COUNCIL-FRIENDS JOIN FORCES

Last December the Friends of Oakland and the Alumni Council voted to merge. They drew up bylaws for a new organization called the Alumni Association.

The Alumni Association will consist of those alumni and other interested people who donate $5.00 or more annually to the Alumni Fund Drive. Therefore, those who have contributed to the 1971 fund drive are automatic members for this year and may vote upon their officers at the Alumni Association meeting to be held this fall. Alumni who wish to become a part of the Association may contribute to the 1972 Alumni Fund and thereby be placed on the 1972 and 1973 list of members.

The Alumni Association will be the instrument of communication between Oakland's graduates and Oakland University. The Association will sponsor alumni events, as well as canvass funds for the annual drive. Its officers--the Board of Directors--will coordinate and plan the various alumni activities, as well as make recommendations to the Office of the President in behalf of the alumni body.

The Friends of Oakland was established in 1963, primarily as a group of interested community leaders and parents who would perform the functions of an "alumni" group. The Friends created, and developed projects which helped Oakland in its "getting established" years. These included the Meadowbrook Fair, Parents Day, the Friends of Oakland Swim Meet, and the graduation reception. By 1971, however, the balance of the members were alumni. A reassessment of the goals of this group were evaluated and it was found that the ultimate goal had been achieved and it was "time to relinquish control to the alumni." (Phil Williams, in letter

MATILDA WILSON FUND GIVES ANOTHER $55,000 to Oakland for the Matilda Wilson Scholarship Fund. The monies were raised through an estate sale auction of about sixty barrels of china and glassware from MBH. The gifts bring the total given by the Fund to the university to $1.2 million since Mrs. Wilson's death in 1967. The original family gift to start Oakland—the land, buildings, and $2 million—was believed to be the largest private gift to higher education in the United States.

OAKLAND ON ITS WAY TO Ph.D. PROGRAM - Proposals for doctoral programs in engineering and science are currently before the State Board of Education and approval may be forthcoming in the next several weeks to start the engineering degree.

THE ENGINEERING SCHOOL has also been active in researching transportation problems both on and off campus. In addition to the electric car, students in engineering have been working with William Connellan, Assistant to the President, on a DIAL-A-RIDE system to serve the Oakland commuter and alleviate campus parking pressure.

A NEW SCHOOL AT OAKLAND???
A committee has been formed to develop proposals of a new school which deals with human relations, community services, human resources development, and urban planning and development.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM BENTON, Ford Motor Company Vice President, are the new chairmen of the Meadow Brook Festival.

MEADOW BROOK HALL - A newspaper article featured a Steuben vase that was found at the Hall which is a match for the vase (vaze) at Henry Ford Museum. Much ado concerned the gala "Christmas at Meadow Brook Hall", a fund raising event which featured the artistic decorations of eleven local florists throughout the Hall. The whole affair was considered an outstanding success in that 4300 came to see a vision of Christmas in 'old English grandeur.'

Also pictured in another article was one of Continuing Ed's new offerings "Stately Dinners at MBH." Kathy Kaiser Parrish wrote a piece for the Detroit News about Margaret Twyman and the work she is doing for MBH.

June Van Slambrouck reports that over 5,338 volunteer hours have been donated by area women.

MEADOW BROOK THEATER is having another successful season. In the Detroit News, A.L. McClain reviewed "The Anderson Trial" as the "anguish of a man is given life by vivid portrayal", while Don Graunagel, the Press Entertainment Editor, claimed that the Shaw comedy, "Heartbreak House" is a "Masterful mix."

THE ACADEMY OF DRAMATIC ART has been lauded by the Birmingham Eccentric for its triumphal presentation of "The Caretaker." Dick Osgood of WXYZ compliments the Academy students "for their excellent showing;" and, the Pontiac Press claims that the Studio Company offers "Quality shows at economical prices."

The Oakland Breed Six Receive Undergrad Grants

Does Oakland attract certain kinds of people?

The following are excerpts from a letter from a 1968 graduate. It provides a good insight into what sort of people make up THE OAKLAND BREED: a poetic scientist whose interests range from Cummings to Skinner, from religion to economics. Caffeine on Glycerinated Muscle-This is a sophisticate in his field, Fibers." yet he maintains a humanistic childlike approach to life. All in all, as a representative of THE OAKLAND BREED, he is like the 18th Century ideal - the well rounded individual who observes, assimilates, and makes things happen:

"...And OU, what's it like now; four years after?

