter of law.

Special "Crossing Guards" will be stationed at strategic intersections to supplement police department school traffic assignments.

SCHOOL PATROLS

School safety patrols, made up of white belted youngsters from among the ranks of the school children themselves, will be at work on the safe side of the curb in greater numbers than ever.

Instruction in traffic safety, especially for the very young, will continue to be an important part of their classroom work. So will high school classes in safe driving for teenagers.

Nevertheless, without cooperation of the individual motorist, the full measure of traffic safety cannot be assured the children, say the authorities.

No matter how carefully guarded, the sheer thoughtless impetuosity of little children all too frequently creates the emergency that must be met by the car driver.

EXTRA CARE

Motorists, in addition to being aware of the need for extra care and the need for precise observance of posted regulations and speed limits as the school season approaches, take the responsibility for maintaining their cars in perfect mechanical condition, so that they may cope with any sudden emergency.

Motorists are advised to take their cars to the service station for a complete check-up with special attention to brakes, tires, windshield wipers, lights, and responsiveness of the motor to any requirement.

The forewarned motorist operating a perfectly functioning car makes an important contribution to the safety of school children in traffic.

Spanking Now Legal

The Georgia House of Representatives has approved a bill authorizing teachers to spank pupils and exempting them from prosecution by parents.

'Beware!' Kids Back on Streets

Only 15 years ago, the teenager's use of the family auto was somewhat limited.

If the boy or girl lived a long distance from school, or lived in an area with inclement weather he was allowed use of the family car for school transportation.

But most teenagers used shoe-leather for their means of transportation. The automobile was an adult means of transportation. Few teenagers actually owned their own cars.

But in the last few years the young adult has acquired with his own fashions, his own music and his own literature, his own car.

If there is any doubt of this, look around. You'll find many sports cars parked by the old high school and jammed into what was once the school tennis court.

AUTO ADS

Not only have the new models been designed for the teen-ager, but auto ads have been edited with a teen-age vocabulary.

You will find words such as "superior," "foreign," "jet," "swinger," "no hedge," "stripped down and hottest" in recently issued sports-car ads.

All these words are associated with the adolescent vocabulary, for the adolescent is a major market.

With this in mind, parents should make their best efforts to drive home the need for safe driving.

SAFE CAR

Parents should also emphasize that a good safe driver must have a safe automobile.

A safety check of an auto is a necessity and should include checking to see that the brakes, steering, tires, shock absorbers, transmission, power plant, exhaust system, light, horn and windshield wipers respond adequately to every demand.

Parents must not assume that their children qualify as safe drivers without full knowledge of the car's performance limitations in critical situations.

Today many teen-agers own their own cars and must, in every respect, qualify as safe drivers.

A NECESSITY

Parents are obligated to help them in every respect. Today, care and competence in operating an automobile is a necessity.

Approve School Bonds

Voters approved $2 billion in school bond issues this past year, for a new high, reports the U.S. Office of Education.

Approximately 438,000 retail business failures are reported each year in the nation.

Washington, D.C., the only major city in the U.S. where whites are a minority, has a population 57 per cent nonwhite, according to the Population Reference Bureau.

Men's Wear on Campuses

Local weather conditions, campus fads and personal fancies combine to dictate trends in young men's apparel at colleges and universities across the country, according to the American Institute of Men's and Boys' Wear.

NORTHEAST

On the Ivy League campuses in the Northeast, a look reminiscent of the "twisted twenties" is growing.

The bevy cheviot, tweed or shetland suit is being added to wardrobe of shakiness, worsted flannels and neat herringbones.

SOUTH

Slimmed-down quilted ski parkas, giant plaid wool shirts and jackets and loden coats go to classes with button-down shirts, and flannel or chino slacks or wheat jeans.

College students of the "old South" have been called the best dressed in the country. Influenced by milder weather, they lean toward the natural shoulder and classic traditional in their dress.

Many of these men own dinner clothes for both winter and summer.

MIDWEST

Sprawling campuses, late fall sports activities and some real cold weather add up to fashion with an emphasis on warmth at most Midwestern colleges.

Add to this, the hot days of early fall and late spring, and you find the need for a carefully selected wardrobe that ranges from featherweight sportcoats to the warmest dressy outerwear.

The vested suit is still strong here, as are lighter and brighter tweeds and fad hats.

WEST

President Johnson's celebrated Western hat is on the heads of many college men in the Southwest, along with wheat jeans and classic Western boots, but overshadowing the local influences is the traditional natural shoulder look.

Local trends include: at least one vested suit, madras, seersucker or other lightweight sport jacket and iridescent or plaid raincoats in shorter lengths at Texas, SMU and Baylor.

WEST COAST

Natural shoulder styling and the highlights of contemporary California fashion shape the vital look of West Coast college fashions.

The black mohair suit, self-supporting cuffless slacks, the "shirt jac" and the short sleeve sweater are all a part of the California influence.

FEET MEET—Beckers Shoes at the Pontiac Mall present three new styles for fall. Filippo Verde makes a flamenco boot with Cuban heels. The same company provides a chukka loafer with high rise front. Rand makes the hand-sewn "Imperial" calfskin loafer.

Classic Coats, Suits Provide Coverage for Students in Fall

Classic coats and suits, subtly detailed and lightly-fitted provide the new fall '64 coverage for the back-to-school crowd.

Uncluttered, well-mannered and flattering to young figures, these favorites will go everywhere with best-dressed co-eds.

Now Shoes Can Outlast Even Kids

For once, Junior will be worn out before his shoes when he's wearing the leather play-shoes recently developed by the tanning and footwear industries.

This new type of leather footwear is especially designed to stand up to a youngster's most punishing treatment for as long as the shoe fits — and longer.

These new playshoes, reports Shoe Fashion Service of Leather Industries of America, evolved from the tough leather "work shoes" made for men doing rugged outdoor jobs — lumbermen, construction workers, ranchers.

The leather, either smooth glove leather or brushed "split" leather, goes through special processing so that the finish will be rough and ready in use, yet soft and mellow in appearance.

This same work-shoe leather, pliant and durable, is now used for "play-proof" footwear for Junior adventurers.

VARIETY OF STYLES

The shoes span a variety of styles, from moccasins and oxfords to boots and chukkas laced by eyelid or hook.

Special features include linings of smooth leather or shearing (wool on leather), overlay flaps for extra protection and back straps.

Whether Junior is running, jumping, scuffling, kicking or climbing, the new playshoes resist abrasion, moisture, stones and other sharp objects, plus the heavy wear-and-tear incurred during a boy's enthusiastic and sustained physical exertion.

At the same time, this leather footwear is good-looking enough to go to class.

STRIDING IN — Swinging a Silton Brothers quilted jacket, Tom Rigdon, 3430 Aquinas Rochester, heads back to West Junior High School where he will be in the 9th grade. The jacket and the rest of the outfit can be found at the Lion Store at Miracle Mile. His cactus color slacks are by "Royal Gem" and feature slant fabric. His "Jantzen" sweater is also cactus green.

like the trench coats Marlene Dietrich wore in the '30s.

NEW CLASSIC

The new classic include lines that move closer to the waistline, seam treatment, interesting pockets — "4" shaped, double-entry and patch pockets.

Collars are tailored and notched or small and snug — but they are there. Collarless "channelisms" are rarely seen for the back-to-school set.

Fur collars are sensibly detachable so that the coat becomes more wearable; the collar a welcome companion for other fashions.

Pile-lined coats — campus favorites — are styled with more detail this fall. Buttons, braid and pockets — sometimes a fur collar — perk them up so that they are fair weather as well as stormy weather friends.

LESS TEXTURE

Fabrics for school ageters follow those used for adults, but are flatter and less textured. Mellons, chincillas, gabardines, doekins and less hairy tweeds are popular.

Fake-fur coats continue their popularity, especially in simulations of otter and beaver, both of which are newer than leopard.

Corduroy and blends of corduroy with wool, cotton or nylon are popular because they are generally water repellent.

Colors for young girls' wool coats are warm and deep in tone. All such shades as camel, light brown and orange are excellent as well as red and carnation.

LEADING GREENS

Leading greens this fall are forest and loden. Light navy, teal and dark turquoise continue favorites among the blues.

In summary — styles, fabrics and color choices are characterized by the well-bred, somewhat classic look.

Youngsters love them because they allow for gay little touches in amusing accessories, or in unusual color-combined prints perfect for jumpers or ponchos. Yet they remain sturdy and practical for day-to-day wear.

Surely the 1964 "look" for school can do much to give a child a sense of her own dignity and help her want to maintain the prized fashion-look. In so doing, mothers can expect neatness as a surprise bonus!

Make an Allowance Educational Device

To make an allowance an educational device, which it should be... the child should be given a set amount regularly. They should be allowed to spend it as they wish. However, parents need to make it clear just what expenses will be up to the child. For example, many parents do not buy ice cream or give extra money for movies, etc., but tell the child that if they want these things, they must pay for them.

Sherry Simpson of 2861 Glenbrook, Keego Harbor, a freshman at Western University, poses on a bench in her winter outfit. She is wearing a Billie Jo paddle knit brown pullover "V" neck sweater and a white "Albert Original" blouse. Her green and brown plaid skirt is made by Pandora and her handsewn Italian loafers, by Tempo. Jody Rock, 21, of 4906 Bloomfield, Birmingham is a senior at the University of Michigan. She is wearing a white tennis sweater by Billie Jo. Underneath is a navy turtleneck pullover by Pandora. At the end of her navy wool stretch pants by Mr. Raphael are boots by Tempo.

At World's Fair Library of the Future

One of the most popular attractions at the New York World's Fair is the Library in the United States exhibit, which features a Univac 449 Real-Time computer.

Not only is this multi-million dollar machine fascinating to observe, it also provides a look into the computerized library of the future.

The computer answers questions on all the exhibits at the pavilion and can print an essay of 700 words in only four seconds!

It also provides annotated reading lists and bibliographies, and can retrieve information with incredible speed.

All this can be accomplished at a relatively low cost once computer networks begin to be employed by libraries and educational institutions, according to UNIVAC experts.

The UNIVAC 449 is connected to compatible equipment in Manhattan, Long Island, Denver, Phoenix, Los Angeles and San Francisco; thus the same information that is available to people in these cities.

The day may not be far off when the knowledge contained in the world's greatest libraries will be available to students thousands of miles away, through the use of computers.

Public High School Started in Boston, 1821

The first public high school established in the U.S. was founded in 1821 in Boston, Massachusetts. It was called the English Classical School, later changed to English High School.

By 1860, 300 high schools were already established in this country as part of the public school system.

Clothes Come Cleaner Using the Old Way

In the days of Queen Victoria washable fabrics were all hand-laundried and through much work stayed looking beautiful for years.

But today's coeds find their dorm-laundered cottons and synthetics, for all their wondrous advantages begin looking drab after less than 10 months wear.

For many girls the culprit seems to be faulty machine-laundering.

Heavens knows we don't want to go back to boiling clothes over a cauldron, but we have to simulate some of the care exercised by yesteryear's expert laundress.

The first lesson for machine-laundering suggested by an appliance company is sorting. White nylon clothes should be washed by themselves because nylon is a color scavenger.

BRIGHT COLORS

Bright colored clothes need washing in cold water, yet white cottons stay brightest after a hot water bath.

Lace-trimmed lingerie, nylon stockings, and other "delicates" can go through the washer, too, but first place them in a nylon bag so they won't become tangled and subjected to undue strain.

The secret of eliminating ironing time is to remove clothes from the dryer before it stops tumbling and hang your wash up on hangers.

Glasses Help Children

It is estimated that more than 3,000,000 children in the U.S. have some defect in their hearing. A majority of these same children have some eyesight problems. Glasses with hearing aids "invisibly" attached are now available for children.

Signs Indicate Time for Check-Up on Eyes

About four million young Americans will be entering school for the first time this year.

The child with impaired vision may have learning difficulties as a result of classroom failures.

The Better Vision Institute (BVI) has recommended a for all pre-school children, even as young as three.

The BVI points out that a defect in vision which could have been easily remedied, in an early test may develop into a serious problem.

By observing the child's eyes, noting suspicious things in his behavior and watching his developmental activities closely, an alert parent may be able to detect eye trouble that can be corrected long before the child must learn to read.

Signs of trouble that merit further investigation include red, encrusted or swollen eyelids with recurring sties; inflamed and watery eyes. Frowning and squinting when looking at distant objects, should be taken by parents as trouble signs.

Little Money is the Reason

A U.S. Department of Agriculture survey shows that a major reason most farm youths are not going to college is that they can't afford it.

USDA surveyed 160,000 high school seniors and found 47 per cent didn't intend to go on to college.

About four of every 10 said they didn't have the money to finance further education.

Fifteen per cent of American farm income, amounting to $5.6 billion annually, is derived from exports.

Suggestions on Applying to College of Your Choice

To be successful in getting into the college of their choice, high school students should be willing to explore the merits of a greater number of colleges and get as much assistance as possible in making their selection.

Once the student has decided where he would like to get his college education, he should be prepared to apply as early as admissions procedures permit.

This is the advice of Robert L. Lincoln, executive director of the Council of Higher Educational Institutions in New York City, a non-profit organization that sponsors the College Admissions Assistance Center at E. 65th St., N.Y.C.

The Admissions Center works

Very Early Libraries

Citing the importance of education in ancient days, The Encyclopedia Americana notes that the larger cities of Babylon all had libraries. The one at Tello (c. 2700 B.C.) contained 32,000 books.

Business Aids Schools

More and more private funds are going into the support of education, as business takes the lead in pointing up the need for young people to take over the tasks of tomorrow.

with students and colleges throughout the country and during the past four years has helped some 14,000 applicants. Lincoln feels that the idea of going to college should be considered far in advance of the actual college application.

START EARLY

In fact, he suggests that students (and their parents) should consider if they want to go to college when they are in the 7th grade.

Thinking about college at that stage, he says, helps the student to work toward goals. Then, gradually, he can define his ambitions more clearly as he approaches his graduation from high school.

Mistakes most commonly made by college applicants, Lincoln said, are overrating themselves academically and refusing to accept competent advice.

Parents, he cautioned, should be careful not to push their offspring beyond their academic capacity because of personal ambitions, past or present.

ROLE OF PARENT

The role of the parent is that of "financial underwriter" and adviser, opening doors for new experiences.

The college applicant, Mr. Lincoln advised, must be ready to use his own initiative to find out where he wants to apply.

Tests Help Pick Careers for Students

Because the choice of a career is so important, it is one that should be made intelligently, with a great deal of time, thought and effort on the part of students, well in advance of their entry into the business or professional world, well before graduation.

Unfortunately, too often students choose a profession for the wrong reason . . . sometimes they are forced into a particular field through parental pressure.

Often such persons prove a success in that field, but they can never be completely happy because their pattern of interest are suited to other work.

Sometimes a student's ambitions will exceed his abilities and he will either fail or only be a moderate success in his profession, whereas he might have done better in a less taxing field.

Often personality, rather than intelligence is the guideline to the right career.

Thus a person who is a successful salesman may be a total failure as a sales manager simply because his personality is not suited to that type of work.

TESTS GUIDE

Fortunately, today students can avail themselves of psychological and aptitude tests such as those given at vocational guidance centers to learn for which occupation they are best suited.

Time Out for Music

Time for instrumental music instruction is provided by nearly 70 per cent of elementary schools reporting in a recent survey.

FOR FOOTWORK—Todd's Shoes of West Huron offers three answers to the college man's shoe problem. On top of the Remington portable deluxe typewriter is a wrap-around wingtip with a double sole. Next is a plain toe cordovan and supporting them all is a handwoven moccasin. All are "Phil-Bates" by Bates. WKC sells the typewriter.

Food Particle Responsible

NEW YORK (UPI)—A food particle caught in the windpipe may be a cause of a chronic cough or wheeze in an elderly person.

This cause, instead of a respiratory ailment, is suggested by Dr. Marvin S. Harris, of Los Angeles, Calif.

In a report in Medical World News, a publication for physicians, Dr. Harris suggested that the irritation results from an impairment of the swallowing process that is caused by degenerative disease.

We emphasize the importance of health, poise, proper dress and grooming, correct speech and manners.

OUR EMPLOYMENT SERVICE

Each student, from the day of entrance, is considered a potential candidate for employment in the type of position indicated by the course selected. Every effort is made through individual counsel, as well as through group instruction, to acquaint the student with things that are fundamental in business ethics and personal etiquette, and to help cultivate those habits of industry and sincerity of purpose which successful employment demands. Leading firms recognize the abilities of young men and women trained at the Institute. We enjoy an impressive record of success in placing our graduates in highly satisfactory positions.

Membership in: The United Business Association, National Business Education Association, North Central Business Education Association, Michigan Business School Association, Pontiac Area Chamber of Commerce.

Pontiac Business Institute invites YOU to pay our school a personal visit. Inspect our facilities, talk with our faculty, review our record of accomplishment.

Satisfy yourself that we can provide the higher training and additional experience that will give the industrious young man or woman a special advantage in the career world of business.

Hootenanny! Anyone Can Sing Along

Organize a hootenanny club for extra-curricular fun this year! It's easy and a good way to spend leisure time when you put away serious textbook studies.

You don't have to be a professional musician. There is a wealth of beginner's instruction books available on how to play a guitar. Consult your school's music teacher or your local music store dealer. The public library may have some helpful information, too.

All you need to begin is one guitar. You don't even have to play it well either! If you strum a few chords, your hootenanny group will pick it up from there. Pretty soon you'll be leading a community sing with everyone wanting to get into the act.

Here are some basic steps to follow in organizing a hootenanny.

• Make a list of friends and schoolmates who are interested in participating, either as musicians, singers or both.

• Ask your school's music teacher to help you, and perhaps even serve as sponsor.

VISIT STORE

• Visit your local music store, and see what instruction materials, song books, and instruments are available. Folk guitars, like those made by Kay, sell for less than $30.

• Arrange an organizational meeting of your group. The more you have, the better. Plan a hootenanny session for one day after school, or on a Saturday.

Instruments which can be used in a hootenanny, says Kay, include: guitars, banjos, ukuleles, mandolins, and harmonicas. If you find people who play these instruments, recruit them for your hootenanny immediately. No brass instruments are required.

Once your group has been formed, and you find how much fun you can have, you may want to stage a hootenanny for a local veteran's hospital, home for the aged, or underprivileged children. You can even put on a show for a women's club, church group and charge admission. Proceeds can be donated to a local charity.

Shoes Can Do All Child Does

For pupils, playmates and party-goers, the latest junior footwear is styled to meet the demands of all the roles a child plays while busy back-to-school schedules are pursued.

Stylish Sallys and Susies will attend classes in a variety of colorful leather slippers, boot shoes and zingy oxfords. The slipper may be a simple skimmer—with or without strap—or perhaps the classic moccasin or one of its style variations in soft glove or waxy leather.

Dashing, as well as delightfully easy on the growing foot, are supple leather oxfords dressed up with stitching or trim in a different color.

Ghillie ties are fresh fashion accents on many oxfords and, of course, the leather saddle oxford is always in attendance—set on its neat, lightweight leather sole.

The boot-shoe, now a back-to-school staple, sashays through classes in bright smooth and subtly shaded brushed leather.

KINDS OF TRIM

Trim may consist of buckles, tassels, buttons, fringe or use of contrasting leather or color.

For more rugged outdoor activity, the full-fledged boot is available in the complete rundown of leather textures. Laces are simple and uncluttered.

As party-goer or party-thrower, the young miss may wear perky shell pumps of polished smooth, patent, embossed or printed leather.

Detailing on dress shoes is kept simple—a strap, small cut-outs, or a neat bow.

FOR BOYS

For boys going back to school, the new rugged boot styles can take punishment above and beyond the call of shoe duty—in school and out.

A wide choice of leather textures makes the selection easy and enjoyable. Especially popular this fall is the Western "LEB" boot in natural leather shades, hand-tooled and often showing touches of bright color.

Another favorite with the blackboard brigade is the sturdy leather oxford, either of one leather or combining two textures.

Reddish and black-flecked brown shades are most popular, and saddle oxfords usually sport dark-on-dark tones.

Add Comfort to Room

Add comfort and convenience to dormitory rooms by bringing along a lamp and a foam rubber backed throw rug or two.

RUGGED STUDY — No matter how tough the work a student will always look 'smooth' in this Van Cord cardigan sweater with red and white stripes on a black background. Contemplating his senior year at Pontiac Northern High School is John Farstedt, 17, of 715 Third. The sweater is from K-mart.

Reevaluate Habits of Health and Safety

With the advent of school, parents should re-evaluate safety and health habits in the home. Though they are rightfully stressed in school, these very important subjects should not be the concern of the classroom, alone.

A few extra minutes spent in advising children in a casual, non-alarming manner at home may lead to the prevention of innumerable accidents and sicknesses.

By acquainting children with the ordinary, common-sense aspects of fire prevention, safety in sports, and first aid, parents not only can instill awareness of problems, but develop intelligent attitudes and practices concerning these subjects, to use for a lifetime.

There are many occasions throughout the year that call attention dramatically to realistic fire safety problems. . . . Halloween hazards, Christmas trees and fireworks. A screaming fire engine siren or a destructive fire in the neighborhood can lead the parent and child to an examination of fire prevention problems on a personal level.

Though many accidents involve fire, parents should go to considerable effort in teaching their children safety in sports. Teaching them to swim properly may take only a few weeks, but it is also a matter of life and death.

A NECESSITY

It is one thing every parent should insist on his child learning. A swimming pool is one of the most dangerous places a child can be.

A direct or immediate approach should be considered not only in teaching safety in sports, but in teaching children safety in the home.

Children should be shown combustible materials and warned of their flammable nature. Simple home safety rules should be given too, such as "Use flashlights to find gas leaks, disconnect appliances not in use, never run wiring under rugs, and don't use worn electric cords."

Emphasize the danger of standing on chairs, running out in the street without first looking, care with barbed wire and innumerable other ordinary domestic situations.

A list of rules for the home can be hung in an accessible place. Maybe a bulletin board organized by the children and exhibited in their room could help to make the family safety conscious.

ICE BOXES

Of course, parents should be constantly aware of leaving poisonous or dangerous articles within a child's reach. In rural areas, especially, death lurks in old, discarded ice-boxes.

With the opening of the school year, health and safety should be major factors in family life. Carelessness in duty, unawareness of potential dangers can cause a multitude of problems.

Parents must realize that tragedy doesn't always happen in some other family. "It can happen here." By developing healthy attitudes and practices, parents can contribute greatly to their children's well-being.

'Fashion With Function' Motto for Back to School

"Fashion with function" is the motto of back-to-college girls. It's intended for a look of completeness, and a look planned to provide many looks, through the skillful switching of wardrobe basics.

The sloppy look has long disappeared from the campus picture, and the well-groomed, smoothly put-together look is in, points out Wilbur Daniels, executive secretary of the National Board of the Coat and Suit Industry.

A solid-tone suit with plaid top coat, a suit with matching long coat, a sleeveless shell top with skirt and jacket or any variety of suits combined with coats, skirts with jackets and tops provide the college girl with the essentials for neat, attractive grooming, in class, around campus.

Add to these, a few simple, fashionable dresses — some cotton-blend shirtwaists for the warm days of early fall, some easy A-line and shift shapes.

Many of the latter are versatile in styling — ready to go to class by day with the accompaniment of shirts or sweaters, effective for informal evenings on their own.

Completing the picture are leisure-time companions such as pants and bermudas with shirts, sweaters, jerseys, jackets.

Classics appear prominently on the scene, but this is a feminine view of classicism, with silhouettes slightly fitted and indented at the waistline.

