The Day in Birmingham City to Consider Allocation of Interceptor Sewer Costs

From Our Birmingham Bureau
BIRMINGHAM — Allocation of costs in an agreement whereby Birmingham's sewage treatment plant would treat sewage from Bloomfield Township until a proposed interceptor sewer is constructed, will receive the attention of lawmakers at tonight's City Commission meeting.

The overall contract will be under consideration, and a township representative is expected to attend the meeting.

Under the same subject, commissioners will hear a manager's recommendation that a lease for the city's Walker Gravel Pit property be extended, allowing the Southeastern Oakland County Garbage and Rubbish Authority to continue sanitary land-fill operations there until Dec. 1. The present lease expires Nov. 1.

Another authority, the Southeastern Oakland County Water Authority, will be discussed in connection with the contracts necessary before Birmingham and other municipalities can start receiving Detroit water.

Concluding that the monthly general meeting of the League of Women Voters has grown too unwieldy to stimulate participation in membership discussion, the board of directors sought to solve the problem and will introduce the unit meeting system this fall.

At present six units have been set up. These will be held in various sections of the community and league members may attend any one of their choice.

A presentation and discussion of local recreation facilities for young people will open this month's meeting.

Nationalist Navy Rejoins Fighting

Aids Chiang's Air Force in Attacks on Commies Near Quemoy

TAIPEH (INS) — Nationalist China navy rejoined the air force today in attacks on Communist military positions in the Amoy area and extended patrols to watch Red junk fleets near the key island of Quemoy.

Nationalist warships, which had dropped out of action during the last two days, steamed into Chenchow Bay opposite Quemoy to offer protection for planes blasting the coast with bombs and rockets.

A communique said the Nationalist navy expanded its patrols outside Chenchow Bay to watch for signs of an invasion by some 220,000 Red China army veterans concentrated in Fukien Province opposite Quemoy.

Medium B-25 Mitchell bombers again led the pounding of mainland targets, but P-2B amphibious planes were sent into the action today.

A nationalist military source predicted the bombings would continue on a limited scale until Communist strength in the area was completely crippled. The source, who refused to be identified, said the Nationalists would probably keep up a "limited war."

Strategy moves were highlighted by the flying visit of Maj. Gen. William C. Chase to Quemoy, Chase, head of the U.S. military advisory group on Formosa, went into a conference with Nationalist leaders as soon as he returned to Taipei, and observers predicted a sharp increase in the flow of supplies to Quemoy.

Communist fighters entered the battle yesterday for the first time since the Reds began shelling Quemoy on Sept. 3. A nationalist report said a lone reconnaissance plane was intercepted over the Chusan Islands about 500 miles north of Quemoy, but fled before Red fighters could engage him.

Birmingham Station Attendant Killed station about 2 a.m. Morris said his brother was alive at the time.

Police theorized the slayer had fled shortly before LeFavre drove into the station.

Morris and Ken Smith, 18, of 1901 Haynes, Birmingham, a close friend of the victim, both said that Howe was involved in a street argument with his estranged wife, Phyllis, 18, of 2421 Guthrie, Royal Oak, about 9 p.m. Saturday night.

Smith said:

"Three of us were walking with Doyle on Washington near Eleven Mile Rd. when we saw his wife with three other fellows. She told him first, 'They really soaked you good.'"

Smith added that the remark was in reference to a temporary alimony of $15 a week granted Phyllis last week in Oakland County Circuit Court.

A fight nearly grew out of the incident between the two groups, but they separated with other taunting remarks.

Moxley said that the three youths with Phyllis at the time have been questioned and cleared of suspicion for the time being.

Howe returned to the station between 9:30 and 10:30 p.m., Smith said. Other employees at the station said that Howe seemed remorseful the rest of the night and didn't talk. The final divorce decree is still pending.

Two other men picked up by Pontiac Police about 45 minutes after the slaying also were cleared according to Capt. Clark M. Wheaton, chief of detectives here.

