Governor Crowns Romeo Peach Queen

ROMEO — Beauty and pageantry marked the coronation last night of Romeo Peach Queen Lorelei Hoxie, 18, of Armada by Gov. G. Mennen Williams.

Paying his 10th annual visit to Romeo, the governor placed the gold laurel crown on the queen's dark curls while some 1,400 spectators witnessed the ceremony in Romeo's Memorial Stadium.

Herbert A. Miller, festival president, gave the welcome address.

Local attorney Gary Gubin was master of ceremony.

Among the dignitaries introduced to the crowd were Congressman James G. O'Brien (D-Macomb) and the queen's chamberlain, Mrs. W. A. Parks of Romeo.

The stage was decorated to resemble a medieval castle, and the lights were dimmed as the 10 members of the queen's court and her majesty stepped into the spotlight.

The attendants and the towns they represented were Diana Roberts, Lake Orion; Sheila Dahn, Romeo; Gene Ever, Utica; Carol McMillan, Oxford; Mary Martell, Romeo alternate; Veatch Hilkey, Orionville; Sonja Schatz, Dryden; Carole Bird (second maid of honor); Rochester; and Fran Goff (first maid of honor), Watervliet Township.

Flower girl and crown bearer were Peggy and David Lock.

After the governor performed the traditional function of his office, Barbara Muskow, standing in for last year's queen, presented the scepter to this year's reigning beauty.

The three-day festival continues today opening with the children's parade at 10 a.m. The grand floral parade starts at 2 p.m. and features 25 floats, 10 high school bands, the Chrysler Kiltie Band and other marching units.

The 27th annual celebration closes tonight with the Mummies' Parade at 8 p.m. and a spectacular fireworks display at 9:30.

Without charge, Salvation Army workers handed out snacks from a station wagon in the fields.

Service center of the operation is a 24-hour trailer, the state police mobile communications center. Inside, officers, directing the search, keep in steady contact with men in the field equipped with walkie-talkie telephones.

Capt. Yonhine, the district commander, said the search is proceeding steadily. "We're not going to give up," he said. "We're going to look and keep on looking. That's the only thing to do."

The Day in Birmingham

New Secretary Begins Organizing 'Y' Activities

BIRMINGHAM — The new program secretary of the Birmingham branch of the Young Men's Christian Assn., Conrad Ekken, has begun organizing "Y" activities for the forthcoming school year.

Ekken has the responsibility of the Gra-Y program and Hi-Y at Birmingham (Seaholm) High School, thus relieving Youth Secretary George Ewing so that he may enlarge other areas of the youth program.

In addition, the new program secretary will have charge of the new and expanding program in the areas of junior high school youth, informal education classes and other adult programs.

Plans are being made to expand the Gra-Y program in all schools where interest is present and leadership available, Ekken said. Last year's Gra-Y clubs at Pierce, Valleywood, Baldwin, Beverly Adams and Bloomfield Village schools will be given first preference in reorganizing, he added.

Registration now is being taken for Tuesday night swim classes at Barnum pool. The sessions will start Sept. 29 and are open to any "Y" member.

The Toastmasters Club begins meeting tomorrow night. Dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m. Guests are welcome.

The Birmingham "Y" Men's Club invites all service-minded men to join as the fall schedule of meetings get under way. The sessions are held the second and fourth Monday evening of every month.

The "Y" Square Dance Club will hold its opening class Oct. 3. This group will meet the first and third Saturdays of each month in a 12-session course.

The first in a series of 10 bridge lessons will be offered from 1 to 3 p.m. Sept. 28 at the Birmingham "Y" under the instruction of Mrs. Marie Bosshart. Classes will be divided into beginners, intermediate and advanced groups.

Another "Y" program will be four two-hour sessions on Thursday evenings on "Investing" beginning Oct. 1 at 7:30.

The "Y" Young Adult Club invites all single men and women between the ages of 20 and 40 to join the organization and attend the bi-monthly activities planned for the fall and winter seasons. A picnic supper and campfire program for this group is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Friday on the "Y" grounds.

Registrations for all ballet classes now are being taken at the "Y" office for girls 4½ to 13 years of age. The series of 12 lessons will start Wednesday, Sept. 23.