Balmacaans, chesterfields, trench coats and reeters are among the up-dated fall coat classics. Shoulders are soft and often raglan; buttons perk up and soften the line.

Fur collars, often seen, are generally detachable, so that both the coat and the collar can do double duty.

PLEATS FLUTTER

Pleats on skirts flutter appealingly, and are used in many different interpretations. Conversely, other skirts are slim and easy.

Fabrics highlight subdued surfaces, in keeping with the softer, more subtle look. Tweeds are varicolored — mixtures, diagonals, monotonous.

Coverts and cavalry twills

look new, and always back to campus favorites, are very much in the picture.

Women on Campus

Number of women enrolled in colleges and universities edged upward to 1,739,000 this past year from 1,604,000 last year.

Notes Hit Iron Curtain

(Gilbert Youth Service) The sound of folk music, the beat of jazz of every dimension, and the resulting reverberations among teen audiences will soon pierce the Iron Curtain, to the resulting delight of millions of teen-agers in Communist countries.

Microphone in hand, Stanley K. Smialowski, executive producer for Radio Free Europe, has been touring through audiences at Newport, R.I., Milwaukee, Wis., and other points where jazz and folk fans congregate and recording both the concerts and the spontaneous reaction of spectators.

Like a candid camera photographer, Smialowski's mike usually surprises the teen-agers.

Sometimes they're scared just a little bit, but then their reaction is happiness because teen-agers behind the Iron Curtain are interested. They are glad to be part of the bridge between West and East.

The producer, who speaks five languages, says they are interested indeed. They are very well informed about the latest jazz stars, he says, and crave more music.

10 MILLION

So out of his musical wanderings, Smialowski will cut excerpts from all the programs, and make them into a tape which will be beamed to the five Iron Curtain countries — an eager audience of 10 million.

Place for Gifted Child

By MADELEINE DOEREN
Carolus Linnaeus, famed Swedish botanist, once said, "A professor can never better distinguish himself in his work than by encouraging a clever pupil, for the true discoverers are among them, as comets amongst the stars."

Too often, the gifted child is taken for granted—allowed to make out on his own. Unusual capabilities are often stifled by the limitations of overcrowded classrooms in a school program geared to the average child.

Economic factors may prevent giving the gifted youngster his academic due which may mean attending a school which encourages speculative thinking.

To George A. Roeper, headmaster of the City and Country School of Bloomfield Hills, was offered for a capsule comment of his concept of the gifted child.

"Creative ability and speculative thinking should be regarded as a PART of intelligence," he said. The kind of child we want has an I.Q. of 130 and above. This is not sufficient criterion, however, to identify the child's creative potential."

PARENTS' BURDEN

The burden is increasingly on the parents. It is up to them to create the climate, intellectual, spiritual and otherwise, in which the child can flourish.

Whatever the trend of his creativity, parents can help by providing creative materials, the right tools, plus time and energy.

Parents, guardians or foster parents of gifted children may do well to ask themselves these questions:

- Do you know where to draw the line on "encouraging" so that it does not become distorted into "pushing"?
- Especially with a pre-

Youth Fitness Concern of All

Parents Must Share in the Responsibility

Physical fitness of youth becomes an ever mounting concern as education makes increasing demands on their energy during an era that calls on them for less and less exercise of their bodies.

Most obvious example is the amount of walking the children are called upon to do.

Grade schoolers are bused to class or are taken in car pools. This is a far cry from the days when dad or granddad trudged miles.

Schools everywhere have adopted vigorous programs aimed at keeping the children fit through formal exercise and play.

But parents, too, have a responsibility here, even though many schools provide for physical examinations of their pupils.

BEST TIME—NOW

What better time for parents to insist upon a check-up by the family physician than during the few weeks before classes resume for the season.

Similarly, though many schools offer eye examinations, parents no doubt would be happier to have dad's or mother's eye doctors check on their young and prescribe for their needs.

Such an examination is a must for those who already are wearing glasses. A new prescription may be necessary.

Third, but no less important to the youngsters, is the dental examination which is preventative in nature.

STILL WORTHWHILE

The dentist may do nothing more than clean the youngster's teeth; but this still makes it worthwhile.

Time lost from classroom work because of any preventable ailments, is time that is difficult to retrieve. Examinations can help prevent this.

Among other suggestions for parents, to help make sure the youngsters are fit, is to prescribe chores involving physical exertion on a regular daily schedule.

Recommended is the substitution of the bicycle for the car pool in every instance where sufficient self reliance has been developed in the youngster to assure safety in traffic. Cycling is almost as good a physical exercise as is walking.

vicious child, there is often a tendency on the part of the parents to talk down to or at him instead of with him or her.

GROW WITH HIM

- Does the challenge of being his parent or guardian, and his knowledge of it, show in your enthusiasm toward his achievements?

- If you are not "gifted" naturally, try to stretch your own intellectual horizons to keep pace with him as he develops.

- Parents must require the discipline of study from the child who is bored with average classmates and insists that "he doesn't even have to crack a book" to get good marks.
- The teachers will love you for this as they take a very dim view of the nonconformist.

- Rearranging his ugly head along about the third year in high school is the slumping-off of grades for the brilliant student who fears being considered a "square" or of "not belonging to the crowd."

Do encourage your child to pace his own energies productively, to be a self-starter, to learn to depend on his own resources? Does he respect the abilities and viewpoints of others?

Our own state has facilities for the gifted child at City and Country School of Bloomfield Hills, Cranbrook School and Interlochen, for those seeking a career in music, dance or theater.

Machines Take Seats in Modern Classrooms

Today's teacher has a nodding acquaintance with machines that talk or teach or take roll.

Many students are now accustomed to television sets, overhead projectors and electronic equipment used in language laboratories.

But modern technology—already so widely applied for use in the business world—is taking a direction in the field of education that may mean much more to students, teachers and school administrators.

So reports the National Education Association in a quick survey of the trends.

Machines are being developed for classroom work that not only talk to students, but answer their questions as well. They guide students through subject materials and even assign homework.

MORE ATTENTION

To the teacher all this means not only the ability to handle more students, it also means more attention to students on an individual basis.

Richard Harsh, of the Los Angeles County Superintendent's office, writes in a monograph that rapid advance of data processing "has hastened the advent of automated education."

His monograph predicts that universities and secondary schools will be linked by data processing machines and other methods. Some systems already are in operation in 1,000 school districts.

They make way for students to work in their own cubicles (called carrels) and to instruct themselves with the aid of a mechanical tutor linked to a nationwide system.

Use of such systems, it is said, can make it possible for teachers to call on regional centers for help on special problems of instruction—thus, in effect, adding specialist teachers by long-distance.

Writing on "The Role of the Computer in Future Instructional Systems," published by NEA's Department of Audio Visual Instruction, Donald D. Bushnell says the computer is more than a teaching machine; that it can integrate t.v. films, slides, lectures and textbooks.

Allen Kent of the University of Pittsburgh says that information retrieval systems, now being developed rapidly, are extending the traditional library tools of scholarship.

Coeds Discover Washing Job Can Be Drab

Appliance Company Suggests Sorting Can Bring Better Results

In the days of Queen Victoria washable fabrics were all hand-laundered and through much work stayed looking beautiful for years.

But today's coeds find that their dorm-laundered cottons and synthetics, for all their wondrous advantages begin looking drab after less than 10 months' wear.

For many girls the culprit seems to be faulty machine-laundering.

Heavens knows we don't want to go back to boiling clothes over a cauldron, but we have to simulate some of the care exercised by yesterday's expert laundress.

The first lesson for machine-laundering suggested by an appliance company is sorting. White nylon clothes should be washed by themselves because nylon is a color scavenger.

BRIGHT COLORS

Bright colored clothes need washing in cold water, yet white cottons stay brightest after a hot water bath.

Lace-trimmed lingerie, nylon stockings, and other "delicates" can go through the washer, too, but first place them in a nylon bag so they won't become tangled and subjected to undue strain.

The secret of eliminating ironing time is to remove clothes from the dryer before it stops tumbling and hang your wash up on hangers.

Fall Fashions Diversified

Schoolrooms this fall will be literally bursting with fashion excitement and variety. Designs of children's clothes have produced an array of diversified looks and shapes in a and interesting fabrics.

There is a whole new fashion vocabulary to define them... unlike the past few semesters when schoolwear was stark-raving simple and "skimmer, spars or waistless" were the only fashion words in the phrasebook.

First and foremost, the word waistline has been reinstated and is being used in all the best places. Almost everything has a waistline now... although it's often higher or lower than where nature intended it, or else skimmed over lightly with just a slight indentation at the middle.

The American Origin of 'Toe the Mark'

The expression "toe the mark" stems from the early crack in the flooring as days of our country when few they waited their turn to read. school children wore shoes and says an expert.

Elementary Is Not So Elementary

Elementary schools have played, and continue to play, an important role as a level for experimentation in education.

As a result, elementary education, its curriculum, teaching techniques, and classroom procedures today bear little resemblance to those of yesterday.

Pontiac has played an aggressive role in the bettering of elementary education and the well-being of the individual student.

The key word in this march of progress in elementary education has been "the individual."

Most changes that have been made, and found to be successful, are involved in the attempt to understand thoroughly the individual student, his abilities, and his potentials, and then to put these abilities and potentials to work in each individual case.

A MAJOR TREND

One of the major trends in this area is the "non graded" school.

Whereas the elementary school has usually been organized on the first through sixth grade system, the non graded school would be divided into two groups — first through third grades and fourth through sixth grades.

This would allow a single teacher to be with one group of children for a three-year period. It would give the teacher an opportunity to know each student and his individual abilities.

The non graded school also gives the teacher more of an opportunity to work with a child's parents in understanding the child and directing his progress.

In the non graded school the progress of the student is determined by the parents and the teacher together, and not by letter grades on a report card.

Fast achievers are given material suited to their level of comprehension. Slower students are given work suited to their individual level.

This example of a non graded school is typical of many changes taking place in elementary education.

The attempt is being made to get away from the idea of the student as simply a member of a large group. Each child is to be looked at as an individual, different in his own abilities and potentials.

Most important to the success of understanding the individual student is the cooperation between parents and teachers. Through parent-teacher groups this cooperation in the last few years has been increased.

TREND TO PROGRESS

Since the trend today is to allow children to progress as rapidly as they can, elementary curriculum is not rigid.

When a teacher feels that a child has successfully completed one level of learning, he is permitted to continue on a higher level, regardless of his particular grade status.

Teaching techniques are also changing. The age-old method of memorizing facts and procedures as a means of learning is being replaced by the teaching of concepts.

An elementary student in math no longer learns that in order to divide fractions "you invert and multiply." Certainly, he does use this procedure when working with fractions, but only as a result of understanding the basic concept of numbers.

SAME TECHNIQUE

This same technique is used in the teaching of social sciences on the elementary level. For instance, the memorization of dates is of little value outside the context of history in which they occurred.

As a result of this emphasis on understanding concepts, children are not bound exclusively to material put before them, and are freer to experiment with what they have learned.

As the quantity of knowledge grows educational institutions will continue to change in a never-ending search for the best teaching methods possible.

Textures in Classroom

Diagonals, twills, ottomans, in bright, bold primary colors classic in Peerless woollens become newly important in deeply textured Galey & Lord or Moore'sville cottons.

To Lowly Freshman

College Library Old Friend

When the lordly senior leaves high school and begins his college year, he finds that his whole academic life has changed.

Courses have unfamiliar names, professors lecture him from their notes with a deceptively casual air, expecting him to get the information all down, digest it and "return" it at exam-time.

Then he discovers with a sigh of relief that the college library, except for being larger, possibly with a larger staff, has changed little. It is still "old reliable."

The library's main service to the high school is of course supplying reference books to supplement course-lectures, to provide background materials, and for sheer enjoyment, to search for things that count—and help the student keep his marks high.

Highest Paid Teachers

Teachers of law drew the highest salaries of all teachers in American institutions of higher education during 1963-64 according to a U.S. Office of Education study with a median salary of $12,400.

Who Are Dropouts?

How can you assume that your child will successfully graduate from the 12th grade without dropping out or flunking out?

If recent drop-out and flunk-out studies are any indication, a student in the 5th grade has only 2 out of 3 chances to get to high school and get his diploma.

A harsh reality is the fact that children now are leaving school at an appalling rate of one million per year, thereby cutting off their chance for a better job, cutting their lifetime income potential severely and increasing the threat of unemployment.

Because of these facts every attention should be given to a stronger drop-out prevention program.

As compared to a drop-out's typical flunk - out student's causes are varied and complex; his academic failure can be turned into a pattern that is frequent and apparent.

FAMILY PRESSURE

Though a flunk-out student's ability to succeed is rated as higher, more and more flunk-out students fail to survive because of immaturity, family pressure and social distractions.

But simple cases of flunk-outs due to a physical or financial failure are few.

There are "warning signals" a parent should be alert to, from early grades on up.

A typical drop-out student is retarded in his reading, and math studies.

He is so far behind in these two subjects, no matter how hard he may try, he can't keep up with high school assignments. He might also be failing one or more subjects.

Therefore, by the time he reaches the age of 16, his academic problems mount, and he sees no easy escape from this constant failure but to drop-out of school.

His basic problem didn't develop just at the high school level. It should have been apparent in his 2nd or 3rd grades. If reading or arithmetic difficulties occur, the sooner you get help for him, the less chance of his dropping out of school later.

A drop-out isn't inclined toward athletics or extra-curricular affairs.

SOCIAL PROBLEM

Socially, too, he feels inadequate.

He lacks the interest which so readily ties young people to their school and classmates with loyalty and enthusiasm.

Thus dwindle the chances of earning success and status for himself.

There's much parents can do to develop youngsters' social ties and athletic skills, encourage hobbies and other interests while he is still in elementary school.

A dad who passes a football to his son for backyard fun and a mom who greets his friends with a cheerful smile and cookies and milk, are already smoothing the path into high school completion.

NO REAL GOAL

A drop-out has no real goal or purpose in life. He sees no connection between his future life and what he's doing in school. He has no real idea of what he wants out of life except perhaps a car and pocket money.

There is much a parent can do to help his child look toward the future, without falling into the trap of dictating his future.

From the 1st grade on, parents should encourage by pointing his achievements at school and how they can affect his future success.

A drop - out's parents, as a rule, don't fully realize the value of an education, for a large majority failed to complete high school themselves; many go only as far as the 6th grade.

DON'T CARE

Typically, a child's attendance at school or what he accomplishes there is frequently considered unimportant.

There is much you, as a responsible parent, can do to help your youngster understand the value of an education.

• Send him off fresh and neat-looking every morning so he can feel at ease with his contemporaries.

• Encourage him to talk about his school day; participate in school-parent groups; treat his accomplishments and his problems with attentiveness.

DISCUSS JOBS

• Discuss types of jobs and how he should best prepare for them; insist that his home work be done before watching TV or engaging in other recreation.

A 14-inch cube of gold weighs approximately a ton. A small 35 pound gold brick is worth about $18,000 at current rates.

The College Population Explosion

College classrooms will teem with talent and energy this fall as the largest, the best prepared, the most dedicated, and the most carefully screened student body in history moves onto the campus.

This year's record upsurge in college enrollments, which was predictable, grows out of the peak year of the post war "baby boom."

More than 2,500,000 of these war babies graduated from secondary schools this past year. Nearly half of them, according to some estimates, have sought to continue their education.

The nation's colleges have strained their facilities to make way for a total enrollment that may exceed 5,000,000. Further expansion is a must with enrollments expected to reach 7,000,000 by 1970.

The impact of all this growth has created a tremendously complex job of screening for college admission staffs.

HIGH INCREASE

Applications for places in best known tax supported schools increased as much as 40 per cent in some instances, with room for seldom more than 12 per cent more freshmen. The Ivy League schools report a comparable situation.

Because dad was a grad no longer carries the weight it used to in granting admission, surveys of the changing nature of the student bodies have indicated.

Capacity for learning appears to be the rigid major test. Thus the big name schools are able to "pick and choose."

But the picture, though complex, is by no means hopeless. College admission centers continue to be of major assistance in finding the right school for the right students.

RAPID GROWTH

Rapid growth of the Junior colleges - referred to in many areas as "Community" or "Commuters" colleges - also is helping.

Specializing for the most part in educating high school grads for careers in specific areas of technology, most also offer fine academic courses from which students may transfer to regular four-year colleges.

Impact of the growth has brought a revival of the "college panic" for some, but this does not mean the determined student can't find a way to continue his education.

It does, however, highlight important challenges for parents and students alike.

PREPARE EARLY

Preparation for college, many educators now contend, begins long before graduation from high school; actually in the 7th grade.

Here is where parents must bear down in impressing the children with the need for applying themselves to the continuing studies.

During the last two years of high school, the responsibility shifts more and more to the student himself.

He must acquire a good record, learn to adjust to the opportunities that lie ahead.

FINANCE PROBLEM

Then comes the problem of financing the college years. Costs here have been moving up at the rate of 5 per cent a year annually for many years as compared with an estimated annual 1 per cent increase in the cost of living.

Parents of the very young are wisely setting up savings accounts or taking out insurance programs, to finance the education of their children.

Meanwhile for the current crop, in addition to a multiplicity of scholarships and aid programs, loans are available direct from colleges, through federal and state governments.

Even local banks stand ready to make educational loans available.

BEST INVESTMENT

A growing acceptance of the principle that the best investment the nation can make is in the education of its youth, is the shining hope for the ambitious students.

More and more legislation is being presented to provide for the additional facilities, for the vastly greater number of teachers that will be needed.

Tell Children About Safety

U. S. Board Urges Accident Prevention

According to the National Safety Council, every minute of every day a motor vehicle accident results in death or injury to someone.

Excessive speed is involved in one out of every three fatal automobile accidents.

First-hand experience is in itself a most potent learning technique. But experiencing a motor vehicle accident is rather an extreme way to learn the rules!

No one wants to be caught "dead to rights." By observing highway safety rules, many accidents can be avoided.

"Fair play" appeals to a child. If traffic rules are explained as a natural evolution of fair play, your youngster will respect the rules more readily.

TEACH CHILDREN

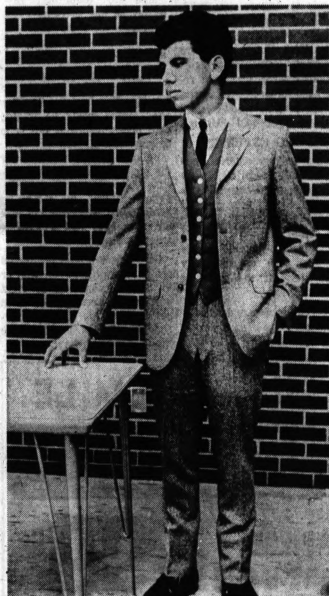

If children are taught to cross streets at the proper places and with full consideration of traffic fewer accidents would happen. Children should also be taught to face traffic and walk on the left side of a road when there is no sidewalk. If a few safety rules are observed, accidents can be reduced in your community.

Jumpers in Profusion

Jumpers are in greater profusion than ever... made in flannels, stripes, plaids, glens or district checks of cotton or wool-like Burlington synthetic blends... in swingy stretched-out shapes preoccupied with hipbands and pleats.

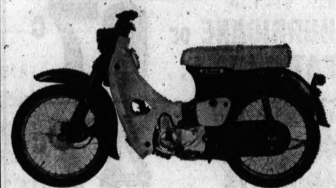

Freeze Ahead of Time

School lunches take very little time to prepare in the morning if you freeze a week's supply of sandwiches and desserts ahead of time.

UNDERCOVER—That's what Ron Shelton of 1085 Berkley will be with sweatshirt and jacket, with wool body and leather sleeves, from S. C. Rogers. The store will custom design school names or insignia for both items. Ron will be a senior at Pontiac Central High School this year.

SHADES OF LEARNING — Susan Anderson, 12, 187 Gateway looks up from her book a moment as she prepares to return to the eighth grade at Isaac Crary School. She is wearing an outfit from the J. C. Penney company at Miracle Mile Shopping Center. The multi-color plaid jumper is topped by a white nylon turtle-neck shell.

Prepare for New Term

Getting an early start on preparing youth to go back to learning for the new term, now just a few weeks away, suddenly becomes a much more pressing concern of everyone this year, than ever before.

Significant changes in the educational environment at all age levels, changes that have developed over the past several years of the nation's "learning explosion," make this imperative.

Foremost among these is the "enrollment explosion," especially as it concerns the teen-agers. In addition to the 40,000,000 children returning to elementary and secondary schools, more than 5,000,000 — the largest number in history — will be taxing the facilities of colleges and universities.

This year's college growth is no surprise. It is spurred by the children born during the peak year of the post-war baby boom. They have come of college age, and they are pressing for places in institutions of higher learning. More will be clamoring for higher education next year and the year after, but this is the peak year.

This pressure has a tendency to sweep back down the line through the high school group and actually into elementary grades. The reason should be clear.

IMPORTANCE GREAT

The importance of education was never greater. Opportunity for the inadequately educated diminishes at an accelerating pace.

Wise parents start thinking about preparing their children for college no later than the seventh grade, conscious of the fact that when the time comes there may be room only for the specially qualified, despite efforts to expand facilities.

Other changes now clearly apparent concern the greater knowledgeability — call it sophistication if you want — of the very young, and the discovery of their increased capacities for learning.

Now they tackle math and foreign languages from the beginning in many schools.

MATURE FAST

The accelerating maturity of teen-agers, many of whom are beginning to see and understand the portents of the future, is another factor.

By finding jobs swarms of them have not only earned money for themselves but also have learned something about the importance of education to their futures.

The contribution untrained teen-agers are making to unemployment statistics is a straw in the wind.

times called Community — colleges indicate efforts at helping in this area.

EXPECT MORE

All this means that parents may expect greater self-sufficiency from these youngsters, as preparations for return to classes proceed.

Other changes, in many areas, concern dislocation of grade schoolers from familiar areas as completion of new schools, and social changes, require that they transfer from the familiar to new and unfamiliar buildings.

There also are changes of educational methods. Experiments that have proved successful are moved into operation in more schools.

Many of these put a greater responsibility for learning on the student himself.

CAUSE CHANGE

Such changes are compounded from automation, electronics and newly developed study methods that extend the ability of teachers to devote their skills to more students.

Thus the atmosphere for study in the home becomes more and more important; so does the physical health of all learners, as does the availability of school supplies, and finally the suitability of their classrooms for their careers in the classroom.

These are the aspects of preparation for the new school and college terms that can and should be disposed of before the term opens.

There may not be as much time left between now and then as you may think.

START EARLIER

Schools and colleges, generally speaking, start their new term earlier than they used to. "Those in charge of the nation's educational facilities — the school and college administrator, the teachers, and the maintenance crews — already are at work preparing classrooms to receive students.

Beware of Committing Crimes Without Knowing Own Fault

(GILBERT YOUTH SERVICE)

On the theory that young people may violate laws without being aware they've committed any crime, a district court judge in Nassau County, New York, has prepared a booklet titled "The Innocent Offender."

The author, Judge Jerome M. Lasky, outlines the penalties for such things as "staring or participating in a fight," except in self-defense (penalty up to 10 years in prison).

Other are: Hazing in high school or college, imprisonment up to one year, but much more if there's permanent disfigurement, or carrying a sling shot in your pocket (which classifies you as a juvenile delinquent).

These are New York laws, and definition of crime and its accompanying punishment naturally differs across the country. But the idea that juveniles and adults, for that matter, often don't know the law is scarcely debatable.

"Our society imposes many rules of conduct which we expect our young citizens to obey," the judge points out.

ABSORB STANDARDS

"Much time and attention is devoted to instructing these people in academic subjects, but we apparently expect them to learn the standards of conduct imposed by society by some vague process of absorption.

