

Two Faces of Winter

DUTY CALLS — Three-year-old Michael Vanderworp yesterday joined the ranks of many busy digging Pontiac out of its heaviest snowfall this winter. An additional 3 inches of the sticky stuff fell in the county during the night. Accumulated drifts 3 feet high were reported in some areas. The boy was relieved shortly at 100 W. Southmore Street, by his father, Press photographer Eddie Vanderworp, who finished the job.

THE SMELL OF SPRING — Jamie Williams, 18 months old, sniffs the freshness of a daffodil, a sure sign of approaching spring, as the rest of the nation reels from heavy snowstorms. Jamie's mother, Mrs. Brenda Williams of Atlanta, Ga., holds the yellow flower that is blooming all through the South.

Ready Welcome at Cocoa Beach

Spacetown, U.S.A., to Give Glenn Big Day; Disappointed at JFK

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The high school band polished its instruments.

The nearby town of Cocoa Beach, which prides itself as "Spacetown, U.S.A.," was getting set to let go Friday with a big open-arms greeting to astronaut John H. Glenn Jr., first American to orbit the earth.

The joy was tinged slightly with disappointment.

The townsmen had hoped President Kennedy had planned to bypass Cocoa Beach and fly right to this middle test center to give Glenn a medal and make a quick inspection before returning to Palm Beach.

Somewhat ruefully, City Manager Jerry A. Singer said "It would have been a privilege to have the President come into our town." But he said he understood the President had his reasons for doing it another way.

And, Singer said, it wouldn't prevent this space age boomtown from showing it is "bursting with pride" at the historic accomplishment scored by Glenn last Tuesday.

Glenn is still on Grand Turk Island in the Bahamas, winding up a series of exhaustive checks in which doctors and psychologists are trying to gauge how he was affected by prolonged space flight.

K Is Challenged to Make Good on Space Offer

Kennedy Asks Soviet Premier to Waste No Time Proving It

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy has challenged Soviet Premier Khrushchev to waste no time in proving he favors joint efforts to explore outer space.

"I think it is particularly important now, before space becomes devoted to uses of war," Kennedy said at his news conference Wednesday.

Khrushchev had sent a message congratulating the United States on Astronaut John H. Glenn Jr.'s triple orbit of the globe and suggesting the two governments combine resources to explore outer space.

Less than four hours after the news conference the White House

made public a direct reply to Khrushchev.

In it Kennedy expressed hope "that at a very early date our representatives may meet to discuss our ideas and plans in a spirit of practical cooperation."

He added the United States would come up with "new and concrete proposals" for joint enterprises that could be undertaken without delay.

ENCOURAGING SIGN

Kennedy opened his news conference with a statement noting that twice before he had offered the same sort of proposition Khrushchev advanced. But the President called the Soviet premier's move an encouraging sign for international cooperation.

Glenn's memorable flight and the possibility of U.S.-Soviet cooperation in space dominated the half-hour meeting with newsmen.

As for the chance of lowering barriers between the United States and the Soviet Union on space projects, Kennedy said this country would be happy to discuss cooperation at the United Nations or anywhere else. But he insisted cooperation would have to be genuine. And he acknowledged there is no more assurance now than ever "that the Soviets are willing to transform general expressions of togetherness into specific agreements."

Adenauer Denies Report

BONN, Germany (AP) — Chancellor Konrad Adenauer insisted today, after unfavorable reaction from President Kennedy, that he had never suggested an East-West foreign ministers conference on the Berlin crisis, the foreign ministry reported.

Washington Valued Manners

By DON OAKLEY
Written For NEA

"Every action done in Company ought to be with some Sign of Respect, to those that are Present."

This little maxim is the first of 119 "Rules of Civility & Decent Behavior in Company and Conversation" by George Washington. They were penned in his schoolboy's copybook when he was in his early teens.

How much of his own originality went into the rules cannot be known. It is believed the model list was given to him by his eldest half-brother, Lawrence. Such study was required of all young men of breeding in those days.

Preserved in tattered manuscript in the Library of Congress, the rules, with all their erratic capitalization and punctuation and old-fashioned spelling, give an insight into the formative years of the great man, as well as into the customs and manners of the time — so crude, so cruel and so like our own.

Not all the rules are by any means outdated. Here are a few regarding personal appearance:

— Keep your nails clean and short, also your hands and teeth clean, yet without showing any great concern for them. (15th)

— In your apparel be modest and endeavor to accommodate nature, rather than to procure admiration. (52nd)

— Play not the peacock, looking everywhere about you, to see if you be well deck'd. (54th)

5-Inch Snow a Preview for Friday

DPW Men Stack Up Hours With Snow High, Salt Low

The city has already spent $37,000 more on street snow removal and salting operations this winter than it did all last winter, and the gap is not in sight.

Department of Public Works officials are hoping they don't get another storm. The salt pile is "very low" and new loads are coming in small quantities due to the demand.

While other city employees had the day off today, DPW crews worked all last night and today opening snow-clogged streets.

The amount of snow from last Sunday's storm removed from city streets was greater than the total amount removed all last winter.

Starting Sunday night, crews worked 21 straight hours. Starting Monday night another crew worked 17 consecutive hours. Some 520 truckloads of snow were removed.

It was the fourth snow removal operation during the winter of 1961-62 for DPW crews. During the 1960-61 winter, they removed snow once.

Last winter the total street maintenance program cost about $34,000. So far this winter, it runs over $71,000.

There were about 2,100 tons of salt spread on city streets last year. So far this winter, workers have used 5,100 tons.

Snow removal operations require three or more inches of snow. Any thing less can be handled by salt. Record are not available now as to the total amount of snow removed from streets this far this winter.

Officials point out, however, that some 6,600 man hours have been put in so far this winter clearing and salting streets.

The total for all last winter was about 1,800 man hours.

Trains Collide, Americans Hurt

26 Die in Colombian Accident With About 100 Injured

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A head-on collision of passenger and freight trains killed 26 persons today, the National Railways announced.

About 100 persons were reported injured, including four cadets from a training ship of the Colombian Maritime Academy at Valparaiso.

The collision occurred between Cali and Buenaventura, in Western Colombia.

The American cadets were among a group of 56 who arrived at Buenaventura Wednesday on a training cruise aboard the ship Golden Bear.

Medical authorities said their information indicated none of the cadets was injured seriously.

The American cadets did not suffer major injuries because they were riding in cars toward the rear of the train, the announcement said. The five injured cadets were eating breakfast at the time of the collision. They were taken to a Cali hospital.

The Americans were on a trip from the port of Buenaventura to Cali for a three-day visit, according to reports in Cali.

Railroad officials said only passenger trains, out of Buenaventura, and the freight train, out of Cali, met at high speed on a curve.

It was announced that three cars of the jammed passenger train were demolished and that about 200 persons were believed injured at the time of the crash.

Nearby towns quickly dispatched medical assistance and other aid to the scene.

Capt. Carl Bowman of the Golden Bear flew up from the coast and the U. S. consulate in Cali said he had "everything under control."

'Winter's Worst' Brings Accidents

After digging the Pontiac area out of this winter's heaviest snowfall last night, area residents can expect a repeat performance Friday, the weatherman warned today.

Five inches of fresh snow were dumped on the area during the night and late yesterday. Today's warming trend brought a welcome respite, but more snow is predicted for tomorrow evening.

At least one Oakland County resident suffered a fatal heart attack while shoveling snow. He was Felix Goetz, 61, of 23511 Noel Drive in Southfield.

Elsewhere in the metropolitan area four more snow choppers were listed as heart attack victims in the past 24 hours.

Only one traffic injury accident was reported in Pontiac as a result of the storm.

The sole victim, Mrs. Lena Milton, 53 of 2381 Seaboard Road, Waterford Township, later was listed in fair condition at Pontiac General Hospital.

A rash of nontraffic accidents occurred in the county throughout the night as motorists alighted on snowy-wet roads. A line of vehicles were reported caught in snowbanks along Telegraph Road this morning.

Full crews of city and county road workers labored through the night plowing main thoroughfares clear. All were considered passable by morning.

Side roads in rural subdivisions remained clogged, however. Many residents were reported unable to leave their homes for work today.

Schools opened on schedule this morning, but buses stayed off backroads in some areas of the county, including the Oxford school district.

Every piece of available road-clearing equipment was in use last night and today, both the City Public Works Department and the County Road Commission stated.

They were tackling side roads today and removing snow banded alongside major thoroughfares during the night.

100 MEN WORKING
Over 150 men and 62 trucks and graders were being employed in the task.

Elsewhere in the state the storm hindered police on accident investigations. In a case in Detroit, police were unable to locate a patrol car that was reported to have been involved in a crash.

An 18-year-old youth was killed near hard-hit Muskegon when the tractor he was using to clear a walk overturned and pinned him beneath it.

In Ann Arbor a pedestrian was killed today when struck by an auto as he walked along a suburban Taylor Township road. Police said he was tossed 50 feet by the impact. The dead car involved did not stop.

Muskegon measured 6.9 inches of new snow, making this winter officially the worst on record for Lake Michigan community. The lake brought the year's total to 134.1 inches there.

Forty miles eastward Grand Rapids still had far from a record fall but that city had had more snow than a normal winter brings and was fast approaching the total figure for all of last winter. Wednesday's 2.8 inches gave Grand Rapids an even 74 inches.

More than six inches of snow paralyzed Detroit Wednesday afternoon, snarling traffic and making side streets virtually impassable. Poor visibility delayed some flights at Metropolitan airport but early in the evening the airlines returned to normal schedules.

Nation's East Battered Again

Heavy Snow Reported in New England; Dixie Gets Thunderstorms

By The Associated Press

Snow, sleet and rain hit much of the eastern half of the nation today.

Burlington, Vt., and Boston reported 3 inches of snow in 6 hours. Sleet and freezing rain belied the coastal section of Rhode Island, parts of Connecticut, southeastern New York and northern New Jersey.

Showers and thunderstorms occurred in the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama and eastern Mississippi.

Almost 3 inches of rain swamped Augusta, Ga., in a 4-hour period. Extensive flooding was reported in Macon, Ga., with water 2 or 3 feet deep in some streets.

BLEZZARD PREDICTED
A storm sweeping southward from Alberta, Canada, brought blizzard warnings for sections in Montana, the Dakotas, Nebraska, Colorado and Kansas.

The snowstorm that swept across the Midwest Wednesday persisted in many areas from the Mississippi Valley to New England.

Heavy, wet snow piled up in Detroit during the night. Five-hour attack deaths among snow shovellers were recorded there.

Up to a foot of snow burdened Michigan's lower peninsula. Many schools were closed.

Bad weather disrupted flights in the East, Idaho and New York. Canceled 11 inbound and 11 outbound flights up to midmorning because of poor conditions at Washington, Philadelphia and Boston.

A mass of cold air moved into the north central region. The mercury plunged to -29 in Huron, S.D., -27 in Aberdeen, S.D., -15 in Fargo, N.D., -7 in Omaha, and -4 in North Platte, Neb.

Snow and Slush Are Corroding Horns on Buses

The almost constant snow and sleet of this winter have Pontiac Transit Corp. riding on the horns of a dilemma.

"It's the crassest thing," said Neil B. Pilson, general manager. "Our buses have been holding up just fine and we've been sticking to our regular schedules, but we may end the winter without horns."

Pilson explained that horns on each of the corporation's 15 Pontiac buses are under the bus.

"The snow and slush is corroding all our horns. It looks like they'll all have to be replaced."

Pilson promised he'd do all in his power to see there was no bus without a beep.

Secret Army Opens Last-Ditch Attack

ALGIERS (U-P) — A wave of terrorist attacks swept Algeria today as the right-wing secret army made a last-ditch effort to wreck an impending French-Algerian agreement to end the 7½-year rebellion.

Police reported more than a score of scattered attacks between 7 a.m. and noon, as European gunners in cars and aloft fired at Europeans and Muslims, killing at least 11 persons and wounding 35.

The violence erupted as the Algerian rebels' national council was called into session in Tripoli to act on an agreement with France to end the strife.

The 60-member parliament was expected to give the needed four-fifths approval to the accord paving the way for Algerian independence.

With the measure reported approved by the rebel cabinet, hopes were high for a cease fire in the North African territory by Sunday.

Among the victims in today's outbreak were four policemen killed and three wounded. Harried officials accused the European secret army of desperately seeking to provide strikes and major disturbances on the eve of peace.

"We have no more patrol cars available to answer all calls," one police radio report said.

Meanwhile, French headquarters for Algeria expressed confidence that the army will succeed in keeping the tense situation in hand.

Bobby Assures Berliners of Support Amid 'Rockets'

BERLIN (UPI) — Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy assured West Berliners of continued American support today at a city hall rally which the Communists tried to disrupt by setting off fireworks that launched Red flags.

Four of the flags were unfurled as Kennedy addressed a crowd of nearly 200,000 in the City Hall Square. The Communist maneuver brought boos from the crowd and a comment from Kennedy about the Reds' refusal to let refugees cross to the West.

West Berlin police first believed the flags had been fired by rockets over the Communist-built wall that divides this city. But later the police said the fireworks apparently had been placed in advance on roofs near the city hall and exploded during the long-planned rally.

Rockets that looked like balloons soared into the sky, exploded with a bang and a Red flag attached to a white parachute unfurled from each. The flags were about four feet square.

Kennedy and his wife Ethel arrived from Rome about 10:30 a.m. and were greeted by a two-day stay at their current world tour.

Despite snow and freezing weather, the Kennedys received what veteran observers said was the warmest welcome ever given visitors, as more than 300,000 Berliners showed their enthusiastic support and read a greeting from the 150,000 to 160,000 lined the route taken by the Kennedys' motorcade from the airport to city hall—waving, cheering and shouting "Welcome Bob" and "Welcome Ethel."

But the biggest crowd of all massed in front of the city hall as Kennedy promised continued support and read a greeting from his brother, the President. West Berlin police said between 160,000 and 180,000 persons crowded into the City Hall Square.

The Kennedys appeared moved and surprised by the warm reception. The attorney general said that on their world tour he and his wife had traveled thousands of miles, "but nothing we have seen has touched us as much as what we experienced today."

Glenn backed up his backup pilot in a sea rescue here just a day after Glenn himself was pulled from the ocean.

Glenn, brought to this Air Force tracking station for a physical examination and interviews about his 17,500-mile-an-hour flight around the globe, took part in the rescue of a skin diver Wednesday.

Our Space Efforts to Merge With Reds?

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
AP Diplomatic Affairs Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy's new bid for Soviet cooperation in outer space is judged here to have some chance of separating the space race from the arms race and leading to a peace pact for the skies.
But the chance is not very great. Nor is the time to get results very long.
The discouraging factor, said Kennedy himself indicated at his news conference Wednesday, is the failure of efforts during the past year to reach accord on any of the pressing, earth-bound issues which have for so long inflamed East-West relations.

The space problem could prove different in one respect, at least. It arises from an area of common interest between the Soviet Union and the Western powers and its military potential is large. But although military boosters and military men have figured in space achievements to date, space is not just committed by either side to warlike purposes so far as anyone here can say.

As Kennedy told reporters Wednesday, he considers it particularly important now to do something about securing the peaceful uses of outer space "before space becomes devoted to uses of war."
He followed up his news conference discussion of the problem with release Wednesday night of a message he had sent to Soviet

News Analysis

Premier Khrushchev calling for a meeting at a very early date to discuss ideas for the cooperative development of space research and space projects.

Khrushchev earlier in the day had sent Kennedy a message of congratulations on the triple earth orbit by Astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. and suggesting the two nations cooperate in exploring outer space.
Kennedy told the Soviet leader he was instructing his officials "to prepare new and concrete proposals for immediate projects of common action."
FOR COMMUNICATION
Administration informants said that these would probably take the form of specific programs to reach objectives already set forth by Kennedy in earlier statements —such as the use of satellites for communications purposes and for weather research and forecasting.

But Kennedy's call for a meeting also opened up the possibility that if East-West cooperation could be seriously started on relatively modest projects it might lead to a joint effort in some more dramatic scheme such as probing the mysteries of the distant planets or putting a man on the moon.
By contrast with East-West efforts to negotiate a disarmament agreement, work out a nuclear weapons test ban or settle the Berlin crisis, the space projects which Kennedy envisions would offer the possibility of limited, practical, cooperation without immediately involving military considerations of either side.
The Kennedy administration's approach to the outer space peace problem is two-pronged. And while one of the prongs of policy aims at positive cooperation with the Soviets in space exploration the other aims at an agreement to deny the uses of outer space for military purposes. This second line of attack on the problem is due to be made in the Geneva Disarmament Conference which opens March 24.

Kennedy was asked Wednesday whether he had any evidence that the Soviets were actually willing to engage in joint space explorations.
He said: "We have seen no evidence that this kind of cooperation would take place." But he added, referring to Glenn's successful orbiting, "We, I might say now, have more chips on the table than we did some time ago. So perhaps the prospects are improving."
He seemed to be suggesting that Khrushchev may now be more impressed with U. S. space explorations and may feel that the gap between the two great powers in this area has closed to the point where it would be profitable for the Soviet Union to consider modifying its own secrecy policy in order to permit cooperation.

Washington Valued Manners

are probably the most revealing and amusing to us today.
— Being sent to meet, scratch not, neither spit, cough or blow your nose, except there's a necessity for it. (20th)
— Take no salt or cut bread with your knife. (20th)
— If you speak broad in the house, let it be no more than what you put in your mouth at a time, and how not your breath at table but say still words of it. (19th) — Put not your meat to your mouth with your knife in your hand, neither spit forth the stones of any fruit pie upon a dish nor cast anything under the table. (19th)
— Cleanse not your teeth with the table cloth, napkin, fork or knife, but if others do it let it be done w/ a pick tooth. (100th)
There are other breaches of etiquette we might smile at today but which young George Washington felt it necessary to guard against. For example:
— Spit not in the fire, nor stoop low before it, neither put your hands into the flames to warm them, nor set your feet upon the fire, especially if there be wood before it. (9th)
— Kill no vermin, as fleas, lice, ticks, &c. in the sight of others. If you see any filth or thick spitte put your foot dexterously upon it; if it be upon the clothes of your companion, put it off privately, and if it be upon your own clothes return thanks to him who puts it off. (13th)

Most of the rules, however, deal with simple, common courtesies valid for any time or place.
Certain others give a hint of the man that was to be — the strong, fervent and self-principled Washington who was to become a general and a president:
— Reproach none for the infirmities of nature, nor delight to put them that have (them) in mind thereof. (21st)
— Show not yourself glad at the misfortune of another, though he were your enemy. (22nd)
— When you see a crime punished, you may be inwardly pleased, but always show pity to the suffering offender. (23rd)
— Let your discourse with men be business be short and comprehensive. (25th)
— Wherein you reprove another be unblamable yourself, for example be more prevalent (prevailing) than reproach. (46th)
— Use no reproachful language against any one, neither curse nor revile. (49th)
— Be not hasty to believe flying reports to the disparagement of any. (60th)
— Let your conversation be without malice or envy... and in all causes of passion admit reason to govern. (58th)
— A man ought not to value himself of his achievements, or rare qualities of wit; much less of his riches, virtue or kindred. (63rd)
— Undertake not what you cannot perform, but be careful to keep your promises. (20th)
Last, but possibly foremost, is the 110th precept, which the world honors George Washington for following all his life:
— Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire called conscience.

Claims Actress Won't Boss Bank

May Lose Pretty Asset

MEADVILLE, Miss. (AP)—Actress Gloria McGeehan may not be dividing her time between movie-making and running a bank, after all.
Her mother, the widow of Dan R. McGeehan, founder of the Bank of Franklin, said in Washington that someone else would be named to the post at a board of directors meeting in Meadville today.
"It is not true that my daughter will be president of the bank," Mrs. McGeehan said Wednesday night. "We have already decided on a president."
She said the new president would be John Hollinger, a Meadville businessman and a bank director.
Mrs. McGeehan said she owns 50 per cent of the bank stock, her daughter only a small percentage.
McGeehan, a congresswoman for 18 years, was president until his death recently at 67.
The daughter, currently making a movie, said earlier in Hollywood she would succeed her father.
"You can say my election is assured," she added she had no plans to attend the board of directors meeting.

He was appointed Jan. 2 by Gov. John B. Swainson after former Atty. Gen. Paul L. Adams was named to the State Supreme Court.

George Washington's Name Shines On and On

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—As a teenager there were no visible signs to stamp him for future greatness.

His formal education ceased at 17. He was tall, raw-boned and subject to sieges of sickness.

His face was pock-marked rather than handsome. He was not clever or quick-witted, and some found him stuffy.

He had a quick temper, but worked hard to control it—as he did other faults he found in himself.