Mrs. Napoleon Magniez BEVERLY HILLS — Private prayer service for Mrs. Napoleon (Maud) Magniez, 30, of 16124 Locherie Rd., was held Sunday at Manley Bailey Funeral Home, Birmingham. Burial will be at 2 p.m. tomorrow in White Chapel Memorial Cemetery, Troy.

Mrs. Magniez died Friday at her home after a short illness. Memorial service will be conducted at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Congregational Church in Birmingham.

Surviving besides her husband are two children, Mariranna and Celestine, both at home; her parents in the Netherlands; and one brother in Australia.

views with Knight — one for 45 minutes and one for five minutes. She insisted on talking with Knight after hearing for the first time yesterday all of the details of the case.

Wives of other state troopers at the Brighton Post had sought to soften the shock of the tragedy and it was not until yesterday morning that she read full accounts in the newspapers. Wives of fellow troopers accompanied her from Brighton to East Lansing for the interview.

HAS VISITORS

In between the two talks Mrs. Souden had with the prisoner, Warden William Banhan of Southern Michigan Prison and Prison Guard Inspector Chester Powers, who knew Knight as a prison inmate, visited him.

Powers told Knight, "Cut out the lying to these officers. Tell them the truth. You made up that story about the hitchhiker."

Knight had nothing to say.

Police said Mrs. Souden didn't expect Knight to break right away when she confronted him. He had said he didn't want to see her. But she reasoned that she could impress him with her worry about her husband and that he eventually would make a statement.

Before Mrs. Souden saw the prisoner, Sailer reported yesterday's police grilling appeared to have had some effect.

"It doesn't think it will last too much longer," he said. "I think he is getting to the point where he is going to crack. He just doesn't care any more."

"He gives you the impression that he is about to tell you something, then he backs up. On occasion he has tears in his eyes — whether that's due to eye strain or emotion, I don't know."

Sailer said, "I think we can eventually ask for a first degree murder warrant. He would not get a warrant until Tuesday if we do it then."

Eisenhower demonstrated that he would rather play golf than eat. He skipped lunch and hurried to the Ailsa golf course after church. The sun, which had been bright and warm Friday and Saturday, disappeared behind heavy clouds, and the President apparently felt he might not be able to get in a last round if he waited too long.

He Was Big Help

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Rev. John C. Murrett, of Buffalo, N.Y., a Maryknoll missionary, said today he had just completed months of intense research for a book on the influence of the Bible on Shakespeare's writing when he got a letter from a man in Cranston, R.I. "Heard about your scholarly intentions regarding Shakespeare," the letter said. "Am forwarding 300 Biblical expressions which I compiled over the last 10 years."

According to witnesses, McClusky went to the gas station, got on the motorcycle, started it and then drove at a high rate of speed directly west across Adams road into the side of the grocery store.

Deputies said he drove a motorcycle belonging to a friend into the side of Davis' Market, 3386 Auburn Rd., Auburn Heights, at about 1:55 a.m.

The motorcycle had been impounded Thursday by deputies and was being held at Wall's Service Station, 3385 Auburn Rd., for the sheriff's department.

AF to Try Out Small Capsule

Wants Men's Reactions to Closet-Size Space for 48-Hour Period

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Air Force has started an experiment to find out how man might react on a two-day journey in a space capsule so small he can barely move.

The experimental capsule is broom closet size—5 feet long, 2 feet high, 24 feet wide.

Trial confinements started in mid-July. They will continue until 40 men have been tested at the rate of one a week.

Each of 20 volunteers will spend 48 consecutive hours in the capsule throughout a six-month period.

The 20 others will be able to spend a fair amount of free time outside the capsule during the 48-hour period.

Half the members of each group will eat a special space diet of fruit juices, meat cubes, cheese, roast beef and candies. The others will be on a conventional diet.

The experiments at Wright Air Development Center, Dayton, Ohio, were described in connection with an Air Research and Development at the Air Force Assn. convention which closed Sunday night.

3 Auto Accidents Injure 4 in County

Three accidents in which cars ran off the road Sunday resulted in injury to four people, according to Oakland County sheriffs deputies.

William M. Clarkson Jr., 19, of 2323 Silver Circle, Pontiac Township, driving south on Baldwin road near Gallogly road, missed a curve and overturned, said deputies.

The accident occurred in Pontiac Township at 1 a.m.