The pair was picked up after an anonymous tip which came into police headquarters about two men sitting in a car with a shotgun. Wheaton said both men furnished valid alibis.

Moxley said that Birmingham Police are still checking another shotgun owned by one of four men seen in a red car in a Royal Oak Drive-in restaurant earlier.

Withholding the men's names, Moxley said that the car's owner said he had never carried the shotgun in his car. However, Moxley said he is checking the man's story after an informant reported the weapon had been seen in the auto parked in the drive-in.

Another attendant of the station, owned by Ivan Springstead of Detroit, said he was robbed of $60 June 19 when two men and two juveniles came into the station for gas. The quartet, captured shortly after the robbery, is awaiting circuit court trial here.

Capt. Wheaton, who said his detectives are assisting in the search for the slayer, said he believes the primary motive was not robbery.

"Something else seems to be behind it. I can't believe that the slayer would have killed him for $60. The slayer was probably one who knew Howe and shot him, fearing that he could identify him later," added Wheaton.

Young Salem Elm Has Historic Family Tree

SALEM, Neb. (UP)—Salem has a tree with a family tree. It is the Salem Elm, now 15 feet tall and with a lineage going back to the famous Washington Elm of Cambridge, Mass.

The Nebraska tree is 11 years old. It is one of the seven "great-grandchildren" of the original tree planted in 1943 on the 300th birthday of the elm under which George Washington took command of the first American army on July 3, 1775.

ritory raked by death-dealing hurricane Edna from Massachusetts to Nova Scotia.

The death toll reached 20-13 in New England including 8 in Maine where autos were trapped in road and bridge washouts by streams that went wild under a record eight inches rain.

Maine Gov. Burton M. Cross after an air survey set loss there at more than seven million dollars—on top of 10 million wrought 12 days before by hurricane Carol. Cross asked President Eisenhower to declare Maine a major disaster area.

Two-thirds of Nova Scotia's four million dollar apple crop was counted lost.

All of Maine's dead were drowning victims. Four persons perished in Massachusetts, one in Connecticut, another in Nova Scotia. Six highway fatalities in New York State were attributed to the hurricane.

Southern New England, braced for devastation reminiscent of the 1938 hurricane, was spared heavy property damage and even in the areas hardest hit water, not wind, was blamed for much of the destruction.

Telephone lines went out of service on a scale that once again saw repair crews head from southern New England into Maine, where their task was complicated by road washouts that caused a temporary ban on travel by all but emergency vehicles.

Late last night state police said the main routes again were open.

First Try for Date Is Failure

Try, Try Again
Writer Advised but
Pick New Girl

By ELIZABETH WOODWARD
"Dear Miss Woodward: I'm 17, and I recently met a girl at the park who is 14. From her friends I learned that she goes to a certain dance once a week, so I went too and had one dance with her. Last week I went again, but she wouldn't dance with me and when I asked her for a date she turned me down. She told me she doesn't like to go out on dates with anyone. But I heard she likes a boy who is 18 but who doesn't like her. How can I get a date with her without being a pest? This is my first try at dating girls."

If you don't succeed on your first try, try again. But pick a different girl this time. Pick a girl you already know, one who is nearer your age, one who has already done some dating on her own.

The girl you tried to date is just young enough to be leery of a strange boy she meets by chance. She's just young enough not to date at all. She's just young enough to turn down dates with other boys because she's carrying a torch for somebody who pays her no attention. You couldn't know all of that, of course, until you tried to date her. And it's not your fault you failed either. Take a fresh start in a different direction—you'll do better.

"Dear Miss Woodward: My girl friend and I have been going with two boys off and on. They will pick us up after the show or on our way home. They act as though they like us and their friends say they do. But they never ask us for dates, and don't like it when we go with other boys. How can we get them to date us?"

Brush the fog of wishful thinking out of your eyes and face the fact that you're not really going with those two boys—you're only getting rides home.