He was in turn a frontier surveyor, a farmer, a soldier more formidable for his determination than his tactical or strategic skill.

But at 57 this unlikely figure had become the greatest revolutionary leader of his century. He had freed his country from foreign domination, won worldwide stature, and been unanimously chosen its first president.

WASHINGTON POOR

Although he owned vast acreage, he was "land poor" and had to borrow money—$500 pounds—to finance the trip to his own inauguration.

"Any security you may have like I can give, and you may be assured, that it is no more my inclination than it can be yours, to let it remain long unpaid," George Washington wrote to a friend, Richard Conway of Alexandria, Va., early in 1789.

George Washington seems remote today to many of us, lost behind the lattice of legend that bears him from us even as we bring him our tribute of later-day awe.

He was a giant in a time of giants. Few lands in so short a period have produced such a cluster of gifted men as John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, Alexander Hamilton, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Paine, and many others.

Why did Washington, who lacked their diverse talents, tower above them all? The realization of the true greatness of Abraham Lincoln came after he met a martyr's death.

But the superiority of Washington as the only leader who could lead them to victory in war and unity in peace was recognized by most of the great men of his time.

WHAT QUALITIES?

What qualities did they see in him that made him indispensable?

They were the same qualities that, as a teen-age boy, Washington painfully and self-consciously tried to develop: self-discipline, integrity, and a character steadfast and unshaken in the face of any trial.

He learned to command himself before he was summoned to command others. He molded himself before he molded a nation. And no man in history was perhaps less corrupted by that strongest of vices—power.

"The character and service of this gentleman are sufficient to put all those men called kings to shame," wrote Tom Paine.

"He errs as other men do, but errs with integrity," remarked Jefferson, who also predicted

Urge Students Enter State Essay Contest

Pontiac area high school students today were urged to enter a statewide essay contest on "Prevention of Juvenile Delinquency" by Sgt. Lawrence E. LaBar, president of Fraternal Order of Police Lodge 132.

A total of $1,000 will be awarded the top 10 winners of the contest sponsored by the Michigan Fraternal Order of Police. Information may be obtained at any local high school or from Sgt. LaBar at the Public Safety Building, 110 E. Pike St.

Washington's name "will triumph over time and assume its just status among the most celebrated worthies of the world."

HONORABLE:

An historian, W.E.H. Lecky, gave this dispassionate verdict: "In Washington, America found a leader who could be inspired by no earthly motive to tell a falsehood, or to break an engagement, or to commit any dishonorable act."

Said Abraham Lincoln 19 years before he himself became president: "Washington is the mightiest name on earth—long since mightiest in the cause of civil liberty; still mightiest in moral reformation. On that name an eulogy is expected. Let none attempt it. In solemn awe pronounce the name and in its naked deathless splendor leave it shining on."

At 67, Washington met death without regret, courteously asking those around him to take no further trouble.

"It is well," he said.

Has Cure for Problem

WASHINGTON (UPI)—One of the most novel unemployment cures proposed yet: V. C. Logan, defeated candidate for the Texas Senate suggested Uncle Sam offer all married women $1,000 each to according to entomologists of the world accept—creating 4 million jobs for men.

Washington Wasn't a Politician

Now the greatest country on earth, the United States of America had a more humble start than any other nation in world history that ever reached that status.

And that conception was largely augmented in its dire necessity by one man. He had led the colonies to victory on the field of battle in their fight for independence. But they then needed the fertility of an unselfish inspiration, to get started in a manner that would endure through the ages.

That man was George Washington. His military record was so unblemished that he was asked to be King, and could have headed such a government, had he desired.

But he sensed the past and impending fall of kingdoms, and as chairman of the Continental Congress, had the major role in framing a constitution for a republic.

With its Bill of Rights, that constitution has endured, as a world model. WASHINGTON was our first great general, and probably without a peer in that respect.

He also had the primary essence of a statesman, but lacked the gifts of oratory and rhetoric to put it over. And he distinctly was not a politician. He hated politics, and refused to take a third term as President, largely on that account. His final acts in office portrayed a dislike for any campaign of abuse or violence along party lines.

His two-term pattern for the Nation's highest office was respected by its voters for 153 years. After that, the respect for him had still endured to such an extent that anything beyond two terms is now prohibited.

WASHINGTON went through every phase of military life. In his youth, as a surveyor, he entered the English army, and was imprisoned by the French in their failing contest for supremacy in the New World.

He inherited the Mount Vernon estate on the death of his brother from tuberculosis, whom he had accompanied to the Barbadoes in the hope of restoring his health. This gave him a big start toward a man of wealth when he was only 22 years old.

Six years later he married a wealthy widow, and their combined financial resources comprised a fortune among the largest in what was to become the new Nation. Much of it was used in a manner to stabilize that Nation's foundation.

He had no children, giving that Nation the exclusive privilege to call him father, an honor which he had so richly earned.

In the hundreds of volumes that historians have written about George Washington, one of the greatest of them says:

"To enormous energy he added the cool brain of the man of business, an inflexible sense of justice, a personal disinterestedness of the rarest kind, and an indomitable will."

"His imposing figure and grave, masterful face became identified in the minds of its people with the Nation."

Here in Michigan today we have two special reasons of our own to be mindful of the memory of the Father of His Country.

Political bickering caused his tomb at Mount Vernon to be almost forgotten. For many years it was neglected, and grew up to weeds and brush, although its surroundings comprised a national shrine.

Finally, a delegation of Michigan women who had visited Mount Vernon raised a fund for the restoration of the tomb. Local historical records show that Pontiac women had a hand in this work.

The other reason is that at Lansing we now have a constitutional convention working on the fundamentals of a new Michigan constitution. Here's hoping that they get some inspiration and pattern from that great body over which GEORGE WASHINGTON presided in Philadelphia 173 years ago.

Some Inside Facts

Hitherto Unpublished About the Father of His Country

Washington: Whom we sometimes wonder would be proud of the city named after him.

On this 230th birthday of George Washington it is our privilege to give you some items not previously printed in their order. They have been put together by the Pontiac area's genealogist, Wilbur James Seger of Lake Orion, who has devoted most of his life to this work.

The original family name was Wassaton, starting back in England nearly a thousand years ago. It was changed to Washington several generations before George was born. The name Wassaton had a tinge of nobility in it.

George was a fourth generation American, and the first son of a second marriage. He was his father's third son, one of four boys in a family of five children.

His proposal of marriage was refused by the first six women to whom he made it, but was accepted by the seventh, a wealthy widow.

He was born on Feb. 11, 1732, not on Feb. 22, the difference coming about through a later calendar adjustment. He lived through the duration of ten wars.

Friday was Washington's lucky day. The conspicuous events in his life that happened on that day included: birth, appointment as lieutenant colonel, promotion to colonel, election as commander-in-chief, his establishment of U. S. marine corps, Battle of Princeton.

Establishment of his winter quarters at Valley Forge, winning of Battle of Yorktown, election as president, creation of war department, proclamation of the first Thanksgiving, establishment of the federal capital, laying of the cornerstone of the White House, last day as president, and contraction of his fatal illness.

David Lawrence Tells of Cable

Glenn Feat Biggest '1st' Since 1858

WASHINGTON—What do "firsts" really mean? Time was when Lindbergh was the first to fly alone nonstop across the Atlantic to Paris. Who remembers the year and that it took him 33 hours?

Today, it is routine to fly the Atlantic to Paris in seven hours. Maybe it soon will be routine for people to take a world cruise in the skies on Sunday afternoon and go around the earth in 90 minutes.

What, however, really compares with the sensational record of the American people to the feat of Lt. Col. John H. Glenn in circling the globe three times in one day? Probably the most thrilling moment of the American people ever experienced, previously was the announcement that a cable had been laid successfully in the Atlantic Ocean to Europe on Aug. 10, 1858, after repeated attempts had failed in prior years.

While the flight around the world by Col. Glenn doesn't immediately change the life of a single person here or abroad, the laying of the Atlantic cable affected at once people on both sides of the ocean. Prior to that time, it took many weeks to get a letter by boat to relatives in Europe and many more weeks to receive a reply.

The anxieties that were felt: when members of the family were ill can hardly be described even in retrospect.

The most graphic statement of the emotions of the American people after the laying of the Atlantic cable comes from the pen of George Templeton Strong, a famous New York lawyer whose diary was published by the Macmillan Co. in 1932—a half century after his death. He wrote:

"August 10, 1858—Everybody all agog about the Atlantic cable. Telegraph offices in Wall Street decorated with flags of all nations and sundry, fancy pennants suspended across the street. Newspapers full of the theme and at the demonstrations the event has produced from New Orleans to Portland....

"If no great revolution or cataclysm grows mankind off the track they've been traveling for the last half century, if the earth doesn't blow up or get foul of a comet, it will be a strange place in 1958, most unlike it is now. The diverse races of men certainly seem tending toward development into a living organic unit with railroads and steam-packets for a circulating system, telegraph wires for nerves, and the London Times and New York Herald for a brain."

Within three months after starting, religion almost every saint had vanished. His joints no longer painful, sore on foot, no more daily headaches, village spots I had since my first baby 12 years ago were much smaller or had gone, helped my husband paint house and redecorated the interior myself, felt just wonderful....

And please understand—This is not medicine. It is no trition. I can do no harm. Whether it will do any good is for you to decide after a reasonable test—of not less than three months.

Many persons declare it has restored the natural color to their graying hair, neither deny or affirm. I'm just glad they feel and look younger.

No competent physician or nutritionist will deny that an iodine ration—that is, a certain quantity of iodine in one form or another taken daily or regularly beneath the ocean from Ireland to Newfoundland. Three times the cable had broken, but when success was finally achieved Queen Victoria and President Buchanan "exchanged messages amid jubilant celebrations."

Effective propaganda will be derived now by the United States from the flight around the world by Col. Glenn. It puts America on the front pages of newspapers all over the world. It even causes Soviet Premier Khrushchev to get in on the worldwide publicity act by his sanctimonious offer of co-operation hereafter with the United States in space ventures.

Again and again the United States government has sought to cooperate with the Soviet Union in scientific experiments. At the very session of the United Nations when Nikita Khrushchev took off his shoes and banged away, President Eisenhower was calling for "international cooperation for constructive peaceful uses of outer space under the United Nations."

The Soviet government has repeatedly promised to furnish information about what it is doing in outer space, but has failed to follow through with its promises. Maybe some day there'll be another "first" to record—when the Soviet government promises something that they will have all airports—like it or not?

'Conservation Department Isn't Doing Adequate Job'

The conservation department has shot the goose that laid the golden egg. Deer hunting licenses were down last fall because of the slaughter of deer and fawns. Fishing licenses were down because at fishing sites you were lucky to get past speedboat playboys and water skiers.

The trout program has proved very costly and does not help the average fisherman unless he purchases an additional stamp. Nothing is done to propagate or help the pan fish, bluegill, bass and pike.

Now there's talk of a cigarette tax and a license for wives and a license for great lake fishing. Who's getting all this money? It isn't for the benefit of the sportsman. It's for fat salaries for the bigwigs that run our conservation department. We need a governor that will clean house.

Reader's Suggestion Proves Invaluable

I followed the advice of our loyal old friend, "Hump" Humphries of Birmingham and tried The Press by air mail, and now I usually get it two days away and occasionally the date after publication. Think of that—24 hours at nearly 3,000 miles from the office of publication.

It's a trifle expensive but think of the wonderful, wonderful bargain—The Pontiac Press that quickly so far from home. No price would be too great for such a magnificent trust and unobtainable pleasure.

This is my heartfelt thanks to the publisher, I cost $5 for the TV repairman to stop by and change a tube. My doctor charged $6 to come to the house and repair my sick child. I would think the library would really more support to the cause by offering plumbing care to the aged or maybe TV repair. Why pick on doctors?

Door to Door Agents Upset Housewife

Some concerns send agents out at 10 p.m. to interview families. Why do they always ask if the husband is home or when he expected? Why can't they read "no agents, peddlers or solicitors" signs? Isn't the matter with day-to-day? Housewives can't get on with a lot less door to door salesmen. I don't begrudge them making a living, but I'm tired of opening the door to say "no, please."

State Man's Camera Shows Possibilities

It's Anchors Aweigh for Underwater TV

LANSING (AP) — An auto plant worker with an inventive mind has assembled a portable, underwater television camera that he hopes will launch a thriving new business.

State police gave the camera its first extensive field test in an abandoned line pit at nearby Williamston last week. They were impressed with the results.

Daniel J. Marvin thinks the camera could be used to locate bodies in the watery darkness with the aid of three small floodlights attached to the front.

Highway engineers could use it to inspect bridge footings, he said. Observers from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, who witnessed the test at Williamston, indicated they would test the camera's possibilities for inspecting fish spawning and feeding grounds.

Marvin, an assembly-line worker at the Fisher Body plant here, said he plans to take his invention to Northern Lake Michigan this summer for a look at the hull of the ore carrier Bradley, which sank three years ago.

The camera is an improved model of a closed-circuit TV unit used in banks, industrial plants and similar establishments. To it, Marvin attached an ultra-fast lens "which can almost see in the dark."

He designed the water-tight housing himself and with the help of Herman Robby, closed circuit television engineer at Michigan State University, improved the picture quality and ironed out other electronic bugs.

TAKEN BELOW ICE

For the test, Cpt. William Carter, state police aide diving instructor, took the camera below the ice covering the line pit. Observers watched what the camera picked up from a television screen set up on shore.

Marvin said he plans to design another camera and attach it to a skid for use in inspecting sewer systems.

"Haul it through a sewer and you can see any cracks, leaks or

No Sleep, Breaks Windows

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—It was 11:10 p.m. Mary McLaughlin was sitting quietly in her kitchen.

Wham! A window gave way with a crash and a stocky man came flying through and sprawled on the floor.

Mrs. McLaughlin screamed. The man picked himself up, ran through the house and left—head first—through a back bedroom window.

Fifteen minutes later, and four blocks away, Richard Souder, 24, was awakened by the crash of breaking glass. He saw a man getting up from the bedroom floor. The man looked at Souder for a second, ran through the apartment and dived out another closed window.

The man ran from Souder's house, across the street, jumped through a window of George Averell's home and then, head first again, out a kitchen window.

By this time police were all over the neighborhood.

Mrs. James Wylie was reading in her living room when, crash, the man came jumping through a window a few feet from her. She screamed and the man ran through the glass front door—and sat down.

That's where police found him. He was treated for a broken ankle, head injuries and numerous cuts of the head, face, arms and neck.

He gave his name as James Edward Givins, 31, and his occupation as a presser.

Why the window smashing? Givins was quoted as saying he had had terrific headaches and hadn't slept for three or four days.

He was held without charge.

Chrysanthea celebrated her 11th birthday in Walter Reed Hospital.

Children Collect Funds for 'Their' White House

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—The children over the nation will do the same, so that other relics and heirlooms can be purchased for the historic home of American presidents.

The funds were accompanied Tuesday by a letter written by a seventh grader, Ginny Anderson, and a long scroll which every pupil and teacher in the school signed.

"On this tour," Ginny wrote Mrs. Kennedy, "you unfolded the life of our nation's leaders as only the White House could show it."

"We have heard thousands of words on our part but no longer are they words, now they are our part, our heritage, something to be cherished," the seventh grader's letter read.

The children did not specify what they wanted Mrs. Kennedy to buy with their money.

The idea of collecting the funds came from the school's Parent-Teacher Association which met a day after Mrs. Kennedy's Feb. 14 television tour.

'Add Wire Wheels and You Can't Keep Autos in Stock'

Auto Executives Feel Car Buyers Off on Luxury Kick

By BEN PHILGAR
Automotive Writer

DETROIT (AP) — The managers of the two biggest car-making divisions in the auto industry are convinced the public has moved from an economy kick to a growing desire for luxury and performance.

Semon E. (Bunky) Knudsen, general manager of Chevrolet, and Lee Iacocca, general manager of Ford, told newsmen at the opening of the Chicago Auto Show last weekend that for the moment, at least, price seems to have gone out of style.

"You can't sell basic transportation," Knudsen said, "but when you add wire wheels and better engines and fancy trim you can't keep the cars in stock."

"Even in the small cars," Iacocca noted, "there is a demand for more luxury and more performance. The national economy is booming and people are willing to spend a couple of hundred more to get what they want."

Both Ford and Chevrolet are showing cars at the Chicago show which they hope will take advantage of this demand for "more."

Chevrolet has its new Corvair

Monza convertible with Spyder options—a turbocharged engine developing 150 horsepower, knock-off wire wheels, a 120-mile-an-hour speedometer, a tachometer showing engine revolutions, a four-speed floor mounted gear shift.

The Corvair started life in the fall of 1959 as an economy car. From a sales point of view it was a dud. Immediate changes were made to add faster trim and later in the 1960 model run the Monza series was introduced, with bucket seats, a little better engine and a faster price tag.

By now the Monza accounts for 75 per cent of all Corvair sales. Chevrolet confidently expects demand to outrun supply immediately on the new Spyder version. Ford, which scored big with its Falcon, an economy car, now has a dressed up Falcon Futura sports coupe, with a jaunty roof line, luxury interior, four-speed gear shift. It also is showing a luxury model of its new Fairlane series with a peppy V8 engine which, according to Iacocca is a "real bomb in a 3,000 pound car."

Ford also reports demand it can't satisfy for its new 48 cubic V8 for its Galaxie series.

Chevrolet already has sold more of its Impala sports coupe model than it had planned to build in the entire model year.

Iacocca said, Ford's extra-cost optional equipment business is booming for every line including the Thunderbird. Air conditioning is up to 10 per cent of all Galaxie models. "Not long ago we couldn't put air conditioning into 1 per cent," Iacocca said.

"People buying Thunderbirds are telling us put on everything you have," he said. "Installations of right-hand power seats are triple that last year. Imagine, 285 for a right-hand seat. That's luxury."

Although it still won't say so, Ford will bring out its small-small car this fall. Knudsen was asked if he thought Ford could sell such a car in the face of the apparent luxury and performance demands.

"They may have to add bucket seats and wire wheels," Knudsen said with a smile.

Union, RR Men to Sift Merger

NYC, Pennsy Officials Will Seek Harmony in Talks With Labor

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — Heads of two of the nation's largest railroads were reported due here today to confer with labor union leaders hotly opposed to merging the two lines.

Union sources said that Alfred E. Perlman, president of the New York Central and James M. Symes, board chairman of the Pennsylvania Railroad were coming here to talk with rail union chiefs in an attempt to win their agreement on the giant railroad consolidation.

The railroad unions have been regularly letting off steam in claiming the NYC-Pennsy merger along with a dozen other pending railroad merger proposals, would create giant monopolies resulting in curtailed rail services and loss of thousands of workers' jobs.

The rail unions only Wednesday predicted that if the current "merger mania" wins government sanction, the entire rail system may wind up under government control in the next quarter-century.

George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, and George E. Leighty, president of the Railway Labor Executives Association, said that contrary to popular opinion the railroads are prospering and enjoying better profits than airlines and trucking firms.

The union leaders disputed railroad management claims that the mergers are needed to provide a more efficient operation.

The AFL-CIO Executive Council, holding winter meetings here, adopted a resolution urging President Kennedy to stop all rail mergers pending an over-all transportation study to determine the proper role of railroads in meeting the needs of an expanding national economy in war and peace times.

Reds Laud Glenn but Brag of Going Up First

MOSCOW (AP) — Pravda today praised John H. Glenn Jr. for his courage, but said Americans remember Soviet communists Yuri Gagarin and German Titov were in space first.

"Americans do not forget that the road to the cosmos was paved by Soviet people, Soviet scientists, engineers, technicians and workers, notwithstanding the sounds of some propagandists of the Cold War," the Soviet communist organ said, adding:

"The plain people of America remember well what Yuri Gagarin said after he returned to earth: 'there is enough space in the cosmos for everybody.'"

As for Glenn, Pravda said "John Glenn displayed great courage and self control during his flight."

Asks More Care of Blue Cross

UAW Spokesman Says Health Plan Capable of Extending Service

DETROIT (AP) — A United Auto Workers spokesman said today that both Blue Cross and Blue Shield have nothing to fear from private insurance if Blue Cross and Blue Shield will deliver the extensive health care service of which they are capable.

James Brindle, director of the union's social security department, addressed Gov. Swainson's commission on prepaid hospital and medical care plans. He said "Blue Cross and Blue Shield complain about unfair competition for good risks from commercial insurance. Yet in this area of guaranteed fully prepaid medical-surgical coverage, they often fail to exploit the great advantage of their relationships with the professors and the hospitals."

Brindle asked the governor's commission to join in asking Michigan Medical Service to study and report on the extent to which income ceiling guarantees of their contract actually operate; how much extra out-of-pocket payment there is to nonparticipating physicians; and to what extent "we have the covered services paid for by insurance under the so-called 'service plan.'"