Clifford J. Goodson, 25, of 552 Meadow St., struck a tree when he ran off Bald Mountain road in Orion Township at 8:50 a.m. A passenger, Robert L. Sims, 37, of 1411/2 Oakland Ave. was also injured.

Clarkson, Goodson and Sims were all treated at Pontiac General Hospital and released. Gerald D. Reynolds, 17, of 489 Going St. is listed in satisfactory condition at the hospital with facial injuries. His auto ran into a ditch at a curve on Clarkson road in Orion Township at 12:20 a.m., deputies said.

Fraternity Lifts Membership Bans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Racial and religious restrictions on membership have been removed from the by-laws and rituals of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity.

The removal was voted 134-37 Sunday at the fraternity's biennial meeting. Officers said it means that the fraternity's chapters at 148 colleges in the nation now can select members without regard to race or creed.

Membership had been limited to white males of Christian birth.

First Man to Enter Space Next Summer---for 5 Minutes

(There have been recent and persistent reports that the Soviet Union plans an attempt to send a man into space in September or October. Here is a report on how the U.S. man-in-space program—Project Mercury—is shaping up.)

By RAY CROMLEY
WASHINGTON (NEA)—With the troubles they're having, the best U.S. scientists expect is that an American will spend a brief five minutes in space some time late next summer.

If all goes well, the Astronaut will be shot up in a ballistic orbit, go about 140 miles, and be parachuted down.

It won't be until the winter of 1961-62 that an American can be sent into orbit around the earth.

Even if things go right, he'll make only three circuits, then drop into the Caribbean.

In his four and a half hours circling the earth at 17,400 miles an hour, he'll study the world 100 miles below through a built-in periscope. On command, he'll practice minor satellite "maneuvers"—rock his capsule back and forth, make it face in different directions.

It won't be until well into 1962 at the earliest that an American will circle the earth a day and a night—eat, sleep, stomp around weightlessly in his tiny capsule—for 18 trips around the globe.

The reason for these far-off dates is that the space scientists have some thorny problems to solve.

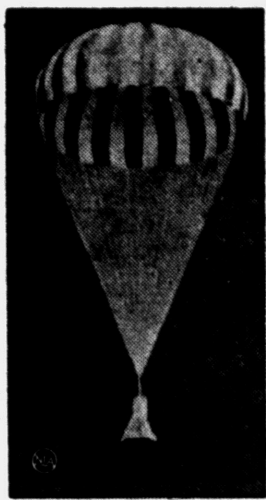

They've got to find out if their ungainly-shaped space capsules—with their squashed-out bottoms—will hold together in the terrific air shocks of missile blast-offs. The gadgets have proved sound in wind tunnels and in minor flights. But can they stand the rugged shock provided by an Atlas missile takeoff?

Space scientists have figured with paper and pencil how to keep these man-carrying high-speed capsules from burning up when they hit the earth's atmosphere. But they're not sure their ideas will work.

For one, they're going to experiment with coating the capsules with a special heavy layer designed to turn to gas when it heats—leaving the capsules and their men intact.

The third problem is making the complicated mechanisms work every time, as they must in space. Yet this man-in-space system is so complicated something is almost certain to fail.

RETURN TRIP—It will be late next summer before the Mercury capsule comes parachuting back from space with a man inside.

Eventually there will be a 16-foot escape mechanism on top of a three-foot parachute tube, on top of a seven-foot man-carrying capsule, on top of a 65-foot Atlas missile.

The launch missile is fired. If it misfires the capsule and escape mechanism must automatically blast away from the missile, then separate in tow, actuating a small stabilizing parachute and setting off a cargo parachute to let the man-in-capsule down gently.

If the missile works, this is what must happen automatically.

Sixty to 80 miles up, the capsule-escape mechanism separates from the missile; the escape mechanism separates from the capsule. The man-in-capsule floats through space for its allotted period—five minutes, four and a half hours of 24 hours, while jets make it face in the right direction.

Then a jet in the capsule's bottom slows it down to re-enter the atmosphere. At 100,000 feet, a small parachute opens to keep the capsule from tumbling end over end. At 10,000 feet, the big parachute opens. Meanwhile, aluminum foil is released so the capsule can be tracked by rescue radar squallions.

When the capsule hits the sea, chemicals are released that color the water for miles. A revolving light begins turning. Several radios broadcast homing signals that can be heard for hundreds of miles.