Their acting as though they like you doesn't go deep enough for real dates. They don't want that responsibility. So they shouldn't have the reward of your loyalty either. They can't afford to get mad if you date other boys when they don't ask for dates themselves.

"Dear Miss Woodward: I'm 15 and I've been going steady for six months. I still like him, but I've found other boys I'd like to date instead of him all the time.

I'd like to tell him I don't want to go steady any more, but it would be all right if we had a few dates. How can I do it without hurting his feelings?"

You can't tell a boy who likes you that much that you don't want to go steady any more without hurting his feelings. Nor can you blithely say it will be okay to have a few dates. He won't take that. He'll consider you're through. And that will be that. Though you've seen boys you'd like to date, it doesn't mean they've seen you! Think it over, and watch you don't cut off your nose by accident.

Ribbon Won for Braided Coffee Cake

Prize Recipe Given by Brenda Miller of Oxford

By JANET ODELL
Pontiac Press Food Editor
With cooler weather in prospect you will be more inclined to some baking. We suggest you try this coffee cake recipe from the age Brenda Miller of Oxford.

For her it won a blue ribbon at the 4-H Fair. For you it will acclaim from your family. Brenda is a sophomore in the Ortonville High School this year. She is an active club worker, like to cook when she's home.

But her first love is baton-twirling. Not only is she a skilled performer in her own right, but she also gives lessons in the art.

BRAIDED COFFEE CAKE

By Brenda Miller
1 1/2 cups lukewarm milk
1/2 cup sugar
2 teaspoons salt
2 packages dry yeast
2 eggs
1/2 cup soft shortening
3-4 cups sifted flour

1/2 cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
Melted shortening
Nuts or raisins

Add sugar and salt to milk; mix well. Crumble yeast into the milk and stir until dissolved. Beat in the eggs and the soft shortening.

Add the flour in two parts, using only enough to make a soft dough. Place in greased bowl and let rise until double. Divide into two parts. Let rest 15 minutes.

Roll one part out into a rectangle. Brush with melted shortening, sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar and add nuts and/or raisins.

Transfer to a greased baking sheet. Cut into strips. Braid right on the baking sheet, twisting the braids as you work.

'Autum Splendor' Title for Club Show

By WILMA GREENWAY

"Spectacular!" "A really well-planned exhibit." "Colorful . . . well-organized."

These were a few of the comments overheard Friday afternoon and evening as a steady stream of visitors filed into Roosevelt Temple to view "Autum Splendor," a flower show presented by the Better Home and Garden Club of Pontiac.

At the entrance, a formal French garden scene, the work of a local florist, captured attention. Focal point of this exhibit was a table, elaborately set with an orchid taffeta spread and lavender candles and centerpiece, which held the refreshments served to the guests.

Equally impressive was another florist's display, "Outdoor Living," at the far end of the room. Against a wall banked with green cedar, a tiled barbecue table and a redwood picnic table displayed gleaming copper utensils and an autumn centerpiece of fruits, vegetables and fall flowers. The autumn effect was further carried out in brick-lined flower beds of yellow chrysanthemums and caladium.

Four rows of tables, the length of the 60x10 foot display space, held the exhibits and 98 individual entries were listed. Blue ribbon "firsts" were plentiful, since entries were judged by points and more than one first prize was permitted for a class.

Of the six table settings, three won blue ribbons. Mrs. Walter Seaks and Mrs. Alfred Rothweiler took a "first" with an Early American setting, centered with lavender asters.

The autumn browns, golds and greens of an "After the Game Snack" setting won a top prize for the exhibitors Mrs. H. C. Armstrong and Mrs. W. E. Campbell. And Mrs. John Cowe and Mrs. Henry Wolgemuth were proud of their blue ribbon, received for the "Bride's Breakfast" setting, with its delicate Queen Anne's lace and white asters.

Second place winner in table setting classification was "Outdoor Breakfast" with its deep blue crystal on sky-blue place mats, the work of Mrs. Howard Simmons.