Honolulu residents shivered as northwest winds drove the sea-level temperature to a record low of 55. Sleepers hauled out blankets.

Small hailstones pelted two areas of Oahu Island Tuesday.

On Maui, 10,000-foot Mt. Haleakala was lashed by sleet and snow. The temperature there fell to 25.

White House Has Improved Kennedy Marriage

By RUTH MONTGOMERY
WASHINGTON — Some marriages founder when the husband is engaged in all-consuming work that must frequently distract him from his family.

No position is more demanding than that now held by John F. Kennedy, yet this first year of the presidency seems to have established the Kennedy marriage on a deeper and firmer footing than ever before.

It is an open secret that Jack and Jackie Kennedy had their share of marital difficulties during the early years. This was not surprising, inasmuch as the senior had been a sought-after bachelor until the age of 35, with his own Georgetown abode, a coach, fortune and personal address book.

Both he and his beautiful young bride were high-spirited, pumped, and accustomed to having their own way. Rumors circulated more than once that the youthful Kennedys were on the verge of separation, but they successfully weathered each storm.

BROUGHT THEM CLOSER
New tragedy brought them closer during that grueling period in 1955 when JFK spent agonizing months in the hospital, following an unsuccessful operation on his spine. Jacqueline enthusiastically pitched in to help with the research that was to produce JFK's Pulitzer Prize-winning book, "Profiles in Courage."

The future President gratefully dedicated it "To My Wife," and gallantly wrote in the foreword: "This book would not have been possible without the encouragement, assistance, and criticism offered from the very beginning by my wife, Jacqueline, whose help during all the days of my convalescence I cannot ever adequately acknowledge."

Misadventure continued to dog their path. JFK was in Southern France on a holiday after the 1956 nominating convention, when word reached him that Jackie had miscarried. She similarly lost a second child, before Caroline arrived and transformed the youthful couple into adoring, doting parents.

The year 1960 was one of almost unending separation for the Kennedys. JFK, his mother, brothers and sisters were scattered around the globe in relay from Maine to California, and from Alaska to Dixie, while Jackie and Caroline kept a lonely vigil at home. The year ended in triumph, with the presidential election in hand, and a new son in the nursery.

Rumor factories began working overtime the day of the inauguration. Forgetting that the President is a reformed New Englander, television grumbled that he had failed to kiss his wife, or even put his arm around her after swearing the presidential oath. In movies and politics, such misdeeds are usually sealed with a kiss.

That night, after visiting two inaugural balls together, the new prexy kept Jackie waiting for 35 minutes in a White House limousine while he looked in on a Frank Sinatra party for inaugural entertainers at the Stater Hotel. Still ailing, she then joined in the White House, while he continued on to two more balls.

SPEND TIME AWAY
Jackie began spending a lot of time away from the White House, at the rented Glen Ora estate in Virginia, and at a friend's seaside mansion in Palm Beach. As summer neared she moved with the two children to the Kennedy encampment at Hyannisport, and except for an occasional one or two-day trip to the White House to play hostess to a foreign visitor, she was absent from Washington for approximately five months.

The President frequently joined the family for weekends, however, and during the past year he and Jackie have been observed walking hand-in-hand, not only in the moon-bathed gardens of Versailles, but in White House corridors, and along the seashore.

Their devotion to each other can be read in their eyes. Recently a friend sat beside the President, leafing through an album of letters from renowned writers and artists who participated in his inaugural festivities. They came upon one which commented on how beautiful Mrs. Kennedy had looked.

Pausing to reread the tribute, JFK mused aloud: "Jackie did look beautiful that evening, didn't she? No one will ever know how much she has helped me."

— From the Bostonian Kennedy, who is given to understatement, that was tribute indeed.

Even their severest critics have nothing but praise for Jackie as a mother. How is it possible, they murmur to read such unspooled little picaresque as Caroline in the presidential limelight?

LINKED BY CHILDREN
Jackie has a wonderful way with children. Her nieces and nephews adore her, and so do Caroline's down little friends who come daily to the White House for "playschool."

Unless she is out of town, the First Lady personally escorts Caroline upstairs to join the nursery group each morning, and in midafternoon she supervises the youngsters outdoors, where a life-sized dollhouse, a jungle gym, tree house, swings and horsecar for rolling downhill have transformed part of the grounds into a playland.

Jackie yearns to protect Caroline and John from the public spotlight, and resents any attempt by newspaper people to invade their privacy. This is understandable, except that she herself scored her first front page scoop, as a young reporter, by securing an interview with First Lady Mamie Eisenhower's two little nieces.

Jackie had waylaid the girls on their way home from school, to ask them about their famous kin in the White House. When the article appeared, their mother usually told the editor of the paper to protest such "tactics" with children.

Supply Agency for Defense Ups Its Recruiting

DETROIT — The Defense Supply Agency Wednesday stepped up its recruiting program for personnel to staff the defense logistics services center that starts operations in Battle Creek this year.

Transfer of the logistics service to Battle Creek from Washington was announced late last year.

At the time of the transfer announcement it was estimated that 300 more workers would be required at Battle Creek than were then employed in the civil defense establishment.

The Defense Supply Agency last week recruited 30 former civil defense employees at Battle Creek for jobs with the new agency. They will be trained in Washington.

The DSA said that more than 600 persons will be required in Battle Creek to handle the work of the Logistics Service Center.

27 States Use System

CHICAGO (UPI)—Twenty-seven state governments now operate under the civil service system, according to the Public Personnel Association.

Mrs. Kennedy is anguished because she cannot personally take Caroline to the circus, or even to her ballet lessons without attracting unwelcome attention.

Caroline's well reported conversations with Secret Service men, reporters and senators indicate, however, that the little tyke is a natural-born politician, who can be counted on to say the right things at the right time, whether matters are around or not.

Envious Republicans mean that the President has one too many assets working for him—golden-haired little Caroline. One of them clumsily observed that the GOP has only a slim chance of defeating JFK in 1964: "If Caroline should become a brat."

This seems an unlikely circumstance, however, with Jackie on the job as food disciplinarian.

Hearing Will Probe Airline Bias Charge

DETROIT — An immediate hearing has been ordered in the case of a Negro woman who accuses Northwest Airlines of refusing to hire her as a stewardess because of her race.

Marlene White, 28, charged the airline with discrimination after being turned down in applying for a stewardess job in 1958.

She said the airline gave no reason for declining a job as a stewardess, but did give her a job as a clerk.

The former Detroit now lives in Chicago and works for Northwest as a reservations clerk.

The Michigan Fair Employment Practices Commission refused Wednesday to dismiss the complaint and ordered the hearing.

It's Rhubarb's Big Moment

JUCKY AND TANGY — That's what 13-year-old Arthur Martin says about tender rhubarb grown on his widowed mother's farm. The youth's father, Emil, was one of the originators of the Michigan Hothouse Rhubarb Association.

FAMILY AFFAIR — Everyone works at the Joseph Martin farm at 11871 Canal Road near Utica. Martin, with the help of every member of the family, produces about 60,000 pounds of rhubarb a season. Engineers from the state of Ohio and Michigan

Opening the door of one of her three hothouses near Utica, Mrs. Emil Martin paused and heaved a happy sigh of relief.

There before her, in the darkish dampness of the low-hung building, stood thousands of gorgeous, cherry-red rhubarb stalks—little-leaved and long-stemmed.

This, to the energetic widow of two years, meant the climax of long, hard hours of back-breaking work for her and her two teen-age sons on their Canal Road farm.

From now until mid-May they have the job of picking the rhubarb that has grown from a coarse, fibrous weed with more leaf than stem, to a vibrant-colored, tender and mouth-watering delicacy. This is not particularly a story about Mrs. Martin and her boys. It is similar to those of hundreds of farmers in the Utica-Rochester area, known as the hothouse rhubarb center of the world.

AREA NEWS

It reaches from north of Utica to as far south as Monroe, with as per cent of the growers within a six-mile radius of Utica.

No wonder rhubarb growers are proud. They produce some 5-million pounds of Michigan's only fresh winter fruit in a season which starts late in February and concludes in early May.

THREE YEARS TO MATURE

However, each plant, which produces from five to eight pounds each, takes three years to be "born" and nurtured before it becomes a full-fledged parent-plant.

Roots are planted outdoors in the summer. They are plowed up in November and remain on the ground until frozen. In late December they are brought inside, and the quiet process of coming alive begins.

The roots then are put down to bed the lights turned off—and they are kept comfortably moist until the quick-growing process begins.

Special automatic heat is turned up to 35 degrees and the lights kept off in the low, gnost-shaped hothouses until the sprouts break out of the fibrous roots.

Most farmers have three to five hothouses in order to make a profitable business.

Right now is the peak of the rhubarb season.

Men, women, boys and girls join in picking the 34-inch-long stalks two or three times a week.

The fruit is packed into cartons and most is shipped out of the state through a rhubarb stock broker. Why little of this rhubarb remains in Michigan is still a mystery to many growers.

PACK 2,500 BOXES

One of the biggest producing units in the area is the Duftussel farm at 14083 Canal Road. Two brothers, Don and Bud, along with their father, Donald Sr., reap and pack 2,500 fifty-pound boxes during the short harvest season.

It all started 25 years ago when grand-grandfather Duftussel started a little rhubarb hothouse, one of the first in the state.

His boys have carried on the business until, with four huge 500-by-35-foot buildings, there are more than 20,000 fast growing plant roots shooting up through the mud.

Rhubarb growing seems to be a family affair as well as tradition. Everyone gets into the act because there is so much to do and so many varied operations before the fruit is on its way to market.

The plowing, fertilizing, handing, planting, picking and boxing all require unlimited energies.

"Once the business gets into your blood, you just can't seem to want to do anything else," Don Duftussel said.

GOING TO COLLEGE

However, his brother Bud has a different idea. "My three boys are all going to college to learn how to work with their heads and not so much with their hands," he said.

At the seventh annual Rhubarb Festival, set for Saturday at the American Legion Hall in Utica, some of the finest fruit in the world will be judged.

The grower who enters the best stalks will be crowned Rhubarb King. He will share the throne with pretty Kathy Fleitner, a 17-year-old senior at Utica High School, who won the title of queen in competition Jan. 27.

The day-long festival climaxes a long year of hard work, patience and careful planning to produce the very best in Michigan's only fresh winter fruit. The judging will be "plenty tough," according to those who know.

YOUNGEST GROWER — Eighteen-year-old Raymond Martin is about to assume full responsibility for the three-hothouse rhubarb operation on his widowed mother's farm near Utica. When his father died two years ago, the entire family pitched in to "hang on" until young Raymond graduates from Utica High School next June. "We've almost made it," said his mother.

Ask Farmers Union Head to Testify on New Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate would be eliminated unless pro-agriculture Committee today called on National Farmers Union President James Patton to testify on the administration's farm bill.

Patton is expected to back the general provisions of the program, but urge additional provisions to raise farm income.

Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper, R-Iowa, said yesterday the bill would "put complete control of the farmers' activities in the discretionary control of the secretary of agriculture."

He made the statement while questioning Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman.

Freeman told Hickenlooper that he was "reading things into the bill that aren't there."

Hickenlooper's charge was aimed mainly at a portion of the administration bill providing that federal price supports for feed grains be set at a portion of the market price. The bill also provides that the secretary of agriculture may adjust the price supports for feed grains.

Topics to be covered are "Diabetes, What is it?", "Treatment of Diabetes," "Diet and Diabetes," and "Personal Hygiene and Prevention of Complications."

All diabetic patients and their relatives are invited free to attend any or all of the lectures. Mrs. Philip Rittgers of the American Diabetes Association will conduct the program.

Mrs. Rittgers received her B.S. degree from Goshen College, a B.S. in Nursing from Western Reserve University and an S. degree from the University of Pennsylvania.

She was a Clinical Instructor at several schools of nursing including Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit from 1957 to 1960.

2 County Residents Cited by Foundation

Two Oakland County residents have been cited by the Freedom Foundation at Valley Forge, Pa. for their contributions to the advancement of "The American Way of Life."

They are Mrs. Patricia Anderson of 2330 Evergreen Road, Southfield, and Cornelius E. Westover of 61 Amhurst St., Pleasant Ridge.

Mrs. Anderson has been awarded an honor certificate for an essay entitled "At the Lincoln Memorial." A George Washington League award has been awarded to Westover for photograph with the caption "Abundance in America."

More than 1,000 individuals, organizations, businesses and schools have been honored for the things they wrote, said, or did in 1961.

It is the largest group of winners in the Foundation's 13-year history.

The Foundation is a nonprofit, nonsectarian, nonpolitical group created to build "an understanding of the spirit and philosophy of the Constitution and Bill of Rights."

Other newly elected officers and directors of the society are: James W. Bennett Sr., of 848 Faxon, Utica, vice president; Mrs. Jeanne Fenton, of Mt. Clemens, recording secretary; and Robert E. Lee DeWolfe, of 1168 Wilby, Utica, corresponding secretary and treasurer.

Lohr said the society is making plans for an intensive building fund campaign to provide Macomb County with an adequate and modern animal shelter. The society receives no help from the United Foundation.

"The Macomb County Humane Society," he added, "hopes to offer a service that is available at least 15 hours a day, every day. Sunday and holidays included, but it can't be done without public assistance."

Those whose terms will expire at the April 2 election are Mayor Russell Greig and Constable Stanley Law. The new councilman and constable terms are for three and two years, respectively.

Greig and Law are the only candidates to file to date. Deadline for voters registration is March 5. The clerk's office will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. that day.

Expect Flare-Up on House Floor

GOP Leader to Blast Charges of Inaction on Economic Program

LANSHING (UPI) — A political lead over programs to restore Michigan to economic health was expected to flare anew today in the House of Representatives.

Republican floor leader Allison Green, R-Kingston, served notice yesterday he would take "equal time" on the floor today to answer charges of inaction leveled at the GOP lawmakers by Democratic floor leader Joseph J. Kowalski, D-Detroit.

Green called Kowalski's charges "fictitious and without foundation" after the Democratic floor leader spoke, but said he would reserve a full response until today's afternoon session.

Kowalski accused the Republican party of lacking leadership. "Forty-two days ago they promised a legislative program for 1962," Kowalski said.

"The program has not been seen yet. The Republican leadership has been nonexistent. Apparently they've been so busy trying to find reasons why they shouldn't like Gov. Swainson's program they just haven't found time to develop one of their own."

The Democratic leader also attacked House Speaker Don R. Pears for "twisting facts, ignoring facts and manufacturing statistics."

Motorcycle Races Set by Ortonville Jaycees

ORTONVILLE — The Ortonville Junior Chamber of Commerce will hold motorcycle races at 7 p.m. Saturday on the lot at Hart Lake on M-13, three miles south of town. Proceeds from the event will go to the Youth Fund.

SNOW COUNTRY — Barely visible behind a snow bank near Chalmers is the roof of an outdoor skating rink shelter. As of Wednesday the Houghton area had recorded 13 feet, 1 inch of snow. However, it's been a poor year for the powdery pile-up on the Keweenaw Peninsula, nowhere near the record 23 feet 5 inches chalked up in the 1949-50 winter.

Judge, Citizens Quiz Powers

Broad Board Chosen to Get Impartial Report on U2 Pilot

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Somewhere — the place is a secret — an unprecedented, formal inquiry is going on today into the story of U2 Pilot Francis Gary Powers.

The panel is headed by an eminent judge — E. Barrett Prettyman — and includes "outstanding citizens" not yet named.

The choice of the panel appeared to reflect an administration effort to give the official U.S. report on Powers the highest stamp of impartiality and judicial credibility.

The Powers case has raised issues ranging from the reputation of a man and what his back pay should be, to the security of a nation, the extent of Soviet weapons development and the degree to which U.S. intelligence systems may have been compromised.

The panel was apparently chosen to report on these issues in a way which would reduce as much as possible lingering doubts among the American public and subsequent rumors and recriminations.

All signs so far indicate that Powers himself will be cleared of any failure to fulfill his contract or carry out his instructions.

The form of the inquiry was revealed by President Kennedy at his news conference Wednesday in what seemed a slip of the tongue.

"There is, as you know," Kennedy said, "a board of inquiry which is examining whether Powers completed his contract. That board... is under the leadership of Judge Prettyman and represents outstanding citizens."

One on Dog Racing, Another on Liquor Law

Over 200 Bills Pile Into Legislature Before Deadline

LANSING (U) — Bills to prevent unfair competition in the dairy industry, authorizing dog racing in the Upper Peninsula and liberalizing liquor laws have come into the legislature.

They were among 218 bills jammed into the law-making machinery by House members Wednesday in a last-minute rush to beat the deadline for introducing all but tax and appropriation measures.

New introductions raised the House total to 762; the most in recent years despite the fact that legislative sessions in even-numbered years are intended to be short and tightly scheduled.

Welch Says Birchers' Membership Gaining

BELMONT, Mass. (U) — Robert Welch, founder of the John Birch Society, says his organization is gaining members faster than it loses them.

Welch told the Men's Club of the Plymouth Congregational Church Wednesday night the society is growing solidly.

"In 1961," he said, "only 2 percent of the membership resigned. And we average that many new members each week."

Rep. Edson V. Roof, R-Bangor, made another try at putting through a fair trade practices bill for the dairy industry.

It would require price posting by wholesalers and retailers, prevent discounts or rebates for certain customers, and prohibit other practices giving some customers preferred treatment over others. A similar measure was beaten last year.

A bill to permit pari-mutuel dog racing in the Upper Peninsula was introduced by Rep. Joseph S. Mack, D-Ironwood.

Mack said it was intended to boost Ironwood's economy, damaged by a decline in the iron mining industry. The proposal would require approval of the City Council and is designed to permit racing only during the summer tourist season, he said.

Rep. E. A. Fitzpatrick, D-Detroit, and Walter G. Nakula, R-Gladwin, offered separate proposals to lengthen the hours for serving liquor. Nakula, chairman of the House Tourism Committee, proposed to permit Detroit restaurants to vote on permitting liquor sales after 2 p.m. on Sunday.

Fitzpatrick proposed for the seventh year in a row to allow liquor sales on Sundays in any city, village or township that approved it.

In Detroit, Grand Rapids and Flint and other cities which reach 120,000 population he also would permit extension of closing hours from 2 a.m. to 4 a.m. in places with entertainment licenses.

WOULD REMOVE BAN

Fitzpatrick also submitted a bill to remove the ban against retail beer and liquor stores within 500 feet of churches and schools. Another would permit off-track betting on horse races.

Rep. Russell H. Strange Jr., R-Clare, anticipating removal by the constitutional convention of the 15-cent constitutional ceiling on property taxes, proposed to write the ceiling into the statutes.

It would be assumed that motorists would give their consent to take a chemical blood test for intoxication when they receive their operator's license under a bill authored by Rep. Maifield, R-Comstock Park. Conditional refusal to allow the test would be grounds for revocation of the license.

A similar measure written by Rep. Harry A. Demaso, R-Battle Creek, would remove the requirement that only a doctor or nurse could administer a blood test for intoxication. It also would permit introduction as evidence in court the refusal of a driver to take the test.

Bills by Rep. Chester Wozniak would make the lieutenant governor the chief executive of the Economic Development Department, and raise his salary from $8,500 to $17,500.

Solon Requests Cape Canaveral Renamed Glenn

NEW YORK (U) — A congressman proposed Wednesday that the name of Cape Canaveral be changed to Cape Glenn in honor of the nation's first space orbiter.

Rep. Victor L. Antuono, D-N.Y., fresh from a talk with Col. John H. Glenn Jr., also urged that a presidential medal of honor be awarded to the astronaut.

Antuono further backed Mayor Robert F. Wagner's proposal for a Broadway ticker-tape parade for the space voyager.

Antuono, second-ranking member of the House Science and Astronautics Committee, was waiting on Grand Turk Island Tuesday to extend the greetings of Congress to the man who completed a triple-orbit of the earth from Cape Canaveral.

"He looked wonderful," Antuono said on arriving at Idlewild airport from Miami.

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — Dom Mintoff, leader of Malta's labor party, conceded victory today to the Nationalists in balloting for a 50-member legislative assembly.

Final results are not expected until late today or Friday, but unofficial reports showed a swing to the right. The Nationalists under Borg Olivier have promised to give Malta independence within the British Commonwealth.

American Look for Men Kicks Out Continental

By PHYLIS BATTLE

NEW YORK — THE husband of this house just bought his first "Continental Look" suit. At least we think it's Continental, a little too big and you pop the top button. That's the look, isn't it?

NOW they tell us the "Continental Look" is a suit. To be replaced by the "American Look," exemplified by guess who? John F. Kennedy.