I'm writing from a profound sense of guilt and hope and anticipation generated by the last Alumni News (Vol. IX, No. 1). Wow! how does one summarize three or four years of life! When I read the newsletter I was really touched by old (or should I say 'nostalgic') memories of faces, friends, feelings, a real rush of I'd-like-to-hug-everybody-I-went-to-school-with-ism---that particular sense of community one feels only with friends with whom changes are shared. Looking back I feel as if this experience has given me a window (a hologram) to a different world. These years were special, with a special warmth and special interactions. Oh, but enough reminiscing.

Three years, that's a very long time subjectively. I'm now living in Virginia, which I much prefer to Maryland, with my wife Sylvia. ... My work has been with lasers and holograpy (3-D pictures) to be used in testing satellites and it's been good. The Big Q sends me to school (M.S. soon, maybe Ph.D. later). But the area, Washington, is the greatest place in the world! Parks, schools, theater, dining, etc. are of course tremendous, but the people are really exciting. We've met so many people really interested in our world and our government that I've really had to do a lot of thinking and reading about current events, something I'd always more or less ignored. But my God, the amount of knowledge and thinking capacity of people, in general, really floors me... Cont. on page 7

These proposals were reviewed and carefully selected by the Oakland University Research Committee, Mr. Lewis Pino, Director of Research and Instructional Services, and Alumni representatives, Beth Titus,

The proposals submitted by the students maintained the same high standards and procedural information as those submitted by the faculty members themselves. The recipients will now be able to research their proposed projects until July 31. A month thereafter they will submit written summaries of their work to the Alumni office and perhaps to the appropriate publications in which their research results might be published.

The Undergraduate Research Grant is an annual project sponsored in the fall through the contributions of the Alumni. This is the second year in which the Alumni has provided monies. This grant fund was initiated by the Alumni for the purpose of promoting outstanding undergraduate research.

It is open to all students who have completed 30 hours or more and have a faculty sponsor to back one's proposals. Since it is an academically important achievement to receive funding for an undergraduate research proposal, the Registrar's Office has announced that this grant will be recorded upon the recipients' official transcripts.

PIONEERING

SPORTS AT OAKLAND: Oakland may have its first All-American college basketball player this season.

Carvin Melson, a junior from Detroit's Murray-Wright High School, is averaging 29.6 points a game and is ranked sixth nationally in the NCAA College Division scoring race.

Melson has led the Pioneers to a 12-11 season record in a rugged schedule this year. Seven of the team's 11 losses have been by seven points or less, including a 93-88 defeat at the hands of fifth-ranked Eastern Michigan U. February 15.

Jack Parker, Pioneer 3-time NCAA College Division All-American diver, has been earning meet points regularly and has qualified again for the NCAA Championships at Washington and Lee U. in Lexington, Virginia. Heath Foxlee, freshman breast stroker from Rochester, has established a new school record in the 200 vards event of 2:23.1. Mike Karas, sophomore butterfly swimmer from Rochester, has a new school record in the 200 yards event of 2:09.6. Larry Bryk, junior from Warren, swam a 11:08.6 for a new school record in the 1000 yards free style.

I've reread a lot of Cummings and especially as a scientist, I see the inherent validity of:

while you and I have lips to kiss with who cares if some one-eyedsonofabitch invents an instrument to measure spring with

The whole set of new trends towards the natural, the supernatural, the internal and external feelings reaffirms my basic faith in the tremendous potential of the human

As a Christian, I've become more attuned to what Christianity is really all about. I've even started going to church again. Our masses are more meaningful and personal than most previous religious experiences I've had.

I'm forced every day to recall Chancellor Varner's words, "Well, you've fought the establishment for four years, now you are the establishment." Too much, too fast I'm afraid. What to do and how to do it...Wow-what a mess.

I never used to care about money either. Marriage has changed some of those ideas. But really economics is fascinating. Money can, in some ways, flow like electric current or any other thing physicists usually deal with BUT in other ways money, people, politics, and religion doens't flow like anything anybody is used to dealing with. A man named Forester, Jay, has been modelling economicstaking into account people, flat tires and short changers. He's a long way from a solution but applying science to indicate trends is a beautiful thing to observe. I'd really like to get into that sort of thing someday.

And a good example of science misapplied is B.F. Skinner and his ultra behavior modification plans. Wow! That man better not have his way or a lot of people will be robots. Before manipulating man, one must try to understand him. I feel that Skinner's ideas, sound though they are, can never be implemented. Thank God!

"Love is like a flowering tree." I'm sure you've seen that on some posters and things. And I must say my roots are at Oakland. There I learned the meaning of open, closed, love and hate, strong and weak. These, too, have been modified but not much. I find that openness is harder to achieve and takes longer. It seems that people build barriers the older they get; until they're very old, when they become "as little children" again. I think I build barriers too but I hope mine come down quickly.

Keep in touch and tell Oakland travellers to stop by."