White ribbons went to the "Birth-day" setting of Mrs. Fred Bohlman with its crimson roses and white candles, and to the "Christmas Family Dinner" setting of Mrs. C. A. Beamer with its red-berried centerpiece and hand-painted china, the latter the work of Crista-lean Ross of Keego Harbor.

Mrs. Beamer also won a blue ribbon with a unique arrangement in the "Living and Dried Material"

Finally, the conservation display, a miniature scene of devastation with stark twigs and withered leaves, drew attention to what can be the result of carelessness with fire.

Mrs. Walter Seaks, exhibition chairman, expressed herself as well pleased with the reception the show received, and warmly commended the members of committees for their work in preparing the exhibition.

Part of an elaborate French garden exhibit, this extravagant lavender-and-silver table setting drew admiring comments at the Pontiac Better Home and Garden Club Flower Show held Friday at the Roosevelt Temple. Serving coffee to Mrs. W. H. Powell of Miller street is garden club hostess Mrs. H. T. Rombough of West Huron street. At the right, hostess Mrs. Charles O. Lanning of Clarkston prepares tea for another guest.

Man Not the Only One

Animals Have to Confer Bears and Beavers Meet

By MARY MARGARET McBRIDE

The Beavers suggested the four-power conference the day after Bears were seen along the river. Monsieur Mink, although a vote of confidence was pending in his assembly, agreed to attend but demanded that the pow-wow be held in Mink language. Mr. Buck accepted and then went racing around the mountainside explaining to every Deer he met that he didn't think it would amount to much but that it was his group's responsibility as a leader in the animal world to cooperate. He said he was just planning to listen and decide whether the Bears showed any evidence of good faith.

Comrade Bruin waited a few days after receiving his invitation and then, as suspense built up among the Friendly Three, finally consented to be present—provided the conference could be held in the White Leghorn chickenyard. The Friendly Three turned this down on the ground that White Leghorns were satellites of the Bears. They finally compromised on neutral Lower Meadows which was small, had no trees, and was inhabited by independent, industrious bees whose honey was only of mild interest to all four powers.

Lord Beaver, M. Mink and Mr. Buck held preliminary talks to clarify their positions. "The point of this conference," said Lord Beaver as they gathered for an intimate luncheon well attended by press and photographers, "is to make another attempt to establish some sort of working relationship with Bears. We feel that Bears and Beavers can exist peacefully together."

M. Mink, with deep emotion, explained again that Mink had been decimated by Doberman-Pincers in two great conflicts. Now they were faced with internal troubles, largely economic, and if Beavers and Deer expected Mink to stick with them in an alliance, they'd have to pledge, first, that Dobermans would have their teeth pulled.

Mr. Buck observed that if Bears were infiltrating the woodlands below his hillsides, it was obvious that the policy for the containment of Bears wasn't working. He added that he was revolving an idea of massive retaliation if a single tree showed claw marks.

Then Bruin, accompanied by a Leghorn delegation, arrived. He looked bland and said nothing. Beaver remarked that this in itself showed a conciliatory mood.

For days the conference went on. Nothing happened. Finally Buck got bored and decided to go home. Then Bruin made a proposal: Bears would take over half the woodlands and leave the rest—at least for the time being.

Beaver grabbed the compromise. M. Mink shrugged and went home for the vote of confidence. Buck explained to his compatriots that, although it looked as if an important part of their winter food supplies and two vital lakes were gone, it was really a victory because Bears wouldn't dare bite off another hunk lest the outraged Deer take to the warpath.

Bruin smiled. And then, two weeks later, when a small dam was smashed and marks of claws were spotted on the wreckage, Lord Beaver called for another emergency meeting of the Four Powers.

It Is Right to Invite a Widow

Hostess Wants to Ask Widow to Big Annual Affair

By EMILY POST

A hostess writes: "Every year I give a very large buffet party. About six weeks ago the husband of a very dear friend of mine passed away. Both she and her husband came to this buffet party every year. I would like to know if it would be proper to send her an invitation this year as usual.