"Although the Continental suit, with its cutaway jacket and tighter fit, found surprising support in this country in recent years, it has now given way to the American manner," reads the official announcement in an unofficial magazine about the men's clothing industry, Gentlemen's Quarterly.

The move has been given "new impetus." It adds, by the dress of President Kennedy.

Well now, isn't that a fine and patriotic idea, coming from an industry that I seem to recall was highly critical of our president's clothes back in the early days when they were trying to push peaked lapels, side vents, chest buttons and cutaway coats.

They couldn't see Kennedy's charm then; there was a general feeling that Jack, you made the pants too long, and oh, those square flap pockets, those button-down shirts, that belted waistline!

I remember, in fact, interviewing a London tailor who was brought to New York two years ago to push the "London Look" (an ill-starred promotion for what I call "neat shabbiness"—designed to perk up business), and he expressed the private opinion that independent-minded American men — of the ilk of Kennedy and that blueplaid of fashion, President Truman — seemed just right in their own "look" and why didn't we Americans recognize it?

Okay, at last we have, and dear, helpless husband in stick with his brand-new, old-style suits.

The new "American Look" in which he'll probably invest two years from now, just as they are introducing the "Congo look" featuring khaki colors, battle stripes and cutaway provincial jackets, can be summed up like this:

Lapels — notched and not too narrow. Shoulders — natural. Shirt — button down. Tie — stripes. Waist — slight suppression. Buttons — two, the top one at the waist. Pockets — straight, flapped. Jacket length — regular. Jacket front — not cutaway. Vents — back center. Trouser — pleated. Cuffs — usually. Fabric — stripes most popular.

"Americans," the magazine says to back up its patriotic fashion fervor, "have developed a sense of the tasteful and appropriate."

Since the same magazine was behind the "Continental Look," I assume they mean Americans have come upon their sense of taste and fitness just in the last season . . .

If I were President Kennedy, once criticized and now abruptly held up as the symbol of his country's good taste-come-lately, I'd want to vent more than my jacket back.

The American woman's figure, as well as her stature, has changed dramatically in the last 61 years. For the bigger and better.

According to a survey taken by foundation garment makers, Sareng, Inc., the average height of today's American woman is five-foot-four and one-half, compared with five-foot-two in 1900.

Today's average girl-weight is 126; it was 114 at the turn of the century.

Average bust measurement in the 20- to 45-age bracket in 1900 was 33.5 inches; now it's 35.25. Waists picked up from 24 to 26. However, the most intriguing statistic is this:

Hips measured 35 inches in 1900, and they are 36 and one-half today. In spite of this, says Sareng, "the share of total hip measurement occupied by the derriere decreased one-half inch since 1900."

Oh, those crazy bustles!

School Board Issue Voted Down

Romney Gets First Con-Con Defeat

LANDSING — A Disident Republican has joined in a coalition with Democratic delegates to hand George Romney, GOP gubernatorial hopeful, his first major setback at the constitutional convention.

By a 69-59 vote, the convention decided last night to reject a proposal making the governor a member of the state board of education, Romney had urged its adoption in an impassioned speech.

The vote came after hours of debate and parliamentary maneuvering on the recommendation, submitted by the Education Committee, of which Romney is a member.

Supporters of the proposal are expected to make another attempt to get it into the new constitution when the education article comes back from the style and drafting committee for two more votes.

31 JOINED DEMS

A breakdown of the vote showed that 31 Republicans joined 26 Democrats to beat down the proposal. Two Democrats — Sidney Barthwell of Detroit and Charles Folio of Escanaba — voted with 49 Republicans on the other side of the question.

In debate, Romney said the governor should have a direct tie-in with the education board since he has to submit an annual state budget, but of which is devoted to education.

"The governor needs a ring-fence"

Reluctant Russia to Discuss N-Ban

GENEVA (UPI)—The Soviet Union told the Western powers today it was "reluctantly forced to accept" discussion of a nuclear test ban at the 18-nation disarmament

Claims Cities Present Critical Mission Field

ST. LOUIS — Methodist Bishop Marshall R. Reed of Detroit said Wednesday Christian churches should be alerted to the fact that the nation's cities "present the most critical mission field in the world."

"What happens religiously to this 70 per cent of our population that lives in our cities may largely determine the future of Christianity in the world," he said.

Bishop Reed addressed the National Methodist Convocation on Urban Life in America. Housing Administrator Robert C. Weaver, scheduled to address the convocation, was delayed by plane trouble in Chicago and did not come to St. Louis.

New Satellite Orbits but AF Says: Hush

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — The U.S. Air Force has a new satellite in orbit — one it doesn't want to talk about. The satellite was launched Wednesday, in secrecy, from this big missile base. The Air Force gave only these details:

It was an Agassia B rocket, boosted aloft by an Atlas missile. The launching was successful. Experts theorized it was a test vehicle for the spy-sky Samos and Midas satellites, which are designed to keep Russian missile bases under surveillance. Russia has protested the launching of military satellites, terming them acts of aggression.

New Sports Store Under Construction

The formation of a new sporting goods center, The Silverwolf, Inc., was announced today by Charles D. Plank, the company's president.

The store, located at 4100 N. Woodward, Royal Oak, is presently under construction and completion is expected by April 15. Meanwhile, part of the facilities will be available.

Other officials of the company are Kenneth Siefel, executive vice president, and Paul E. Carick, treasurer.

seat on education," Romney declared, adding:

"It's an elemental principle to grant authority co-equal with responsibility."

Declaring that the subject was one of the most important matters to come before the convention, Romney said the proposal actually represented a compromise from his point of view.

He would prefer that the governor's tie be established by allowing him to appoint the state superintendent of public instruction and the members of the board of education, he said.

The Education Committee decided, however, to recommend that the board be elected by the people and in turn appoint a superintendent.

VETO AMENDMENTS
Delegates voted down two amendments pertaining to the superintendent's post. One would have allowed the governor to appoint the superintendent, and was defeated 62-45. The other called for election of the educational chief. It lost 100-30.

Opponents of the proposal to give the governor a seat on the board argued that it would inject politics needlessly into education.

"The question is whether we are going to allow the board to become a political arena and let education become a political football, or are we going to keep education out of politics," said Lee Boothby, R-Windsor, one of several sponsors of the amendment.

talks scheduled to open here March 14.

Soviet nuclear negotiator Semyon K. Tzarapkin told the acting heads of the British and American delegations at the now-suspended nuclear test ban conference that the Russians finally had come around to the view that the disarmament conference was the place to hold the nuclear talks.

By agreeing to the nuclear talks in the broad disarmament conference the Soviets reversed their stand on the issue for the second time in less than six months.

Only last month the Soviets refused to consider transferring the nuclear talks to the disarmament conference after such a move had been proposed by the Western powers. Earlier the Russians had said they wanted to take up the test ban in a general disarmament meeting.

Tzarapkin revealed the latest Soviet stand as Premier Nikita Khrushchev sent to Washington a reply to President Kennedy's Feb. 14 letter that rejected the Russian proposal for a March summit meeting in Geneva.

Khrushchev's reply was handed to acting Secretary of State George Ball at the State Department by Mikhail Smirnovsky, chargé d'affaires of the Russian embassy.

Charge Treasurer With Embezzling Church Funds

MOLINE, Ill. — Willis Masgill, 56, treasurer of the First Baptist Church of Moline and a weekend poker player, has been charged with embezzling church funds.

State's Atty. Richard Stengel said an audit has not been completed, but he estimated about $13,800 was involved.

Stengel said Wednesday Masgill stated that he had taken church funds since 1958 and gambled away some of the money, mostly in weekend poker games in neighboring Rock Island, Ill., and Davenport, Iowa.

Masgill, who worked until recently as a purchasing expediter at a farm equipment plant, appeared before Police Magistrate Fred Nelson, who set his bond at $5,000.

Why Did De Gaulle Urge Summit Talks?

BY PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

President Charles de Gaulle's surprise proposal for a four-power nuclear conference at the summit indicates that he now considers France a full member of the atomic club.

It also suggests a degree of international cooperation not yet achieved in any previous conference and one which De Gaulle himself probably does not expect soon.

Although it appears that De Gaulle did not consult his Western allies before making his proposal, there appeared nothing in it with which either Washington or London could quarrel.

Disarmament without nuclear agreement obviously is no disarmament at all. Equally, disarmament to be effective first must have inspection and controls. And, finally, there is little point in discussing nuclear disarmament with nations who do not possess nuclear arms.

It would, perhaps, be unfair to De Gaulle to suggest that his proposal primarily was designed to throw up a smokescreen against Nikita Khrushchev's plan for an 18-nation summit meeting to kick off next month's disarmament conference.

But when he suggests not only a nuclear test ban but also the destruction of existing nuclear weapons along with their means of delivery, each step also to be accompanied by inspection, then indeed he is traveling in diplomatic outer space.

In the nuclear test ban talks, the Russians have held that inspection only would be a cover-up for Western spying.

Even in the presumably peaceful exploration of outer space, they have refused to disclose many of their findings.

De Gaulle's plan extends considerably beyond the destruction of nuclear weapons and their means of delivery.

For the same reason from which he launched an inter-continental ballistic missile also may be the launching site for peaceful exploration of space.

This in turn would imply a vast joint effort under some kind of international supervision.

The history of Soviet cooperation in the international field suggests no such willingness, notwithstanding Khrushchev's latest proposal for cooperation in the space field.

Therefore, when De Gaulle framed his message to Khrushchev suggesting a nuclear conference, it would seem he had other things in mind.

De Gaulle has dissociated himself totally from Western problems seeking to determine Soviet intentions toward Berlin and heretofore has opposed any summit conference under existing conditions.

Uppermost in De Gaulle's mind, as it is in Khrushchev's, is the future of Western Europe as it is aligned against the forces of communism.

It is to Khrushchev's advantage to deal diplomatically with a Western Europe divided economically and militarily.

It is to De Gaulle's advantage to maintain Western strength, to prevent the creeping neutrality which Khrushchev seeks and to checkmate Soviet attempts to undermine Western European security.

To this end he has opposed any meeting with Khrushchev over Berlin and opposes any 18-nation summit conference now. In his message to Khrushchev he has sought to put the Soviet leader on the defensive.

Still Predicts Top Steel Year

Trade Journal Editor Sees Boost No Matter How Negotiations Go

CLEVELAND (AP) — A record year for steel users regardless of what happens in contract negotiations between steel producers and the United Steelworkers Union was predicted Wednesday by Walter J. Campbell, editor of Steel Magazine.

In an address at a luncheon of the Cleveland Society of Security Analysts, Campbell said the metalworking industry's gross sales would total $160 billion, an increase of seven per cent over last year. The predicted 1962 figure would be an all-time record.

The editor said passenger car production this year would total 6.5 million units, compared with the 6.3 million units in 1961, and that new car sales, including imports, would be close to seven million units.

"Metalworking companies will spend $5 billion for new capital equipment this year, a 20 per cent improvement over 1961," Campbell said. "Should the government provide better incentives for re-equipping through improved depreciation allowances, capital equipment spending may be even greater."

He said profits of metalworking companies in 1962 would be about six per cent greater than in 1961, but most companies would continue in a profit squeeze.

Africa Can't Escape Crisis, Bowles Says

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (U) — Presidential envoy Chester Bowles Wednesday warned representatives of 28 African nations they cannot escape the fact that development of Africa "will take place within the framework of world conflict and crisis."

He said the primary U.S. aim, however, is "to keep the cold war out of Africa."

Bowles urged Africans at the United Nations Economic Commission in Africa to work for political groupings to solve economic and political problems.

"Somehow a compromise must be reached between the yearning pride of independence and regional cooperation that is required for faster economic growth," he said.

JFK Says There Will Be Urban Dept. Sooner, Later

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has foreclosed President Kennedy's plan to establish a Cabinet-level department of urban affairs. But he says there will be such a department "sooner or later."

The legend that House vote Wednesday also killed Kennedy's plan to put a Negro, Robert C. Weaver, in the Cabinet for the first time. Weaver, now head of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, would have become the urban affairs secretary.

SIDED WITH GOP
In turning back Kennedy's reorganization proposal 111 Democrats, mostly Southerners, joined 137 Republicans. Thirteen Republicans crossed over to support the President, voting with 137 Democrats for the plan.

At his news conference Kennedy blamed his expected but stunning setback on sectionalism.

He said: "If we in this country began to adopt the system that everyone who lives in a city area voted against those things which were of assistance to the farmer, and everybody who comes from a rural area voted against those policies which provided a better life for people in the city this country would come to a grinding halt."

Expressing regret that Congress had rejected the plan, Kennedy said he still regarded creation of such a department vitally important. "I don't think it is so much the administration's loss as it is a loss for the cities and the country," he said.

In a statement blistering the Republican party as "blindly obstructionist," Democratic National Chairman John M. Bailey took no note of the heavy Democratic vote against the plan. If Democrats had gone down the line for the President his proposal would have gone through.

REPUBLICANS
"By a ratio of more than 10 to 1, the House Republicans put partisan obstruction ahead of the needs of the nation," Bailey said.

Battle Line, a publication of the Republican National Committee, again accused Kennedy of attempting "to belaud the issue with a cynical appeal to racial prejudice." Battle Line said Kennedy "emerges from the urban affairs fiasco as a man struck down by a boomerang."

The publication said Kennedy had injected a "false race issue" when he said he would appoint Weaver to head the department.

Kennedy's election-year attempt to embroil Republicans heard the most of planned defeat," Battle Line said.

SEE DEM BONANZA
Two House Democrats who are Negroes saw a political bonanza in the whopping rejection of Kennedy's plan.
"The Republicans have really cut their throats," said Rep. Robert N. C. Nix, of Philadelphia. "They have shown as clearly as it possibly could be shown that they don't care anything for the people in the cities."

Nix added: "Anyone who says the President injected racism in saying to all the world that we are a prejudiced, immature people. They are destroying the image of America everywhere in the world."

'VOTE OF PREJUDICE'
Another Negro member, Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D-N.Y., said, "The vote was a vote of prejudice, and all minorities will react against it." He said the issue "guarantees that the Democrats will be back in an off year," and added, "It's too bad it has to be at the expense of a worthwhile thing."

"The entire issue was heavily charged with politics from the beginning. Republicans decried any notion that they were opposing Weaver personally, and several have suggested the President appoint him to the Cabinet as a replacement for Secretary of Welfare Abraham A. Ribicoff. Ribicoff is thinking of returning to

Connecticut to run for the Senate with obvious sarcasm: "While I am sure he is grateful for those [who] have voted to continue his service, I think he would have been better served to have voted in that capacity."

Scientific Tests Show Yogis Can Slow Up Heart

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A researcher from the University of California at Los Angeles says scientific tests have proven India's legendary yogis can actually perform such feats as slowing the heartbeat almost to a stop, reducing the strength of the beat to where it could be detected only with electronic instruments; and maintaining an command—even in a chilly climate.

Dr. Markon Wenger of UCLA said he and Dr. B. K. Bagchi of the University of Michigan Medical School, in a five-month study in India, found yogis who permitted them to tape electrodes on their skin while they went into trance-like states.

"We found several," Dr. Wenger said Wednesday, "who could slow the heart down to where no beat could be detected, even with a stethoscope, for three to four minutes."
He said this was accomplished through the yogis' tremendous muscular control and physical disciplining. "It's a result of physical action," said Dr. Wenger. "It's not mental at all."

Reuters Canadian Reporter Holds Key Post in Red China

PEKING, China (AP)—A tall, quiet-spoken Canadian holds a key job in international journalism, reporting, as he puts it, "the effects of history's biggest social experiment in one of the world's oldest cultures."

Clare McDermott, Reuters correspondent in Peking, is the only permanent resident Western reporter in the Chinese capital. The 33-year-old native of Edmonton sees few Westerners in Peking and even fewer Canadians. Apart from a Chinese driver and two interpreters supplied by the state, his main contacts are with Chinese officials.

His life is subject to the professional and personal restrictions placed on all foreigners by the Communist authorities.

In a city of nearly 7 million, of whom probably only 1,000 or 2,000 are foreigners, McDermott finds he cannot walk down a street without attracting attention, however friendly it may be.

"Someone shouts 'Foreigner' or more often 'Russian' and before you know it you are surrounded by a gang of smiling children."

GOES VISITING

Despite the restrictions on his movements McDermott has been able to make many visits to factories, farming communes and towns outside the Peking area.

In this way he has visited such places as Nanking, Shanghai and Hangchow in eastern China and Wuhan and Changsha in central China.

One of his most interesting jaunts took him across the Gobi Desert to Outer Mongolia last summer to cover that little known Communist Republic's anniversary celebrations.

A six-foot-two bachelor with stocky build and jetting jaw, McDermott worked for several Ontario newspapers before going overseas and joining Reuters.

He went to Peking two years ago after four years in London and two in Paris.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Neil McDermott, still live in Edmonton.

He left Edmonton after getting a BA at the University of Alberta in 1948. He coached a girls' basketball team at Queen's Carleton College—now Carleton University—while obtaining a bachelor of journalism degree.

McDermott worked as a sports writer for the Ottawa Journal from 1949 to 1951, then went to the Owen Sound Sun-Times for a year and a half.

His next job was as a general news reporter on the Sudbury Star in 1953-54, after which he went to Europe and traveled for a year before joining Reuters in London.

McDermott is sometimes perplexed at the picture of Canada given in the Chinese press.

MISCONCEPTION

"The Chinese reader, who studies his newspaper as other people study Scriptures, must see Canada as a land of hungry, unhappy people," he says, judging from the published accounts of unemployment, strikes, droughts and disasters.

There hasn't been a word in the Chinese press about the par-chases of Canadian wheat which have been pouring into North China to reduce the effects of recent poor harvests.

However, educated Chinese who are accustomed to dealing with foreigners appear to have friendly feelings for Canada, McDermott says.

They recognize Canada as being different from either the United States or Britain but they often ask why Canada must remain

"tied to the coat-tails" of the U.S. If Chinese authorities regard Canada with some degree of warmth, he says, much of this must be attributed to Dr. Norman Bethune, the Canadian surgeon who worked with the Chinese during the 1930s.

Bethune organized the medical services that went to the front lines where Chinese forces were fighting the Japanese. He died of an infection he contracted when operating on wounded men even after he knew he was ill and badly in need of rest.

BETHUNE WAS SAINT

"Bethune now is enshrined as one of the saints of the Communist revolution," McDermott says. "Mao Tse-tung wrote an essay in his memory; a memorial hospital has been built in the North China hills where he practiced and a special issue of two stamps paying tribute to him was put out in 1950."

Another Canadian the Chinese hold in high esteem, McDermott

(Two-Gun) Cohen, a Londoner who went to China as bodyguard and personal adviser to Dr. Sun Yat-sen, leader of the 1911 revolution which paved the way for the eventual Communist takeover in 1949.

Cohen, who now holds a Canadian passport, is a frequent visitor to China and is received by many of the country's top leaders. Since being assigned to Peking, McDermott has learned that Cohen first met Sun Yat-sen while the latter was touring Canada—in Edmonton, McDermott's home town.

Seven Cities Test Cars

Studying Air Pollution

WASHINGTON (AP)—A unique study to provide new knowledge on the contribution of automobiles to air pollution in cities is under way in Cincinnati.

Announcing this Wednesday, the Public Health Service said the study will also include tests here and in Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, New Orleans, Philadelphia, San Francisco.

During the next four months more than 50 privately owned automobiles, equipped with exhaust measuring devices developed for the project, will be driven in Cincinnati over predetermined test routes to represent the many different kinds of driving situations encountered in urban areas.

The service said the project represents the most extensive effort to date to obtain and measure exhaust emissions from vehicles under typical driving conditions, rather than through simulated tests.

Plugging Helpful Extra

ALVA, Okla. (UPI)—Most motels plug swimming pools, TV and other attractions to draw the trade. But the Vista Motel in this part of the nation's "tornado alley" has another extra—a storm shelter, just in case.

Whirlpool Will Close Hamilton, Ohio, Plant

HAMILTON, Ohio—The Whirlpool Corp., announced Wednesday it is closing down its Hamilton plant where 400 persons are employed.

Jasper Burt, manager of the plant, said the closing was being taken for reasons of economy and that operations here would be moved to six other Whirlpool plants.

The local plant, manufacturing ranges and has been in operation here since 1956. Burt said the plant building here would be offered for sale.

Okay Space Flights

Plays Part in TV Show

Jersey Joe Full of Quiet Dignity

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD — He was a figure of quiet dignity as he sat alone in the MGM commissary.

Jersey Joe Walcott, his broad face only slightly damaged from his 21 years in the ring, welcomed the visitor and told him what he was doing in these strange surroundings. He had come from Camden, N.J., to play a role in the TV show, "Cain's Hundred."