That's a lot to go right automatically. The fourth major problem is finding out whether man can "take it" in space. Before any of the seven human Astronauts are allowed into space a series of carefully-nurtured, specially intelligent, alert Rhesus monkeys and chimpanzees will pave the way.

Once in space, the monkeys and chimpanzees will be ordered—by light signals—to press buzzers, do other "tasks." By TVs planted in the space capsules, ground scientists will watch the primates to see if space confuses their senses.

Solving these space problems will require a series of 30 to 50 special space and orbit launches before man, himself, circles the earth.

So with trial and error—and time—the first American will get into space. But not tomorrow.

Richmond Woman, 78, Hurt in Plane Mishap

RICHMOND (AP)—Mrs. Lena Breiholz, 78, was injured yesterday when a light plane overturned during an attempted takeoff from an abandoned auto race track here.

The pilot, Clare H. Breiholz, 55, said he applied the brakes when he thought he didn't have sufficient power to get the plane safely into the air. The four-seat Stinson Voyager turned over on its side. His mother, Mrs. Lena Breiholz of Richmond, was treated at the scene for leg cuts, shock, bruises and back injuries.

Breiholz, who was flying his mother to Ann Arbor for the week end, was uninjured.

Gives Concert Violinist Kreisler's Stradivarius

NEW YORK (AP) — Benno Rabinof, the concert violinist, recently was invited to dinner at a restaurant by a violin enthusiast.

After dinner he opened a violin case.

There was an exquisite instrument of red-brown, still glowing with the varnish applied by the master violin maker Antonio Stradivari. It was made in 1734.

"Why are you giving this to me?" Rabinof, in a story in the New York Times, said he asked the man. "The man said, 'I want to hear it sing again. It has been silent too long.'"

The donor then made one stipulation—his name never was to be revealed. Rabinof said the violin once was owned by Fritz Kreisler and was last played by him in Carnegie Hall more than a decade ago. In 1946 it came into the possession of Jacques Gordon, first violinist of the Gordon Quartet. Two years later Gordon died. Then it came into the possession of the man who does not want to be known.

"This violin is cut from a master's hand. When I play it, I have thrilling feelings going down my neck. My chin is on it — where

Jaycee President Sees Shiny Knives for Sale

In New York City on Youth Work

By PHYLLIS BATTLE
NEW YORK—The national president of the "Jaycees," or Junior Chamber of Commerce, is aged 30, married, two kids, wears tortoiseshell-rimmed specs, and has a crewcut that is only one vitalizing treatment beyond Yul Brynner.

He represents 3,700 local organizations of young men (aged 21 to 36) who are very much like him. Eager and energetic about today, anxious about tomorrow, and worried about yesterday... or, as he puts it, "not beat down too many times yet."

Bob Clark came to the big city from his national Jaycee headquarters in Tulsa to help pep-talk New York City into taking quick and positive action against the appalling juvenile delinquency that has killed and injured a number of teenagers. Fighting delinquency is sort of a Jaycee civic specialty.

"So the first thing I saw, when I took a stroll around the neighborhood where the last murders took place," Bob said, "was a window full of knives and guns. They had switch-blades there, all shiny and good looking if you like switch-blades, and there was a big sign: 'On Sale, 97 Cents.'"

He poked thoughtfully at the bridge of his professional spectacles. "Maybe that's the place to start, for our men. In Houston, Tex., that's what the Jaycees did. They set up a crime commission, which forced through legislation making it harder for citizens to obtain knives and guns, and the crime rate dropped fantastically."

"But then again, maybe the first way we can help in New York is to pitch in for more recreation for kids. I don't know. The delinquency problem here seems to me to be much more complex than it is in other places, with the mixture of races, and the remoteness of places where teenagers can indulge in good physical activities to work off their energies."

"Like back in the Middle West, in some towns there's hardly a kid of 14 who can't drive a ball down the middle of a fairway 225 yards. In New York, there are kids who'll never see a fairway. If you'll excuse the pun, the opposite of fairway is unfair way. They've got problems they never made."

"One thing I know—helping to combat this problem is a job for everybody, but it's especially set up for young men. Like ours. The average Jaycee man is married, has two children, so obviously the delinquency problem is something in which he has the greatest interest. When you add this personal interest to the drive and ambition a guy has when he's under 36, you ought to have effectiveness."