I really don't know what to do. Mrs. Post, as I'm afraid she might be hurt if I don't invite her and, on the other hand, she might think me heartless if I do."

To ignore her would be heartless, but it would be very nice to telephone her that if she could possibly feel like coming, you would love to have her, but that if she can't, you understand and want her to know that you are going to miss her very much this year at your party.

Dear Mrs. Post: I would appreciate your help in answering two questions that have come up in connection with my forthcoming wedding. (1) Instead of sending engraved invitations, we plan to write personal notes to relatives and friends and are undecided as to whose name should be signed to these notes—my parents', mine or my fiancé's and mine together. (2) There is a possibility that the ceremony will be performed by the father of a close friend of mine. Should we offer to pay him, or would this be an affront.

Answer: (1) You would write to your friends and your mother to your friends and either of you to your and his relatives. The groom's name is never signed. (2) You would offer to pay him.

Children Discuss Shortcomings With Those They Trust

By MURIEL LAWRENCE

Betty F., 15, has developed an annoying habit. She runs to her Aunt Clare with every argument she has with her mother. Then, when her niece has arrived at her house, Aunt Clare calls her mother to say she's "safe."

Always, Aunt Clare seizes her chance on these occasions to criticize her sister-in-law's "overstrictness" toward Betty and contrast it with her own sympathetic "understanding."

"My husband says and does nothing about this situation," writes Mrs. F. "I am seriously thinking of forbidding the girl to see her aunt. What do you think of this idea? This woman's influence . . ."

Wise animals pursued by a hunter do not charge him. The wiser they are, the more skillful they are in evading him and his traps. Can't Mrs. F. see that forbidding Betty to see her aunt is to fall into the trap that spite has prepared for her?

Let's not go for any silly action like that.

Instead, let Mrs. F. look at herself. Why is she disturbed by Aunt Clare's accusation? If she knew herself not to be overstrict toward Betty, would it bother her? She'd laugh at it. Why can't she laugh at it? Is she afraid that she is overstrict with Betty?

I think she is.

Always, overactivity toward children is overactivity toward ourselves. The possibility that we have made a mistake in our treatment of them is intolerable to us.

This unnatural and cruel demand we make upon ourselves accounts for the panic we feel when we are criticized. If we do not suffer from this need to appear an Always Right Person, we don't get too angry at people like Aunt Clare.

When they accuse us of mistreating our children, we just say, "So Betty has told you that I am overstrict? That is interesting to me. It is so interesting that I suggest you send her right home so that she can tell me about it, too."

Children only make a habit of discussing our shortcomings with other people when they know they can't discuss them with us.

Thus, the other people are not our problem. Our problem is our refusal to acknowledge shortcomings. Somehow we have convinced our youngster that in any discussion of our mutual grievances, we must be the Always Right Person and he the Always Wrong one.

Farmington Now to Start Drilling Two Test Wells

FARMINGTON—Work on the drilling of test wells here is expected to begin early this week, according to city engineer Norbert Ratsky.

Ratsky stated that a new rotary rake method of boring, which is "10-times faster" and less expensive, will be used in drilling two, and possibly three, wells on city-owned property west of Farmington road between the Grand River cutoff and 9 Mile road. The new method will give a 50-inch diameter "gravel pack" well.

If test borings are successful, a pumping station will be installed at the site and connected to the existing water supply system, Ratsky said.

He explained that the drilling was a precautionary move to guarantee future water supply, but that the present water supply was adequate for current needs.

8 Farmers Before Bar

Charged With Justice Obstruction in Struggle at Widow's Farm

CHARLOTTE (UP)—What might be the last act in the drawn-out drama of an insurance company failure opened on a strange stage here today as eight farmers went on trial for obstructing justice.

The eight are accused of mailing Lapeer County Sheriff Clark Gregory and a deputy in June, 1932, during an eviction attempt on the Elizabeth Stevens farm near Mariette in Lapeer County.