"My second acting job," he reported. "The first was in 'The Harder They Fall' with Humphrey Bogart. I got a lot of criticism from the fight game for being in that one. It was a pretty exaggerated picture of boxing."

Joe excused himself and bowed his head in a solitary grace before starting his lunch. Then he went on to explain what he was doing these days.

"I'm working with the Camden police department in a kind of crime prevention program," he said. "I go around to the schools and give talks, I organize clubs and teams, and I look into the cases of kids who get in trouble."

The short-term champ—he won the heavyweight crown from Edward Charles in 1951, lost it in 1952 to Rocky Marciano—had no regrets about changing careers.

"I quit boxing when I realized I didn't have it any more," said he. "I've got six grandchildren and I want to enjoy them."

I mentioned that he appeared to have quit while he still had his marbles.

"At least what little I started out with," he smiled.

He started out fighting wherever and whenever he could. During most of his career he fought for pennies; a fee of $300 was a rarity.

"It was only in the last two or three years that I made any big money," he said. "I figure I earned about a million dollars in all."

Unlike previous champs, he managed to keep some of it. He has it invested in stocks and car wash business and could live on the income if he wanted to.

But he'd rather work. Besides his police work, he referees two or three boxing and wrestling matches a month.

Australia Feuding With 'Master Race'

CANBERRA, Australia (U.S.—Australia is concentrating police forces against a proud tribe in the Solomon Islands that believes its destiny is to breed a master race. Parliament was told Wednesday.

The tribe, about 1,000 strong, lives on Buka Island. It has refused to pay taxes and has clashed with the administration. Territories Minister Paul Hasluck said, Australia administers the Solomons under a U.N. mandate.

Hasluck said the tribe has selected 20 men and women to breed the master race.

Nonfat Dry Milk Enriches Soup

If you're looking for something hot that "sticks to the ribs" these cold, damp days — the answer is soup. The whole family will gladly welcome this choice when you shout, "Soup's on."

Tasty, wholesome Cream of Vegetable Soup can be prepared with nonfat dry milk now being donated to needy families by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Just cook together 2 tablespoons each of finely chopped rutabagas, carrots, onion, and celery in 2 tablespoons melted fat for 10 minutes. Add 1 tablespoon flour and stir until well blended.

In the meantime, heat ½ cup nonfat dry milk with 4 cups warm water in a double boiler. Add a little of it to the vegetable mixture and stir well. Combine with the rest of the milk, add ½ teaspoon salt and cook 15 minutes. Flavor improves if soup is allowed to stand a short time before serving to blend. Reheat and serve.

Remember, the minerals and vitamins in nonfat dry milk can help step up the nutritional value of your diet at low cost — and it's equal in food value to fresh skim milk.

Cupcakes Flavored by Bananas, Orange

Give your youngsters a loving treat. Have these cupcakes warm from the oven for enjoyment.

Banana Cupcakes
2 cups sifted cake flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 cup mashed banana
2 teaspoons grated orange rind

Sift together the flour, baking powder, sugar and salt. Beat the shortening, eggs, banana and orange rind at high speed of electric mixer for 2 minutes or until blended. Add sifted dry ingredients; beat about 1 minute more.

Turn into paper cups inserted in muffin-pan wells, filling them two-thirds full. Bake in moderate (375 degrees) oven until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean—about 20 minutes. Make 18 cupcakes if muffin-pan wells are ½ cup capacity.

Add to Pancakes

Wheat germ is 32% protein, 45% carbohydrate and 11.5% fat. Protein is the tissue-building food; carbohydrate and fat give us energy. In addition, wheat germ contains 29 vitamins and minerals. The fat is poly-unsaturated wheat germ oil.

Festive Dinner Appetizer

Combine a can of condensed beef broth, a soup can of water, 2 tablespoons Marsala wine, and a dash of garlic powder. Cook over low heat for 5 minutes. Serve in glass mugs or cups in the living room. Crisp crackers make a nice accompaniment.

Adjust Your Recipe

To adjust old-style stifting recipes to "no-stiff" recipes, spoon the flour right from the bag into the measuring cup and remove one level tablespoon of flour from each cup called for in the recipe. But be sure to SPOON it out, not dip it or scoop.

That packaged pudding mix will be extra good if you fold whipped cream into it and spoon the mixture over strawberries (sliced or whole).

Oranges Pack Load of Vitamin C

By JANET ODELL
Pioneer Press Home Editor

Even though the Texas fruit growers suffered severe losses in the January freeze, there is no shortage of grapefruit or oranges. We can't see that prices are much higher than last year. The Florida crop is excellent; California oranges are plentiful and there is enough citrus fruit for all who want it.

You know, of course, that you get vitamin C from citrus fruit. This is a vitamin that cannot be stored in the body so you need a new supply daily. At this time of year, that's no hardship.

The California orange growers give a few tips on serving this delightful fruit for breakfast:

"Fresh oranges can be varied in so many ways for tempting morning fare. Try them in cartwheel slices, chunks or unpeeled halves (which is a special treat this has become) or mix and match with other fresh fruits. For a different twist, roll orange chunks in sugar, cinnamon or nutmeg... or fold them into your favorite egg omelet, muffins or pancakes."

We've talked so much about cherries in the past few weeks that we think perhaps you are ready for a change of diet. How about a fresh orange sauce to serve on cakes or puddings? This will keep well in the refrigerator, although you may have to whip it up before serving if it has stood for several days.

***

Fluffy Fresh Orange Sauce
2 eggs, separated
4 tablespoons sugar
1/4 cup fresh orange juice
2 teaspoons fresh lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind

Beat egg yolks slightly in top of a double boiler. Blend in 4 tablespoons of the sugar, orange and lemon juices. Stir and cook over hot water or low heat until thickened. Remove from heat. Cool slightly.

Add salt and pure vanilla extract to egg whites. Beat them until they stand in soft, stiff peaks. Gradually beat in the remaining 2 tablespoons sugar. Fold into the sauce along with lemon rind. Keep hot in double boiler over hot water (not boiling) or chill and serve sauce cold. Serve over cake, ginger bread or puddings. Yield: Approximately 2 1/2 cups.

***

Orange-flavored cookies are a treat. You'll use both rind and juice in this recipe.

Orange Flake Drop Cookies
2 cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup soft butter or margarine
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
2 eggs
1/2 cup orange juice
2 cups bran flakes

Sift together flour, soda and salt. Blend butter, sugar and grated orange rind; add eggs; beat well. Stir in orange juice. Add sifted dry ingredients and bran flakes; mix well. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto ungreased baking sheets. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees) about 9 minutes.

Yield: about 6 dozen cookies, 2 1/2 inches in diameter.

***

Back to breakfast again with an unusual recipe for French toast. Orange juice is mixed with the egg; after the bread is dipped into this liquid, it gets a coating of corn flake crumbs. Makes crunchy French toast.

Orange French Toast Rounds
3 cups corn flakes, OR
1/4 cup packaged corn flake crumbs
8 slices day-old bread
2 eggs
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup orange juice
1/4 cup shortening
1/2 cup confectioners' sugar

If using corn flakes, crush into fine crumbs. Remove crusts from bread slices, cutting one large round from each slice. Combine eggs, salt and orange juice; beat well. Dip bread rounds in egg mixture, then in corn flake crumbs. Brown on both sides in heated shortening. Stir confectioners' sugar over toast rounds and serve at once. Yield: 4 servings, 2 rounds each.

ORANGES FOR BREAKFAST — Citrus fruit is tops on the list of foods supplying vitamin C. Orange juice is also an important part of many delicious recipes. Fast is the easiest time to serve oranges.

Use Juice Can to Mold Salad

Let's be good and tricky today and serve something new — yes, very new and delicious. This mold that is described below may be used as a salad with mayonnaise, or as a dessert with whipped cream — or it may serve as both salad and dessert with the dressing of your choice.

The first step in creating this mold is to have one large 8 ounce juice can (empty). Now you may enter the world of fun and frolic and create a design that is currently making its debut. The children will be entranced when you bring it to the table whole and each slice is as pretty as a painting.

The following recipe will give the instructions for making the mold. However, you must see it in its completed form to appreciate the flower-like design.

Best Banana Mold
2 pks. strawberry-flavored gelatin
1 envelope (or 1 tsp.) unflavored gelatin
4 bananas
1 large, empty juice can (46 oz.)

Make strawberry flavored gelatin according to package directions. Soften unflavored gelatin in 1 cup water. Add to strawberry gelatin. Pour into juice can. Cool, let set until slightly thickened (similar to consistency of uncooked egg white).

Slice 3 bananas in half lengthwise. Insert a whole banana into center of can. Insert banana halves into gelatin around whole banana to form flower pattern. Set until firm.

Just before serving, invert can on a plate, remove the bottom of can. Turn can on its side and gently slide gelatin on to serving plate. To serve, cut in 1-inch thick slices. Top with your favorite dressing.

BEST BANANA MOLD — When you know how, it's a simple thing to make a banana salad mold with a fancy design in it. Use a tall juice can and push cut bananas down into the gelatin before it coagulates. The children will term this a "pretty cool" trick.

Chocolate Cloud Dessert Rich With Eggs, Vanilla

Place one 6-ounce package semi-sweet chocolate pieces, 1/4 teaspoon salt and 2 tablespoons water in top of a double boiler. Place over hot water and stir until melted. Beat 4 egg yolks until thick and lemon colored. Gradually beat in melted chocolate. Stir in 2 teaspoons pure vanilla extract.

Stand in soft peaks and fold into mixture. Whip 1/2 cup heavy cream until stiff. Fold into mixture. Spoon into punch cups or shortcake glasses. Chill until needed. Garnish with additional whipped cream. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Applesauce takes on new interest when drained pineapple tidbits are added to it. Serve the combination with pork or as a dessert.

Cereal and Fruit Pleasing in Cake

You can take pride in serving Cereal Flake Pineapple Cake. This easy-to-make cake starts with a mix. Nutritious ready-to-eat high protein cereal is added for flavor, texture, and to increase the nutritional value of this dessert. Crushed pineapple in both the cake and frosting adds a refreshing taste.

This cake is very versatile. It can be served at the morning coffee hour, for afternoon tea, for evening refreshments, or as a dessert. If you are especially pressed for time, bake it a day ahead, then heat, and frost just before serving. It will appeal to all ages.

Cereal Flake Pineapple Cake
1 can (1 pound 4 1/2 ounces) crushed pineapple
1 package (18 to 20 ounces) yellow cake mix
1/3 cup butter or margarine
2 eggs
2 cups ready-to-eat high protein cereal, unflavored to make 1/2 cup crumbs
3 cups sifted confectioner's sugar

Drain pineapple well. Combine 1/2 cup crushed pineapple and 1 tablespoon pineapple juice and save for frosting. Pour remaining pineapple juice into measuring cup and add enough water to make 1 cup liquid. Combine cake mix, 1/4 cup butter or margarine, eggs, and the 1 cup of liquid in mixer bowl; beat as directed on cake mix package.

Stir cereal crumbs and remaining drained crushed pineapple into cake batter. Pour into a greased and floured 8-inch square pan. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) until done, about 40 minutes. Let in pan on rack 10 to 15 minutes before removing from pan.

Meanwhile, combine remaining 4 tablespoons butter or margarine, mixture of 1/2 cup crushed pineapple, 2 tablespoons pineapple juice, and confectioner's sugar. Beat until fluffy. Spread on warm cake. Yield: Two 8-inch square cakes.

Cook Grapefruit Halves in Brown Sugar, Butter

For each 2 grapefruit halves, melt 1 tablespoon butter or margarine in a heavy skillet. Add 1 tablespoon light brown sugar. Prepare grapefruit by removing seeds and separating sections from membranes.

Place in skillet, cut side down and cook until browned over medium heat. Pour syrup from skillet over each. Serve as first course or dessert. Allow 1/2 grapefruit per serving.

CEREAL CAKE — For a round-the-clock treat, serve speedy Cereal Flake Pineapple Cake. Ready-to-eat high protein cereal not only adds flavor and texture but it increases the nutritive value of the recipe. Bake a day ahead if desired, then heat, and frost at serving time.

Origin of Shrimp Newburg Given

Newburg is one of the best-known sauces for seafood, yet few people are aware of its American origin. During the early years of the 19th Century, the chef at Delmonico's Restaurant became famous for a certain lobster-and-wine specialty. One patron in particular, a person by the name of Winz, was so persistent in this praise that the chef named his specialty after him.

The following simplified version of Shrimp Newburg is from the Shrimp Association of the Americas.

Shrimp Newburg
1 pound raw shrimp, shelled and deveined or (1 1/2 or 10 oz.) packages peeled and deveined shrimp
4 tablespoons butter or corn-oil margarine
1 cup light cream
3 egg yolks, slightly beaten
1/2 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
2 tablespoons sherry

If shrimp are large, cut them into two or three pieces. Melt the butter in a skillet. Add the shrimp and saute until the shrimp are cooked (about 3 to 5 minutes), stirring frequently. Mix together egg yolks and cream; heat in top part of double boiler (over hot, not boiling water), stirring constantly, until mixture thickens.

Pecans Give Many Foods Good Flavor

When you're making up the week's shopping list, you'll want to mark down one bag for garnishes, one bag for salads, two bags for desserts and one bag for "just nibbling." Bags of what?—why, pecans of course.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture said there is a record supply which the wise homemaker will use to her best advantage.

She can give dishes a gourmet finish with the crunchy nutmeats. Halved or in sauces, they can adorn desserts, pancakes, french toast or ice-cream. Try an easy-to-prepare, tempting, for "upside-down cakes and sweet rolls by creaming together one part each honey and butter with two parts brown sugar and stirring in pecan halves.

Spread over the bottom of a well-buttered baking pan, and place rolls or pour cake batter over topping. Remove immediately after baking by inverting from pan onto wax-paper topped flat surface.

In salads such as tuna, egg, ham, chicken or turkey, chopped pecans provide a pleasing texture and delicious flavor — ground for a buffet or school lunch. For a quickly-produced salad serve chopped pecans with cottage cheese or fruit atop a crispy lettuce leaf.

Soup to Feed a Dozen Has Cream of Celery Base

In a large saucepan, blend 4 cans (10 1/2 ounces each) condensed cream of celery soup, 2 soup cans milk, 2 soup cans water, and 1/2 teaspoon leaf thyme, crushed. Add 2 cups drained, cooked mixed vegetables. Heat, stirring now and then. Garnish with minced parsley or chives. Makes 12 servings.

Veal With Mushrooms

Cook paper-thin slices of tender veal in butter — fairly-high heat and a brief time will do it. Remove the meat and keep warm. Add drained canned mushrooms (or sautéed sliced fresh ones) and cream; stir to get up the brown particles in the pan. Pour the sauce over the meat.

Chicken 'Prices Decline' Hothouse Rhubarb Good

The birds have it. For the first time in several weeks wholesale fryer prices declined, and as a result, a number of stores will feature whole, cut-up and fryer parts this week. Three and one-half to five pound roasting chickens, duck and turkey also join the "special" parade, reports the Marketing Agent, Mrs. Josephine Sawyer.

When selecting poultry, the amount of meat in relation to bone is a guide to cost. Generally, a pound of ready-to-cook fryer yields 1-1/3 servings. Roasters serve two persons from each pound of ready-to-cook weight. Allow one pound of duck for each person.

The per serving cost for turkey depends upon the size of the bird. Allow three-fourths to one pound of ready-to-cook weight for each serving if the bird weighs under 12 pounds; one-half to three-fourths pound if it weighs over 12 pounds.

Several retailers report wholesale pork prices down slightly. This is not reflected in retail prices of all pork cuts, but the careful shopper will find some at below usual cost. All loin cuts, steaks, bacon, sausage and franks are in this group. Boston butt is a thrifty pork choice at about 16 cents per serving in most stores this week.

Slightly lower wholesale prices for lamb is one reason for sales on all lamb cuts in some stores. Although wholesale veal prices are at a high level, other stores list most veal cuts at 10 to 20 cents per pound less than their regular price. If you family wishes lamb or veal, review food ads before shopping.

Despite weather interference, thousands of fresh fruits and vegetables at major receiving cities across the country were only slightly fewer this past week compared to the week before. There were increased shipments of cucumbers, tomatoes, corn, lettuce, green beans, grapefruit and strawberries. As a result, food shoppers should see some quality improvement and slight price reductions on some of these items.

Potatoes continue at reasonable prices. On February 1, there were still eleven per cent larger supplies in storage than the previous year. At the same time, shipment of new crop potatoes was increasing. With your imagination, the potato can switch faces in a flash... from baked, to boiled, to mashed, to French fried. Put potatoes in a stew or with an even roast.

Homemakers, keeping abreast of the times, know that Washington's birthday is cherry pie time. Some stores are selling cans of 20 size (2 cups) of cherries at a few cents less this week. About half of last year's red tart cherry crop was frozen. You'll find many of these in cherry pie filling, jelly, cherry sauce, and whole cherry sauce... as well as in a wide range of frozen cherry products.

REUBEN FETE
February 24 is the date for the Michigan hothouse rhubarb festival in Utica. You will find heaviest supplies of hothouse rhubarb in food stores from now through March, with good supplies still available in April.

Hothouse rhubarb is different from the field grown summer rhubarb. Hothouse rhubarb is rosy red in color, is tender

(never stringy), and is mild in flavor. Rhubarb leaves are harmful to eat, so they must be removed and discarded before preparation. The amount of leaf in the package may be a point to consider when selecting rhubarb.

Valencia oranges are beginning to dominate fresh orange shipments from Florida. Rains in California, temporarily interrupted with harvest of Navel oranges. More McIntosh and Jonathan apples are coming from Michigan's controlled atmosphere storage rooms. Remember these apples have been held under finest refrigerated conditions and command home refrigeration to keep their crispy flavorful quality. Some cooks like to add a little minced onion to cooked carrots.

Double Fruit Flavor
Make a low calorie sundae for the weight-watchers. Top sherbet or water-ice with icy cold canned fruit cocktail just as it comes from the can.

Bake Golden Carrot Ring, Garnish With Oranges

To confound a basic mathematic principle, we think one plus one equals more than two. In this case! Start with fresh juice-plump Florida oranges and a pound of carrots and the sum total is a baked orange carrot ring that pays dividends in the form of a refreshing new vegetable dish that's high in nutrition and flavor, and adds color to a meal.

Carrots are one of the oldest known vegetables, available everywhere, and one of the lowest priced. Carrots may not curl straight hair, or radically improve your eyesight, but they are almost universally loved for their sweet, delicate flavor. Not to be overlooked is the fact they're a wonderful source of vitamin A.

The grated carrots are combined with minced onion, orange juice and seasonings and baked in a ring mold. After turning the baked ring onto a serving platter, the center may be filled with cooked peas, mushrooms or other vegetables. Fresh Florida orange slices make a pretty garnish, and are chockful of good vitamin C.

Baked Orange Carrot Ring
1 pound carrots, washed and scraped
3 eggs
1/4 cup flour
1 1/2 cups Florida orange juice
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1/4 teaspoon Tabasco
1 tablespoon melted butter
1 small onion, minced
Florida orange slices

Grate carrots medium fine. Beat eggs with flour until smooth; stir in orange juice, salt, Tabasco and melted butter. Add grated carrots and minced onion and mix well. Turn into buttered 5-cup ring mold. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees) 1 hour or until golden brown on top.

Let stand 5 minutes, then turn out on serving platter. Fill center with cooked peas and mushrooms or other vegetables, if desired; garnish with orange slices. Yield: 6 to 8 servings.

Strips of Liver Sautéed With Sliced Onions

It's good nutrition to serve liver once a week.

Skillet Liver and Onions
1 pound calf liver (sliced 1/4 inch thick)
3 medium onions
1/4 cup butter
2 tablespoons olive oil
Salt and pepper

Remove outside skin and any tubers at edge of liver; cut into crosswise strips about 1/4-inch wide, reserving any tubers as you do so. Cut a thin slice from onion ends; peel; quarter; cut into thin lengthwise strips.

Heat 1/4 cup butter in a heavy 3-quart skillet; add onions; cook slowly, stirring occasionally, until softened and golden brown; remove onion with slotted spoon; keep warm.

Heat oil in skillet; add liver; cook moderately slowly until red color disappears, tossing with spatula. Add onions; cook a minute or so more if necessary. Makes 4 small servings.

In Place of Nuts
The next time you make Waldorf salad mix in a tablespoon of wheat germ (instead of chopped nuts) per four servings of the salad. You get the nut-like flavor, plus the nutritional boost of the heart of wheat.

Serve a Tongue in Sour Cream

The manner of serving cooked beef tongue can be as changeable as the weather. Serve it hot, or serve it cold. Serve it sliced, diced or julienne-style. Tongue adapts to many variations.