"You can be arrested and punished for doing something that you did not know to be a crime."

He also counsels juveniles who have been arrested not to plead guilty in fear and haste, and without proper advice.

"A young citizen who has been arrested for violating the law is a frightened person," he says. "He is not equipped to determine his own guilt or innocence."

SEEK ADVICE

"In every case he should contact his parents and seek competent legal advice. No young citizen should ever plead guilty to any violation of law—even a traffic offense—merely as a matter of convenience.

"The serious consequences of a conviction—and a plea as a conviction—make it worth the time and effort required to prove your innocence."

cence if you are in fact innocent."

Some of the laws that Judge Lasky says are frequently violated by youngsters principally because they are unaware of their existence, or the serious effect that an arrest can have on their lives, include:

Standing on sidewalks or a street corner, and making insulting remarks about passing pedestrians, or annoying such pedestrians. (May be classed as disorderly conduct.)

"Prank" such as putting balls on public highways, turning in false fire alarms, or cutting a book in a library. (This is malicious mischief.) Riding as a passenger in a car which has been taken without the owner's permission. (You can be arrested even though you had nothing to do with the theft itself.)

Long-Range Education by Computer

One of the most popular attractions at the New York World's Fair is the Library in the United States exhibit, which features a Univac 490 Real-Time computer.

Not only is this multi-million dollar machine fascinating to observe, it also provides a look into the computerized library of the future.

The computer answers questions on all the exhibits in the pavilion and can print an essay of 700 words in only four seconds.

It also provides annotated reading lists and bibliographies, and can retrieve information with incredible speed.

All this can be accomplished at a relatively low cost once computer networks begin to be employed by libraries and educational institutions, according to Univac experts.

Money for Schools

School money proposals have generally passed and passed substantially in Oakland County the last two years.

Despite Hazel Park's thumping rejection July 26 of a $1.425,000 bond issue and a 3 mill operating increase, the recent trend has been to approve both bond and millage propositions.

Two other districts have bucked the trend. Troy voters have vetoed a 4 mill increase three times in the past two years. The margin of defeat in the June 8 election was 47 votes.

The South Lyon district has rejected a bond proposal to build a high school four times; however, an 8.5 mill increase passed by a three-to-one majority in April.

Two-to-one victories have been more common in operating money proposals than narrow margins. Birmingham passed an increased levy of 5.6 mills and renewed a 1.9 mill tax in June on a two-to-one vote.

OTHER APPROVALS

Smaller increases and renewals of expiring taxes have earned similar stamps of voter approval in Avondale, Berkley, Clarendonville, Clawson, Huron Valley, Novi, Rochester, Royal Oak and Waterford.

Clarkston voters achieved a rare five-to-one endorsement of a five mill increase in June, 1963.

Operating millage proposals have received what administrators term "slim" to "substantial" approval in Farmington, Oxford, Southfield, Walled Lake, Waterford, and West Bloomfield.

Bonds to finance new buildings have been approved by two-to-one majorities in Bloomfield Hills, Holly, Lamphre and Novi. Narrower margins of victory were scored in recent bond proposals in Farmington, Southfield, Waterford and West Bloomfield districts.

'OPERATING EXPENSE'

Money to pay salaries, buy instructional materials, pay utility bills and insurance came in the "operating expense" category. In Oakland County a little more than half of the $75 million spent to operate schools last year was approximately 42 per cent of the operating costs last year.

Federal grants and money from other sources contributed a little over a million and a half dollars toward the total operating bill.

The amount of state money granted to school districts varies according to the wealth of the individual district. In Bloomfield Hills, three-quarters of the school revenue is raised locally.

In districts with lower tax bases, such as Madison Heights, Avondale and Clarkston only a third of the operating expenses can be paid from local money.

DISTRICT ALLOCATION

School districts are allocated a portion of 15 mills, which, according to state law, may be levied without voter approval.

Voted increases for operation are in effect in all but North Oxford of the 30 school districts in the County. Two thirds of the districts are paying at least as much taxes in voted increases as the schools get in allocated money.

Whether or not the school district shall build new classrooms is completely up to the voter.

School buildings, according to Michigan law, must be financed by local taxation.

In the past decade, with a steadily and rapidly increasing child population, few districts have been able to house students without asking voters to approve debt increase.

MOST STILL PAYING

Last year only Pontiac and North Oxford, the last two-room school district in Oakland County, were not paying off bonds for a school building program. Most districts were paying as much as six mills for new buildings.

Schools last year cost local property owners between $18.44 in Pontiac and $33.41 in Oak Park per thousand dollars of their state equalized evaluation. Half of the districts in the county paid more than $25 per thousand in total school property taxes.

Are Manners 'Too Much?'

(Gilbert Youth Service) Are manners "too much" for today's teen-agers — silly, Victorian stuffiness?

Well, if you think of manners as mere hat-tipping to tin gods, you might be right.

But if you search deeper to see that manners might be the outward and visible sign of a person you'd really like to know better, it's not too late for you.

Manners indicate more than the automatic rising to your feet when an older person comes in to the room. It means more than the perfunctory gesture of waiting till your hostess lifts her fork before you begin eating.

When you offer your girl a soda before you drink one yourself, you're showing more than mere politeness.

Surface manners show you're considerate and thoughtful; that you're not a destructive guy; that you're a girl who cares about other people's feelings, that you're kind, not caustic.

If they're genuine manners, your girl's mother will be assured you'll bring her daughter home when you said you would, that you won't drink if you're driving.

Manners help you realize you're part of the family, not the whole show. They make you aware that your mother has had it, and you're considerate enough to take over the dishes. Manners mean you like your self.

Pre-Teens Can Become Mysteries to Their Own Parents, in Own Home

The pre-teen who is in the 10-and-11-year old age group can sometimes be as much of a mystery to his parents as the Sphinx.

Why does he spend hours combing his hair but forget to take a bath? Why has he turned into a griper but suddenly finds it so painful to receive criticism?

And why, when only yesterday he was so cuddly and dependent does he suddenly have the assertive powers of a Clyde Beatty?

An expert on pre-teens, W. C. Mortensen of the Gorton School in Illinois states that this age - group should be treated with understanding if life is to be less stressful.

By offering opportunities for the pre-teen child to make sensible judgments and non-damaging mistakes, the parent gives the young person a chance for growth.

NOT RUN WILD

Of course a pre-teen should not be permitted to run wild or to discard standards of right and wrong. Certainly he must not have all his wishes mollycoddled. He has to learn the limits of proper behavior.

It is especially important that justified praise and encouragement be given to build the child's self-confidence.

It is better to concentrate on essentials where real parental guidance is needed. If adults find it hard to take constant correction, it should be remembered that it is not easy for a child to do so.

NEED AUTHORITY

Children want and need adult authority to guide them. They need and want adult approval.

If they are treated with love and wisdom the chances are excellent that their unpredictable behavior will gradually disappear and true maturity will begin to develop.

The Return of School Lunches

By JANET ODELL
Pontiac Press Food Editor

One more month and you'll be planning school lunches in stead of picnic lunches.

For some mothers this will be a new experience. For others, it's an old story.

Let's review together the essentials of a good packed lunch.

• It should supply one-third of the day's food requirements.

• There should be something hearty—usually sandwiches.

• A crisp or juicy food is welcome.

• Dessert is a must, even for weight watchers. Choose it accordingly.

Children Cite Favorites for Lunches

As most parents know, junior's likes and dislikes can be a problem at mealtime.

However, the folks who have the daily task of serving lunch to more than 16 million children under the National School Lunch Program have these tips on how to get children to clean their plates.

In a survey of representative school lunch programs all over the country, lunch supervisors found that:

• Youngsters generally go for hamburgers, fried chicken, turkey, spaghetti, hot dogs, and all soups except cream soups.

• And junior will eat certain vegetables and fruits, too, believe it or not. The children will gobble up corn, green beans, potatoes, peas, and peaches.

OTHER ITEMS

Other favorite items probably won't surprise parents. Peanut butter, oatmeal cookies, over-sized sandwiches and "anything in a roll" rate high on the school lunch list.

The results of the survey can be viewed as a vote of confidence for the local, state and federal people who run the National School Lunch Program, for their aim is to serve school children the most nutritious, satisfying and economical lunches they possibly can.

Now in its 18th year, the National School Lunch Program is operating in 68,000 public and private schools.

It is administered nationally by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and on a State level by the State educational agencies.

ANY SCHOOLS

Any school that meets the qualifications can apply for the program.

The basic requirements are operating a non-profit program, serving lunches free or at reduced cost to those pupils the schools deem are unable to pay full price and serving nutritious, well-balanced lunches.

The lunch served under the program contains at least 2 ounces of meat, fish, poultry, cheese, or one egg, or 4 tablespoons peanut butter, or ½ cup cooked dry beans; cup of two vegetables and/or fruit; 2 teaspoons butter or fortified margarine; a portion of enriched or whole grain bread; and a half pint of whole milk.

The cost of this lunch to the children averages about 27 cents.

LUNCH MONEY

The lunch programs receive about 20 per cent of their operational costs in food and assistance from the department.

The remainder comes from State and local monies and from payments by the children for the lunches.

Almost 80 per cent of the food purchased is bought by the local manager from local suppliers. This amounts to more than 600 million dollars worth of food annually.

It also creates a market for the abundances of food produced by America's farmers.

BEST MEAL OF DAY

Almost 10 per cent of the more than 16 million children eating lunches under the program are served these lunches free or at a reduced price.

For some of these children, who live in economically depressed areas, the lunch may be the best or only meal of the day.

Children in the West now enjoy Southern sweet potatoes, long a regional delicacy.

Little packets of nuts or candy. Etc., etc., etc.

VARY BREAD

Vary the bread from day to day and the fillings too, if your children will let you. Here's a good hearty filling.

Egg-Ham Sandwich Filling
1 hard-cooked egg, chopped
¼ cup canned deviled ham
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

2 tablespoons chopped pickle
Combine chopped egg, ham, Worcestershire sauce and pickle. Yield: ½ cup, or filling for 3 sandwiches.

You've been keeping the cookie jar full all summer, we presume, so that chore is not new.

When school starts, fill it with old fashioned molasses cookies. These are soft cookies that won't be affected by humidity.

Soft Molasses Cookies

2½ cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt

1 teaspoon each cinnamon and ginger
½ cup each shortening and sugar

1 large egg
½ cup old-fashioned molasses
½ cup water

Sift together the flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt, cinnamon and ginger. Cream shortening and sugar; add egg and molasses; beat well. (Don't worry about curdly appearance.)

Stir in sifted dry ingredients alternately with water, just until smooth. Drop heaping tablespoons of batter, several inches apart, on ungreased cookie sheets.

Bake in a moderate (375 degrees) oven 8 to 10 minutes. Cool on wire racks. Store in tightly covered container with wax paper between layers. Makes about 2½ dozen.

Big Blouson Bursts Into Girls' Fashions

The blouson is the newest word for little girls' dresses. It's often greatly inflated to make any little girl look like Eloise—or droopy like a semi-inflated balloon, spilling softly from waistline to hip.

Always it tops a pleated or A-line skirt . . . in every fabric from plaided Galey & Lord cottons to soft Klopman Dacron/cottons.

The familiar A-line silhouette, so flattering to rounded little-girl figures, takes on a fresh look in Mooresville cotton stripes which fall in pressed pleats from high, straight yokes.

Added 1964 touches are white collars and cuffs—long, slightly puffed sleeves.

High-Price Memories

Ring pins, baubles and books cherished as symbols of school spirit by teen-agers will cost them about $300 million this year.

Build Toward Future

School construction is rapidly becoming an advanced science as school boards, architects and contractors combine to produce the best possible space for learning.

Schools today are being built to accommodate such modern teaching methods as television, electronic laboratories, teaching machines, and automated lecture halls.

Some are built with walls that can be moved to create new study or lecture areas, and others have such refinements as "automated" study areas with television screens and dial systems tied into central stores of information.

A prep school recently completed a new science and mathematics hall and laboratories. Equipment in the labs includes a complete weather station and test equipment for atomic physics curricula.

Students showing special promise are permitted to use a row of individual laboratories to work on advanced projects, and each instructor has his own private laboratory connecting to his office.

'PIPED IN'
Lectures are piped in from a closed-circuit system television studio at the school to classrooms.

A $2,523,046 high school in Michigan features a "house plan" layout that provides two separate but adjacent high schools, each housing about 300 students in grades 9 through 12.

While the students spend 40 per cent to 60 per cent of their time in their own "house," there are also auxiliary buildings that house cafeterias and administrative offices; gymnasium; elective courses, and an auditorium.

Another type of layout was used for a New Mexico high school, where students have a large academic court surrounded on three sides by two tiers of galleries.

COURT COVERED

The court is covered by a large translucent plastic canopy.

Split-level classrooms were created by an Indiana elementary school by a design that permits use of part of a raised central corridor for classroom activities.

In California, an award-winning elementary school is scaled down to the size of the children while still permitting comfortable movement of adults.

In Maine, a colorful touch was added to a school built to withstand the rigorous winter climate. Multi-hued panels on skylights alternate with transparent panels in a way designed to provide an even distribution of natural light.

CREATES NEW WORLD

surrounds a Louisiana school located on a site in a low-income area.

The wall shuts out the poor neighborhood and creates a new world of covered walks, arches and landscaped courts. The inner surface of the perimeter wall has murals on it.

Flexibility is provided in a California high school by a design that uses movable partitions to create interior spaces.

Movement of the partitions makes possible an easy adjustment to teaching needs.

IN COLLEGES

At the college level, one of the most ambitious achievements has been the new School of Art and Architecture at Yale.

The building has a sculptured look that conceals 36 different levels.

Two full floors are below ground level, and the interior structure consists of four large concrete columns that are hollow to accommodate service runs.

Having Room of Own Helps Youth Grow Up

There's nothing like a room of his own to give a youngster an adult sense of privacy and responsibility — and possibly, an interest in higher grades.

If your youngster is fortunate enough to have his own "private world" already, redecorating it to reflect his or her interests and tastes will encourage pride in keeping it neat and attractive!

There are many inexpensive ways of giving rooms a sparkling new look... imagination, a new coat of paint, plus a fresh look in curtains and covers can accomplish wonders.

If your youngster is a teenager, why not transform his or her bedroom into a second living room for relaxing and studying.

A new streamlined foam rubber bed has been designed that is ideal for such an arrangement.

Studio couches that double as couches by day and beds by night will provide a sitting-room atmosphere that is ideal for entertaining school chums.

ROOM OF OWN

If your youngster doesn't have that room of his own already, then perhaps it's time he did!

Even a nook sheltered by a screen can serve the purpose. Check areas in your home where space possibilities have been overlooked.

Unused attics, basements and garages can be converted into delightful retreats with just a little thought and effort plus perhaps some advice from your local lumber dealer. Enclosed porches provide other possibilities.

Careful thought should be given to the selection of building materials and furniture pieces when transforming these wasted-space areas into new rooms. Look for versatility for multi-duty.

SOLID LUMBER

Solid lumber paneling is especially suitable for a boy's room and steel furniture is sturdy and easy to keep clean, while giving a wanted masculine look to the room.

When planning a room for a teenage girl, the thoughtful parent will look ahead to the day when daughter will be establishing her own home, by selecting furniture that possibly can be used in that home-to-be.

A wise purchase is the double-dresser, which will give her a head start on a master bedroom set, besides providing her with plenty of drawer space right now. (Do teen-agers ever have enough?)

When selecting book-cases, choose coordinated pieces that can be easily rearranged later on.

A desk is another purchase that should be chosen with an eye to its attractiveness in the student's future home.

A little extra thought now, when making all these selections, will pay great dividends for your teenager in years to come.

Keep good lighting in mind when planning the student's room. Lighting facilities can help or hinder your youngster in his school work.

Decks should have a light at either end or one long light across. Wall and off-center ceiling fixtures are good sources of light and provide extra space on desks.

LONGER WEAR

When selecting draperies and bedspreads, be sure to choose heavy-duty, washable fabrics such as corduroy, denim, madras or ticking for longer wear.

Remember, many of these "plain Jane" fabrics now come in glamorous colors and are now fashion's darlings!

If the space you have is small, make it seem larger with a lighter shade of wall color and properly scaled furniture.

Let your youngster help in planning his or her room—helping to select colors and furniture will add greatly to future enjoyment of it... and keeping it attractive.

WATCHING OUTFIT—Doug

Sheffield, 19, 3230 Schoolhouse, is set for attracting as well as watching girls in this outfit from Hughes-Hatcher-Sulfrin. The student at Pontiac Business Institute is wearing a "brushed" sweater by Robert Bruce. Shown in the new shaggy blazer line, the garment is 100 per cent wool. To look best, the sweater is contrasted with continental slacks by Farah.

STEP UP—Climb aboard the high fashion wagon with Pam Copron, 19, 1173 Columbia, Berkeley. She is wearing fashions by Garland from the Bloomfield Fashion Shop at the Pontiac Mall.

The crest wool jacket tops the matching wool tapered pants. To accent the outfit, Pam, a student at the Pontiac Business Institute, wears a white wool turtle-neck shell.

Why Teens Need Chaos

(Gilbert Youth Service) What lies behind some teen-agers' seeming need for destruction?

Are they mad at the world, scared, or just undisciplined?

Mrs. Mildred Rabinow, family life counselor at the Child Study Association in New York, offers a variety of explanations.

She feels that this current crop of teen-agers has been showered with more material benefits and more economic opportunities than at any other point in the history of the human race.

"These young people," she goes on, "have never seriously suffered from privation. They have not been through any depression, they have experienced no major war threat."

She means, they've never had it so good. Young people are in the driver's seat.

"There's loosening of control by the family," she comments. "Now the school, the camp and the teen-age group set the standards, rather than the home."

She feels too that while-temps have been raised on how to take rather than how to give, lest he be frustrated, he's frustrated for a different reason.

"He has a feeling there's nothing fresh or new left for him to do," says the counselor.

Breakfast for Students

The youngster who leaves for school each day after having eaten a nourishing breakfast stands a better chance of becoming a good student than the one who skips or skimps on this meal.

Plaids Win Honors

Plaids and pleats are taking classroom-honors with school belles this fall. Smart team-mates are abbreviated tops and matching skirts in easy care fabrics.

Brown-Bagger Brings Lunch

Are your children "brown-baggers" mother?

Do they carry their lunch to school in those little paper sacks you pick up at the local supermarket?

If so, you are the target of some big guns being aimed at you and your children by the world's largest manufacturer of children's decorated school lunch kits.

The ammunition the company plans to use when the back-to-school shopping season begins this month recently were previewed by retail buyers at the National Housewares Show in Chicago. The company showed 20 different children's lunch kits, each decorated or designed to excite kids and make lunch tiding more fun and healthful.

Some are made of metal with 3-D embossed designs. Others are of gaily colored vinyl, including some models that would pass as fashion—perfect purses. These are called "brunch bags" in keeping with their sophisticated styling.

TOP-RUNNERS

To make certain they didn't miss your child's favorite TV or cartoon personality, Aladdin has kits decorated with all the top-runners.

These include individual models brightly illustrated with authentic scenes of the trials and tribulations of Hercules, the Flintstones, Bonanza's Cartwright family, Beverly Hills, Bozo the Clown, Yogi Bear, Mickey Mouse Club, Tammy, Walt Disney's cartoon family, and the National Football League quarterbacks.

Of the total line, care to guess which kit will be the best-seller? If history repeats itself as it has for four years, it will be the plaid, an attractive, all-metal model that seems to have universal appeal.

Thermos bottles of one-half pint capacity are included with each kit. They are decorated to match the kit and feature cup-cups with handles to make it easier for children to hold them. How much will it cost you to change your child from a "Brown-Bagger" to a modern, well equipped member of the school lunch tiding fraternity? From less than $2 to not more than $3, depending upon which kit strikes his or her fancy.

SHOE TREE—Children's footwear for fall leaves nothing to be desired. On the upper right branch of this collection of shoes from Jullard's at Bloomfield Shopping Plaza is a misses and pre-teen spectator strap in brown or antique red by Alexi. Next is a child's or misses classic ghillie tie in waxed tan or black nylon velvet by Kall-Sten-Iks. On the trunk is a child or misses dressy nylon velvet slip-on strap by Sandler of Boston.

Best Feet Forward

Whether it is at the high school or college level, students this fall will be putting their best foot forward in a variety of new fashion footwear.

Local merchants have given a clue to what will be seen trotting the campuses this year.

Bob Weddle, manager of the shoe department at Albert's Fashion Mall store says that "bruns, gummetal grey and dark patent are 'in' for fall fashion."

"Congo crocko leather," new in foot fashion circles, is made in everything from pumps, to dress flats to sport loafers according to Weddle.

"Manufacturers are not trying to imitate genuine alligator but are giving the girls an alligator look."

BOOTS 'N' SLACKS

Shoe boots with slacks are definitely in says Weddle, who notes that even those companies specializing in canvas footwear are getting into the shoe boot act.

High boots for winter now come in such fashion shades as red and black velvet and leopard.

Mrs. Pauline Davis is with the shoe department at Alvin's.

"On your back-to-school fashions stacked and mid heels are popular for college girls. The round throat in flats is more popular this year with the current toe (more rounded than the pointed toe)."

MORE SUEDE

She sees more suede this year "in green, gray, brown and even blue suede for dresser wear."

"Tall boots are very good again this year." Shoe boots are again very popular and there are as many of them as the other types of shoes.

Sibley's Miracle Mile manager Nathan Weiner sees this as a year for slip-ons.

"I think as far as boys are concerned slip-ons or the loafer type will predominate. Black, of course, will be the number one color, with brown as the second choice."

FOR THE GIRLS

"For girls going back to school. Italian loafers predominate the field again this year as far as style is concerned."

"Even girls in the 8 to 10 age bracket seem to follow the same pattern. They want to mimic their big sisters."

Jim Cornett, part of the sales force in Walter's shoe department has two new styles which he feels will become popular for fall.

One is a beige and brown patent, "of course," he says, "they're wearing beige year around now."

The second style is "just about the latest word in comfort," according to Cornett and is a smooth leather or suede with a one inch heel and smooth vamp.

LOAFER-HEELS

He feels the line of a loafer with heel "will be very popular this year."

Whatever the fall fashion footnote, the back to school student will find a selection geared to suit his or her own individual tastes.

HELPING HAND—Even Stride-Rite shoes from Stapp's need tying. Big brother, Eric Karl Rathburg helps his sister Lorna of 1571 S. Laper. They will attend the third and first grades at Blanche Simms School, Lake Orion.

Style of Letters Affects Future of Teen-Agers

While the subject of "how to write a proper letter" may seem a bit too elementary for most teen-agers, a recent batch of mail from a supposedly representative group across the country says otherwise.

Most of the writers, who were being judged on their ideas of teen-age responsibility, a supposedly composed their letters with some thought.

Yet most never gave a thought to finding appropriate stationery, but wrote on ruled notebook paper, complete with punched holes.

Some writers even scrawled away in pencil. As a welcome contrast, a few—very few—mailed in neatly-typed opinions, properly centered on stationery, with home address and date arranged correctly in the right-hand corner.

The notebook paper writers had some trouble finding suitable envelopes, and then more trouble folding the paper to fit, which sometimes resulted in a series of crisscrossing folds, making reading difficult.

LARGE ROLE

Letter-writing is going to play an ever larger place in your life as years and responsibilities increase.

To make a good impression, write a good letter!

Expert's Warning Against Dangers of Taking Pills

BLOOMFIELD, N.J. (Gilbert Youth Service) — If you're one of the millions of young Americans just now finding your way about a strange college campus, you'll be interested in some hard-hitting advice from the medical director of a pharmaceutical company.

