- February: Introduction to Evidence-Based Medicine The paradigm of practicing evidence-based medicine requires that physicians develop the ability to locate, appraise, and assimilate the best available clinical research evidence for patient care. Clinicians have a need to develop the competency in evidence-based practice to provide quality patient care and improve patient safety and to model best practices for medical students. The session will serve as an introduction to the principles, process, and steps of practicing evidence-based medicine (EBM) and to the relevant online information resources used to practice EBM. Barriers and approaches to teaching and practicing EBM in clinical settings will be discussed as well. Note: This session was previously offered in 2012 and 2013.

New Website Update

by Keith Engwall

The launch of the new Medical Library website was a success! In January, we had approximately 4,200 visits to the site with the top 10 destinations being:

Top 10 Visited Sites on the new Medical Library Website January 2014
Rank	Webpage	Page Visits
1	Databases	804
2	M1 Textbooks	420
3	Offsite (PubMed, etc)	333
4	Course Guides	294
5	M2 Textbooks	238
6	Journals	178
7	Mobile Apps	133

We have only received a handful of questions and comments on using the new site and appreciate your continuing feedback! Although a link to the old site exists to allow for easier transition, it received only about 300 visits, half of which were to the textbook pages.

We intend to conduct usability testing of the new site in the spring to help us improve and refine it. In the meantime, if you have any questions or comments about the new site please email us at medref@oakland.edu. We appreciate your feedback!