For simplicity, try slices of cooked tongue with an accent of horseradish, or chili sauce. Add a sprig of dill to a buffet with a tray of pickled tongue slices. When kept on hand in the refrigerator, it makes tasty sandwiches or snacks. Tongue can be ground or chopped for meat salads.

Reba Stagg, meat cookery authority, tells how to cook a beef tongue. First wash the meat with clear water. Then place it in a Dutch oven or deep kettle. Pour in enough water to completely cover the meat.

Cover the pan with a close fitting lid and let it simmer 3 to 5 hours or until tender, allowing about one hour per pound. When the meat is done, remove the skin, vinegar, salt but or chili the meat in the refrigerator and serve it cold.

Tongue Supreme
1 1/2 pounds cooked tongue sliced 1/4 inch thick
2 tablespoons minced onion
2 tablespoons butter or margarine

1 cup dairy sour cream
1 teaspoon vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
Cook onion in butter or margarine until tender. Combine onion, cream, vinegar, salt and pepper. Serve sauce with tongue slices. 6 servings.

Hot Broiled Fruit Is Sweetened With Molasses

Unsulphured molasses lends a mellow, distinctive flavor to canned fruit. Make Molasses-Broiled Canned Fruit this way: heat together 1/4 cup unsulphured molasses, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 2 tablespoons butter.

Arrange a 1-pound can of pear halves or pineapple rings in a baking pan and pour the molasses mixture over the fruit. Place in broiler until fruit is lightly frothed with brown. Serve plain or with cream.

Businessman, Industrialist, Wage Earner Fair Game

State Legislature Has Bills to Tax, Tax, Tax

LANSING (AP)—Taxes, taxes and more taxes. You name it and there are probably bills to tax it in the legislature this year.

There are bills to tax the telephone you use, the beer you drink, the cigarettes you smoke, the newspaper you read, the contracts you sign, the income you earn and the property you own.

There are bills to tax the treasurer of county governments, local governments and state government.

There are bills to tax the bus-nessman, the industrialist and every income-earning individual in the state.

There are tax plans to revise the whole tax structure and there are bills to add a patch or two to the one we've got.

"We've got bills to tax everything but the astronauts as they pass over Michigan," quipped Rep. Joseph A. Gillis Jr., D-Detroit, himself the author of a goodly number of tax proposals.

A whole raft of tax bills came into the legislature Wednesday, all of them designed to bail the state out of its political subdivisions out of financial trouble.

1 PER CENT LEVY

Gillis, with an eye on Detroit's ailing treasury, introduced a measure to permit both counties and local governments to levy a maximum 1 per cent tax on both business and personal income.

If an individual lived in one city and worked in another, the two municipalities would have to split the 1 per cent tax allowed local governments.

More English Troops Sent to British Guiana

LONDON (UPI)—Two plane-loads of British troops leave today for British Guiana to reinforce the emergency garrison sent there by ship and plane last week to restore order. It was announced here Wednesday night.

A total of 134 officers and men will head for the South American colony on today's flight.

Name Officials in Tax Charge

Named in Indictments Are Indiana Sheriff, Councilmen

HAMMOND, Ind. (UPI)—A dozen persons, including the LaSalle County sheriff, the mayor of Gary, Ind., and five members of the 1955 Hammond City Council, have been indicted on federal income tax charges stemming from alleged kickbacks.

The 12 were scheduled for arraignment Saturday noon in federal district court here.

Sealed indictments, handed down Feb. 7 and opened Wednesday, charged Mayor George Chacharis, 54, of concealing $228,000 in income during the years 1956 through 1959.

The indictments charged that the hidden income, on which Chacharis allegedly evaded about $160,000 in taxes, was in the form of payoffs which the mayor received from construction firms doing business with the city.

Special Deputy Atty. Gen. Jay Goldberg, who conducted the investigation under the direction of Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy, said the investigation of Chacharis led to indictments against the other defendants, including Sheriff Peter Mandich, 46, a former Gary mayor.

Mandich, a former Tulane football star, and Chacharis are Democrats.

The eight-count indictment involving Chacharis also accused Harold Zweig, Gary city clerk, of evading taxes on $13,573 in income for 1956-58.

Mandich and three others were charged with obstructing federal officials in their efforts to collect taxes from Chacharis and Zweig. The others named in the indictment were John Diamond, 40, chief of the auto license branch at Gary; Peter Chacharis, 38, brother of the mayor; and Wilmar Chaluck, 45, an accountant with offices in Chicago.

Americans Ignorant of Siren Meaning

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A Defense Department official said Wednesday that an enemy attack on the United States with missiles and bombs, only one American in 10 would hear the warning sirens.

In addition, said Deputy Assistant Defense Secretary Paul S. Visser, only a few of those who did hear the sirens would know what they meant.

Visser told the House military operations subcommittee that recent tests indicated the siren system would not reach a "sufficient sound level to be heard by even a majority of the American citizens."

Rep. John T. Bowman, D-Kent, who represents some of Detroit's "bedroom" suburbs, submitted a bill to prevent a city from taxing persons who earn their living there but live in another town. It narrowly missed house approval last year.

Rep. Allison Green, R-Kingston, House Republican floor leader, came up with bills to reduce the sales tax from 4 to 3 per cent and permit taxation of contracts, deeds and leases.

"The sales tax bill is merely a vehicle, a defensive measure," said Green. "If, by chance, we pass an income tax bill here this year, I believe that we should cut the sales tax back to three cents on the dollar."

Mink Auctioneer Chants: 'Sold'

By GAY FAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

NEW YORK — The auctioneer in a crew cut, wearing horn-rimmed glasses and a fire-engine red vest, chanted, "Seventy . . . seventy-two . . . do I hear seventy-four? . . . seventy-four . . . seventy-four and sold."

Down on the table came the gavel and up went the sold sign on a bundle of prize mutation mink pelts.

Each pelt had brought the rancher $74, and the fur had made another step in the long route from a baby mink no larger than a cigarette to its ultimate destination in a woman's wardrobe.

The auction of ranch mink skins harvested all over the United States is under way in New York's fur district, a four-block area of towering buildings where an estimated 90 per cent of all fur manufacturing in the United States is done.

December, January, February, April and May are the peak months for mink auctioning. March is whelping time and a busy one on the farms where ranchers care for a crop which by November will be grown full size and ready to have its life taken for the sake of glamour — and warmth.

A mink auction has all the atmosphere of a political convention. I sat in one morning at an auction held at the Hudson's Bay Fur Co., a brokerage which handles a major portion of all mink produced in the United States.

$20 AN AVERAGE

In one day, it will sell 80,000 pelts at an average of $20 a pelt, said its vice president, Robert Birge.

Birge said this is how an auction works: Ranchers ship their furs to the broker, whose experts sort and grade skins into bundles by size and quality. Hudson's Bay's vice president, Robert Birge, said the bundles are not on display in the auction auditorium.

SKINS GO HIGHER

The auctioneer has the name of each ranch, Hudson's Bay's estimate of the value of each pelt in a bundle (the buyer buys a bundle, but bids by pelt), and whether the rancher will sell at the broker's value. Most skins bring above the broker's estimated price.

Birge said, "We get a commission of five per cent for handling sales, and collect another one-and-three-quarters per cent to pay for the rancher's membership in various associations."

The associations, such as the EMBA Mink Breeders Group, also have their men on hand to see that members get a square deal.

Auction rules set the amount of increase on a bid. A buyer signifies his intention of a higher bid by yelling "up," or with some unspoken signal by which the keen-eyed spotters sharing the platform with the auctioneer interpret the shout "up."

The auction I watched had six spotters including Hudson's president, Barry Coward, sharing the platform with Herbie Mayers, the firm's chief auctioneer, who is the son of an auctioneer.

"You have to have a sharp eye and a lasting voice," said Mayers. "Bidders signify they will go higher by flicking an eyelash, by looking up—or down, by dropping a cigar, by dusting the front of a vest. They have all sorts of tricks which we learn by experience."

Mayers runs a sale so rapidly that the makings of a mink coat are turned over every 20 seconds.

The $78 per pelt which one buyer paid was a high price, but far from the highest. Birge said that prices from $100 to $200 and $300 were not uncommon for the sporter skins. A record $450 per pelt went in 1958 for a bundle of "morning light," which is the trademark name for a blue beige mutation.

Four Pages Today in Women's Section

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: What do you do when dinner guests leap up from the table as soon as the last bite is swallowed, start carrying dishes to the kitchen and even wash them? I know they are trying to be helpful, but they irritate me.

ABBY

I live alone and would prefer to wash the dishes at my leisure when my guests have departed. After the strain of having prepared a company dinner, I want to turn my back on the dishes, enjoy my guests and relax.

When my guests INSIST on "helping" me, it means three or four women in my tiny kitchenette "working" while I stand and direct the operation. It's a mess. What's the answer?

Club Plans Dinner and Program

A fall evening of family activity is planned by the Pontiac YMCA Mother's Club this Saturday at the "YM."

Beginning with a family cooperative dinner in the Green Room, members will see a swimming demonstration by the "YM Synchronettes." After the exhibition swimming, trampoline and badminton are available.

Callers for the cooperative dinner are Mrs. Robert Fote of Dick Street and Mrs. Kenneth Wright of Auburn Avenue. Mrs. Cecil Martin of Enoch Street is assisting at the dinner. John Miller, Y youth director, will give the invocation.

The pool exhibition will be by the "Synchronettes," six girls ages 9 to 14, who take special synchronized swimming at the "YM." They are: Kathryn Dolg, Debbie Mazza, Carol Gaydon, Darlene Mortissey, Joy Pepper and Joan Drake.

Mrs. James Mortissey heads the swimming group, assisted by Mrs. R. B. Longmire.

Select Woman as 'Volunteer of Month'

Mrs. H. V. Phipps of Oneida Road (right) has been selected Pontiac Area United Fund Central Volunteer Bureau's February Volunteer of the Month for faithful service as a volunteer driver for the blind attending Braille classes. Here, she assists (from left) Mrs. John Johnson, Highland Avenue; Mrs. Charles Blakemore, Florida Avenue; and Ada Dodson, Rapid Street, as they arrive for a lesson at Oakland County Society for Crippled Children and Adults building.

Her work as a Motor Aide has made Mrs. Phipps somewhat of an authority on the geography of the city, and she says that the wonderful sense of direction her passengers display never ceases to amaze her. Mrs. Phipps feels that their cheerful self-sufficiency is a lesson for everyone.

Mrs. Phipps is also active in the Tuesday Musicales and Town Hall and is a member of All Saints Episcopal Church.

She has two married daughters and three grandchildren. She and her husband enjoy sailing during the summer months.

The Motor Aide Corps of the Central Volunteer Bureau is part of the Pontiac Area United Fund. In addition to the blind program, Central Volunteer Bureau needs drivers for transporting the ill and handicapped to hospitals and clinics. Interested parties may contact the United Fund office for more information.

Take Extra Care of It

Winter Is Rough on Skin

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN
Dry skin is a big bad wolf at this time of year. Even though you use a reasonable amount of lotion and cream all year long, the cold weather and zippy winds of this season make our skins cry for extra measures.

The usual lubrication of face and neck isn't enough. Now is the time to use an eye cream if you have not been doing so, and a moisturizing lotion underneath your regular make-up. Also, let your cream soak in a bit longer. One of the hormones oils is helpful, too. Our faces really take a beating at this time of year, especially if you have dry skin and if you are past early youth.

GET RIGHT MAKE-UP

When you get make-up, ask if the foundation you are buying is for oily or dry skin. Even though you do not usually require an oily base in the summer and spring and early fall, you may find that it is advantageous to use one during winter weather.

You may very well also find that a bath oil is a great comfort, even though you have not felt the need of one in warmer seasons. A body lotion also is indicated.

This is the time of year when you cannot afford to neglect your feet. The skin of your heels and cuticle around your toes may become very rough. This is not only unsightly but may become most uncomfortable and even painful. In extreme cases the skin on the heels may develop cracks. You may also get corns after another in your stockings because of rough, dry skin.

At this time of the year your skin needs extra care. This girl is applying bath oil after her bath to combat dryness. Cold weather and zippy winds of this season make our skins cry for extra measures.

This condition is easily controlled with a little regular, extra care. Never fail to massage the feet with a softening lotion after your bath. It is also a good preventative measure to massage cream into the skin of your feet and wear socks (white ones) a time or two each week on cold, cold nights.

AND, don't forget your elbows. If you do, it will be a blow when you suddenly look at them when you put on a short sleeve or sleeveless evening gown! They can use some of the extra attention similar to that which you give your heels.

You will meet spring in a much prettier and happier mood if you take these preventative measures to heart, and you will enjoy the cold season more, too.

It's Okay to Crumble Crackers

By The Emily Post Institute

Q: In a restaurant near the college where I teach, and where most of the students go, the crackers in one of the soups are broken to bits in two pieces to which I strongly object.

One of these is "dunking" and the other is crumbling a handful of crackers into one's soup. I object to these boys come from good families and maintain that this is perfectly good manners.

I maintain that good manners does not sanction any behavior in a public eating place which might possibly be found revolting to others.

Perhaps I am hypersensitive, but the sight of the nauseating, soggy messes I am daily exposed to completely destroys my appetite. I would appreciate hearing your views on this matter.

A: It is entirely proper to crumble a very small amount of crackers into one's soup. Dunking is rated very little above eating with a knife.

If one must soften a doughnut or a slice of toast, it is permissible to break a small piece at a time into coffee, milk or soup and eat it with a spoon.

Q: My sister is going to be married shortly. In discussing her wedding plans with me, she told me that in order to cut down expenses she was going to serve beer at the reception.

I do not think this is a proper behavior in which to drink a toast to the bride and groom and that she should serve at least one glass of champagne for the toast. Will you please give me your opinion?

A: Champagne would be correct; but, if she cannot afford it, a white wine, fruit juice or ginger ale would be preferable to beer.

Q: When I introduced my sister's husband, should I introduce him as my brother-in-law? Will that make it plain who he is when I also have a husband who has a brother and he's a brother-in-law too?

A: To say "my brother-in-law" is correct as well as usual, or to be more explicit, you can of course add, "my sister Mary's husband."

If you would like the booklet entitled "The Bride's Trouweness," send 10 cents in coin, to cover cost of handling, and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the Emily Post Institute, care of The Pontiac Press.

Approve of JFK's Handling of Nikita

Most Teens Feel Kennedy's Doing Well

By EUGENE GILBERT
President, Gilbert Youth Research Co.

Representative young Americans tell us they think John F. Kennedy is doing well as the youngest elected President in United States history.

The teen-agers feel that the 44-year-old chief executive is doing a better job than his predecessor, Dwight D. Eisenhower on such matters as dealing with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

About seven out of every eight among the 148 in our latest survey told us they are satisfied with Kennedy's performance during his first year in the White House.

More than three out of five said they think he has done better than Eisenhower, although one in four told us they couldn't detect much difference. As usual there are some who do not care to give an opinion.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS
Among those who expressed satisfaction with Kennedy, foreign affairs appeared to be the chief concern.

"He has kept our prestige high and has shown good judgment while handling tough world situations," said Kennedy rooster Marilyn Brusseau, 15, of Brainerd, Minn.

"He has prevented war so far," said Sandra Shroff, 13, of Rochester, N.Y.

"He's pulled a couple of bloopers," allowed Sue Heide, 16, of Ramsey, N.J., "but I think the job of president is the hardest there is."

The chief dissatisfaction with Kennedy came in his handling of domestic problems.

"He should stop worrying about other countries and think of his own," said 16-year-old Elaine Lynch of Noble, Ala.

"He wants to spend too much money," was the way Leslie

Davis, 18, of La Porte, Iowa, put it.

HE'S NOT AFRAID

Analyzing the difference between Eisenhower and Kennedy—and giving Kennedy the better of the exchange—Ellis H. Sacks, 18, of Philadelphia, told us:

"Kennedy is not afraid to come out with new ideas; he is sincerely interested in the welfare of the nation. Eisenhower appeared to be too inhibited and not the welfare of those around him above that of the country. I do not think Kennedy would think twice about 'stepping on somebody's toes.' If it would benefit the nation."

To Nicole Provenciano, 16, of San Leandro, Calif., Kennedy "inspires a greater deal of confidence in our future than Eisenhower ever did."

On the other hand, Ross Jay, 16, of Prairie Village, Kan., figures "our relations with other countries have suffered since Kennedy took office," and Donald Johnson, 17, of Niaswa, Minn., complained "I thought he would be more dynamic."

Donald Brand, 16, of Camden, N.J., said he thinks Kennedy has handled Khrushchev better than Eisenhower because the Soviet Premier's "bluffs are getting bigger with less meaning, which shows a definite response to the way he is being handled."

But, said Joan Steinhauer, 17, of Karyville, Wash., "Can anyone handle Khrushchev?"

More than two-thirds of the young people said they think American prestige abroad has risen since Kennedy took office in January, 1961.

CREDIT PERSONALITY

Despite Donald Johnson's comment, many credited the rise to Kennedy's "dynamic" personality.

"Foreign countries realize that when necessary," said Joni Kusthose who think American prestige has declined under Kennedy cited chiefly his youth, the Cuban invasion fiasco and Russian space accomplishments.

Said cautious Karen Kuzalski, 15, of Springfield, Mass., "A new president always raises prestige at first. What will follow, we shall see."

Most of the teen-agers (64 per cent) feel Kennedy is neither too liberal nor too conservative and about half (48 per cent) say they have changed their minds about him since he has been in office.

"I didn't think such a young President could do so well," explained Joyce O'Dell, 16, of Chicago.

"I thought that interference by the (Roman Catholic) church would occur," admitted Ernie Altobelli, 16, of Ramsey, N.J., "Now my opinion has changed."

THEY LIKE JACKIE

"One of the main factors in raising our prestige abroad," said Robert Helwig, 16, of Eagle Grove, Iowa.

"The best thing that has happened to our country since the Pilgrims," said Michael Brand, 17, of San Leandro, Calif.

"I'm getting sick of hearing about her," added Miss Tusk, 16, of New York.

And Gary Shapiro, 18, of Bridgeport, Conn., fumed: "I don't think that the First Lady should be a walking fashion show."

Have President Kennedy's televised press conferences given the American people a new insight into the workings of their government?

About three out of four of the teen-agers who have witnessed them say they have.

The conferences have given Donald Brand, 16, of Camden, N.J., "an understanding of the work of our government in a way which is personal to the individual."

"I understand now," said Joyce O'Dell, 16, of Chicago, "how close we are to war."

But Tom Reilly, 16, of Hempstead, N.Y., one of the 85 per cent who said they have viewed at least one of the productions, finds them disappointing.

"Most of what he said can be found in the newspapers," said Reilly.

Ex-Pontiac Resident Wed in Dearborn

Former Pontiac resident Phillip B. Stranahan and his bride, the former Roxie Ann Flaher, are honeymooning in Acapulco, Mexico, following their wedding reception Saturday evening in the Detroit Boat Club.

The Roland E. Fishers and the Deven Stranahan, all of Dearborn, are parents of the newlyweds who exchanged vows before Dr. John Mitchell in the First Presbyterian Church, Dearborn.

Styled with sheath front, the bride's gown of imported ivory peau de soie featured bodice and long sleeves of re-embroidered Alencon lace. Handmade silk roses extended over the shoulder skirt which ended in a chapel sweep. Her butterfly veil was attached to a peau de soie headband. She held her sister's white Bible, topped with white tulips and stephanotis.

Mrs. Ronald D. Ridgway of Wayne, Pa., served her sister as honor matron and bridesmaids were Mrs. Robert Parino of Lansing and Mrs. Donald Mulligan, Boston, Freeman, and the bridegroom's sister Lois, all of Dearborn.

They were French blue peau de soie styled with square décolletage and modified bell skirts and carried white tulips. Rannoules was added to the honor maid's bouquet.

Edward J. Garrity of Dearborn acted as best man. Ushers were Ronald D. Ridgway, Wayne, Pa., William Phillips and Paul Plato, Dearborn, and Gary Musser of Ann Arbor. Ronald D. Ridgway II and his brother Kevin were ring bearers.

The bridegroom is an engineering graduate of the University of Michigan. The couple will live in Detroit.

Cover Cologne

(NEA)—Keep perfume and cologne tightly stoppered and away from heat. Excessive heat evaporates the solvent, spoils balance of the fragrance's ingredients.

Homey Decor Accents Room, Delights Child

Most children like nothing better than some room decorations of their own. And with just a little help from you, they can have them in a colorful and inexpensive way.

Here's one suggestion—a snowman wall decal, made from adhesive covering material.