Though her company specializes in a large variety of pills designed to pep you up, put you to sleep, and perform other chemical wonders, Dr. Kay Hein says they're anything but attractive for the college set.

Even more, they're unnecessary and can be positively dangerous.

Student's Own Tape

Modern learning at almost all levels of education is bound round these days with tape!

But it's not "red tape"; it's rather the literally millions of miles of sound recording tape that are being used to make immediately available to students the audible tools of learning.

Language laboratories operated by the schools are but one example.

Usefulness of mangetic tape in teaching foreign tongues by giving students a chance to check their own pronunciations has been discussed by Professor Elton Hocking, head of the department of Modern Languages at Purdue University, "a Copernican step forward."

It is also especially helpful in speech therapy.

MAGNETIC TAPE

Magnetic tape makes it possible for schools to maintain an audible library of learning available for use over and over again in classroom work.

Yet other highly individual uses are cropping up, according to 3M, producers of magnetic tape, and Revere-Wollensak, developers of relatively inexpensive tape recorders for school use.

Bright students, these organizations report, have turned to recording as a means of overcoming shyness.

Armed with a recorder, these students settle back in their own rooms to improve their ability to verbalize.

TAKE TO CLASS

Some are taking recorders to class with them to amplify their note-taking during lectures by taping the words of the lecturer.

Others keep the little machines at hand during lab work, it is said, to dictate notes, observations and thoughts.

Still others, it is reported, find the recorders helpful in memorizing, in part as well as in the whole.

College students also are using magnetic tape to send voice letters back home.

Coloring Book Bad for Child

Professor Advises Creative Freedom

VANCOUVER (U)—Those coloring books have a devastating effect on junior's art, says Prof. Elmore Ozard, head of the art department at the University of British Columbia's College of Education.

"They cramp a child's own interpretation of what he sees," he said. "They impose an adult measurement on a child much too early in life."

"A coloring book does not provide concepts of what the child actually sees, but what an adult who sketched the book saw."

Prof. Ozard says adults must help a child to develop the desire to communicate with others and have respect for his own ideas.

DISCUS WORKS

"Adults should discuss a child's works, try to understand what the child is trying to say and offer encouragement."

Under no circumstances, he adds, should adults leave the child with paper and crayons and let him go it alone.

Good Student Is Honored by President

Two graduating seniors, a girl and a boy, from each state of the Union, from each of the 11 U.S. territories, and 15 students at large, now have an opportunity every year henceforth, to achieve a unique distinction that has quickly become recognized as the highest to be awarded youth by the nation.

They may be designated "Presidential Scholars" as 121 were for the first time early this past summer.

The honor was set up earlier this year by President Lyndon B. Johnson, who, as a young man, was a school teacher in Texas.

The honor is directed at encouraging intellectual achievement among youth.

In announcing the new honor, the President said the brain power of young people is the "most precious resource of the United States."

THOSE CHOSEN

Those chosen for the honor by a distinguished committee are invited to the White House to receive a medalion from the hands of the President himself.

Don't Be a Licorice Layman

Learn the Facts on Glycyrrhiza Glabra

WASHINGTON (UPI) — My mother didn't raise her son to be a glycyrrhiza glabra expert. It just worked out that way.

I recall vividly how it all started. One day last spring, a young colleague who looks to me for guidance came up and asked me point blank where licorice comes from.

I was embarrassed to say that I didn't know. And I was not alone. The public at large is amazingly ignorant of the true facts about licorice.

During the past 90 years, the number of articles about licorice appearing in the American periodical press has averaged only about one per decade.

In short, we have been living in the dark ages as far as licorice is concerned.

Hoping to usher in a new era of enlightenment, I wrote a column identifying licorice as an extract from the roots of glycyrrhiza glabra, a fibrous plant found mainly in the Near East.

FLAVORED CONFECTION Then, in a subsequent dispatch, I revealed that much of the licorice we eat today is not glycyrrhiza glabra at all but a confection flavored with anethole, a derivative of anise which also can be produced synthetically.

Since that time, I have been pilled with a great deal of additional information by Frederick C. Abbott, president of the MacAndrews & Forbes Co. of Camden, N.J., world's largest licorice producer.

I feel safe in saying I now rank as the most erudite licorice layman in the western hemisphere, plus the northern half of Madagascar. Get a load of this:

The history and lore of licorice is steeped in romance, intrigue, adventure and oriental mysticism. Licorice is mentioned in Egyptian hieroglyphics. Favorably, I might add, a supply of it was found in King Tut's tomb.

Licorice also has medical connections. Theophrastus, a Greek physician and friend of Aristotle, prescribed it for asthma, dry cough and general troubles of the chest.

KICKED BUCKET Note, however, that it didn't keep King Tut from kicking the bucket.

More than 90 per cent of the licorice used in this country goes into tobacco products. It imparts the flavor that distinguishes American cigarettes from the harsher English variety. Licorice also is used in foamite fireproofers. Even in fire extinguishers. Used in a type of insulating board is made from licorice.

Unfortunately, I am not at liberty to reveal anything more at this time. But stick with me, kid, and I'll make you a glycyrrhiza glabra expert, too.

Viet Crisis Underlines Philippine Role

By WILLIAM J. FOX United Press International

U.S. ships and planes left American-leased bases in the Philippines for deployment into the Viet Nam crisis area last week, dramatically underscoring the value of the Manila government's cooperation in U.S. policy in Asia.

The moves also pointed up the fact that the Philippines risks possible retaliation from the Communist world for permitting these American bases on its soil.

Philippine officials are well aware of the risk, including the possibility the bases would be targets of enemy attacks should the cold war suddenly turn hot. But they don't believe this possibility will become an actuality.

Most of them believe the Red Chinese would not attempt to engage the United States in any large scale war at this time. And they feel the Soviet Union is not likely to give the North Vietnamese anything but moral support.

De GAULLE VISIT:

President Charles de Gaulle has set himself a blistering pace when he visits the southern France D-Day Invasion beaches next Saturday, Aug. 15, for the 20th anniversary commemoration of the Allied landings there.

Between 9:30 a.m. and 6:45 p.m., he plans to attend no less than 15 ceremonies along a 50-mile stretch of coast — a strenuous regimen for a man of 73.

His only rest periods will be a very French one-hour lunch and an hour and 15-minute rest at Toulon at the end.

His intensive program at the southern France invasion anniversary observations is in sharp contrast to his decision to stay away completely from similar observations of the Normandy D-Day landings last June 6.

EAST GERMAN HOPES:

East Germany's Communist leaders are expected to step up their efforts to win international recognition for their regime and acceptance of their claim that West Berlin is an "independent political entity" without ties to West Germany.

No fresh Berlin crisis to draw the Western allies closer together in a tight united front seems in prospect at the moment. And a prolonged period of calm would seem to suit the Communists' desires best.

This would give the East Germans a maneuver period in which to tempt West Germans and West Berliners with a whole flock of attractive-sounding proposals.

These could range from cultural exchanges to visits with relatives and friends behind the Berlin wall. And the price would be recognition of the Communist Eastern regime and greater isolation of West Berlin.

INDONESIAN HUNGER

The near-famine conditions which caused thousands of cases of hunger in central Java at the last harvest are expected to be repeated in September when the next harvest is scheduled to come in.

The causes in both cases are the same—not enough rain, too many rats and other pests, and not enough produced for Indonesia's ever-increasing population.

The government in Jakarta has instituted a propaganda campaign urging the peasants to eat corn.

But it has done little to improve irrigation, provide fertilizer and insecticides, or create an efficient network of transportation.

To Punish Officials for Viet Home Fires

SAIGON, Viet Nam (AP) — South Vietnamese officials in the province of Binh Dinh are to be punished for having caused the burning of 200 homes last month, the government announced today.

The burnings reportedly resulted from a clash between officials and residents of the hamlet of Phuoc Ly.

Premier Nguyen Khanh is reported to have ordered payment of reparations to villagers whose houses were burned and announced the local officials would be severely punished.

12 Killed, 32 Hurt in Korean Downpour

SEOUL, Korea (AP) — Twelve persons perished and 32 others were injured in a downpour that struck central Korea Friday, police reported today.

Authorities said 13,225 persons were left homeless and communication to move surplus food into stricken areas.

And the next time food shortages hit Java or other areas could be the time the Communists move to create large-scale trouble. They have been remarkably restrained in the past, but they seem due for a change in tactics.

Dr. Wayne G. Brandstadt Says:

Don't Neglect Pains Around Your Heart

If you have pains around your heart, don't neglect them.

It is true that they may be due to a mild digestion, but they may also be due to a narrowing or a hardening of the arteries that nourish the heart.

Pain will develop in any muscle that is BRANDSTADT forced to work with a reduced supply of oxygen.

The causes in both cases are the same—not enough rain, too many rats and other pests, and not enough produced for Indonesia's ever-increasing population.

The government in Jakarta has instituted a propaganda campaign urging the peasants to eat corn.

But it has done little to improve irrigation, provide fertilizer and insecticides, or create an efficient network of transportation.

So if you regard your anginal pains as a warning, much can often be done to prevent a full heart attack.

SUDDEN EXPOSURE

What are the things that precipitate anginal pains in a person with narrowed coronary arteries?

One is sudden exposure to cold. But on cold days the exposure itself is not as likely to cause the pain as the increased exertion required to buck a strong wind or to tramp through deep snow.

Your increased rate of breathing and your increased pace to keep warm are added factors.

Frustrations and anger may also be precipitating causes, especially if you have to keep them inside.

WORK OFF RAGE

If, instead of doing a slow burn, you can work off your rage by taking a brisk walk, swinging at a little white ball with a driver or a masher, or taking a lusty poke at a punching bag, you will be doing your heart a favor.

Sitting down and quietly talking about your feelings to your spouse or a sympathetic confidant may relieve your tensions and spare your heart.

HAPPY IMMIGRANT—Minadora Gastevski, 2, arrived last week from Brazil with her parents and three sisters. The family, of Russian background, whose relatives fled the Bolshevik Revolution, have been rice farmers. They will live near Brooks, Ore.

Dixie Dem Calls Johnson a Friend, Barry an Enemy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The big question in this year's presidential race is whether the South will "reward a political enemy and punish an old friend," Rep. Carl Vinson, D-Ga., says.

In a statement released in Washington Sunday, Vinson said this would be the case if the South supports Sen. Barry Goldwater and opposes President Johnson.

He said the question is whether the South will be "blinded by its anger and frustration of the moment regarding its civil rights problems."

Vinson said there have been years "that organized agitators and do-gooder groups have been pushing the current civil rights crisis upon the South."

He said Johnson followed the course of all other Southerners "in attempting to stem the storm," while he said Goldwater "followed the opposite course" and "repeatedly identified himself with proponents of civil rights."

Contending that Goldwater has reversed himself, he asked, "Can it be purely for political expediency?"

Johnson, as a Southerner, "espoused the cause of the South," said Vinson, while "Lyndon Johnson, as President, had no other choice but to reflect the will of a majority of the nation."

"Agony of the moment may well cause Southerners to forget the now more remote agonies of recent years, but this lapse of memory will not change the facts."

Humphrey Hits at Extremists in His New Book

NEW YORK (AP) — "It is tragic," says Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., "when the fantasy of the extremist occupies so much of our time."

Humphrey, frequently mentioned as the Democratic candidate for vice president, makes the statement in his book, "The Cause Is Mankind — A Liberal Program for Modern America," to be published Aug. 17.

Excerpts were released yesterday by the publisher, Frederick A. Prager.

"We now have active in this country a small minority of the extreme, or radical, right," Humphrey wrote. "Those who have this view of life suffer from acute detachment from reality."

Cuban Exiles Claim Capture of Valuable Papers

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A Cuban exile group claimed today it captured valuable documents aboard the Cuban freighter Maria Teresa after dynamiting her in Montreal Harbor Sunday.

"We will soon make these documents public if that will help the cause of Cuban liberation," said Felipe Rivero, head of the Nationalist Association, an anti-Castro organization.

Montreal police said there was an explosion at the freighter's pier but there was no damage.

Another exile group, Accion Cuba, also claimed credit for the attack.

Hope to Save Standish Home

ELLANBANE, Lezayre, Isle of Man (M) — A house that is supposedly the family home of Myles Standish may soon become one of the showpieces of this island between England and Ireland.

A government committee is at work on a plan to preserve the home on a farm about 2½ miles from the town of Ramsey. Manxmen say Standish was born there although other studies have said Standish was born in Lancashire on the English mainland.

In the Isle of Man people look upon Standish and his wife, Rose, as the first Manx people to emigrate to America. Standish landed with the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock in 1620.

When Standish died at 72 in 1656, one of the leading men of the Isle of Man's house of keys was another Standish named William.

His relationship to Myles isn't clear, but several Standish family members played a prominent part in the island's political life in the 17th century.

Burial Is Tomorrow for Kennedy's Kin

BOSTON (AP) — Mrs. John F. Fitzgerald, grandmother of the late President John Fitzgerald Kennedy, will be buried tomorrow.

Mrs. Fitzgerald's funeral will be held at St. Brendan's Catholic Church in Boston's Dorchester section. She died Saturday at the age of 86.

Among those missing at the funeral will be one of her three surviving children, Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy, mother of the former president. Miss Ann Gargan, a niece, confirmed reports that Mrs. Kennedy is ailing in Paris and said doctors have advised against the trip.

She'll Sure Tell Him Off

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old girl. I had two dates with an 18-year-old boy I've had a secret crush on for a long time.

He was an hour late both times but I didn't say anything. Then he took me to a big party, and I wandered away.

Nobody even knew who I was with. I had a horrible time.

Later he took me to the senior prom and I never had a better time in my whole life. He said he had a great time, too, and I know he did.

That was the last time I saw him. I heard that he is practically rushing another girl off her feet.

I want him to know that after all I look from him, he can't treat me this way and get away with it, and if he were to call me up and BEG me for a date, I would turn him down.

How can I let him know how I feel?

"WHO NEEDS HIM?"

DEAR WHO: When he calls you up and BEGS you for a date, tell him!

DEAR ABBY: Our 22-year-old daughter has been married three times. The first marriage was a mistake because they were both too young. (The boy's mother had to sign for him.)

They called it quits after a year. At 19 she married a 29-year-old mamma's boy. That lasted two years. Her last husband was an older man.

She had known him only a month and, after she married him, she found out that he hadn't even been free to marry her. It was a mess!

Now she is back home and has started to date. She has no special training and has never worked a day in her life. Her father supports her.

I think, under the circumstances, we should have some say about the company she keeps, don't you? Some of the characters she goes with would make you ill. She is our only child and we do love her. What can we do?

TROUBLED

DEAR TROUBLED: Tell your daughter she is old enough now to support herself, and that she must.

She is still young enough to acquire "special training" if she wants it. If she will accept professional guidance, it would be worth the effort.

It will have to come from outside, however, as she quit listening to you years ago.

DEAR ABBY: I recently married a man who likes dogs, but he can't stand cats. I have always had a cat. I love cats.

At the present my mother is keeping my two cats, and when I told my husband I wanted to bring them home he said, "NO CATS in this house!"

He says cats are for old maids and lonely widows who have nobody to love them. I don't agree with him on this, but don't want to make an issue of it.

What can I do? This is my first marriage and his third.

LOVES CATS

DEAR LOVES: Leave your cats at your mother's and go to visit them when you get lonesome.

Your husband sounds tough enough to live with WITHOUT an excuse.

Bank Group Has Dinner

The annual county dinner of the Oakland County Chapter, American Institute of Banking was held recently at the Waldron Hotel.

Presenting the program were Edward M. Green, Donald Taylor, and Richard Zieman. The instructors for the American Institute of Banking fall classes were introduced. The head consultants for each participating bank were also introduced, along with their assistants.

Full class schedules were announced.

MRS. WILLIAM H. MALLENDER

Wed Saturday in St. Peter's Evangelical Lutheran Church, Allentown, Pa., were Carole M. Miller, daughter of the H. Luke Millers of Allentown and William H. Mallerder, son of the Milton F. Mallerders, East Surrey Road, Foxcroft.

White Roses, Orchids Form Bridal Bouquet

Reception in the Lehigh Valley Club followed the Saturday vows of Carole M. Miller to William H. Mallerder, in St. Peter's Evangelical Lutheran Church, Allentown, Pa.

Rev. Verne Snyder performed the ceremony for the couple whose parents are the H. Luke Millers of Allentown and the Milton F. Mallerders of East Surrey Road, Foxcroft.

With her floor-length gown of ivory Alencon lace over peau de sole, the bride wore a matching lace mantilla. Trailing ivy accented her bouquet of white roses and phalaenopsis orchids.

Marilyn Miller attended her sister as honor maid and Mrs. Robert G. Kales Jr., of New York City, was bridesmaid.

Fred Mallerder II of Bloomfield Township was his brother's best man. Guests were seated by Ronald J. Cayo, Eric J. Stapper and Theodore R. Walser, all of New York City.

The bride is an alumna of Rider College, Lawrenceville, N. J. and her husband is a student of Dartmouth College and U. of M. Business School.

His bride was graduated from the U. of M. School of Nursing.

Susan Carol Johnson, daughter of the Emil F. Johnsons of Harrow Circle, and Randolph Howard Fields, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Earl Fields of Grosse Ile were wed Saturday in the First Presbyterian Church, Birmingham.

Time Had Come to Look Younger

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Mrs. Mary K. Kumer, who will be celebrating her 96th birthday soon, recently went to the beauty parlor for the first time in her life.

"I decided," she said, "it's about time I began to try to look younger."

Lady Exec Finds Men Grab Tab

By The Emily Post Institute

Q: I am a woman executive in a fairly large company, and very often it is necessary for me to take businessmen to lunch.

The men always seem embarrassed to have me pay the check and often try to pick it up themselves.

This creates a very awkward situation. Can you offer a solution to this problem?

A: The best solution would be to ask the company to open charge accounts at one or two restaurants where you can take these businessmen to lunch or get yourself a credit card, and then all you need do is sign the bill.

If neither of these suggestions is possible, you can ask the waiter not to present the check at the table but to leave it for you at the cashier's desk.

Or if you must pay in your guest's presence and he protests, you can explain that it is your company's guest and the amount is going on your expense account.

Q: I always find it embarrassing when dining with others and I happen to get a piece of tough meat or gristle in my mouth that I cannot swallow.

To see someone take food out of his or her mouth is nauseating, but sometimes this is absolutely necessary.

What is the best and most inconspicuous way to do this?

A: The least noticeable way is to take it from your mouth between your thumb and forefinger with your other four fingers pressed tightly together to form a screen over the food, and remove it to your plate.

Q: In our files here at the office we have names of women that do not indicate whether they are Miss or Mrs.

How should these women be addressed when writing to them? Would it be proper to address them without title rather than use the wrong one?

A: To address them without title, would be very bad form.

If there is no clue as to whether they are Miss or Mrs., you assume they are Miss and address them as such.

MRS. JON TIMOTHY PATTERSON

Church Reception Follows Ceremony

The Jon Timothy Pattersons (Julia Mae Dove) left for a tour of the New England States after their vows and reception Saturday in the Bethany Baptist Church.

Dr. Emil Kontz performed the candlelight ceremony. Parents of the couple are the Harold Doves of Brookdale Road and the Calvin E. Pattersons of Old Orchard Drive.

Pearl-fronted Swiss embroidery accented the bridal gown of white peau satin styled with chapel train. Satin roses held the illusion veil.

BOUQUET

The bride carried cascading white and yellow roses with Stephanotis.

Mrs. Richard M. Shipman was honor matron with bridesmaids Charlene O'Reilly, East Lansing, and Barbara Petersen, Bloomfield Hills. Rebecca Patterson was flower girl.

Michael Patterson attended his brother as best man and another brother, David, ushered with James Hetherington.

The couple are graduates of Michigan State University. He will attend Wayne State University Law School in the fall.

Bride-Elect Joan Sachs Is Honored

The Kenneth Neubrechts of Berkley will be hosts at the rehearsal dinner for their son, Franz and his fiancée, Joan Carol Sachs, Friday, in Northland Inn.

Mrs. Noel Cook of Birmingham and her mother, Mrs. Fred Henry will give the spinster dinner Wednesday in the Henry home in Bloomfield Village.

Entertaining at a recent mother-daughter luncheon and afternoon shower were Mrs. Donald Miller and daughter Barbara of Birmingham.

Mrs. John Garwood of McEwen Drive honored the daughter of their neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sachs, at recent linen shower and buffet luncheon.

FAMILY SHOWER

Joan's aunt, Mrs. Bernard Goetzke of Farmington was a hostess at a family shower.

A hostess shower was given by Mrs. James Corwin Jr. and her mother Mrs. Max Baumgardner of Berkley and Mrs. Emil Pollard of Ann Arbor gave a recent luncheon and kitchen shower.

The Saturday wedding will be in Christ Church, Cranbrook.

Wools Are Washable

The chemical formula for water, H₂O, is the appropriate name given to new machine-washable wools.

The materials are processed with a formula that limits shrinkage to three per cent, reduces after-drying wrinkles, and lessens the tendency of wool to pull.

After extensive market testing the material is now appearing in men's shirts and robes as well as women's dresses, skirts and sportswear and children's coats.

Another tradition—the notion that it is bad luck for the bridegroom to see the bride before the ceremony on the wedding day.

WEDDING RITES HAVE TRADITION

NEW YORK (UPI)—Sometimes the marriage ceremony involved guarantees, according to historians.

The veil over the bride's face long ago indicated, for example, that she has been secluded from men. Her white robe was a warrant of purity.

Another tradition—the notion that it is bad luck for the bridegroom to see the bride before the ceremony on the wedding day.

Exchanging vows Saturday in St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Imlay City, were H. Patricia Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Fenner Harris, and USMC Cpl. Jeffrey A. Bagocius, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Douglas, also of Almont.

The bride holds a degree in home economics education from Eastern Michigan University.

Lee Brooks, Gerald Douglas, all of Almont, and Michael Schrock of Kalamazoo.

The bride holds a degree in home economics education from Eastern Michigan University.

USMC Cpl. Jeffrey A. Bagocius and his bride, the former H. Patricia Harris, will make their future home at Kailua, Oahu, Hawaii.

Vows were pledged Saturday before Rev. Robert Carbrecht, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Imlay City. A reception followed in the VFW Hall.

Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Fenner Harris and Mr. and Mrs. Glen G. Douglas are residents of Almont.

Venise lace fashioned a deep yoke and cap sleeves, accenting the bride's gown and train of white peau de sol. A lace headpiece secured her bouffant illusion veil.

A handkerchief carried by the bridegroom's grandmother at her wedding 58 years ago was tucked in the bridal cascade of white chrysanthemum.

ATTENDANTS

From Almont were Barbara Harris, her sister's maid of honor, bridesmaids Marilyn Spangler, Karen Nelson and Mrs. Lee Brooks, also junior, maid Pamela Douglas.

Kenneth Taylor was best man and seating some 250 guests were David Eldred, Active dry yeast or compressed yeast dissolve more quickly in warm water — 105 to 115 degrees Fahrenheit.

Flower Girl Wears Gown Like Bride's

Mrs. Donald Martin made identical gowns for her daughter and flowergirl Elizabeth Cray of Temperance, for the Saturday wedding of Donna June Martin and James Max Patrick.

Bodices of Alencon lace beaded with seed pearls and crystals extended into bell-shaped skirts of silk organza over peau de soie with cathedral trains.

Rev. Les Lalone performed the Donelson Baptist Church ceremony for the son of the Max Patricks of North Cass Lake Road and the Donald Martins of Orchard Street.