Clark's organization, which summarizes its members when they reach 36 (they are called "Roasted Roosters," and are resigned to approaching senility), was formed in 1920. It is non-profit. Its aim: "to build leadership among members by providing services to the community."

There are 22 national projects the Jaycees are working on for the benefit of their communities—five of them dealing with young people's problems. But each local group has its own specific civic schemes. St. Paul, Minn., Jaycees, for instance, tackled 178 local projects last year.

The New York City chapter is, undoubtedly, the most undermanned per population capita of the 3,700 locals. For the obvious reason that "in New York City, most young men must struggle so hard against competition in their own careers that they feel they don't have time to work outside on civic activities."

The members New York does have, however, are dedicated: "The kind of guys who would rather put their foot down, than put their feet up on a divan and watch TV."

Plan to Name Missile Frigate After Halsey

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new guided missile frigate will be named in honor of the late Fleet Adm. William F. (Bull) Halsey.

Navy Secretary William B. Franke said the warship was expected to be launched at the San Francisco Naval Shipyard in September 1961. It is scheduled for commissioning the latter part of 1962.

Guided missile frigates are a new class warship, designed to provide speed, endurance and other qualities required to operate with a carrier task force.

They will be armed with Terrier missiles for air defense in addition to anti-submarine weapons.

Halsey led carrier task forces to victory in the Pacific during World War II. The retired admiral died in his sleep last month.

Hollywood Headlines: Talent Scouts Searching for Monarch-Type Actor

By JOE FINNIGAN
UPI Hollywood Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD — Wanted, one "Theseus."
Twentieth Century-Fox has thrown its vast network of talent scouts into the search for a young actor to play the role of "Theseus," youthful monarch in a multi-million-dollar production of "The King Must Die."

unknown actor to play the role of "Theseus," youthful monarch in a multi-million-dollar production of "The King Must Die."

tray the part and Fox boss Spyros Skouras has personally taken a hand in the hunt.

Fox production chief, Maurice E. (Buddy) Adler, is heading up the task force turned loose on the world to find an unknown who'll be destined for stardom.

"We are faced with a grave dilemma in regard to this picture," Adler said fearfully. "As a novel, 'The King Must Die' attracted worldwide interest as a story of heroics, romance and action. 'Hollywood has been canvassed and searched thoroughly in our determined efforts to find a young actor who has the many attributes which the role of 'Theseus' demands."

Of course, this isn't the first time Hollywood has sought an "unknown" for a role, nor will it be the last, but Adler insists the desire for a newcomer isn't predicated on a longing for publicity.

"Remember, that this is no ordinary romantic role," Adler cautioned. "In addition to the dramatic and romantic situations with which the story abounds, 'Theseus' is called upon to perform almost astounding feats of physical bravery and skill."

"Whoever plays the role therefore must have not only an assured dramatic flair but also remarkable athletic ability and the courage to face and overcome danger."

"You can see, therefore, that it is no mere acting personality we must unearth, which is why the search has been so difficult and our efforts thus far thwarted."

"Hollywood has failed us in this instance," Buddy complained.

And, besides, a film "name" wouldn't approach the stature of the picture, Adler insists.

"Unquestionably, 'The King Must Die' is so epic an undertaking that the production is bound to transcend any boxoffice name we could select, just as in the case of such great spectacles as 'The Ten Commandments' or 'Around the World in Eighty Days'."

"For this reason, we feel that an unknown, given the necessary qualifications, could play the role. This would result in the creation for us of a new box-office star."

What should this young man look like, Adler asked himself.

For Your Next Party Try a Sausage Tree

NEW YORK—Eating can be fun.

That's what we always say... "Eating is"—(what was that clever expression we thought up?)—"an adventure!" Like, for example, a neighbor of ours, George Lang, a big man in the restaurant business remarked to us one night recently that we should toss a sausage festival for some out-of-town visitors, providing, of course, they liked sausage.

"Who doesn't like sausage?" we whooped. "Great idea!" We dozed off a little, as we'd had a nice dinner, and were soon dreaming of sausages.

"You could borrow my sausage tree," we next thought we heard his say—but we put it down to our dreaming.

"You hang all these exotic sausages from it," he said—and then we knew we were wide awake.