You'll probably be able to find a snowman illustration in a magazine this time of year. Clip it out and trace it on onion-skin or another thin paper. Then retrace it onto a heavier pattern. Apply this pattern to the backing sheet of Marvalene covering material, cut out, remove the backing sheet and smooth onto the wall.

If you're artistically inclined, of course, you can draw your own snowman on the covering material without using a pattern.

For Fun and Figure

Bowling's Real Ball

By SHARON KAY BETCHER

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

There are no disadvantages in bowling if the ball is left handed.

There are some advantages.

"The left-hander always has a natural curve, and that is an advantage," says Leo Bellissimo,

University of Oregon coach.

The curve gets more pin action than any other roll. It is difficult for the right-hander to control, therefore is not recommended for most average bowlers. Since it comes naturally to southpaws, it is easier for them to control.

bowl under true lane conditions," in the belief of Bellissimo. "Even with good maintenance, lanes have a tendency to become slightly

FIGHTS GROOVE

The ball has to fight its way out of that groove. Left-handers roll on boards which have fewer balls rolled over them. The lanes on their side remain about the same as they were when hand

* * *

"There is another advantage peculiar to women. Many women roll what is known as a back-up ball — one that goes in

bowler.

* * *

"The back-up ball is caused by

can be corrected.

* * *

"In all the AMF clinics we have yet to encounter a left-handed woman who rolls that kind of ball.

Help Your Child Succeed in School

Checking Failure Is Parents' Job

By LESLIE J. NASON, D. ED.
Professor of Education,
University of Southern California

Sometimes a child makes a wrong turn on the spiral to success and is sidetracked onto the path of failure.

Perhaps it started with one misunderstood idea, then another, then a failure, and eventually a succession of failures.

Sometimes neither parents nor teachers realize what is happening until the pattern of failure has gone on for years.

The child has been able to cope. DR. NASON er up with good ability with words.

Thus his start on the downward track may not show up on early report cards.

When the situation is finally discovered, the child is out of step. Schools are organized to help successful children carry on their work. Their facilities are inadequate and teachers lack time to help individuals back on the track. Some teachers take the necessary time and salvage many students, but this is not their main job.

Parents, of course, care desperately about their children. They want to know how to help them. The desire of the child to try and the sympathetic encouragement of the parents are primary needs. A sixth grade lad of my acquaintance caught the spiral of failure in arithmetic. He was stumped by the problems. He was losing interest in school.

WORDS

His mother encouraged him to think out his arithmetic problems in WORDS. She encouraged him to write all sorts of problems on his paper. At her request, the boy tried writing his figures more clearly and putting his work in better order. As his papers improved, his mother showed approval.

Then she discussed the idea of speed with him. His interest picked up. He tried working faster and his mind stopped wandering. He did his work faster and more accurately.

The mother realized she had succeeded one day when the boy burst out of his room: "I finished my homework in 20 minutes. It used to take me 45. And all the answers are right!"

THE PRINCIPLES this mother taught her boy, which brought him back on the path to success, are the same whether a student works problems in arithmetic, trigonometry, calculus, chemistry or physics.

If these habits are acquired in arithmetic, the other subjects seem much easier.

A college girl of my acquaintance came home discouraged. It took her too long to get supplemental reading done, she explained, and she was losing sleep.

Her father checked her reading speed. It was 250 words per minute. He arranged for help in reading. Improvement was rapid. Her reading speed became four times as fast. She went back to college with a new outlook. Parents should be watchful. Students do not recognize their own lack of skill.

Asks Cent Tax on Newspaper

Press Executive Says Levy Would Net State $9 Million Yearly

LANSING (AP) — A Democratic lawmaker wants to charge a penny tax on every newspaper sold in Michigan.

The proposal, by Sen. Basil W. Brown, D-Detroit, was among the multitude of tax bills introduced in the legislature Wednesday.

Ernest E. White, secretary-manager of the Michigan Press Association, estimated that the tax, if passed, would net more than $9 million a year. He said the figure is based on present circulation figures of Michigan's daily, weekly and other newspapers.

"This figure sure would drop through if this unfair and discriminatory tax went through," White said. "Another penny would hurt a lot of newspapers."

The measure would levy the tax on any newspaper published by a profit-making organization for the dissemination of local, state, national or international news and intelligence of general character, admitted as second class mail or available for purchase by the general public.

Each publisher would be required to file a statement of the number of papers sold the previous month by the 15th of each month and remit his tax bill to the State Revenue Department.

The measure was referred to the committee on taxation. Senate tax experts said it has slight chance of ever seeing daylight again.

Rochester Bids for Title Friday

Rochester goes after an outright Tri-County League basketball championship at Lapeer Friday. The host Panthers have plenty to gain and nothing to lose. They can move into a position to share the title by clipping Rochester. A loss wouldn't jeopardize Lapeer's second place standing. Home host Kettering with the winner taking over third place alone, L'Anse au Loup plays a nonleague at Roseville.

East Detroit can wrap up the Eastern Michigan championship by beating its nearest rival, Port Huron, on the Big Red's floor. Kimball goes to Seaboard and Ferndale is at Mt. Clemens in other EML games.

Imley City, already knighthood in the South Central, may find plenty of trouble at Oxford. Capen will be seeking to bolster its No. 1 Class C rating at helpless Dryden in Southern Thumb play.

By the Associated Press
The Kansas City Steers, first half champions, are well on their way to wrapping up the second half title in the Western Division of the American Basketball League.

For a time it seemed the San Francisco Saints might take the second half honors, but after going into first place, the Saints went into slump while the Steers came back strong and regained the top.

The Steers chalked up their 17th victory in 22 second half games by sweeping the New York Tapers Wednesday night 130-108. It was the only league game scheduled and the victory increased the Steers' lead over the second place Saints to 4 1/2 games.

Bloomfield Hills will be at home attempting to clinch second place in the Wayne-Oakland against its chief challenger, West Bloomfield.

Central Travels to Midland Friday

Chiefs to Seek Repeat Victory Over Chemics

Can Retain 2nd Place by Winning Saginaw Eyes Title Clincher

BY CHUCK ARAIR
Pontiac Central takes to the road for the last time in the regular season tomorrow looking towards a 2nd place finish in the Saginaw Valley race.

The Chiefs will be at Midland expecting more trouble than they encountered in 64-62 rout here early last month.

Saginaw can clinch the championship for the 2nd straight season with a victory at Flint Northern. Saginaw Airlines will try to stay in the battle with PNH for runner-up honors as host to Flint Northwestern. Flint Central has the heavy task of playing Bay City Central, completing the Valley loop state. Bay City Hawks will be at Algonquin.

Pontiac has had plenty of time to get ready for a strong league finish after swatting Bay City Central and Pontiac Northern with five days.

The Chiefs, 11-2 all season and 8-1 in the conference, turned in one of its best performances in recent weeks 30 days ago at PNH and may be ready to play the impressive brand of ball displayed earlier in the season.

Although he certainly prefers a 2nd place win to 3rd, coach Art Van Rykel is turning his thoughts and plans more towards the coming crucial tournament games. Midland and Flint Northern next week should serve as good warmups.

The Chemics have only won three of eight since that battering here but one of those victories was an impressive 16-point revenge win over Arthur Hill. Clarence Douglas should be near top shape again and ready to add his scoring punch to the Central attack. Ed Williams has hit 33 points in two starts since the veterans have been ailing. Steady Rudy Hansen should give Van Rykel three consistent point makers down the stretch.

Can PNH Sabotage Berkley's Title Hopes?

Can Pontiac Northern do it with a slight height advantage, but there will be no great edge.

The Huskies have made a habit of messing up the championship plans of Farmington and Southfield in the Inter-Lakes League this month.

Friday they will be trying to keep Berkley from pushing off with the outright championship. PNH blew a grand opportunity to spoil the Bears' hopes earlier in the season by folding the last half.

This time Berkley will have the home court advantage.

Farmington fans will be keeping an ear tuned in on the game at Berkley as they view the outcome of the famous home contest with Walled Lake.

Coach Dave Park's Farmington crew is the only team with a chance to share the title. A Berkley victory will give the Bears all the spoils.

The Waterford Skippers hope to return from Southfield alone in third place. They currently share the spot with the Blue Jays and Northern.

Defending Berkley is a major task. The Bears have the most balanced attack in the league. Coach Ace Zuphagis can call on eight players of almost equal ability and has a couple of more handy who can get the job done.

Paul Wierzbach has been one of the more consistent scorers for Berkley.

Northern may enter the game

Coach Dick Hall probably will go with the five players who have carried the Huskies in their recent surge. Dave Shielis, who performed well last week against Southfield, will be at center.

The Hayward twins, Larry and Gary, will be at forwards. Ed Wask and Rick Fisher will handle the guard chores. Dean Souden may start somewhere in the front line.

Southfield found out against PNH that good shooting can overcome a major height disadvantage. The Blue Jays have a big front line.

The tallest Waterford player is 6-3 Bob Reader. He will give away two inches to Mike Fournier and Bob Andrews.

Paul Moran is a doubtful starter. He's still nursing the badly cut arm that sidelined him for the Walled Lake game.

TOP LAKES - The most steady West Bloomfield performer all year has been hard-working Jim Robison. He and his mates will be at Bloomfield Hills Friday.

Charley Conerly Retires After 14 Years in NFL

Grampian Plans CUSSA Sanctioned Jump Meet, March 4th

35-Meter Hill to Get First Major Event

Leading State Riders Expected to Compete in Ski Finale

The first sanction jumping tournament on the new 35-meter hill at Grampian Mt. will be held Sunday, March 4.

Sanctioned by the CUSSA (Central United States Ski Association) the jumping meet will draw the best jumpers in Michigan.

Senior men's state champion Earl Hill will head the list along with past champion Jan Sanderson of Flint. Veterans champion Walt Hyer of Berkeley, class B champion Clint Beach of Flint and a host of other top riders.

In an inter-club jump held at Grampian in January, between Grampian members and Briar Hill, Beach went 78 feet to initiate the run. Conditions that day were not too good.

Presently, more than six inches of new snow has been packed on the run and with all the top riders entered Beach's mark is certain to be broken.

Don Guthrie of Uica, one of the better local jumpers, and John Grames of Pontiac are setting the program for the jumping meet.

Grames took third in the recent state championships at Briar Hill. Guthrie is in charge of the jumping classes which are held at Grampian for high school students and interested jumpers.

Guthrie plans to have a novice jumping tournament among the students.

Brothers Promote 'Easy-Access' Skiing

Ski Profile: 3 Kosiks and Brother-in-Law

By BRUNO L. KEARNS
Sports Editor, Pontiac Press

The Kosiks, three brothers and a brother-in-law, aren't trying to build a ski empire, they just want to make skiing a "portal to portal" sport.

"Skiing has grown fast in this area and one of the reasons has been making the slopes more convenient to reach," said Joe Kosik, who was the first of the brothers to make initial contact with skiing while in the service stationed in the Bavarian Alps.

"Everybody skis in this country," he added, "so I had no choice but to learn or be left with nothing to do."

A native of the Bay City area, Joe kept his love for skiing following his service stay and after graduating with a law degree from the University of Michigan in 1961 and a Master's in 1962. He started

Grampian Mt. followed Mt. Holly as the second ski area to open in Southeast Michigan. Two years ago, Joe Kosik and Stolk saw the skiing momentogether with brothers Bob and Rudy, who helped him handle the Grampian Mt. chores.

Both areas have adequate top facilities with T-bars at Alpine Valley and Ponnillit at Grampian, and together the Kosiks boys hope to make skiing the after-dinner pastime in the winter as golf is during the summer, without traveling long distances.

"We could possibly add a few more hundred feet on the slope and make it a real challenge," said Bob, who handles much of the administrative end at Grampian Mt.

Together, Grampian and Alpine Valley encompass an investment of around $25,000. Both areas have easy access to skiers from all directions, and Alpine Valley has especially been popular with the Michigan-Ohio border skiers.

"We realize there are certain improvements which should be made for next season and we hope to lay out plans shortly for their undertaking," Joe noted.

Stolk, who is a farmer from Vassar where he still keeps his home after the skiing season, has become an experienced master in the art of moving hills, snow making and facility maintenance at Alpine Valley.

"I'm a real ski bug," said Stolk, "I get into my ski boots every chance I get. I've learned there's a lot more to this business than just getting snow on the slopes."

The hills comprising Grampian Mt., on Lakeville road just east of Oxford caught his primary attention. The name was put on the area from the Grampian Mountains of Scotland where the early residents of land were from.

um and together they opened Alpine Valley, 13 miles west of Pontiac.

"This made it easy to rough for skiers from the East part of lower Michigan and from the West," said Joe.

Grampian's five slopes are the shortest of area resorts, however, the main slope, although only 800 feet in length, offers a good challenge for the advanced skier in as much as its drop is more vertical than any slope in the area.

"We could possibly add a few more hundred feet on the slope and make it a real challenge," said Bob, who handles much of the administrative end at Grampian Mt.

Together, Grampian and Alpine Valley encompass an investment of around $25,000. Both areas have easy access to skiers from all directions, and Alpine Valley has especially been popular with the Michigan-Ohio border skiers.

"We realize there are certain improvements which should be made for next season and we hope to lay out plans shortly for their undertaking," Joe noted.

"I'm a real ski bug," said Stolk, "I get into my ski boots every chance I get. I've learned there's a lot more to this business than just getting snow on the slopes."

The other Kosik brother, Rudy, helps Bob handle the Grampian Mt. chores.

Both areas have adequate top facilities with T-bars at Alpine Valley and Ponnillit at Grampian, and together the Kosiks boys hope to make skiing the after-dinner pastime in the winter as golf is during the summer, without traveling long distances.

Skiing Now Excellent, So Don't Wait, Try It

You won't find any better skiing than right now, tonight, tomorrow and possibly this weekend. With more than six inches of new powder by natural rainfall covering all the area slopes, skiing is at its best.

If you've had the yen to get out and try a pair of skis, this is the time. In a matter of couple weeks, skiing life in this part of Michigan will be over and you will have to wait until next winter to try the sport and have fun.

These are the Pontiac area ski conditions:

ALPINE VALLEY — four inches fresh powder, all facilities in operation and skiing is excellent. Open until 11:00 p.m. tonight.

MT. CHRISTIE — fresh powder, all slopes in excellent condition including toddlers' area. Skiing until 11:00 tonight.

GRAMPAN MT. — best conditions of the year with five inches new powder,

Japanese Puppeteer, Cultural Asset, Dies

OSAKA, Japan (AP)—Bungoro Yoshida, the puppeteer designated by the government as a "cultural asset," is dead. He was 92.

Yoshida devoted his life to the art of thrilling adult audiences with his gorgeously gowned 3-foot dolls.

He was designated an "important intangible cultural asset" in 1955. The government has given this title to more than 200 persons it feels possess vanishing skills that should be handed down to future generations.

School to Award Scholars Letters With Athletes

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP)—Varsity letters will be awarded scholastic leaders as well as athletes at the new Archbishop Curley High School.

The principal of the school, The Very Rev. Aloysius B. Balcerak, O. F. M., said "I see no reason why the scholar should not receive the same or better prestige symbol as that given the athlete. We want to be proud of our brains—and our hallmarks."

Father Balcerak said extra-curricular activity leaders also would be given letter awards.

Marilyn's 'Ex' Quietly Weds Austrian Gal

ROXBURY, Conn. (AP)—Playwright Arthur Miller, 46, whose four-year marriage to movie star Marilyn Monroe broke up last year, has quietly married again.

The new wife of the tall, lean Pulitzer prizewinner is Ingeborg Morath, 38, an Austrian-born photographer.

The civil ceremony was performed without announcement by a justice of the peace in neighboring New Milford Saturday. The marriage came to light Wednesday.

The marriage is the third for the author, whose play "Death of a Salesman" received a Pulitzer prize.

Miller and his bride are staying at his home here, where he once lived with Miss Monroe. He said they plan to leave on a European honeymoon shortly.

Pope Urges Preachers to Set Good Examples

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope John XXIII today urged the Lenten preachers of Rome to add the power of exemplary lives to their sermons, "because without that they are only sounding brass."

The 80-year-old supreme ruler of the Roman Catholic Church spoke to about 6,000 persons in the Basilica of St. Peter, among them preachers of Rome who will give Lenten sermons in preparation for Easter. Lent begins on March 7 and Easter falls on April 22 this year.

Another Storm to Slip In on Friday

THE SMELL OF SPRING — Jamie Williams, 15 months old, sniffs the freshness of a daffodil, a sure sign of approaching spring, as the rest of the nation reels from heavy snowstorms. Jamie's brother, Mrs. Brenda Williams of Atlanta, Ga., holds the yellow flower that is blooming all through the South.

Cocoa Beach Agog With Welcome Plans

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—The high school band polished its instruments.

The mayor prepared a special proclamation. The Chamber of Commerce readied a big red, white, and blue "Welcome home, John," banner.

The nearby town of Cocoa Beach, which prides itself as "Space-town, USA," was getting set to let go Friday with a big open-arms greeting to astronaut John H. Glenn Jr., first American to orbit the earth.

The townsmen had hoped President Kennedy would ride through on his way to greet Glenn at the cape.

But word got around Wednesday that the President planned to bypass Cocoa Beach and fly right to this missile test center to give Glenn a medal and make a quick inspection before returning to Palm Beach.

Somewhat ruefully, City Manager Jerry A. Singer said "It would have been a privilege to have the President come into our town." But he said he understood the President had his reasons for doing it another way.

And, Singer said, it wouldn't prevent this space age boomtown from showing it is "basking with pride" at the historic accomplishment scored by Glenn last Tuesday.

Glenn is still on Grand Turk

K Is Challenged to Make Good on Space Offer

Kennedy Asks Soviet Premier to Waste No Time Proving It

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy has challenged Soviet Premier Khrushchev to waste no time in proving he favors joint efforts to explore outer space.

"I think it is particularly important now, before space becomes devoted to uses of war," Kennedy said at his news conference Wednesday.

Khrushchev had sent a message congratulating the United States on Astronaut John H. Glenn Jr.'s triple orbit of the globe and suggesting the two governments combine resources to explore outer space.

Less than four hours after the news conference the White House

made public a direct reply to Khrushchev.

In it Kennedy expressed hope "that at a very early date our representatives may meet to discuss our ideas and yours in a spirit of practical cooperation."

He added the United States would come up with "new and concrete proposals" for joint enterprises that could be undertaken without delay.

Kennedy opened his news conference with a statement noting that twice before he had offered the same sort of proposition Khrushchev advanced. But the President called the Soviet premier's move an encouraging sign for international cooperation.

Glenn's memorable flight and the possibility of U.S.-Soviet cooperation in space dominated the half-hour meeting with newsmen.

As for the chance of lowering barriers between the United States and the Soviet Union on space projects, Kennedy said this country would be happy to discuss cooperation at the United Nations or anywhere else. But he insisted cooperation would have to be genuine. And he acknowledged there is no more assurance now than ever that the Soviets are willing to transform general expressions of togetherness into specific agreements.

5 Inches of Snow Clog Side Roads

After digging the Pontiac area out of this winter's heaviest snowfall last night, area residents can expect a repeat performance Friday, the weatherman warned today.

Five inches of fresh snow were dumped on the area during the night and late yesterday. Today's warming trend brought a welcome respite, but more snow is predicted for tomorrow evening.

At least one Oakland County resident suffered a fatal heart attack while shoveling snow. He was Felix Goletz, 61, of 23511 Noel Drive in Southfield.

Elsewhere in the metropolitan area, four more snow shovellers were listed as heart attack victims in the past 24 hours.

Only one traffic injury accident was reported in Pontiac as a result of the storm.

The sole victim, Mrs. Lena M. B. on, 51 of 3391 Seabald Road, Waterford Township, later was listed in fair condition at Pontiac General Hospital.

A rash of noninjury accidents occurred in the county throughout the night as motorists slithered on snowy-wet roads. A line of vehicles were reported caught in snowbanks along Telegraph Road this morning.

Full crews of city and county road workers labored through the night plowing main thoroughfares clear. All were considered passable by morning.

Side roads in rural subdivisions remained clogged, however. Many residents were reported unable to leave their homes for work today.

Schools opened on schedule this morning, but buses stayed off backroads in some areas of the county, including the Oxford school district.

Every piece of available road-clearing equipment was in use last night and today, both the city Public Works Department and the County Road Commission stated.

Over 130 men and 82 trucks and graders were being employed in the task.

Elsewhere in the state the storm hindered police on accident investigations. (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

North and East Battered Again

Montana and Wyoming Get Blizzard Warnings; Rain, Hail in South

By The Associated Press

More stormy weather battered wide areas in the northern half of the nation today, with gusty winds in northern sections and heavy rain, hail and strong winds in the Southeast.