LIST OF ATTENDANTS

Judy MacArthur of Mt. Clemens was maid of honor. Also attending the bride were Christy Jo MacArthur, South Haven; Diane Coons, Mrs. Vernon Watts, Janet Case, Mrs. Robert Boyd and Judy Sas.

Joseph St. John performed the duties of best man as William Martin, Lee Kaiser, James Wallace, Ed Irwin, Robert Boyd and Nicholas and Richard MacArthur of South Haven ushered. Carmel Crawford was ringbearer.

Following a honeymoon in Northern Michigan, the newlyweds will make their home in Pontiac.

Why Grow Old?

While most women today realize what a great difference clever makeup can create in their appearance, many of them do not know about some of the trickier tricks. It is a rare woman who analyzes her face unless she has some outstanding defect, yet every woman would profit by such self-discovery.

Since hair styling can glamorize the features, it is best to cover the hair when studying them and deciding on makeup procedures. Wrap a towel around your head, a white towel is best. Now look yourself straight in the face!

Are your eyes too close set? If they are you will be surprised by the improvement the following techniques will make. Pluck the brows at the inner corners. Normally the brows start directly above the inner corners of the eyes.

Pluck the brows back a bit, just a little bit. Now extend the brows at the outer corners with an eyebrow pencil.

If you use an eye liner, do not begin at the inner corners of the eyes; start at the middle and extend to the outer corners of the lids. Do the same with mascara. Apply it only to the outer half, or even the outer third of the lashes.

CHANGE EMPHASIS

This takes the emphasis away from the center of the face and makes the eyes seem further apart.

Suppose your eyes are too far apart? Then reverse the technique. If your brows do not begin directly over the inside corners of your eyes, draw them in with a brow pencil.

Reduce the length of the brows at the outer ends by plucking a few hairs. This time you want to bring the emphasis toward the center of the face.

Do not apply mascara to the lashes on the outer third of the lids. Do not extend your eye liner to the outer third, but bring it all the way in to the inner corners of the eyes.

Droopy brows can make a woman look much older. They can also make her look sad. If you have brows which are fairly straight across the center and then droop at the outer ends, corrective measures can make a surprising difference in the charm of your entire face. Do this! Pluck the hairs at the outer droopy ends. Increase the arch of your brows by plucking a little underneath the center of each brow and building up at the center above the brows with an eyebrow pencil.

Candlelight Ceremony for Saturday Vows

Sheryl Lynn White and Hartford Marion Harding Jr. exchanged vows Saturday in the First Presbyterian Church and received guests in the church parlors.

For the candlelight ceremony performed by Rev.

Galen Hershey, the bride chose white silk organza over bridal silk trimmed with re-embroidered lace. Her veil of French illusion was fitted to a pearl tiara.

Tangerine carnations accented her bouquet of yellow roses and Stephanotis.

ATTENDANTS

Maid of honor for the daughter of the James R. Whites of St. Jude Drive was Ruth Digby of Batchawana Bay, Ont., along with bridesmaids Rosalind Surowitz, Colleen O'Neill, Charleen and Carol Hewitt.

Attending as best man to his brother was Robert L. Harding. They are the sons of the Hartford N. Hardings of Flint. Thad Harding, Paul Dawson, Charles White and Lawrence Goodell were ushers.

After a boat trip on Lake Superior the couple will live in Flint. He is a graduate of Flint Junior College and University of Michigan.

A Beauty Hint

Margaret Merrill advises that it is quite simple for every woman to promote an English countrygirl complexion. Her hint to gain a peaches-and-cream loveliness is to dump a cloth with cold water from your refrigerator and press it over your face for a few minutes once or twice a day. Then, to hold the good of the complexion-beautifying cold water smooth on a little tropical oil of olive. This oil is rather scarce and expensive but your drug store should be able to get you a small supply.

Seasoning for Salad Bowl

To season a new wooden salad bowl, rub the inside thoroughly with salad oil before you use the bowl the first time. Repeat this treatment occasionally.

If you like the flavor of garlic, rub the bowl with a cut clove each time before adding salad ingredients.

Rinse immediately after using and dry thoroughly to prevent warping.

Keep Hands Clean

It can't be repeated too often: washing hands with soap helps to avoid spreading disease germs. If possible, use running warm water.

Have You Tried This?

Jam Cake Is Quick

By JANET ODELL
Pontiac Press Food Editor.

Longer ago than we care to admit, Mrs. Harry Clark sent us this good recipe for Blackberry Jam Cake.

Even though the recipe calls for jam, not fresh fruit, we think of it as a summer recipe. So here it is. Easy, too.

BLACKBERRY JAM CAKE
By Mrs. Harry Clark

3 cups sifted flour
1½ cups brown sugar, packed
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon soda

½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon cloves
1 stick margarine, softened
1½ cups blackberry jam
1 cup buttermilk
1 cup chopped walnuts
3 eggs

Combine in order given and mix well. Pour into greased 9x13 pan and bake 40 to 45 minutes at 350 degrees, or until cake tests done.

Mrs. Clark says the cake is quite rich enough without frosting, but go ahead, and frost it if you like.

Mrs. Judge W. Bearden is sharing hostess honors.

Mrs. Myron E. Snyder and her daughter Christine Myers, of Bloomfield Hills, will entertain at a dessert and gadget shower Aug. 17.

On Aug. 19, Mrs. William C. Herrick will give the spinster dinner for her sister in their parents' home on Timberlake Road.

Mrs. Wayne M. Spade, Mrs. Thomas E. Sheehan and Mrs. Andrew G. Brodie were co-hostesses at a recent luncheon-shower in Oakland Hills Country Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin T. Duggan Jr. (Dolores Binard) introduced Miss Lynch to their friends at a recent garden reception and dinner at their home in Mount Clemens.

The Arthur V. Binards of Roseville are parents of the future bridegroom.

Catherine Anne McCormick, daughter of the George McCormicks of Kempf Street was recently graduated from the Hurley Hospital School of Nursing in Flint.

Hypochondriac

Worry Wart Is Not Sick

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE

CASE T-443: Harry G., aged 42, is a "worry wart."

"Dr. Crane," his vivacious wife began, "Harry must be a typical hypochondriac."

"For he frets all the time about his health. And he keeps our medicine cabinet full of pills and bottled medicines."

"He sprays his throat and nostrils and literally takes 5 or 6 different pills every morning."

"Some are red and some are green. Others are yellow, blue or white."

"And he has patronized four different doctors in the last year, but none of them seems to find anything seriously wrong with Harry."

"That's why he changes physicians so frequently, for I really believe he keeps hunting some doctor who will pronounce him as sick."

"Dr. Crane, what's wrong with people who are such chronic worry warts about their health?"

Fear is usually at the bottom of such cases.

And fear is a Siamese twin of introverted thinking.

When you focus mainly on yourself, your perspective grows narrowed.

Then you begin to magnify innocent little gas bubbles percolating along your intestine and worry lest you have cancer or peptic ulcer.

People who are a slave to their "innards" thus are not properly extroverted.

SELF-CENTERED

They are too self-centered for their major focus is on S-E-L-F.

Social conditions often predispose to the creation of worry warts.

For example, a wife with children and many outside church, civic or PTA obligations is not as likely to fear illness as much as a childless widow or a spinster or bachelor.

For when a person is living alone, he or she tends to wonder:

"Suppose something should happen to me! Who'd look after me?"

"Why, I might fall to the floor with a heart attack but nobody'd miss me until I didn't show up for work the next day!"

NEGATIVE IDEAS

And with such negative ideas flitting through the margin of her consciousness, the spinster (or bachelor) soon decides she better have a medical checkup.

Since 70,000,000 Americans do not belong to any church at all, and are thus trying to go it alone, they begin to feel unduly oppressed with financial, as well as health worries.

For nobody is strong enough or smart enough to handle all his problems by himself.

Teaming up with God thus relieves such tension and lowers blood pressure, too.

NOT PARTNERS

But the 70,000,000 are not partners with the Almighty. So they tend to shift their allegiance to physicians and almost worship the M.D.

That's why we medics are swamped each week with millions of worry warts who have no diagnosable physical ailments whatsoever.

For 50% of our office practice (20,000,000 patients call on doctors every week), is composed of hypochondriacs.

The best advice for worry warts is thus to link up with a neighborhood church and become partners with the Almighty.

Then select a suitable partner and get married! For married men live several years longer than bachelors and don't need as many pills.

Child Able to Sense Marriage Deception

By MRS. MURIEL LAWRENCE

Dear Mrs. Lawrence: My husband and I have never got along. Four years ago he wanted me to give him a divorce but finally agreed to try to solve our problems for the sake of our two boys, now 12 and 8.

What I've had to close my eyes to since would fill a book. Now he wants to cancel our agreement, divorce me and marry this other woman.

So all I've had to put up with to protect my boys goes for nothing and they will have to be told the truth after all.

Answer: You won't be telling them anything they don't know. You two parents have not been able to hide your mutual resentment of each other from your children.

Their eyes, ears and nervous systems are well acquainted with it. We don't have to say, "I can't stand your father" to youngsters to make our resentment apparent to them.

The message is conveyed by the way we listen to their father's voice on the telephone, the way our faces shut when he disappoints us, the whole tightness and tension of our responses to him.

So when you tell your boys the truth, their initial shock at it will soon pass — and their own experience of the truth will become available to them and help to make it acceptable.

NOT A FAVOR

And that's not a bad thing to happen to them! Parents who try to sell children the lie that their bad marriages are good ones do not do the children a favor.

For the lie contradicts the evidence transmitted to them by their own eyes, ears and nervous systems.

In the long run, that contradiction of what they sense about the two people who begot them can be more destructive than losing the illusion of their "happy home."

They can recover from that sadness because they've got their own lives ahead of them.

DISTRUST

But they may not be able to recover from their distrust of what they see, hear and feel is going on in other people.

The distrust may remain with them, making them so uncertain of the judgment of other people that they become anxious and apprehensive whenever a judgment must be made.

They can become the kind of groupings who cannot be content with any decision they make about friends, employers or sexual partners lest it be mistaken; and are compelled to pick at it, question it over and over.

So don't be so sorry that you are going to confirm the information which your children's senses have been transmitting to them for a long, long time. It is certainly pleasant to be the child of parents who like each other.

But it is essential to be a eyes, ears and nervous system, yes, ears and nervous system.

N-1329

When the first flush of Fall has faded away and winter has come to stay, it's time to add spice to your wardrobe's life with the addition of a shift.

Bill Blass's shift belts itself into shape or breezes along nipped in at the waist with a free flowing back. No matter which shape you choose for the waist, the bodice always remains more than perfection.

The tapered darts that fan out at the neck are naturally tailored and undeniably flattering. The last pleat cleverly doubles as the raglan sleeve.

The picture is soft and tailored which makes this dress a treasured part of any wardrobe. A perfect design for smooth finished fabrics. To select your correct size, use Spadea's exclusive ready-to-wear size chart.

Lions Outlast Redskin 'Bombs' With Firecracker Bursts

Plum Passes to Barr for Winning TD

Only Eight Seconds Left When Exhibition Opener Won, 28-27

By BRUNO L. KEARNS
Sports Editor, Pontiac Press
CHARLOTTE, N.C. — It was the "firecracker offense" against the "bomb" in the battle of two entirely different offenses Saturday night when the Detroit Lions and the Washington Redskins opened their 1964 NFL exhibition season.

Without losing their composure as the clock ticked off the final seconds of the game, the Lions stuck to their short bursts into the line and the short passing game to defeat the Redskins, 28-27, before 18,200 fans in Memorial Stadium here.

After three long aerial bombs of 55, 61 and 23 yards by reserve quarterback George Igo to Bobby Mitchell and Angelo Cola, the Redskins held a 27-14 lead with only 4:19 left to play.

Milt Plum, who came into the game in the second half, then started throwing toward the sidelines with Gail Cogdill, Terry Barr and Pat Studstill as his targets.

BIG CATCH
With 3:30 showing on the clock and 4:26 down on the six yard line, Plum threw high to Cogdill, who grabbed the ball still inside the end zone for the touchdown. With Wayne Walker's kick it was 27-21 for Skins.

A beautiful 54 yard run by Tom Watkins was the big play in this drive.

Washington expected an on-side kickoff, but Walker booted the ball high and it bounced off the goal posts with the Skins taking over on the 20.

At 1:50 on the clock the Skins had to punt and the Lions had the ball 60 yards away. Short shots to Studstill, Cogdill and to Barr moved the ball to the Skins' 30.

Less than 30 seconds remained and Plum ran two plays from one huddle, and his second was a pass to Barr on the 10, who stopped the clock by going out of bounds.

Coch George Wilson sent in a messenger and with only eight seconds left, Barr made a beautiful catch of the planned pass under the goal post to tie the score.

The Skins threw 11 men on the line to stop the extra point, but Walker split the uprights and this was the way the 1964 season started for the Lions.

It was a well earned victory for the Lions and coach Wilson was satisfied. He used 48 players in the game, saw the offensive line do a credible job blocking for his runners who gained 132 yards on the ground and saw the defensive line limit the Redskins to only 20 yards rushing.

The downfall came in pass defense of the secondary and in the offensive blocking for the passer.

In any case, the Redskins admit they are a much better ball club than they are given credit for.

IZO DOES WELL

The Washington defense has improved vastly and Izo made coach Bill McPeak forget about the injury to Sonny Jurgensen, at least temporarily.

He shocked the Lions early when he hit Mitchell with a 58 yard touchdown pass early in the game.

The Lions then fought back by putting together an 83 yard march on short carries and a pass to tie the score in the first quarter.

A pair of fumbles by Earl Morrall, who started at quarterback, spurred Washington to a pair of first half field goals, 27 and 30 yards by rookie John Seeborg of Arizona State.

New Lions' Cadence Call Key to Win

The new quarterback calling cadence installed just this year paid off early for the Detroit Lions. It was instrumental in the 28-27 exhibition victory Saturday night over the Redskins by drawing a Redskin lineman offside and earning the Lions five yards during the touchdown march in the final seconds.

Milt Plum shouting the color and the long cadence came just back to pass just after the Skin lineman crossed over the line of scrimmage.

The penalty flag was dropped but Plum went through with his pass and it was intercepted by defensive back Lonnie Sanders.

The ball, however, was brought back and moved from the 30 to the 25-yard line from where Plum hit Barr with the sideline pass to stop the clock and set the game-winning touchdown, 15 yards, to Barr with eight seconds left.

The Bears put the cadence count into effect last year, successfully drawing opponents offside. The Skins had 75 yards in penalties, with five off-side calls against them.

Clemson Stars Net Champs

A pair of Clemson University net stars scored a clean sweep in the finals of the Oakland County Open Tennis Tournament yesterday at Oakland University.

Tom Long and Dakrin Ornelkian, both of Northville, knocked off the defending champions in the doubles division and Long trimmed Ornelkian to win the singles championship.

The two teams raced through their preliminary doubles matches last week with ease, and posted a 6-2, 8-7 victory over Ralph Alee and Dick Minewasser in the final yesterday.

The Oakland champions left immediately after the finals for Columbia, S.C., where they are entered in the South Carolina Closed Championships which open today.

Long, a junior, and Ornelkian, a sophomore at Clemson, both members of the college tennis squad, staged a tense duel in the singles finale.

The newtwines were scheduled to start their homecoming in northern Michigan late Saturday but Alee delayed the start until he finished the doubles match yesterday.

A hard-hitting Nick's Bar team from Midland showed why it is leading the Inter-City Softball League on its visit to the Drayton Plains diamond Saturday night.

Nick's dumped Pontiac's 300 Bowl, 7-2, and Waterford's Spencer Field Covering, 12-2, pounding out 20 hits in building its pace-setting mark to 10-1.

Gerry Giroux had two of the four 300 Bowl hits and drove in a run. The city champions are 9-4 in the Inter-City circuit.

Nick's had nine safeties off the offerings of Floyd Hicks and John Herrington.

Ironwood, Mich., a twin city of Hurley, Wis., went all the way to the Wisconsin Little League baseball championship Saturday by Menasha.

TENNIS CHAMPIONS — Dakrin Ornelkian (left) and Tom Long, both of Northville, team up to win the doubles division of the Oakland County Open Tennis Tournament Sunday at Oakland University, and Long defeated Ornelkian to take the singles crown.

Wins GAM Title

Stevens Likes Long Courses

By FLETCHER SPEARS
Michigan's amateurs have a chance to win what they lackle Li-vonia's Bud Stevens on the long courses, but few can match the stocky shotmaker on the long layouts.

"This is my kind of course," Stevens said of the 7,280-yard Warwick Hills club near Grand Blanc after he had wrapped up his fourth Golf Association of Michigan championship yesterday.

In taking the title, the 1963 Michigan amateur king became only the second player in the 45-year history of the GAM tourney to win the championship four times.

Bob Babish B. STEVENS of Detroit Golf Club turned the trick with victories in 1940, '50, '53 and '54.

Stevens bagged his first two wins in 1958 and '59 and picked up his third in 1962.

His fourth was the easiest of all and enabled him to even an old score with Bill Michaels of Detroit Golf Club.

Michaels, 47, vice-president in charge of television with the Storer Broadcasting Company in Detroit, defeated Stevens in the national amateur qualifying round in 1959 in sudden death.

The match ended in the dark on the sixth hole.

Michaels was never in the match yesterday with the long-hitting Stevens.

Stevens, his booming drives settling 275 to 300 yards off the tee, won the first five holes of the 36-hole playoff and finished the match on the 26th hole, 11 and 10.

Stevens, playing out of Western Golf Club, toured the first nine in even par 36 and moved into No. 10 five up.

He picked up two more with birdie putts of 15 and 4 feet on Nos. 13 and 14 and won No. 18 with a par to go 8 up.

They halved the first three holes on the second round, and Stevens put the match out of reach with pars on Nos. 4 and 5 and a birdie on the 383-yard No. 6.

Michaels, 11 down, blasted out of a trap on the par 5, 505-yard No. 7 and gained his putt for a par. Stevens missed a 15-footer that would have ended the match but he tapped in for a par to halve the hole.

SHORT OF PIN
On No. 8, a 170-yard par 3, Stevens rapped his tee shot into the woods to the right of the green and Michaels rolled his shot into a bunker 40-yards short of the pin.

Both chipped on and three-putted for double-bogey 5's and halving the hole gave Stevens the title.

Flint's Steve Braun rolled to a 2 and 1 victory over Ray Palmer of Grosse Ile to capture the first flight championship.

John Harcar of Essex took the second-flight title with an easy 8 and 6 triumph over Phil Rouse of Indianwood.

In the third flight, John Ausen of Hillsdale scored a 1 up decision over Bruce Billings of Oakland Hills.

Richard Olsen of Bloomfield Hills, playing out of Detroit Golf Club, downed Bill Goggin of Pine River, 4 and 2 in the fourth flight final.

Defending champion Jim Smith of Lakeport was ousted Saturday by George Linklater, 4 and 3. Michaels knocked off Linklater in the semifinals, 1 up.

Michaels was never in the match yesterday with the long-hitting Stevens.

Stevens, his booming drives settling 275 to 300 yards off the tee, won the first five holes of the 36-hole playoff and finished the match on the 26th hole, 11 and 10.

Stevens, playing out of Western Golf Club, toured the first nine in even par 36 and moved into No. 10 five up.

He picked up two more with birdie putts of 15 and 4 feet on Nos. 13 and 14 and won No. 18 with a par to go 8 up.

They halved the first three holes on the second round, and Stevens put the match out of reach with pars on Nos. 4 and 5 and a birdie on the 383-yard No. 6.

Michaels, 11 down, blasted out of a trap on the par 5, 505-yard No. 7 and gained his putt for a par. Stevens missed a 15-footer that would have ended the match but he tapped in for a par to halve the hole.

On No. 8, a 170-yard par 3, Stevens rapped his tee shot into the woods to the right of the green and Michaels rolled his shot into a bunker 40-yards short of the pin.

Both chipped on and three-putted for double-bogey 5's and halving the hole gave Stevens the title.

Flint's Steve Braun rolled to a 2 and 1 victory over Ray Palmer of Grosse Ile to capture the first flight championship.

John Harcar of Essex took the second-flight title with an easy 8 and 6 triumph over Phil Rouse of Indianwood.

In the third flight, John Ausen of Hillsdale scored a 1 up decision over Bruce Billings of Oakland Hills.

Richard Olsen of Bloomfield Hills, playing out of Detroit Golf Club, downed Bill Goggin of Pine River, 4 and 2 in the fourth flight final.

Defending champion Jim Smith of Lakeport was ousted Saturday by George Linklater, 4 and 3. Michaels knocked off Linklater in the semifinals, 1 up.

Axes His Wife, Children, Self

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — A man with an ax stalked into a hotel Sunday and killed his German-born wife, two children and himself, police reported.

Police identified him as Indonesian-born John Mulder, 48. They said the trouble started when his wife left him a few weeks ago and applied for a divorce.

Mulder entered a Roman Catholic hotel in Scheveningen, a North Sea resort near The Hague, police said, and attacked his 2-month-old daughter Louisa as she lay in her cot. Also injured in the same room were a nun, Gerardina Van Werkhoven, and another woman described as Miss Nonne, 29.

Police said Mulder walked up to a second-floor room in the hotel and killed his wife and 16-month-old daughter Maria with the ax.

Then Mulder struck himself with the ax and plunged 25 feet out of a window, police said.

Will Be Married Sunday

Edie Adams Finally Debt-Free

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer
HOLLYWOOD — Next Sunday Edie Adams will marry Marty Mills of the music publishing family, thus ending a chapter of courage and determination.

For a year and a half, the talented actress has followed a hard and lonely course in untangling the financial mess left after her husband, comedian Ernie Kovacs, was killed in an auto crash.

Edie eschewed the help of Ernie's many famous friends, who proposed a television special or series to benefit the comedian's widow and three daughters. Instead, she undertook a nonstop schedule that included three movies, a series of television shows, night club and summer theater tours, and record albums.

Her industry succeeded in extracting the estate from its burden of debts and unpaid taxes. "But he really killed me," she admitted. "After it was all over, I realized if I had to do just one thing more, I would have collapsed. I didn't have the energy."

BACK AT HOME

Edie is back at her Coldwater Canyon home, struggling to get it ready for the wedding. She and Mills will be married before their families only, with a big reception following at the Beverly Hilton. The pair will honeymoon in Hawaii. Mills, 37, and a bachelor, is a New Yorker who will now help conduct the family business in Hollywood.

How did they meet? "The first time I was back in 1953, at a party in Red Buttons' apartment in New York," she recalled. "I was dating Ernie at the time. I saw Marty off and on through the years, but it was very casual.

"Then last January I was in New York having dinner with Janet Leigh and her husband, Bob Brandt. The next day he called me for a date. I had to break it because of work, and it's a wonder he ever called me again."

CALLED AGAIN

"But he did, and our first date was — Red Buttons' wedding! Later he took me to dinner at a very fancy restaurant, and I remember thinking how formal he was. I found out later he was thinking the same about me."

She added that Marty got along beautifully with the three girls of her family. From the start, there are two daughters of Kovacs' previous marriage, 17 and 15½, and his and Edie's Mia, 5.

"The girls adore him," said Edie. "He gives them what they need: a man's authority. He tells them they have to be in at a certain hour, that's it, and not five minutes late."

What will marriage do to her career? "I won't be flying at the same frantic pace. I do want to continue working, because that is a part of my life. But I want to enjoy the luxury of picking what to do. I want to aim for quality instead of quantity, which is what I had to take during the past year and a half."

Fire Hits Refinery; No One Is Injured

DETROIT (AP)—Fire flared through a section of the Socony Mobil Oil Co. refinery in nearby Brownstown Township Sunday night. No one was injured.