He gave us addresses of marvelous shops where we could buy Spanish, Polish, German, Chinese and even Venezuelan sausages. The Beautiful Wife and I spent three delightful hours in Yorkville, Chinatown, Second Avenue, and Amsterdam Avenue, filling up shopping bags with spicy sausages from the old country.

Finally we had a test run in our kitchen. Tossing down sudsy beers, I enjoyed it, but I was the only one.

"What's the matter with everybody?" I roared. "Don't you like these sausages?"

"I don't like any sausages!" the B.W. said, and her mother and Sluggie came in on the chorus. Just because I had learned to love sausage back in the old country (Ohio), the B.W. had gone along. I think she should be awarded the Croix de Sausage for bravery under and over the kitchen fire.

Another eating adventure I had was partaking of the French bean specialty—cassoulet.

I would walk a mile or sit a day waiting for beans. Once on the Liberte I had the cassoulet at its best—traveling through France later, I bored the B.W. countless times by stopping off to ask for a cassoulet, which seemed to be served always some other season.

We returned, not exactly without a bean, but close to it, and one night our old friend, maitre d Robert, told us we could have a cassoulet any season as long as we ordered it a day ahead.

"Tomorrow, then!" we screamed.

We were there and so were the beans. Delicious, they were. We had asked our French friends, Lilo, the Can-Can girl, and her husband, Marquis de la Passerdere, to join us. As Frenchmen, they would enjoy this wondrous sample of French cuisine which it had taken us Americans to remind them of.

And it worked out just as we hoped.

Except that as Lilo and I were spooning out our hunks of beans (and sausages), Lilo turned to Robert and said: "Beans! It's just like being in the Army again, isn't it?"

WISH I'D SAID THAT: The secret of economy is to live as cheaply the first few days after payday as you did the last few days before.

Those politicians who insist they aren't candidates for the presidency sound so sincere that Ike may have to serve a third term... That's earl, brother.

'Men of Two Worlds'

U.N. Guards Israeli-Arab 'Peace'

By ELIAV SIMON

JERUSALEM (UPI) — When the British quit Palestine in 1948, the Jews established the State of Israel in part of the territory and the Kingdom of Jordan annexed the rest.

But at the same time a third power came onto the scene—the United Nations. Although the physical area it controls extends for no more than a few hundred square yards, its authority affects both Israel and Jordan and its moral influence is perhaps greater than that of any other power in the world.

The world organization was the midwife of the 1947 decision to solve the Palestine problem by partition. When, in 1948, Jews and Arabs tested this solution by force of arms, it was the UN which stepped in to try to restore peace.

Now, 11 years later, the midwife is still on the scene, but in the guise of a guardian to watch over the uneasy armistice on the Arab-Israel borders and to see that, even if no official peace treaty has yet been signed, war does not flare into the open again.

The nerve center of the UN Truce Supervision Organization is a palatial building on the southern outskirts of Jerusalem which once was the residence of the High Commissioners in the days of the British mandate. Old traditions die hard in the Holy Land, and to this day it is still referred to as "Government House."

Sandwiched between the Israeli and Jordanian lines, the building is in neither country. The legend over the main gateway proclaims it to be the Headquarters of the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization in Palestine — probably the only spot in the whole country still officially designed as Palestine.

The headquarters staff are literally men of two worlds, and among the privileged few permitted to enter both worlds at will. One gateway out of Government House leads into Israel, the other into Jordan. The UN personnel, in white-painted jeeps bearing huge UN markings on the sides and roof, are a familiar sight in both halves of divided Jerusalem.

Altogether there are about 100 UN observers from 12 different countries, ranging from the U.S. to Ireland and from Belgium to New Zealand. But the majority of these are "in the field" and serve with the various Mixed Armistice Commissions on Israel's borders with Jordan, Lebanon, Syria and Egypt, respectively.

At Government House itself is the headquarters staff of some 10 officers, headed by UN Chief of Staff Maj. Gen. Carl von Horn, of Sweden. In addition to the UN observers, there are a number of personnel who serve in a purely administrative capacity as secretaries, drivers, telephonists, etc.

The observers serve for a two-year spell of duty, on loan from the armed forces of their own countries. They draw the same pay as they would in their own army, but an additional UN allowance of $10 a day. There is also the advantage of duty-free liquor and other goods provided by the UN commissary.