That eviction, and some 30 years of legal and physical battling, grew out of the failure of the Lapeer Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Association in the depression days of 1934.

When the association failed, its members—most of them struggling to eke out a living from the land when food prices were tumbling—were assessed on a percentage basis to cover costs.

They refused to pay and took their case to court. By the time the legal fight reached the Michigan Supreme Court most of the farmers had settled the claims against them.

But a hard core held out, including Mrs. Stevens, the Ziegenhardt brothers, Chris and Paul, and the "legal aid" for the embattled farmers, Clayton C. Gilliland of Detroit.

Most of the other farmers in the area were sympathetic with their fight and it led to the battle at the Stevens' farm.

Sheriff Gregory, a strapping ex-Marine who stands well over six feet and weighs more than 200 pounds, was mauled and carried bodily from the farm by a group of angry neighbors who resented the eviction.

The sheriff was carrying out a Lapeer Circuit Court order backing up the sale at auction of the Stevens farm to Mrs. Grace White, a Lapeer attorney. Mrs. White bought the now prosperous farm when Mrs. Stevens refused to pay a $172 assessment.

The 62-year-old widow eventually was evicted in a second pitched battle and later died at a daughter's home at Bad Axe.

Gilliland was convicted last December of conspiring to obstruct justice for his part in the fracas and sentenced to 4½ to 5 years in prison. He is free on bond pending an appeal.

Floyd Scriber and Erwin Russell were convicted earlier of resisting the sheriff and drew jail terms.

The eight who went on trial today—W. Lee Mathews and William Howard, Clifford; Henry Trainor and John Donovan, Imlay City; Lawrence Weston, North Branch; Ray Warner, Almont; Howard Jarvis, Lapeer, and Howard Abbott, Columbiaville—had originally been scheduled to be tried at Lapeer but a change of venue to Eaton County Circuit Court here was ordered.

Agnes G. Douglas

5 Juveniles Confess Gas Station Breakin

HOLLY—Five juveniles ranging from 13 to 15 years of age were apprehended Saturday evening by the Bloomfield Hills police, and admitted breaking into a Holly gas station.

But a hard core held out, including Mrs. Stevens, the Ziegenhardt brothers, Chris and Paul, and the "legal aid" for the embattled farmers, Clayton C. Gilliland of Detroit.

Most of the other farmers in the area were sympathetic with their fight and it led to the battle at the Stevens' farm.

Sheriff Gregory, a strapping ex-Marine who stands well over six feet and weighs more than 200 pounds, was mauled and carried bodily from the farm by a group of angry neighbors who resented the eviction.

The sheriff was carrying out a Lapeer Circuit Court order backing up the sale at auction of the Stevens farm to Mrs. Grace White, a Lapeer attorney. Mrs. White bought the now prosperous farm when Mrs. Stevens refused to pay a $172 assessment.

The 62-year-old widow eventually was evicted in a second pitched battle and later died at a daughter's home at Bad Axe.

Gilliland was convicted last December of conspiring to obstruct justice for his part in the fracas and sentenced to 4½ to 5 years in prison. He is free on bond pending an appeal.

Floyd Scriber and Erwin Russell were convicted earlier of resisting the sheriff and drew jail terms.

The eight who went on trial today—W. Lee Mathews and William Howard, Clifford; Henry Trainor and John Donovan, Imlay City; Lawrence Weston, North Branch; Ray Warner, Almont; Howard Jarvis, Lapeer, and Howard Abbott, Columbiaville—had originally been scheduled to be tried at Lapeer but a change of venue to Eaton County Circuit Court here was ordered.

Truck Driver Saves Dilemma of Bluejays
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Rush hour traffic was tied up for several blocks because a baby bluejay was fluttering helplessly in the water with its wings spread.

Finally the driver of the big truck which had stopped in front of the jays got out and carried the young bird safely off the street. Then the long lines of cars began to move again.