Township Fire Chief Watson McGraw said there was no explosion and that his men, aided by Rockwood firemen, were able to prevent the blaze from spreading to other parts of the installation.

The amount of the loss and the cause of the fire were not immediately determined.

Afghans' Democracy

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP)—Asked by King Mohammed Zahir to make a way for more democracy in Afghanistan, Premier Mohammad Yusuf has submitted a constitution barring members of the royal family from high political posts. The National Assembly voted on the constitution in September.

Senate Urged to Rap Russia Anti-Semitism

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee was urged today to approve a resolution that condemns the Soviet Union's treatment of its Jewish citizens.

"No policy is more firmly fixed in the conduct of U.S. foreign affairs than this moral imperative to come to the aid of oppressed peoples," said Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., in prepared testimony.

"The diplomatic and historical record is complete and honorable and one that should make every American hold his head high."

Similarly, Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., said in a statement prepared for delivery: "The world has learned from bitter experience of the dangers of the persecution of the Jews. We have learned that it is a symptom of a greater sickness, a symptom which, though it hurts the sufferer, is not felt by others until the sickness spreads."

URGES PASSING
And Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., said in a statement submitted to the committee: "This proposal calls for an expression of the sense of the U.S. Senate in opposition to religious persecution. Even if it saves but one life, it is worth that effort of passing this resolution."

Anti-Semitism is a criminal offense in the Soviet Union, and the Soviet Constitution guarantees equal rights to all its citizens.

Nevertheless, visitors to the country and students of Soviet affairs claim Russian Jews are being persecuted. They cite the reduction in the number of synagogues, references to Jewish identity in accounts of alleged economic crimes, and restrictions affecting traditional foods and customs.

The resolution has the support of the American Jewish Conference.

ence on Soviet Jewry, which represents 24 national American Jewish organizations. It is being sponsored by 64 senators.

Gifted Students Vary in Characteristics

By LESLIE J. NASON, ED. D.
At the beginning of each school year, someone must decide which pupils are to be placed in accelerated classes.
Everyone is agreed that for the good of the country and the happiness of the individuals involved, gifted students should be helped to develop their special abilities. But many grouping gifted children in special classes to stimulate higher achievement does not always produce the desired effect.
There are several considerations that teachers and parents should keep in mind in deciding whether or not to place a pupil in an accelerated group.

• Many of the academically able are not truly gifted! They do excellent school work by making the most of their ability and giving time to their work. These students should not be allowed to choose more than one accelerated group.
While they produce good results now, they might rebel about the work two or more special classes would require. Possibly only a single interest and ability should be fostered in an accelerated class.
• The gifted are not a group.

Their I.Q.'s may cover a range of more than 50 points. Their special talents and interests vary more widely than those of average students.
• Special grouping motivates a few to higher accomplishment, but it has a negative effect on others, especially those with incorrect learning habits. The very fact that they have superior minds makes it possible for them to succeed well in the early grades in spite of incorrect procedures of learning. What these students need is individual help in straightening out their study skills.

Students associated with these five characteristics make high grades. When one or more are missing, grades suffer. Such an analysis gives both parents and counselors cues as to where support is needed.
• They plan to go to college.
• They feel their parents expect them to go to college.
• They have a fairly specific vocational goal. This may be temporary but in any event they are goal-minded.
• They think their parents approve of their goal; at least they do not disapprove.
• They feel that someone is interested in their success. In almost all cases this inspiration comes from their parents.

Rather than reliance on special grouping, the future course of gifted students should be based on a study of each individual.

The high school student's concept of the present and his plans for the future are closely associated with his accomplishments.

Superior and gifted students at high school level make high grades under the following conditions:

• They plan to go to college.
• They feel their parents expect them to go to college.
• They have a fairly specific vocational goal. This may be temporary but in any event they are goal-minded.
• They think their parents approve of their goal; at least they do not disapprove.
• They feel that someone is interested in their success. In almost all cases this inspiration comes from their parents.

Jacoby on Bridge

By OSWALD JACOBY
When Henley wrote, "I am the captain of my fate," he could not have been thinking of some unfortunate bridge player, whose partner insists on taking full control of the bidding and the play.

Such a partner is particularly annoying to me because I have a slight case of the control habit myself.

Thus, I opened the queen of hearts instead of the three spot against South's three diamond contract.

My queen held the trick and I shifted to the deuce of clubs. My partner won with the ace, and promptly cashed his ace and king of hearts.

Then he led a fourth heart. South discarded a club and, while I ruffed valiantly with the eight spot and forced dummy to overruff with the ace, nothing good came of it. South drew trumps and ran off the rest of the tricks with dummy's spade suit.

Three diamonds bid and

Astrological Forecast

By SYDNEY OMARE
For Tuesday
The sun was in the constellation of Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19). Stress to get patient. Approach to life with a sense of security, restlessness of family members. Try to cultivate a common sense. Take nothing for granted. Be thorough.
TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20): If you give your best, you can be successful. Serve well — and you will be served in return. Keep your methods and challenges.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20): If you entertain in lavish manner — you will entertain in lavish manner. If you are in power in simplicity. Refuse to be in power in simplicity. Refuse to be in power in simplicity.
CANCER (June 21 to July 21): Tendency to be impatient. This is caused by uncertainty. Recognize this fact. Realize you will gain more through CAUTIOUS APPROACH. Events later in day will emphasize this.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 23): Take care in dealing with relatives. In-law. Be specific. Make sure there are no misunderstandings. Certain arrangements have been "building up". Get them off your chest. But be diplomatic!
VIRGO (Aug. 24 to Sept. 23): Also forthcoming from friends — both emotional and material. GIVE OTHERS BENEFIT OF DOUBT. You need allies. You don't get them by being stubborn. You need LIBRA (Sept. 24 to Oct. 23): Time for rest. Relax. Key is excellent CONFIDENCE. You can make circumstances work for you. You can make circumstances work for you.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24 to Nov. 21): You require it at a distance. Today your instincts are sharp. But it is up to you "practical" side to the situation. Be sure you are in a LOGICAL APPROACH.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Being "VERSATILE" will create gain. Your mind is very active. Be alert when question arises, bring it to forefront. There are many roads to your goal.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19): You are strictly on your own today. Don't depend on partners, agreements or promises. Be confident. Display talents and abilities. Some are watching and on to your side.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18): Good hour ahead could be a disaster. Today your mind is very active. Be alert when question arises, bring it to forefront. There are many roads to your goal.
PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20): Behind the scenes. Don't form conclusions. Be skeptical. Obtain hint from today's AQUARIUS message.

Russia Issues Call for Meeting to Prepare for Party Parley

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has issued a call for a Dec. 15 conference to prepare for a meeting of the world Communist movement next summer, Pravda, the Soviet Communist party organ, announced today.

The preparatory meeting of 26 Communist parties would proceed even if the Chinese Communists carry out their threat to boycott it, Pravda said.

Pravda dismissed Chinese objections that a world party conference would be illegal without their participation.

Peking has warned that a showdown meeting on the Soviet-Chinese dispute would result in a final split of the movement.

Pravda accused the Chinese of employing blackmail and added: "But after all, it is precisely a refusal to participate in the conference that would signify a desire to 'formalize' a split."

TOKYO (AP) — Japan asked the Soviet Union today for notice whenever it plans to launch rockets into the Pacific, the Foreign Ministry announced.

The Soviet Union announced July 31 that it will conduct a series of rocket tests in the Pacific from Aug. 4 through Dec. 30.

Japan said in its note that it reserves all rights for compensation for damages or losses incurred by Japanese nationals as a result of the Soviet experiments.

HONG KONG (AP) — Communist China started pressing huge numbers of youths, factory workers and government officials into military service three weeks before the Gulf of Tonkin crisis, according to delayed official reports.

The reports said more than half a million people had been drafted and more are being called up.

Men and women are being taught "grenade throwing, aircraft defense, forced marches, emergency assembly and sabotage." Radio China showed in the central China province of Honan said.

The station said that children were taking part in the training.

The reports were picked up by reliable Western research and intelligence organizations here.

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI has rewarded three Vatican elevator operators for long service by making them knights of the Order of Pope St. Sylvester.

A papal letter, disclosed today, conferred the decoration on Carlo Venturini, Felice Bandiera and Nicola Mariani.

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — A jailful of giggling, swearing Vietnamese prostitutes, drenched with fire hoses, battled police today. The women won their freedom.

Shouting "We want out," at least 50 of the girls held police at bay with bricks, steel bars and rocks.

Authorities were trying to enter their living quarters in prison.

on to put out fires the girls had started.

The girls were released by the city's social welfare director.

Police said the riot followed a jailbreak by 10 girls.

WILLIAM G. HARRELL

War Hero Kills Self and Couple

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (U)—A Medal of Honor holder killed himself and a married couple by triggering a rifle with hook-like artificial hands, a medical examiner said, but officers could find no motive for the shooting.

William G. Harrell, 42, a former Marine Sergeant who lost both hands while fighting off a Japanese charge on Iwo Jima in 1945, died from a bullet wound in the head on his driveway early yesterday.

Medical examiner Ruben Santos said Harrell minutes before had killed Edward E. Zumwalt, 28, another World War II amputee. Zumwalt's wife, Geraldine, 43.

The mysterious shooting occurred before dawn in a fashionable area of the city. Zumwalt's body was beside Harrell. Mrs. Zumwalt lay dead in the kitchen.

For years, Harrell worked in the Veterans Administration helping other battle-scarred veterans rehabilitate themselves.

REAL SHOCK
"He was tops," Percy J. Mims, manager of the regional VA office here, said. "He seemed in good spirits when I saw him last Friday. This is a real shock."

The Medal of Honor, high-earned a serviceman can receive, was given Harrell after he and a fellow Marine, Pfc. Andrew Jackson Carter of Pánuco, Tex., fought face-to-face with the enemy on March 3, 1945.

Harrell and Carter, who occupied adjoining foxholes on a company perimeter, later became known as the "two-man Alamo" to buddies.

The citation said after a grenade tore off Harrell's left hand and fractured his thigh, he fought on. A charging Japanese then wounded him with a saber. Harrell shot him with his pistol.

TWO MORE CHARGES
Two more enemy soldiers charged, one tossing a grenade near his head. Harrell killed one of them and pushed the other away as the grenade exploded blowing off Harrell's right hand and killing the Japanese.

At dawn, when Harrell was evacuated, there were 12 dead Japanese. He was credited with killing five.

Flint Gun Blast Hits City Man

A Pontiac man was among five persons injured last night when a man poked a shotgun through a rear window of a Flint church and fired a blast at the congregation.

William Redden, 39, of 494 California was treated for minor abrasions of the right shoulder at Hurley Hospital and released shortly after midnight.

Three other persons, all from Flint, were treated and released. A Flint woman was more seriously injured and is still hospitalized.

The shooting occurred during a service at Mr. Pilgrim Baptist Church.

Police said a man carrying a shotgun was seen running from the neighborhood.

A detective reported that the shooting apparently had some connection with marital problems.

31 Are Missing
Off Luzon; Boat Thought Lost

MANILA (AP)—A motorboat with 31 persons on board has been missing since Thursday off the coast of southeastern Luzon. A plane searched the area yesterday without results, the center said. The constabulary is continuing the search on land.

The Philippine news service reported the unofficial death toll from the typhoon which hit the Northern Luzon last Friday has risen to 23.

Forest land makes up almost one-third of the earth's land area outside of the Arctic waste regions.

EVE OF CONFLICT

Crowds Give Earl Charge—
He Tingles as He Mingles

By EARL WILSON

NEW YORK—Everywhere you go in New York City now, you see herds and hordes of people... little knots of people.

They're shuffling along Broadway, trailing behind a tour conductor, blaring the way to the Louvre... forming little islands of wide-eyed faces gazing at celebrities entering places like Sardi's...

You have to be an out-of-town square like me to get a tinge out of mingling with the World's Fair multitudes.

I dropped in at the St. James to see Carol Channing get her nightly standing ovation at "Hello, Dolly!" When she waves to the audience, it waves back. "Incredible!" said a theater veteran shaking his head. "Never anything like it in my 25 years!"

Carol was all dressed up even to a hat when I got to her dressing room... off to the Americana Royal Box to catch Phyllis Diller.

"Carol and I are both blind and wear contact lenses," Phyllis said along about 1:30 a.m. "I can't see the audience at all. Why, I worked three nights in a club in Milwaukee that was closed."

Phyllis claims her husband "Pang" never came into her kitchen—his "afraid of rats." She says 5:30 p.m. every day is "Ogre Time—when the beast comes home with a briefcase full of snakes and his ulcer... but I sleep till 4:30, spread some dirty laundry out on the furniture and tell him what a hard day I've had. I've used the same dirty laundry for 7 years!"

The women in the audience howled. Could they be doing the same?

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "Make ten consecutive correct guesses and you've established a reputation as an expert—which lasts until you've made one little mistake."

EARL'S PEARLS: A foundation is a large body of money, surrounded by people who want some—Dwight Macdonald.

There's little difference between the tourists of today and those of 25 years ago. They're still buying the Brooklyn Bridge, only now they put it on Diners Club. That's earl, brother.

Death Takes
U.S. CartoonistToonerville Trolley
Delight of America

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP)—Cartoonist Fontaine Fox, the Toonerville Trolley conductor, is dead.

Fox's Toonerville Trolley cartoons delighted American newspaper readers for 35 years.

He died in a Greenwich hospital Sunday at the age of 80.

It is said that Fox earned more than $2 million from his drawings of Toonerville's rickety trolley and rollicking folks. They appeared from 1929 to 1955 in as many as 300 newspapers.

One of his characters, Mickey (himself) McGuire, was so famous that a child actor, Joe Yule Jr., adopted the name.

ANOTHER NAME

When Fox proved in court that he owned a copyright on the character, young Yule took another name—Mickey Rooney.

The fictitious town of Toonerville was a combination of Louisville, Ky., Fox's hometown, and Pelham Manor, N.Y., where he once visited a friend.

Fox had lampooned a rickety Louisville trolley in early cartoons for the Louisville Herald.

When he visited Pelham Manor, a suburb of New York City, he told a trolley motorman the name of the friend he was going to see. The motorman stopped the trolley, walked up a hill, and pointed out the friend's house to Fox.

HITS ON IDEA

Thus the cartoonist hit upon the idea of the Toonerville Trolley—ramshackle and tate, but folksy.

It became the symbol of broken-down transportation everywhere, and Americans loved it. When Pelham Manor's own trolley was replaced by a bus in 1927, a thousand people turned out to watch its last run.

Fox peopled Toonerville mostly with caricatures of his family and boyhood friends. The terrible temper of Mr. Bang was his father; powerful Katrina, a mixture of two family cooks, the Little Scorpions, his boyhood gang.

Then there was Aunt Eppie Hogg, the fattest woman in three counties; Whiskey-Bill Worlie, southern Simpson, the Toonerville cop, and the trolley's skipper.

LAST PANEL

Shortly before he drew his last panel in February 1955, Fox had the trolley shattered in an accident, transformed into a contraption with the upper half trolley and the lower half bus.

Fox is survived by his widow, the former Edith Elizabeth Hinz, two daughters, a brother and two sisters.

The funeral will be Tuesday, with burial in Carmel, N.Y.

Police Get
Turn at 'Bat'

NEWARK, N.J. (AP)—Reginald Mourning, 12, entered police headquarters Sunday night and asked the desk officer:

"Do the police want a bat?"

Thinking he was being offered a piece of baseball equipment, Lt. John Madaras answered:

"Sure."

The boy handed him a paper bag containing a bat of the winged variety. He said he'd caught it near the heart of Newark's business section.

Madaras sent it to a city shelter.

Mansfield Hoping for Aug. 22 Adjournment, Not Counting on It

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress pushes ahead today in a drive to clear the legislative decks and adjourn by the end of next week.

The target date for adjournment is Aug. 22 — two days before the Democratic National Convention opens in Atlantic City, N.J.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield said Sunday night in a television-radio interview (NBC-Meet The Press) that he still hopes for adjournment by the 22nd, but added "I wouldn't bet on it."

If Congress doesn't finish its work by that date, he said, it will be back on the job after the convention.

VERY PROUD

Mansfield said "I am very proud of what this Congress and its predecessor have done."

Asked about help from the Republican side of the aisle, he said "It has been very significant and much of the legislation which we've passed would not have been possible without Republican support."

He said Senate Republican

Leader Everett M. Dirksen has "placed his country ahead of his party" and contributed particularly in foreign affairs.

Mansfield said he thought Dirksen's proposal to delay reapportionment of state legislatures stands a good chance of Senate passage.

The Democratic leader said he had been in touch with Dirksen and legal advisers over the weekend trying to work out another way to ease the effects of the Supreme Court's decision of last June 15 which said each legislative district must be "substantially equal" in population. It said both houses of state legislatures must be apportioned on a "one person, one vote formula."

Dirksen in turn came up with a bill that would delay reapportionment for two years for some states, four years for others. He said he would include it as a rider on the foreign aid authorization bill. Mansfield said he doesn't believe Dirksen's approach on the delay "is the correct one" and "may well turn out" to be unconstitutional.

While the Senate continues its foreign aid debate today, the House takes up a bill to liberalize veterans' pension laws.

The House may tackle a housing bill about the middle of the week. The measure would extend the present public housing program for another year and increase it by 35,000 housing units.

The House also is scheduled this week to decide whether to try working out a compromise on a Senate-passed measure to strict quotas on imported meat. The administration, fearful of the effect on U.S. negotiations for freer access to European markets for agricultural products, opposes the quota plan.

Supporters of a health care plan for the aged under Social Security continue to press their case before the Senate Finance Committee. There will be an effort to attach this program to the pending Social Security bill. But any such move, even if successful in the Senate, would face formidable opposition from House conferees.

The Senate also has on its calendar some $7 billion in appropriation bills for agricultural programs and military construction and the program to attack the economic problems of the Appalachian area.

Dem Confab Seating Post Goes to Michigan Negro

EAST LANSING (AP)—Michigan's only Negro congressman, Rep. Charles Diggs Jr., D-Detroit, was picked Sunday to serve as one of the state's two members on the credentials committee of the Democratic National Convention.

The appointment puts Diggs in what could be a key position should a fight develop at the convention later this month over seating of Mississippi delegates.

Michigan, along with several other states, is pledged to fight for seating of a Mississippi delegation which has Negro members, calls itself the "Freedom Democrats" and opposes the all-white regular delegation.

Some observers predict this could be one of the biggest battles of the Democratic convention which opens Aug. 24 in Atlantic City, N.J.

Diggs' selection for the credentials committee came as the 102-member Michigan delegation met here to complete its pre-convention affairs.

Selected with Diggs for the credentials committee was Mrs. Mabel Stolt of Owosso.

The states in which Democrats have formally endorsed the "Freedom Democrats" as the Mississippi delegation are expected to carry the fight to the convention floor if the credentials committee approves the all-white delegation instead.

Diggs acknowledged Sunday that there is talk of a compromise in which both delegations might be seated, with their votes divided, as a way of keeping peace in the party.

But he said, "It's too soon to talk about compromise," and added that Michigan could be expected to be "in the vanguard" if the fight develops over the "Freedom Democrats."

Diggs said he would be willing to take a leadership role in pressing the demand for seating the Negro delegates, either in the committee or on the floor.

Rewards Doubled in Cass Lake Death

Rewards for the arrest and conviction of the parties involved in the hit and run boat death of Alan L. Akerley doubled today with the announcement of offers from two private citizens.

Added to the $1,300 already put up were rewards of $1,000 from Detroit attorney Irwin I. Cohn, 3235 Interlaken, West Bloomfield Township, and $300 from Sylvan Lake builder Samuel G. Warwick, 2650 Island Court.

On Saturday The Pontiac Press offered a $1,000 reward for the arrest and conviction "of any or all of the guilty parties."

Earlier, the Marina News, a weekly newspaper for boating enthusiasts offered a $300 reward for information leading to the conviction of persons involved in the "wanted hit-run boat killing."

Boy Plunges to Rocky Death

Independence Twp.
Youth Dies in North

A 15-year-old Independence Township boy plunged to his death yesterday morning when he slipped off the edge of a Lake Superior shoreline cliff and landed on rocks 100 feet below.

William Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Jackson Jr., 414 Clinton, was killed instantly in the fall, according to Dr. Lloyd W. Howe, Marquette County medical examiner.

The boy was one of 81 Pontiac area youngsters attending a two-week summer camp at Big Bay, 20 miles northwest of Marquette. The camp is sponsored and chaperoned by 16 Pontiac area teachers.

Camp Director William J. Green, a teacher at Waterford Township High School, said the Jackson boy and a companion, Andrew Wigent, wandered away from the camp without permission about 9:30 a.m.

They were walking along a trail at the edge of a cliff about a mile from the camp when the youth slipped and tumbled off the edge, Green said.

PULLED FROM WATER

His companion, who is the son of the camp physician, Dr. Ralph D. Wigent, 101 Melvin, made his way to the bottom of the cliff and pulled him from shallow water at the base of the rocks, according to Green.

Wigent attempted to revive his friend with mouth-to-mouth resuscitation. Failing this, he called to some other boys nearby a mile away for help.

A boat was dispatched to the scene and the fatally injured youth was brought back to camp headquarters, where he was pronounced dead after examination by Dr. Wigent.

The boy's parents, who were visiting relatives in Ohio, were notified immediately, and arrangements were made to transport the body to the Lewis E. Wint Funeral Home in Clarkston.

State police said camp officials were blameless for the tragedy.

Akerley, 30, of 2184 Park Circle, Keego Harbor, was killed by an inboard motorboat while swimming in a marked-off area at Dodge State Park on Cass Lake last Monday night.

LAKE STAKE-OUT

Over the weekend, Sheriff Frank Irons placed additional men at the lake on the theory that, if the craft is still on the lake, an attempt might be made to remove it without being seen among the hundreds of boats.

Many boats fitting the description of the hit and run craft have been checked by the sheriff's office, state and local police, but all have been cleared, Irons said.

He said no new information has been received that looks encouraging.

"We are still receiving tips and each one is being investigated as we get it," said Irons.

BOAT DESCRIPTION

From a companion of the victim and several other witnesses at the scene, police gained information that the hit and run craft had a mahogany veneer and was equipped with a spotlight. There may have been four young men in the craft.

Akerley's companion, Sheila Brennen, 17, of 123 Chewton, Bloomfield Township, has stated that the spotlight was shining directly on her and Akerley just before the boat hit him.

She said Akerley pushed her under the water just before the craft passed over them. She was not injured.

The boat was speeding away when the surfaced and Akerley had disappeared from sight. His body was recovered at 11:30 p.m., about two hours after the incident.

Steelworkers to Eye Contract

Ratification Would End Crippling Strike

A crippling strike called one week ago by reinforced steel construction workers could be ended at a union contract ratification meeting tonight.

Proposals made by contractor groups will be put before the 350-member Reinforced Steel Local 426 of Detroit, an affiliate of the Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers.

Their work has tied up numerous heavy construction projects throughout Southeast Michigan, including completion of Pontiac-Clinton River drain enclosure.

Finishing two small stretches of the drain will clear the way for paving West Wide Track and unjamming the city's redevelopment program.

One union source said ratification appeared likely since contractors are past the midpoint of the building season and facing pressure brought by clients.

The local's previous contract expired May 1 but members continued working under a 90-day extension.

Head Toward Red North

U.S. Fighters in Viet Air Alerts

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — U.S. jet fighters equipped with air-to-air missiles have been heading toward the Communist north the past few days to meet the threat of approaching Red Chinese MIG planes, U.S. military sources say.

Though no clashes have taken place, the opposing flights were reported close enough to make positive radar identification, the sources added.