At present there are 32 UN observers attached to the Israel-Jordan Mixed Armistice Commission (referred to as MAC for short). This is based in Jerusalem and holds its meetings, attended by Israeli and Jordanian representatives, in a shell-scarred Gate border, a few miles north of Government House.

Biggest of the UN MAC staffs is on the Israel-Syrian Mixed Armistice Commission — 45 observers based in Damascus (Syria) and Tiberias (Israel). The size of the Israel-Lebanese MAC, which has only three UN observers, is indicative of the peace and quiet on this border.

The Israel-Egypt MAC has a mere seven members, but this is because its work is curtailed due to the fact that Israel decided to boycott it some years ago on the grounds that Egypt was continually violating the armistice agreement on which the MAC was based.

The 10 officers headed by Maj.

Gen. von Horn who are based at Government House in Jerusalem perform all the functions of a military headquarters group. They keep in contact with the UN representatives on the Mixed Armistice Commissions and are also in close touch with the UN Secretariat in New York.

To assist them on the spot are a handful of civilian advisors and a press officer, Albert Grand, of Belgium — one of the very few men in Jerusalem who has two telephones on his desk linking him with two mutually hostile countries. As men of peace whose job is to stop any fighting which might flare up, the UN observers are unarmed. They are familiar figures in Israel as well as in the neighboring Arab countries, but especially in Jerusalem itself, site of the Israel-Jordan MAC as well as of the UN Headquarters staff.

Minnie Autos Do It

British Car Makers Swamp Detroit

By TOM A. CULLEN

LONDON (NEA) — British auto makers have blood in their eye as they prepare to battle Detroit in the American billion dollar small car market.

News about the small cars coming soon from Detroit's Big Three (General Motors, Ford and Chrysler) is being received calmly in British motorcar circles.

"The Big Three are too late," one of Britain's motor magnates told NEA. "We can top every selling point they can make. Besides, we have the experience in building such cars."

Industry observers confidently predict Britain's small cars will widen the U.S. beachhead which they share with German, French and Italian makers.

To spark the battle, the British Motor Corporation has just unveiled a sensational baby car called Minnie.

Two years ago Sir Leonard Lord, boss of B.M.C., called his chief engineer, 52-year-old Alec Issigonis, into his Birmingham office for a talk.

Said Sir Len: "Alec, we've got to produce a car for the millions. A real people's car."

"It must be a fully engineered job—not a half car, not one of these spluttering bubble car types. It must be as fast and nippy as anything comparable on the road.

"And it must sell for under five hundred pounds (about $1,400), purchase tax included."

Issigonis, a quiet, untidy back-

'MINNIE' AS A MORRIS-MINOR — One new weapon in a confident British drive on the U.S. small car market.

elior of Greek extraction, immediately got to work. First, he took a square body and put 10-inch wheels at its extreme corners. This was to give the prototype maximum room and improved stability.

Then, in order to gain more space, he turned the engine sideways.

The result is Minnie, which the British Motor Corporation claims will revolutionize the small car industry.

Minnie is now available in two almost identical versions (only the radiators differ): the Austin Seven and the Morris Mini-Minor.

Only 10 feet long, she has front wheel drive, fully independent suspension, can park in 12 feet of space and will sell in the U.S. for approximately $1,400.

(By comparison, the Corvair, smallest of the new models planned by Detroit's Big Three, is 14 feet 7 inches long, is priced at $2,000.)

Minnie gets 50 miles to the gallon and can hit 70 miles an hour.

Nor is Minnie the only British surprise. The new Triumph Herald, made by Standard's of Coventry, features a complete body restyling, dropping "unlabeled" construction in favor of an independent chassis. It also is priced to sell at about $1,400.

Ford's Dagenham, the British subsidiary of the Ford Motor Company, has two secret small cars still under wraps.

Rootes of Coventry is bringing out new models of the Hillman and Sunbeam.

British car makers make no secret that they are styling their new models with the American buyer in mind. With an eye to the American woman, Rootes, for example, has equipped its Hillmans and Slingers with automatic transmission, more luggage space.

The former is designed to pacify the American woman who complains about the gear shift in foreign cars. Automatic transmission is still largely a novelty in Europe.

All in all, British car-makers have reason to feel optimistic. The British baby cars are priced to undersell the American compact cars. In 1958, the four best-selling foreign makes (Volkswagen, Renault, British Ford and Fiat) all sold at well under $2,000.