Saigon, capital of South Viet Nam, held an air raid alert yesterday, its first since World War II when U.S. planes bombed the Japanese-occupied city.

Communist propaganda organs renewed charges against the United States for its reprisal action against North Viet Nam last week. And North Viet Nam indicated it was rejecting a U.N. Security Council invitation to take part in a debate on the crisis.

Informants said the Chinese MIGs, flying from Hainan Island across the Gulf of Tonkin, halted short of the heavily-reinforced frontier and U.S. naval units in the South China Sea.

The American planes were F102 fighters from the Da Nang Air Base and Navy F4 and F8 jets from the U.S. 7th Fleet.

POSSIBLE THRUST

Some 30 U.S. jets moved into position Saturday to meet a possible Communist thrust, sources said.

Communist China said yesterday that the U.S. raid on North Viet Nam gives Peking "the right to take action" in "every possible form" to help the North Vietnamese regime.

Peking People's Daily, official organ of the Chinese Communist party, said in an editorial quoted in a radio broadcast: "U.S. aggressors, don't you rejoice too soon. Don't think you can get away with your surprise attack on the Democratic Republic of Viet Nam. To tell you frankly, the debt in blood you owe the Vietnamese people must be repaid."

The U.S. air strike on North Viet Nam's shore bases last Wednesday was in retaliation for North Vietnamese PT boat attacks on U.S. 7th Fleet destroyers in the Gulf of Tonkin.

Turkish Attack Sends Scare Through Island

10 Dead in Air Raid;
May Have Resulted
From Orders Mix-Up

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP)—Turkey and the Greek Cypriot government agreed to a U.N. Security Council call for a cease-fire on this embattled island today.

A brief Turkish attack on a northwest village before Turkey's announcement sent a new scare through Cyprus.

Greece said it hoped the strafing attack on a square in Polis was due to a mix-up in Turkish military orders.

A Turkish government spokesman said after a Cabinet meeting in Ankara that Turkey would accept the U.N. call for the cease-fire, but only on the condition that Greek Cypriots halt their attacks on Turks on the island. The Turkish Cabinet met an hour after reports of the Polis attack reached Ankara.

The Greek Cypriot government said it had ordered a cease-fire unilaterally as of Saturday. It made no mention of fighting that erupted yesterday around the Turkish village of Kokkina or around Nicosia last night.

"In a statement today Archbishop Makarios, Cyprus president, said the government of the Cyprus republic will fully respect a Security Council resolution on the cease-fire in Cyprus," government spokesman said.

NO FIGHTING

There were no reports of ground fighting between Greek and Turkish Cypriots in the tense northwest coastal strip between Polis and Xeros.

The Soviet Union assailed the series of Turkish attacks and warned Turkey that it is risking war.

The attack on Polis was the fourth consecutive day of Turkish air activity over Cyprus.

DEEPLY GRATEFUL

Makarios messaged U.N. Secretary-General U Thant saying his government was "deeply grateful" for efforts to end the fighting on the island.

Then referring to the U.N. cease-fire resolution, Makarios said:

"For your information, your excellency, we have unilaterally ordered a cease-fire Saturday, Aug. 8."

The U.N. resolution was

Turkey Informs NATO of Air Unit Withdrawals

PARIS (AP)—Turkey has informed the North Atlantic Treaty Organization she is withdrawing some of her air force from the alliance "for use in her national interest," Supreme Allied Headquarters for Europe announced today.

The announcement was made amid reports of new Turkish aerial attacks on Cyprus.

The announcement said: "The military command of the Turkish intention to employ certain of her air defense units in her national interest on a temporary basis."

The military command in turn is notifying the NATO secretary general. Such action is permissible and provided for under the NATO treaty."

The announcement went into no further detail, nor would spokesmen elaborate on it. The air defense units were obviously among those committed to NATO's eastern flank defense.

"With the preservation of these moral and spiritual qualities and with God's grace will come further greatness for our country."

ISSUE PROCLAMATIONS

President Johnson and Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, along with governors of 15 other states, issued proclamations designating today as Herbert Hoover Day.

Hoover, who has survived a series of illnesses starting with a gall bladder attack in 1958, did not see newsmen yesterday, but issued a statement.

His physician, Dr. Michael Lepore, said Hoover's general health is "good for a man of 90."

Lepore said Hoover is mentally alert and only his "rugged constitution" has brought him through medical emergencies, including an operation for cancer at West Harteptool.

REP. BENNETT

Cancer Takes Dean of State Congressmen

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. John Bennett, dean of Michigan's congressmen, died yesterday of cancer at his home in nearby Chevy Chase, Md.

The 60-year-old Ontonagon Republican had been a member of Congress for 20 years and was ranking GOP member of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

Just last week, he said he might withdraw from the Sept. 1 primary race against Rep. Victor Knox because of failing health.

Bennett had been seriously ill for about two months.

Cancer was first detected a month ago.

BLADDER CONDITION

Bennett recently underwent surgery for a bladder condition at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.

In addition to being the dean of Michigan's congressmen, Bennett had several other distinctions.

He prided himself on representing what he described as "the smallest in population but most important district" in the country.

Bennett was a winning Republican vote-getter in the western Upper Peninsula, regarded as a normally Democratic area.

Cong Doubt U.S. Strength?

Barry Still Criticizes Administration Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican presidential nominee Barry Goldwater said today Communist doubts about U.S. strength and will in Southeast Asia may have led North Viet Nam to launch its patrol boat attacks on American destroyers.

And Goldwater declared his support of President Johnson's retaliatory air strikes will not mute "our basic criticism" of the way the administration is handling the guerrilla war in South Viet Nam.

Warning of the risk of "war in our time" unless the Free World maintains its military might, the Arizona senator said the nuclear punch the United States can deliver may be cut by 50 per cent in the next decade "unless present plans are changed by the demand of an aroused public."

In an address prepared for the National Association of Counties — his first formal speech since his nomination last month — Goldwater called that "the most perilous statistic of all."

He said it will "tempt the forces of aggression — just as weakness has tempted them to war three times in our century."

THEME

Goldwater said the theme of "peace through preparedness" will be a major message of his presidential campaign.

"Today," he said, "as it has before three wars in the past, our guard is dropping in every sense."

"Under our present defense leadership, with its utter disregard for new weapons, our deliverable nuclear capacity may be cut down by 50 per cent in the next decade," he said.

"Winston Churchill once was called an extremist because he spoke up for Britain's defenses at a time when appeasement was popular," the senator said.

WORLD WAR II

"Had he, rather than those who called him names, been listened to, there is every reason to believe that the second world war could have been prevented."

LBj, Aides to Confer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Johnson called Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and other advisers to the White House today for a discussion of the Cyprus crisis and the situation in Southeast Asia.

The President also scheduled a ceremony for later in the day to sign the resolution adopted at his request by the House and Senate which gives him full backing in steps he may take to resist Communist aggression in Southeast Asia.

Press Secretary George E. Reedy told newsmen that Johnson, who returned last night from a two-day trip to his Texas ranch, spent this morning "going over various reports on the world situation."

Reedy said Johnson called the (1:30 p.m. EST) meeting with Rusk, McNamara and other senior advisers to discuss Southeast Asia, Cyprus and adopted in New York yesterday. The two planes that attacked Red soil Sunday, it protested to the International Control Commission which is responsible for supervising the Geneva-agreed ceasefire.

Government troops suffered 72 casualties in the two encounters, the announcement said, and estimated the Viet Cong lost at least 34 killed.

Alex Ely, an Associated Press correspondent at the scene, said the American-built F104 jets appeared while the townspeople were sipping coffee in the main square, most of them talking about the crisis. He said the villagers ducked for cover before the jets made two runs, firing into the square.

A U.S. Air Force C130 cargo plane evacuated 35 American dependents and members of the U.S. Embassy staff to Beirut from Nicosia.

Among them were Ambassador Taylor Belcher's wife and two teen-agers.

A spokesman said the State Department ordered the evacuation.

SKELETON STAFF

The embassy has been operated by a skeleton staff since last February, when many Americans were flown out after a bombing of the building.

In Athens, Greek Foreign Minister Stavros Costopoulos called in the Turkish ambassador and said Greece could not restrain the Cyprus conflict from "necessary defensive measures" if Turkey repeated its warlike activities.

Costopoulos said he told the Turkish envoy that Greece hoped the attack on Polis was "due to the fact that not all Turkish forces have received orders of a cease-fire."

Earlier, the Greek Cypriots charged that Turkish troops slipped ashore before dawn to aid the beleaguered Turkish Cypriot fishing village of Kokkina, 20 miles west of Polis.

DENY LANDING

Turkey and the U.N. command in Cyprus denied there had been any landing.

But the Cyprus government demanded another urgent meeting of the Security Council to consider what it called "perhaps a limited invasion."

Costopoulos said the Turkish garrison at Kokkina, the largest Turkish Cypriot coastal stronghold, opened mortar fire on Greek Cypriot positions during the morning. But other sources said the situation there was quiet.

Turkey began the attacks last Friday to halt the Greek Cypriot advance on Kokkina.

POUND POSITION

Sixty-four Turkish jets pounded Greek Cypriot positions with bombs, rockets and machinegun fire, as heavy fighting flared on the ground around the village of Kokkina, stronghold on the Cyprus coast.

The Greek Cypriots claimed they suffered about 300 casualties, including more than 33 dead, in the Turkish raids. Turkey said its planes fired only on military targets.

SHARE GRIEF — Mrs. Robert Goodman, mother of slain civil rights worker, is comforted by Mrs. Fannie Chaney (left) and Mrs. Nathan Schwerner (right) as they leave funeral service for Goodman in New York yesterday. Mrs. Chaney and Mrs. Schwerner also lost sons in the killings. Mr. Schwerner is in background.

Thousands Pay Tribute to Slain Rights Workers

NEW YORK (AP) — Joined hand with and chanting "We shall overcome," thousands of white and Negro mourners paid tribute Sunday night to two white civil rights workers slain in Mississippi.

In separate services and at an outdoor rally, the young men were eulogized as "martyrs, compassionate and totally committed to nonviolence."

The FBI discovered the bodies of the New Yorkers — Andrew Goodman, 20, and Michael Schwerner, 24, — and James Chaney, 21, — a Negro from Meridian, Miss., last Tuesday in a grave near Philadelphia, Miss. The trio vanished near Philadelphia June 21 at the beginning of a summer drive to register Negroes to vote.

SOCIAL EVIL

At the memorial service for Schwerner at the Community Church in Manhattan, James Farmer, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, said that "One of the tragedies of our world is that evil societies kill their conscience and gentleness."

Earlier, Farmer had announced the appointment of Rita Schwerner, Michael's widow, as a field secretary for CORE. She will help establish a memorial community center in Meridian, Miss., Farmer said.

Another speaker, John Lewis, chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, said the "question is not who killed Mickey, James and Andy, but what killed them."

"Apathy," he said.

At the end of the memorial service, thousands inside and outside the hall joined hands and softly sang the civil rights theme: "We shall overcome, someday."

NONE IS FREE

Earlier, at the funeral for Goodman at the Ethical Culture Society, Ralph Engelman, Goodman's college mate from Queens, said: "Andy taught us an old truth: 'None is free until all are free.'"

Another eulogist, Rabbi Arthur Lelyveld of Cleveland, Ohio, who was beaten on a civil rights mission in Hattiesburg, Miss., July 10, said, "We are not afraid, we are not alone, we shall overcome."

Leaving the service with Goodman's body in an oak casket, Mrs. Robert Goodman, his mother, clasped the hand of Chaney's mother, Fannie, who attended both services.

Chaney was buried Friday in Meridian.

Schwerner's body was taken to a Brooklyn funeral home to undergo an autopsy today.

THE DEAD LISTED

The dead were Ervin A. Mannen, 47, George Mannen, 3, Andrew Ramage, 37, and Sara Johnson, 54, all of Portland. The Johnson and Mannen families were staying at adjoining summer cabins near here. The bodies were found within a mile of each other.

Police Arrest Teen Burglars

Three juveniles, who police say were supposed to be in Sunday School, were arrested yesterday for burglarizing a Pontiac home.

Under questioning by Pontiac police, two of the Watford Township teen-agers admitted to 10 breaking-and-enterings in the area recently.

Police said the two juveniles, 16 and 14 years old, were responsible for at least eight burglaries in the city, while the 16-year-old admitted to breaking and entering a Watford Township home and Pierce School.

Another 14-year-old boy was only involved in yesterday's break-in at 66 Chippewa, the home of Frank Miller, according to police. The home was ransacked.

Sgt. John Depuay said the boys committed the break-in after slipping away from a Sunday school meeting.

The youths were arrested at Navajo near Voorhees about 11 a.m. after police received anonymous telephone calls that three boys were trying to open doors of homes on Chippewa.

A 38-caliber pistol that was taken from Miller's home was found on the 16-year-old, police said.

The boys were turned over to juvenile authorities after they were questioned.

Although specific freedoms were provided in the Constitution "there are a dozen other freedoms which are not a matter of specific law," he said.

These, he said, are "freedom to choose our own callings, freedom to quit a job and seek another, freedom to buy or not to buy, freedom for each man to venture and to protect his success, always subject to the rights of his neighbors."

4 From Area Are Injured in Plane Crash

Four Commerce Township residents were seriously injured in a plane crash near Manistiquette yesterday.

The light plane, piloted by Willard Hart, 4386 Driftwood, crashed on takeoff from nearby Blaney Park.

Occupants of the plane, in addition to Hart, were his wife, Dorothy, Dr. James Miller, and his wife, Patricia, of 5172 Driftwood.

The craft slammed into a small building housing laundry equipment.

The four were reported in serious condition at Memorial Hospital in Manistiquette.

Residents Fight Plans to Use Road for School

BLOOMFIELD HILLS — High school students here will not pass under state tree laws along a gravel road to answer future school bells if a group of Lahser Road residents has its way.

Filing suit in Oakland County Circuit Court Friday, the group, led by Mayor Louis J. Colombo, contends that a century-old portion of Lahser should not be victim to modern educational plans.

Five couples, residents or property owners, complain over Bloomfield Hills School District plans to build a second high school on the west side of the lane between Long Lake and Hickory Grove roads.

They are seeking court determination of who owns the 20-foot wide roadway and who should be responsible for traffic problems. Until then, they ask an order restraining the construction of the school. A show cause hearing will be held Aug. 31 before Judge Frederick C. Ziem.

The group claims the narrow road will be assaulted first by heavy construction machinery as work on the 1,200-student school begins, and later by up to 400 autos going to and from the building daily.

CHARGES STATED

Charging no governmental agency has exercised ownership of land bordering the narrow roadway since it first came into use before 1863, the plaintiffs also ask clarification of condemnation procedures which may be used to widen it.

Named as defendants are the school district and members of the board of education.

A Madison Heights couple and their 2-month-old son were killed Saturday night near Monroeville when their car was struck by a truck.

Victims of the accident were Charles Lee Bechtel, 33, his wife Linda, 22, and their son, Grady.

Also killed in the same accident on I-75 near the LaPlante overpass was a Toledo man.

Four cars and two trucks were involved in the wreck which tied up traffic for several hours.

Another Oakland County resident, Lloyd Gilchrist, 71, of Pleasant Ridge, was killed yesterday in Livingston County when his car was struck by another vehicle at an intersection.

Also fatally injured was William Costello, 28, of Lapeer who died yesterday morning when his car failed to make a turn in Lapeer County and crashed into a tree.

MISSILE INCIDENT

Around the same time, at the Los Alamos firing range in New Mexico, an American missile exploded. A section of the missile, said to be as large as a truck, crashed with a bang amid a herd of cows.

According to the scientists, there was little effect on the American cows. They said the cows lifted their heads and slowly walked away. There was no stampede.

Man Killed in Alabama Knife Fight

BESSEMER, Ala. (U) — A Negro man was killed and four others injured when a fight broke out between whites and Negroes on a narrow road just outside the city limits of Bessemer.

Sheriff Mel Bailey said today that no one has been formally charged in yesterday's incident.

"We know who the victim was, we know the assailant. We are trying to check out exactly what happened."

Bailey termed the incident a "spontaneous outbreak."

He said deputies blocked off the area where the fight occurred, but allowed a trickle of traffic to go through. Other nearby areas were patrolled. The heavy guard in the vicinity of the fight was lifted early today.

Don't Run to Beat the Band

Bovines Not Cow-Ardly, Say Scientists

LONDON (U) — Two American rocket scientists today cleared a British drum and bugle corps of killing cows with their martial music.

"The deaths of the cows must have some other explanation," said one of the scientists, Dr. Robert Brownlee, "because we certainly don't think they could have been caused by the band's music."

With Dr. Paul Mutschelers, Dr. Brownlee made the case for a special trip from London to suburban Hornchurch to listen to the Hornchurch drum and trumpet corps. After listening, the scientists gave this verdict: The band is innocent.

The background was this: In May last year the 35 youthful members of the drum and bugle corps were practicing near an open field. In the field were a number of cows, some in calf.

The cows' owner, farmer Peter Reed, said the cows were frightened by the music. They stampeded and five of the cows in calf collapsed in the field and died. The farmer said the only possible explanation was the Hornchurch musicians and their music.

State Health Unit Aide Gets Ypsilanti Post
YPSILANTI (AP) — Dr. Edward N. Hinko, 54, has been named medical superintendent of Ypsilanti State Hospital, effective Sept. 1. Dr. Hinko, assistant director of the Michigan Mental Health Department, will succeed Dr. O. Ray Yoder, who is retiring.

Still Consider Surgery for Hurt Ted Kennedy

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors attending Sen. Edward M. Kennedy still are considering the possibility of surgery to speed his recovery from a broken back. The physicians held a series of conferences over the weekend and will meet again today.

HEADS LEGION — Billie L. Coyle, 5100 Oak Park, Independence Township, is the new commander of the Chief Pontiac American Legion Post No. 377, succeeding Stephen Winowski. Other officers include Marie Laurain, senior vice commander; William Tunningley, junior vice commander; Gerald Joyce, chaplain; Marshall Charter, finance; and Verner Macom, adjutant.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Edward Neller, an aide to Republican presidential nominee Barry Goldwater, confirmed Saturday that the Arizona senator talked with Gov. George W. Washington News Roundup

House Unit Claims Red Agitation Led to JFK Murder

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Committee on Un-American Activities says the propaganda and agitation campaigns

of the Communist party were responsible for the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. However, the committee said it takes no position on the question of "whether the assassination of President Kennedy was an individual act or the work of conspiracy."

A presidential commission headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren is expected to conclude next month that accused assassin Lee Harvey Oswald was a loner who acted out of his own aberrations when he fired the bullets that killed Kennedy last Nov. 22 in Dallas.

The House committee discussed Kennedy's murder in its annual report issued Sunday. It recommended that Congress pass a law making assassination of the president or vice president a federal crime.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon says the "explosive conflict" over civil rights will be a major issue in the presidential campaign.

Appearing Sunday on a taped television-radio program with Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., Nixon said the people will want to hear from the candidates how they plan to handle civil rights problems.

President Johnson and Republican presidential nominee Barry Goldwater have agreed to avoid during the fall campaign any statements that might inflame the rights issue and encourage renewed violence.

Nixon also said foreign policy issues would play a part, "particularly how we resolve this situation in Viet Nam without having it explode into a nuclear war."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration

will require drugs containing the pain killer, Phenacetin, to carry labels warning that kidney damage may result from exceeding recommended dosage.

The regulation, effective in 60 days, was announced Saturday and applied to drugs sold without prescription.

FDA said, Phenacetin is considered a safe and useful analgesic. The labeling change was recommended by a special advisory committee of scientists.

Deaf Elect Officers

Convention Without Talk

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (AP) — About 250 persons closed a three-day convention yesterday by electing a new president.

The politicking had the same nerve as a national party convention, but there was a big difference — not a word was spoken.

William Fandler of Topeka, the new president of the Kansas Association of the Deaf, delivered his acceptance speech in sign language.

Mrs. Clem Dillenschneider of Kansas City sang "America" with her hands, and Howard Palmer of Jackson, Miss, drew roars of laughter with a pantomime act.

At a convention dance Saturday night, the floor was jammed with couples. The deaf explained they could feel the beat of the music through the soles of their feet.

Asks Catholics for Integration

Bishop in Mississippi Issues Pastoral Letter

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Mississippi's Roman Catholics have been asked to lower racial barriers in their parochial schools this fall.

Bishop Richard O. Gerow, in a pastoral letter read to all parishioners Sunday, called for integration of first grades.

Implementation of the pastoral letter will be voluntary.

"It is to be the policy of the Catholic schools in the diocese to admit qualified Catholic children to the first grade without respect to race," Bishop Gerow's letter said.

"I rely on your devotion," his letter continued, "and ask for your prayers that whatever adjustments ensue, they may respond to the greatest honor and glory of God and the strengthening of the bond of charity which unites us all in Christ."

NEXT MONTH

Implementation of his decision, the bishop said, "will be handled by each pastor in consultation with me" and begin in September.

A Catholic source said the diocese did not know how many students will be integrating classrooms.

The move follows a recent federal court action ordering public schools in Jackson, Biloxi and Leake County to integrate this fall — Mississippi's first public school desegregation below the college level.

Public school integration will also start with the first grade.

51 SCHOOLS

Bishop Gerow's order encompasses 51 white and Negro elementary parochial schools. They have an enrollment of 13,408 pupils.

There are an estimated 71,132 Catholics among the 2,178,141 Mississippians.

Crazy-Quilt U.S. Time Zone System May Be on Its Way Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — The words "daylight saving time" and America's crazy-quilt time system may be on the way out.

A House Commerce subcommittee will take up and likely approve a bill Tuesday that overhauls the U.S. time system and attempts to bring order out of what the Interstate Commerce Commission calls "increasing chaos" in American time.

A similar bill was approved by the Senate Commerce Committee. No public opposition has arisen so far, and there just may be enough time left to push the bill through Congress before the session ends.

Basically the bill would set up uniform areas that would move their clocks ahead and back at the same times every year. For the most part, the bill would do away with situations in which one community is on standard time and the town next door on daylight time.

According to testimony before the House subcommittee, the country has such situations galore.

The bill now before Congress would try to end the nation's confusing time situation with these provisions:

1. The United States, except for Alaska and Hawaii, would be divided as now into four zones: Eastern, Central, Mountain, and Pacific. In addition, a new Atlantic zone would be created. This would be off the East Coast and not over any mainland at all.

2. To save daylight in warm summer months, the Interstate Commerce Commission would create a single subzone in each regular zone. This zone would be a geographic whole and would connect with the full zone to the east.

3. Daylight saving time would begin for all subzones on the last Sunday in April and end on the last Sunday in October.

4. It would not be called daylight saving time at all. Instead, the ICC would assign each subzone to the full zone to the East. In other words, a person living in the central time subzone would find that during the summer months he would use the term, Eastern Standard Time.

5. The bill would require all federal agencies, common carriers, and communications by wire or radio to use this time system. It is assumed that this would persuade all local communities to adopt the new system.

NEW DELHI, India (AP) —

The neighboring hermit kingdom of Bhutan, where for a long time the only wheel that turned was the Buddhist prayer wheel, is getting a jet air field. Acting Premier Lhendup Dorji said the field, capable of handling big jet planes, will be ready by mid-1965.

Will Launch Satellite Into 'Hot' N Zone

VANDEMBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — A storm-hunter satellite the U.S. Weather Bureau rejected is scheduled to be launched Friday into a "hot zone" of radiation from nuclear testing.

The 830-pound Nimbus, largest orbiting weather station yet built, is designed to photograph clouds, rain, day and night from an altitude of 575 miles, in the lower reaches of the artificial radiation belt created in the summer of 1962 by United States and Soviet nuclear explosions in space.

These radiations, trapped in the earth's magnetic field, have damaged numerous earlier satellites and as a result, Nimbus' ability to withstand radiation has been increased.

Although it declined to put any money into Nimbus — preferring to stick with the smaller but reliable Tiros satellites — the U.S. Weather Bureau will benefit from any pictures Nimbus takes.

All will be fed into the bureau's weather satellite center at Suitland, Md., for analysis and distribution to local weathermen.

First weather satellite designed to take pictures of clouds at night as well as during the day, Nimbus will be aimed southward at an orbit around the poles which will permit photographs of every square mile of the rotating earth at least once every 24 hours.

Most sophisticated weather satellite yet, Nimbus is patterned closely after the top-secret Samos reconnaissance and Midas missile-detecting satellites, which also are launched from the West Coast into polar orbit.

Truth About Past

A History of County Schools

By MIRIAM NEAL

Most students are supposed to be waiting anxiously for school doors to open have been told time and time again how important education is and how "tough" it was "back in the good old days."

Okay. Let's check. Let's review the history of education in Oakland County.

The first school in this county was started in 1821 in a little square room in the loft of Major Oliver William's sheephouse in what is now Waterford Township.

It had three small windows, a stove, some rough seats, a desk and Ohioan teacher named Brent. Its enrollment — seven. FIRST IN PONTIAC

According to tradition, the first schoolhouse in Pontiac was a one-story frame building erected in 1824 or 1825.

But there was no public school system as such and it was not until 1831 that the first official school, called an academy, was established in Auburn Village.

Pontiac started hers in 1833 in a two-story building—the lower part used for church services and the upper for classrooms.

The third school in Independence Township was held in a small building built in 1837 and known as "pinery schoolhouse."

SLAB SEATS

Here, according to one of its pupils, "the writing desks were on the outside of the room against the wall, with seats made of slabs, flat side up, to face the desks."

"The pupil had to sit down on the bench and swing himself halfway around."

In the year 1838, the Pontiac public school system was organized by John D. Marshall. Says Avery's history Oakland County: "But it was not for 10 or 12 years that the people began to pay much attention to the character of the buildings in which their children were instructed."

According to Sarah McCracken's account of the school in 1837, public education was not too attractive.

"There was a little schoolhouse . . . a modest little frame building . . . a mile . . . from our dwelling. As the school was usually open during the winter season, we could not attend."

'GREATER VALUE'

"I have often thought, however, that the instruction received at the hands of my father and mother was of greater value than that which we would have been likely to receive at school."

Evidently this was true because records show that the public lost interest in schools until, in 1847, a group of Pon-the citizens filed an official grievance.

The protest condemned public apathy and mentioned that "even" Rochester and Romeo schools were more advanced. The protest brought action. In 1848, a high school had been started in the basement of the "Morris Building."

"OLD UNION"

This structure, housing a school financed by tuition and called the "Old Union," was purchased in 1849. Its first graduation class was recorded in 1857 and it was replaced in 1871 by a school built on the site of the current Pontiac Central High School.

Education, now firmly established as a thing of importance and quality, continued to thrive during the turn of the century. By 1888 there were 1,347 pupils enrolled in Pontiac.

World War I brought the county's first real involvement in a national conflict. Citizens led by those in Pontiac, established food production programs, canning, nursing, bandage-rolling and book-lending programs.

The "modern" outlook produced by world involvement is shown in the establishment of a junior college in 1918, a school savings system in 1923 and a county normal school in 1924.

VOCATIONAL COURSES

The first vocational course, one in auto mechanics, was started in 1922.

County schools established a visiting nurse program in 1926 and a "helping teacher plan" for rural schools in 1929.

The enrollment of Pontiac students in the 20s was 5,739 in 1921 and 12,210 in 1928.

But the 1930s were to be the real test for Oakland County schools. A financial crisis, exemplified by the Pontiac situation, was to try the county system and leave its red mark for many years.

In 1930, teachers' salaries would still be less than in 1922.

The story, as told in headlines, starts in January, 1933 when school payrolls were cut 28 per cent.

BANK HOLIDAY

During the imposed bank holiday, teachers were permitted to withdraw 5 per cent of any cash-on-hand and 20 per cent of their February Pay.

By March, the superintendent of schools, James H. Harris, was saying: "The banking situation has precipitated an emergency so acute as to threaten continuance of schools unless relief is found within a few weeks."

In May, $120,000 in scrip was issued to pay teachers. Other citizens could use it to pay delinquent school taxes.

The situation was relieved but only to the point of bare survival. The continuing problems can be seen in a sampling of news stories.

CLOSE EARLY

In March 1935 — "Lack of money will compel the closing of Pontiac schools on May 24."

February 1937 — "State Aid Vital to Schools Here."

May 1937 — "Pontiac teachers will receive 1937-38 contracts . . . drawn on a monthly basis."

September 1938 — "Consider Double Classes Next Semester at PHS."

As war stirred Europe, the situation eased on in March 1939 — "Public Apathy Forces Board to End Meetings."

SLOW RECOVERY

During the war years, with their inevitable economic boom, schools and finances crept slowly back to "normalcy."

Headlines in the 40s and 50s reveal construction projects, new courses, and general improvement. Slowly the financial scar was healed.

August, 1963 — "Despite the delay in the spreading of city and school taxes the Pontiac school district is in good shape with a cash balance of $470,000."

In spite of the Depression, Oakland County and Pontiac city schools, since the middle of the last century, have maintained the highest standard of education.

LONG BATTLE

It has been a long and hard-fought battle to meet financial problems, public apathy, the speed of progress and the rapid growth of population.

This year Oakland County school enrollment may reach the 200,000 mark — from 7 to 200,000 pupils in 143 years. County schools have marched in step with America's progress.

Afraid of New Math? First-Graders Aren't

By BILL EASTHAM

Ever hear of commutative property, distributive property or associative property?

Although they sound like something you'd find in the Communist Manifesto, these are merely some of the tools your first-grader will use in learning mathematics in most Pontiac area schools this fall.

He probably won't learn the terms until he's in the third or fourth grade. By that time he will have progressed to a level of math that his parents didn't attain until they were in high school.

The new system of teaching mathematics is so simple it makes you wonder why somebody didn't think of it a hundred years ago.

And teachers using the new system report that their students no longer regard math as drudgery but consider it fun.

EDUCATORS CONFIDENT

Educators are confident that the current generation of elementary and secondary students will be so advanced in their knowledge of and ability to use mathematics by the time they finish high school that the college textbooks will have to be rewritten.

The drudgery of mathematics, if any remains, has now been transferred to the teachers, who must learn the new system right along with their students.

Even the youngest teachers, unless they attended avant garde elementary schools, learned math by the "old" method.

The older ones must change thinking patterns they've used for a half century, more or less. It isn't easy.

NEW VOCABULARY

Today's elementary math teachers use a whole new vocabulary. Words like subtrahend, minuend, dividend, divisor and quotient are as obsolete as the washboard.

"Little Cynsade" will never learn his multiplication tables because he doesn't have to. He will learn to multiply through the use of mathematical sentences, arrays of visual aids and multiplication charts.

From multiplication, it's just a short step to division and simple geometry, which he will also learn in the first grade.

The whole process is so advanced that by the time "Junior" is in fourth grade he will be working with square root, a level of mathematics that was only lightly touched in high school a few years ago.

One of the outstanding features of the new program is that students are permitted to proceed at their own speed.

Several texts may be used in one class and the progress from one text to the next is governed only by the individual student's ability.

The whole system is still so new that it isn't widely used in high school yet. But the sky will be the limit in how far a student can advance in mathematics before he is ready for college.

School administrators are already beginning to worry about obtaining teachers who can conduct mathematics classes on the level that may be required within the next few years.

IN-SERVICE TRAINING

Even elementary teachers are required to attend an in-service training program to learn the new method, and unless they majored in mathematics in college, few secondary teachers are qualified to teach calculus, which could soon become a standard part of the high school curriculum.

The "bible" for the new teaching method was compiled by the School Mathematics Study Group, a group of eight mathematicians and educators from colleges and universities throughout the country.

It consists of a teacher's commentary text, which parallels the text used by the students. Several may be covered in one grade during a school year.

The old "workbook" system has been discarded and the students work principally with visual aids and stated problems suggested to the teacher in her commentary text.

RETURN OF ABACUS

Ironically, one of the most important visual aids in the new system is one of the oldest mathematical devices known to man—the abacus.

There is hardly any limit to the number of familiar objects which may be used as visual aids, which is one of the reasons that the youngsters learn to like mathematics.

In fact, educators say, the key to the whole system is its simplicity and the fact that it is fun for the youngsters.

But you may not think it's so simple when "Junior" comes home and asks for help in his problems on tossing out nines, base 10 or deductive geometry.

The pictures in the back-to-school portion of today's paper were taken by Press photographer Edward R. Noble at either Pontiac Northern High School or Oakland University unless otherwise indicated.

She'll Fit Self Into College

By JEANMARIE ELKINS

For the girl beginning her freshman year at college, there awaits a new life. One important consideration is a new wardrobe, to conform with her role in an adult environment.

A little unsure of herself as she looks toward the future, she wants to look "right" but still maintain her own personal fashion tastes.

Michigan State University will see Janice Marie Vallancourt, 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Vallancourt of 185 Baldwin, Orion Township, enrolled as a freshman this fall.

A slender 5'3", she cannot purchase clothing to fit her properly. It will often be too short, the waist will always be too big, and the outfit will be too short-waisted.

To solve this problem Janice makes the majority of her own clothing and is making many of her things for college.

FOR 10 YEARS

Sewing for 10 years, Janice first became interested in the project when she entered 4-H where she learned her skill. None of the rest of her family sews.

Mrs. Vallancourt says she never understands what Janice is doing when she begins with a pattern until she sees the finished product.

In 4-H Janice has won a dress review pin and a number of "A" ribbons for her talents and has earned trips to Maine and Traverse City.

The two-piece bathing suits have been a boon to Janice, who made three this year. One was created from an old pair of slacks.

MADE FROM DRESS

Janice also made her prom formal and a prom formal for a girl friend. She remembers sewing her girl friend into the gown as her date was waiting.

Her own prom formal featured a beaded top, on which she did all the work.

For any seamstress, material is the prime consideration. Janice likes to look around.

"Boy, does she look around! Don't ever go with her," Janice's mother warned.

MAGAZINE IDEAS

Magazines provide many ideas for ensembles. Janice buys a size 12 pattern, makes the ensemble to the pattern and then adjusts the ensemble to fit her of intricately patterned ski sweaters and for college is trying her first sweater in cable stitching.

PERFECT WARDROBE

Not only will Janice enter college this fall with a wardrobe of perfectly fitted clothing, but she will also have the satisfaction of knowing she won't run into her dresses or skirts on campus. No one will have duplicates of HER ensembles.

Knitting is another hobby with Janice. She has knitted a number

Shoes Can Do All Child Does

For pupils, playmates and party-goers, the latest junior footwear is styled to meet the demands of all the roles a child plays while busy back-to-school schedules are pursued.

Stylish Sallys and Susies will attend classes in a variety of colorful leather slippers, boot shoes and zingy oxfords. The slipper may be a simple skimmer—with or without strap—or perhaps the classic moccasin or one of its style variations in soft glove or waxy leather.

Dashing, as well as delightfully easy on the growing foot, are supple leather oxfords dressed up with stitching or trim in a different color.

Chillie ties are fresh fashion accents on many oxfords and, of course, the leather saddle oxford is always in attendance—set on its neat, lightweight leather sole.

The boot-shoe, now a back-to-school staple, saunters through classes in bright smooth and subtly shaded brushed leather.

KINDS OF TRIM

Trim may consist of buckles, tassels, buttons, fringe or use of contrasting leather or color.

For more rugged outdoor activity, the full-fledged boot is available in the complete rundown of leather textures. Lanes are simple and uncluttered.

As party-goer or party thrower, the young miss may wear perky shell pumps of polished smooth, patent, embossed or printed leather.

Detailing on dress shoes is kept simple—a strap, small cut-outs, or a neat bow.

FOR BOYS

For boys going back to school, the new rugged boot styles can take punishment above and beyond the call of shoe duty—in school and out.

A wide choice of leather textures makes the selection easy and enjoyable. Especially popular this fall is the Western "LBJ" boot in natural leather shades, hand-tooled and often showing touches of bright color.

Another favorite with the blackboard brigade is the sturdy leather oxford, either of one leather or combining two textures.

Reddish and black-flecked brown shades are most popular, and saddle oxfords usually sport dark-on-dark tones.

The boy who balks at dressing up will appreciate elegant, but easy to wear, slippers of highly polished smooth leather, trimly tailored with minimum ornamentation.

Add Comfort to Room

Add comfort and convenience to dormitory rooms by bringing along a lamp and a foam rubber backed throw rug or two.

RUGGED STUDY — No matter how tough the work a student will always look "smooth" in this Van Cord cardigan sweater with red and white stripes on a black background. Contemplating his senior year at Pontiac Northern High School is John Farstvedt, 17, of 715 Third.

Reevaluate Habits of Health and Safety

With the advent of school, parents should re-evaluate safety and health habits in the home. Though they are rightfully stressed in school, these very important subjects should not be the concern of the classroom alone.

A few extra minutes spent in advising children in a casual, non-alarming manner at home may lead to the prevention of innumerable accidents and sicknesses.

By acquainting children with the ordinary, common-sense aspects of fire prevention, safety in sports, and first aid, parents not only can instill awareness of problems, but develop intelligent attitudes and practices concerning these subjects, to use for a lifetime.

There are many occasions throughout the year that call attention dramatically to realistic fire safety problems. . . . Halloween hazards, Christmas trees and fireworks. A screaming fire engine siren or a destructive fire in the neighborhood can lead the parent and child to an examination of fire prevention problems on a personal level.

Though many accidents involve fire, parents should go to considerable effort in teaching their children safety in sports. Teaching them to swim properly may take only a few weeks, but it is also a matter of life and death.

A NECESSITY

It is one thing every parent should insist on his child learning. A swimming pool is one of the most dangerous places a child can be.

A direct or immediate approach should be considered not only in teaching safety in sports, but in teaching children safety in the home.

Children should be shown combustible materials and warned of their flammable nature. Simple home safety rules should be given too, such as "Use flashlights to find gas leaks, disconnect appliances not in use, never run wiring under rugs, and don't use worn electric cords."

Emphasize the danger of standing on chairs, running out in the street without first looking, care with barbed wire and innumerable other ordinary domestic situations.

A list of rules for the home can be hung in an accessible place. Maybe a bulletin board organized by the children and exhibited in their room could help to make the family safety conscious.

ICE BOXES

Of course, parents should be constantly aware of leaving poisonous or dangerous articles within a child's reach. In rural areas, especially, death lurks in old, discarded ice-boxes.

With the opening of the school year, health and safety should be major factors in family life. Carelessness in duty, unawareness of potential dangers can cause a multitude of problems.

Parents must realize that tragedy doesn't always happen in some other family. "It can happen here". By developing healthy attitudes and practices, parents can contribute greatly to their children's well-being.

'Fashion With Function' Motto for Back to School

"Fashion with function" is the motto of back-to-college girls. It's intended for a look of completeness, and a look planned to provide many looks, through the skillful switching of wardrobe basics.

The sloppy look has long disappeared from the campus picture, and the well-groomed, smoothly put-together look is in, points out Wilbur Daniels, executive secretary of the National Board of the Coat and Suit Industry.

A solid-tone suit with plaid top coat, a suit with matching long coat, a sleeveless shell top with skirt and jacket or any variety of suits combined with coats, skirts with jackets and tops provide the college girl with the essentials for neat, attractive grooming. In class, around campus.

Add to these a few simple, fashionable dresses — some cotton-blend skirtsuits for the warm days of early fall, some easy A-line and shift shapes.

Many of the latter are versatile in styling — ready to go to class by day with the accompaniment of shirts or sweaters, effective for informal evenings on.

Completing the picture are leisure-time companions such as pants and bermudas with shirts, sweaters, jerseys, jackets.

Classics appear prominently on the scene, but this is a feminine view of classicism, with silhouettes slightly fitted and indented at the waistline.

Balmacaams, chesterfields, trench coats and reefers are among the up-dated fall coat classes. Shoulders are soft and often raglan; buttons perk up and soften the line.

Fur collars, often seen, are generally detachable, so that both the coat and the collar can do double duty.

PLEATS FLUTTER

Pleats on skirts flutter appealingly, and are used in many different interpretations. Conversely, other skirts are slim and easy.

Fabrics highlight subdued surfaces, in keeping with the softer, more subtle look. Tweeds are vari-colored — mixtures, daignois, monotoes.

Coverts and cavalry twills

look new, and always back to campus favorites, are very much in the picture.

Women on Campus

Number of women enrolled in colleges and universities edged upward to 1,739,000 this past year from 1,694,000 last year.

Manners Too Much?

(Gilbert Youth Service) The sound of jazz music, the beat of jazz of every dimension, and the resulting reverberations among teen audiences will soon pierce the Iron Curtain, to the resulting delight of millions of teen-agers in Communist countries.

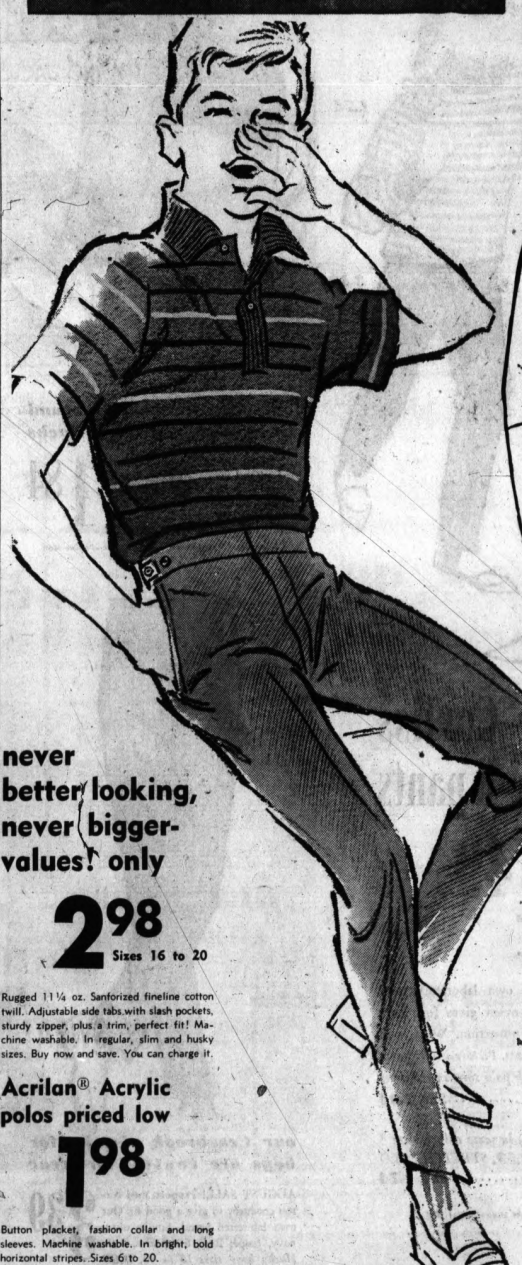

Microphone in hand, Stanley K. Smialowski, executive producer for Radio Free Europe, has been touring through audiences at Newport, R.I., Milwaukee, Wis., and other points where jazz and folk fans congregate and recording both the concert and the spontaneous reaction of spectators.

Like a candid camera photographer, Smialowski's mike usually surprises the teenagers. Sometimes they're scared just a little bit, but then their reaction is happiness because teen-agers behind the Iron Curtain are interested. They are glad to be part of the bridge between West and East.

The producer, who speaks five languages, says they are interested, indeed. They are very well informed about the latest jazz stars, he says, and crave more music.

So out of his musical wanderings, Smialowski will cut excerpts from all the programs, and make them into a tape which will be beamed to the five Iron Curtain countries — an eager audience of 80 million.

Avoiding Fluctuations

Stockpiles at Minimum

By SAM DAWSON

AP Business News Analyst
NEW YORK—Many an executive has been taking bows for holding to a conservative policy that has kept the business up-swelling from developing dangerous excesses.
But maybe it's a machine that should be taking them for him.

Some of these gadgets can cut to minutes the supply and shipping processes that used to take days. And that, say the computer's friends, is a chief reason industry has amazed the experts by holding stocks to a minimum when prosperity was bursting out all over. Customers can find out faster what they need and get it faster, so cumbersome inventories are out of style.

A flour company, for example, links its 125 plants and branch offices with a computer system that each night gathers and processes all company information. In the morning it offers a full analysis of sales and inventory—both how much and where.

At the same time a grocery store chain uses its own computer network to check stocks in all outlets. This is punched out and fed directly into the flour company's system.

Whatever one of the chain store's outlets needs of the flour, the products can be supplied at once to the closest of the chain's 22 warehouses from the flour company's nearest source.

That cuts the need for huge stocks and long shipping lead times. Economists first noted that inventories actually dropped in the early months of this year and then rose only modestly during the spring industrial upturn.

Now the Department of Commerce reports that in June total factory stocks actually slipped by $150 million, with the decline concentrated in finished goods.

During the meetings that led to today's report, the continental European powers—namely France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Belgium, Canada, and the United Kingdom—argued that there would be plenty of international liquidity for the foreseeable future.

They opposed any changes in the present system and particularly any increases in the resources of the IMF, which members can draw on if they get in trouble with their international payments.

The United States, on the other hand, argued that a shortage of international funds is likely to occur once the U.S. balance of payments deficit is brought under control and dollars and gold stop flowing out of this country.

U.S. officials estimate that this could happen as soon as two years from now.

Call for Hike in World Funds

Ask More Money for Payment Woes, Trade

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The financial powers of the free world called today for an increase in resources of the International Monetary Fund (IMF). The objective is to provide more money for world trade and to head off international payments troubles.

The "Group of Ten" or "Paris Club," as it is sometimes called, also announced it will study the possibility of creating a brand new type of reserve asset—possibly being a composite international currency that countries could hold instead of gold or dollars.

Today's announcement followed secret meetings of finance ministers for the past 10 months on both sides of the Atlantic. The group includes the United States, Britain, Belgium, Canada, France, West Germany, Italy, Japan, Netherlands and Sweden.

They rejected more radical proposals such as a return to the gold standard, which the world discarded in the 1930s, or establishment of an international central bank with authority cutting across national boundaries.

The present system of international payments, based on fixed exchange rates and the established price of gold, was proved its value as a foundation on which to build for the future, the "Club" said.

The finance ministers concluded that the supply of gold and dollars is "fully adequate for the present" and is likely to remain so "for the immediate future." But there was evident disagreement about the long-range outlook.

In Moderate Trading

Stock Mart Higher on Balance

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market moved higher on balance early today in moderate trading.

Fractional gains among key stocks outnumbered losses.

Wall Street seemed to be looking for a major military involvement in Southeast Asia, the business news was good and market comment was fairly confident.

Strengthening steel demand accompanied a firmer tone among the major steel shares, most of which added fractions, although U. S. Steel was down slightly.

All Big Three motors edged higher. Studebaker, a fractional gainer, was in active demand.

On a 10,000-share block it rose 1/4 to 8.

Aerospace defense issues performed like most major groups, rising generally. Rails and non-ferrous metals also rose on balance.

A series of thin losses were posted for a number of tobacco and electronics. Utilities were mixed.

AP AVERAGE

On Friday the Associated Press average of 60 stocks rose 1.6 to 314.3.

Prices on the American Stock Exchange were narrowly mixed.