Smoke Overcomes 30 Firemen in Flint

FLINT (AP)—Thirty firemen were overcome by smoke Saturday in battling a fire that swept through the four-story S.K. Kresge building in downtown Flint.

Firemen estimated damage at one million dollars.

Twenty-five firemen were treated and released and five remained at a hospital for observation.

Dense smoke came from merchandise stored on upper floors. The fire was believed to have started in a doughnut machine on the second floor.

Brunette or Blonde, She's Miss Europe

PALERMO, Sicily (UPI)—Austria's Christine Spazier, who started the contest as a brunette and finished a blonde, was elected Miss Europe early today.

Miss Spazier, daughter of a Viennese hair dresser, is listed as 19 or 20 in the official records. But there is no doubt about her other statistics, which are 37-22 1/2-37.

Nicole Perrin of France was second and Maria Buccella of Italy third in the balloting, which lasted until nearly 4:00 a.m.

Paul Dowell, of Crestline, Ohio, reported to Oakland County Sheriff's Deputies Saturday that someone stole four jackets and four blankets, valued at $80, from his car while it was parked at a restaurant at Perry and Opdyke roads, Pontiac Township.

John Ravenscroft, 74 Dwight St., reported to Pontiac Police that $90 worth of tools and clothes were stolen yesterday from his truck at the rear of 156 Oakland Ave.

Two other lights are red and green. If the chimps pull the lever near the green light they get food. If they pull the one near the red light they get nothing.

Mike is quick to pull the lever now. Von Breck is anxious to know whether he will be just as quick in the unfamiliar environment of space in a weightless condition.

'Santa Claus' Actor Is Dead

Edmund Gwenn, 81, Known for His Roles as Kindly Old Men

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—British-born actor Edmund Gwenn, who won an academy award for playing Santa Claus, died Sunday at the age of 81.

The veteran performer was named best supporting actor of 1946 for his portrayal of Santa Claus in the movie "The Miracle on 34th Street," capping a career that spanned 64 years on stage, screen and television.

He would have been 82 on the 26th of this month.

He died of complications of pneumonia at the Motion Picture Country Hospital where he had been hospitalized since May, 1957, following a stroke.

Gwenn, who was best known as a movie performer for his characterizations of kindly, humorous old men, was born in London on Sept. 26, 1877.

In May, 1957, he suffered a stroke following an earlier heart attack and kidney trouble. He entered the Motion Picture Country Hospital in nearby San Fernando Valley in October, 1957, where he was confined to bed or a wheelchair.

He returned to London twice in 1956, hoping to improve his health with a change of scenery and climate, but came back here to spend the rest of his days.

Friends said he was survived by a brother and two sisters in London and had no family here.

Gwenn's real family name was Kelloway. He was the son of an official in the British Civil Service who wanted him to follow in his footsteps.

At the age of 17, when Gwenn definitely announced his intention of going on the stage, his father disowned him and threw him out of their home. There followed 10 years of struggling, during which he toured and played in anything and everything.

It was George Bernard Shaw who recognized Gwenn's talent and picked him for a role in a Shaw play which gave Gwenn, at the age of 27, his first real success. It was Shaw also who selected him for his first talking picture.

17 Stricken Ill, but Wedding Follows Feast

DETROIT (AP)—Seventeen guests — 10 of them children — were stricken ill during a prewedding feast yesterday.

But the wedding went on as scheduled.

Thomas Petron, 25, of Detroit, and Helen Maziarz, 18, of Windsor, Ont., were married several hours after the guests were taken to three hospitals with acute stomach cramps.

The couple attended the dinner but did not eat any of the main Greek dish made of rice and chicken gravy sauce. Police said the dish, called rice pilaf, apparently made the guests sick.

Seven persons were reported in serious condition today and probably will remain in the hospital at least a week, physicians said.

The dinner was at the home of Luis Gotsis, 63, of Redford Township, who also was stricken. About 35 attended the dinner.

Announce Dodge Dart to Go Into Production

DETROIT (AP)—The new Dodge Dart will go into production this week at Detroit, St. Louis, Los Angeles and Newark, Del., the company announced today.

The Dart is a new 118 inch wheelbase car and Dodge says it will be competitively sized and priced with Plymouth, Ford and Chevrolet. The regular Dodge is built on a 122 inch wheelbase.