Blizzard warnings, with snow and strong northerly winds sweeping out of northern Alberta, Canada, were posted for eastern sections of Montana and Wyoming, the Dakotas and extreme western Nebraska.

The snowstorm which swept across the Midwest into the Northeast Wednesday continued in many areas during the night and morning.

In LOCAL AREA

Heavy snow warnings were issued for parts of Lower Michigan and most of New England. Snow continued across wide areas from the Mississippi Valley eastward to the Atlantic Seaboard.

Heavy rain pelted most of the Southeast, with unofficial falls of 3 to 6 inches in a three-hour period in Macon, Ga. Water was reported two to three feet deep in low-lying areas and some homes were flooded.

The Weather Bureau issued a warning of possible severe thunderstorms with hail and strong winds and possibly tornadoes for extreme east-central Mississippi, most of west-central and east-central Alabama and extreme western part of west-central Georgia.

SOME SCHOOLS CLOSE

The new snowstorms forced the closing of schools in many parts of the Midwest, as well as in some eastern sections, including North Carolina, which reported snow measuring 5 to 6 inches in mountain areas.

The cleanup operations throughout the snow belt were sharply curtailed as the new storm swept out of the Rockies and dumped up to a foot of snow in some Midwest areas.

The snow covered sections in Pennsylvania, New York state and southern New England, ranging up to more than six inches in many places. Heavier falls were indicated in northern New England.

The rain belt extended across the Upper Ohio Valley, the middle and southern Atlantic Coast and the central Gulf Coast states. Freezing rain slicked roads in parts of Pennsylvania and northern Virginia.

Below zero weather again was reported in the Dakotas and in northern Maine.

90 Yanks Aboard as 2 Trains Collide

CALL, Columbia (UPI)—A passenger train carrying an estimated 90 Americans from the California training ship, the USS Bear, collided today with a diesel locomotive near here.

First reports said casualties were "heavy." Tare of the train's coaches were wrecked. The Americans were en route to call from Buena Vista, Pacific coast seaport, for two days of sightseeing. The Golden Bear docked there Monday.

All available first aid equipment in Call and Buena Vista was rushed to the scene of the crash, 30 miles from Call and 20 miles from Buena Vista.

Adenauer Denies Report

BONN, Germany (AP)—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer insisted today, after unfavorable reaction from President Kennedy, that he had never suggested an East-West foreign ministers conference on the Berlin crisis, the foreign ministry reported.

SNOW FALL — Ever wonder where all that snow goes that DPW crews take off city streets? This picture answers that question. It is dumped into the Clinton River, usually from the Water Street bridge. What happens when the river freezes? You get a big pile of snow. Luckily, the Clinton River rarely freezes during periods of heavy snow.

DPW Men Stack Up Hours With Snow High, Salt Low

The city has already spent winter than it did all last winter—337,000 more on street snow removal and salting operations, this Department of Public Works officials are hoping they don't get another storm. The salt pile is "very low," and new loads are coming in small quantities due to the demand.

While other city employees had the day off today, DPW crews worked all last night and today opening snow-clogged streets.

The amount of snow from last Sunday's storm removed from city streets was greater than the total amount removed all last winter. Starting Sunday night, crews worked 21 straight hours. Starting Monday night another crew worked 17 consecutive hours. Some 520 truckloads of snow were removed.

ONLY ONE LAST WINTER

It was the fourth snow removal operation during the winter of 1961-62 for DPW crews. During the 1960-61 winter, they removed snow once.

Last winter the total street maintenance program cost about $24,000. So far this winter, it runs over $71,000.

There were about 2,100 tons of salt spread on city streets last year. So far this winter, workmen have used 5,100 tons.

Snow removal operations require three or more inches of snow. Anything less can be handled by salt. Records are not available now as to the total amount of snow removed from streets thus far this winter.

Officials point out, however, that some 6,500 man hours have been put in so far this winter clearing and salting streets.

The total for all last winter was about 1,900 man hours.

DUTY CALLS — Three-year-old Michael Vandeworp jumps the ranks of many busily digging Pontiac out of its heaviest snowfall this winter. An additional 5 inches of the white stuff fell of the county during the night. Accumulated drifts 3 feet high were reported in some areas. The boy was relieved shortly at 100 W. Strathmore Street, Press photographer Eddie Vandeworp, who finished the job.

Snow and Slush Are Corroding Horns on Buses

The almost constant snow and sleet of this winter have Pontiac Transit Corp. riding on the horns of a dilemma.

"It's the craziest thing," said Neil B. Pilson, general manager. "Our buses have been holding up just fine and we've been sticking to our regular schedules, but we may end the winter without horns."

Pilson explained that horns on each of the corporation's 14 Pontiac buses are under the bus.

"The snow and slush is corroding all our horns. It looks like they'll all have to be replaced."

Pilson promised he'd do all in his power to see there was no bus without a beep.

Washington Valued Manners

By DON OAKLEY
Written For NEA

"Every action done in Company, ought to be with Some Sign of Respect, to those that are Present."

This little maxim is the first of 110 "Rules of Civility & Decent Behaviour in Company and Conversation" by George Washington. They were penned in his schoolboy's copybook when he was in his early teens.

How much of his own originality went into the rules cannot be known. It is believed the model list was given to him by his eldest half-brother, Lawrence. Such study was required of all young men of breeding in those days.

Preserved in tattered manuscript in the Library of Congress, the rules, with all their erratic capitalization and punctuation and old-fashioned spelling, give an insight into the formative years of the great man, as well as into the customs and manners of the time — so crude, so cruel and so like our own.

Not all the rules are by any means outdated. Here are a few regarding personal appearance:

— Keep your nails clean and short, also your hands and teeth clean, yet without showing any great concern for them. (13th)

— In your apparel be modest and endeavor to accommodate nature, rather than to procure admiration. (32nd)

— Play not the peacock, looking everywhere about you, to see if you be well deck'd. (54th)

American Look for Men Kicks Out Continental

By PHYLIS BATTELLE

NEW YORK — THE husband of this house just bought his first "Continental Look" suit. At least we think it's Continental — a little too short, a trifle skimpy, one big sigh and you pip the top button. That's the look, isn't it?

NOW they tell us the "Continental Look" is going out. To be replaced by the "American Look," exemplified by guess who? John F. Kennedy.

Although the Continental suit, with its long, narrow jacket and lighter fit, found surprising support in this country in recent years, it has now given way to the "American manner," reads the official announcement in an "unofficial magazine about the men's clothing industry, Gentlemen's Quarterly."

The move has been given "new impetus," it adds, by the dress of President Kennedy.

Well now, isn't that a fine and patriotic idea, coming from an industry that I seem to recall was highly critical of our president's clothes back in the early days when they were trying to push peaked lapels, side vents, chest buttons and cutaway capes?

They couldn't see Kennedy's charm then; there was a general feeling that Jack, you made the pants too long, and oh, those square flap pockets,

I remember, in fact, interviewing a London tailor who was brought to New York two years ago to push the "London Look" (an ill-starred promotion for what I call "nest shabbiness" — designed to perk up business), and he expressed the private opinion that independent-minded American men — of the ilk of Kennedy and that blueplate of fashion, President Truman — seemed just right in their own "look" and why didn't we Americans recognize it?

Okay, at last we have. And dear, helpless husband is stuck with his brand-new, old-style suits.

The new "American look" in which he'll probably invest two years from now, just as they are introducing the "Congo look" featuring khaki colors, battle stripes and cut-away provincial jackets, can be summed up like this:

Lapels — notched and not too narrow. Shoulders — natural. Shirt — button down. Tie — stripes. Waist — slight suppression. Buttons — two, the top one at the waist. Pockets — straight, flapped. Jacket length — regular. Jacket front — not cutaway. Vents — back center. Trousers — pleated. Cuffs — usually. Fabric — stripes most popular.

"Americans," the magazine says to back up its patriotic fashion fervor, "have developed a sense of the tasteful and appropriate."

Since the same magazine was behind the "Continental Look," I assume they mean Americans have come upon their sense of taste and fitness just in the last season.

If I were President Kennedy, once criticized and now abruptly held up as the symbol of his country's good taste-comic-lately, I'd want to vent more than my jacket back.

The American woman's figure, as well as her stature, has changed dramatically in the last 61 years. For the bigger and better.

According to a survey taken by foundation garment makers, Sarong, Inc., the average height of today's American woman is five-foot-four and one-half, compared with five-foot-two in 1900.

Today's average girl-weight is 125; it was 114 at the turn of the century.

Average bust measurement in the 20- to 45-age bracket in 1900 was 33.3 inches; now it's 35.25. Waists picked up from 24 to 26. However, the most intriguing statistic is this:

Hips measured 36 inches in 1900, and they are 36 and one-half today. In spite of this, says Sarong, "the share of total hip measurement occupied by the derriere decreased one-half inch since 1900."

Oh, those crazy bustles?

The 300-year-old paintings of construction. The East German Dresden by Bernardo Bellotto are city was severely damaged by all used today as a guide to its re-raids in World War II.

School Board Issue Voted Down

Romney Gets First Con-Con Defeat

LANSING (AP) — Disident Republicanism in a coalition with Democratic delegates to hand George Romney, GOP gubernatorial hopeful, his first major setback of the constitutional convention.

By a 68-50 vote, the convention decided tentatively Wednesday to defeat a proposal making the governor a member of the state board of education. Romney had urged its adoption in an impassioned speech.

The vote came after hours of debate and parliamentary maneuvering on the recommendation, submitted by the education committee, of which Romney is a member.

Supporters of the proposal are expected to make another attempt to get it into the new constitution when the education article comes back from the style and drafting committee for two more votes.

31 JOINED DEMS
A breakdown of the vote showed that 31 Republicans joined 32 Democrats to beat down the proposal. Two Democrats — Sidney Barthwell of Detroit and Charles Folio of Escanaba — voted with 48 Republicans on the other side of the question.

In debate, Romney said the governor should have a direct tie-in with the education board since he has to submit an annual state budget, half of which is devoted to education.

"It's an elemental principle to grant authority co-equal with responsibility."

Declaring that the subject was one of the most important matters to come before the convention, Romney said the proposal actually represented a compromise from his point of view.

He would prefer that the governor's tie-in be established by allowing him to appoint the state superintendent of public instruction and the members of the board of education, he said.

The Education Committee decided, however, to recommend that the board be elected by the people and in turn appoint a superintendent.

DELEGATES VOTED
Delegates voted down two amendments pertaining to the superintendent's post. One would have allowed the governor to appoint the superintendent, and was defeated 82-45. The other called for election of the educational chief. It lost 100-20.

Opponents of the proposal to give the governor a seat on the board argued that it would inject politics needlessly into education.

"The question is whether we are going to allow the board to become a political arena and let education become a political football, or are we going to keep education out of politics," said Lee Boothby, R-Niles, one of several sponsors of the amendment.

Chamber Official Opposes Post to Aid Consumers

LANSING (AP) — Harry R. Hall, executive vice president of the State Chamber of Commerce, has opposed a bill to create the office of state consumer adviser as "entirely unnecessary."

"The bill seems to assume that consumers are all stupid and unable to make sensible choices and the business is all crooked and ready to take the consumer every time they have any dealings with them," Hall told the House State Affairs Committee Wednesday.

The bill, he added, would "do no more than create further harassment of legitimate business and do little to correct any abuses."

Hall told legislators the number of state agencies charged with protecting the consumer is adequate. Local law enforcement agencies and private groups and "uncountable statutes" also deal with these problems, he said.

Italy Swears In Premier Fanfani

ROME (UPI) — Premier Amintore Fanfani and his new cabinet were sworn in today, giving Italy its first "center-left" government with support from the Socialists.

President Giovanni Gronchi led the swearing-in ceremonies in Quirinal Palace, ending a 59-day period in which Italy was ruled by a caretaker government.

Fanfani, whose Christian Democratic party held all seats in the last cabinet, announced the new cabinet list Wednesday. It contained 19 Christian Democrats, 3 Social Democrats and 2 Republicans.

NEW ARCHBISHOP — Bishop Paul A. Hallinan of Charleston, S.C., Wednesday was named archbishop of a new Roman Catholic province with headquarters in Atlanta, Ga.

How State Voted on Urban Branch

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is how Michigan congressmen voted Wednesday when the House killed President Kennedy's proposal to create a department of urban affairs. The vote was on a resolution to reject the plan.

Democrats against: Dicks, Dingell, Griffiths, Lesinski, Nedzi, O'Hara and Ryan.

Republicans for: Cederberg, Chamberlain, Ford, Griffin, Harvey, Johansen, Knox and Meador.

Recorded for but not actually voting were Republicans Broomfield and Bennett.

Senator Offers Single Formula for Sales Tax

LANSING (AP) — A single formula would be applied for charging the sales tax under a bill introduced by Sen. Clyde H. Geerlings, R-Holland, chairman of the Senate Taxation committee.

At present, the scale of sales tax charges varies among merchants through the state. The Geerlings formula provides for:

No tax for items from one cent to 12 cents.
One cent for items from 13 to 31 cents.
Two cents for items from 32 to 54 cents.
Three cents for items from 55 to 81 cents.
Four cents for items from 82 cents to $1.08.
Five cents for items from $1.09 to $1.25.
Six cents for items from $1.26 to $1.62.

One additional cent for each additional 25 cents or any portion thereof.

New Satellite Orbits but AF Says: Hush

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The U.S. Air Force has a new satellite in orbit — one it doesn't want to talk about. The satellite was launched Wednesday in secrecy, from this missile base. The Air Force gave only these details:

It was an Agena B rocket, boosted aloft by an Atlas missile. The launching was successful. Experts theorized it was a test vehicle for the spy-sky Samos and Midas satellites, which are designed to keep Russian missile bases under surveillance. Russia has protested the launching of military satellites, turning them jets of aggression.

Businessman, Industrialist, Wage Earner Fair Game

State Legislature Has Bills to Tax, Tax, Tax

LANSING (U-P) — Taxes, taxes and more taxes. You name it and there are probably bills to tax it in the legislature this year.

There are bills to tax the telephone you use, the beer you drink, the cigarettes you smoke, the newspaper you read, the contracts you sign, the income you earn and the property you own.

There are bills to fatten the treasuries of county governments, local governments and state government.

There are bills to tax the businessman, the industrialist and every income-earning individual in the state.

There are tax plans to revise the whole tax structure and there are bills to add a patch or two to the one we've got.

"We've got bills to tax everything but the astronauts as they pass over Michigan," quipped Rep. Joseph A. Gillis Jr., D-Detroit, himself the author of a goodly number of tax proposals.

A whole raft of tax bills came into the legislature Wednesday, all of them designed to bail the state and its political subdivisions out of financial trouble.

PER CENT LEVY

Gillis, with an eye on Detroit's ailing treasury, introduced a measure to permit both counties and local governments to levy a maximum 1 per cent tax on both business and personal income.

If an individual lived in one city and worked in another, the two municipalities would have to split the 1 per cent tax allowed local governments.

Detroit's Common Council approved the Gillis plan "in principle" Wednesday, pointing out that it is not committed to the details.

The Wayne County Board of Auditors and the legislative committee of Wayne supervisors had endorsed it previously.

Rep. John T. Bowman, D-Roseville, who represents some of Detroit's "bedroom" suburbs, submitted a bill to prevent a city from taxing persons who earn their living there but live in another town. It narrowly missed house approval last year.

Rep. Allison Green, R-Kingston, House Republican floor leader, came up with bills to reduce the sales tax from 4 to 3 per cent and permit taxation of contracts, deeds and leases.

"The sales tax bill is merely a vehicle, a defensive measure," said Green. "If, by chance, we pass an income tax bill here this year, I believe that we should cut the sales tax back to three cents on the dollar."

REFORM PLAN

Sen. Clyde H. Geerlings, R-Holland, chairman of the Senate Taxation Committee, unveiled an ambitious tax reform plan but gave

Name Officials in Tax Charge

Named in Indictments Are Indiana Sheriff, Councilmen

HAMMOND, Ind. (UPI) — A dozen persons, including the Lake County sheriff, the mayor of Gary, Ind., and five members of the 1955 Hammond City Council have been indicted on federal income tax charges stemming from alleged kickbacks.

The 12 were scheduled for arraignment Saturday noon in federal district court here.

Sealed indictments, handed down Feb. 7 and opened Wednesday, charged Mayor George Chacharis, 44, of concealing $226,686 in income during the years 1956 through 1958.

The indictments charged that the hidden income, on which Chacharis allegedly evaded about $160,000 in taxes, was in the form of payoffs which the mayor received from construction firms doing business with the city.

Special Deputy Atty. Gen. Jay Goldberg, who conducted the investigation under the direction of Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy, said the investigation of Chacharis led to indictments against the other defendants, including Sheriff Peter Mandich, 46, a former Gary mayor.

Mandich, a former Tulane football star, and Chacharis are Democrats.

The eight-count indictment involving Chacharis also accused Harold Zweig, Gary city engineer, of evading taxes on $13,573 in income for 1956-58.

Mandich and three others were charged with obstructing federal officials in their efforts to collect taxes from Chacharis and Zweig. The others named in the indictment were John Diamond, 49, chief of the auto license bureau at Gary; Peter Chacharis, 58, brother of the mayor; and Wilmar Chulack, 45, an accountant with offices in Chicago.

AMERICANS IGNORANT OF SIREN MEANING

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Defense Department official said Wednesday that if an enemy attacked the United States with missiles and bombs, only one American in 10 would hear the warning siren.

In addition, said Deputy Assistant Defense Secretary Paul S. Visher, only a few of those who did hear the sirens would know what they meant.

Visher told the House military operations subcommittee that recent tests indicated the siren system would not reach a "sufficient sound level to be heard by even a majority of the American citizen."

Approve of JFK's Handling of Nikita

Most Teens Feel Kennedy's Doing Well

By EUGENE GILBERT
President, Gilbert Youth Research Co.

Representative young Americans tell us they think John F. Kennedy is doing well as the youngest elected President in United States history.

The teenagers feel that the 44-year-old chief executive is doing a better job than his predecessor, Dwight D. Eisenhower, on such matters as dealing with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

About seven out of every eight among the 1400 in our latest survey told us they are satisfied with Kennedy's performance during his first year in the White House.

More than three out of five said they think he has done better than Eisenhower, although one in four told us they couldn't detect much difference. As usual, there are some who do not care to give an opinion.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS
Among those who expressed satisfaction with Kennedy, foreign affairs appeared to be the chief concern.

"He has kept our prestige high and has shown good judgment while handling tough world situations," said Kennedy roster member by Brussels, 15, of Brainerd, Minn.

"He has prevented war so far," added Sandra Shout, 13, of Rochester, N.Y.

"He's pulled a couple of blooper," allowed Sue Heide, 16, of Ramsey, N.J., "but I think the job of president is the hardest there is."

The chief dissatisfaction with Kennedy came in his handling of domestic problems.

"He should stop worrying about other countries and think of his own," said 16-year-old Elaine Lynch of Mobile, Ala.

"He wants to spend too much money," was the way Leslie

Davis, 18, of La Porte, Iowa, put it.

HE'S NOT AFRAID
Analyzing the difference between Eisenhower and Kennedy—and giving Kennedy the better of the exchange—Ellis H. Sacks, 18, of Philadelphia, told us:

"Kennedy is not afraid to come out with new ideas; he is sincerely interested in the welfare of the nation. Eisenhower appeared to be too inhibited and put the welfare of those around him above that of the country. I do not think Kennedy would think twice about 'stepping on somebody's toes' if it would benefit the nation."

To Nicole Provenzano, 16, of San Leandro, Calif., Kennedy "inspires a greater deal of confidence in our future than Eisenhower ever did."

On the other hand, Ross Jay, 16, of Prairie Village, Kan., figures "our relations with other countries have suffered since Kennedy took office," and Donald Johnson, 17, of Nisswa, Minn., complained "I thought he would be more dynamic."

Donald Brand, 16, of Camden, N.J., said he thinks Kennedy has handled Khrushchev better than Eisenhower because the Soviet Premier's "buffs are getting bigger with less meaning, which shows a definite response to the way he is being handled."

But, said Joan Steinhauer, 17, of Karyville, Wash., "Can anyone handle Khrushchev?"

More than two-thirds of the young people said they think American prestige abroad has risen since Kennedy took office in January, 1961.

CREDIT PERSONALITY
Despite Donald Johnson's comment, many credited the rise to Kennedy's "dynamic" personality.

"Foreign countries realize that when necessary," said Jon Kusum, 16, of Rockville Center, N.Y.,

those who think American prestige has declined under Kennedy cited chiefly his youth, the Cuban invasion fiasco and Russian space accomplishments.

Said cautious Karen Kuzalski, 15, of Springfield, Mass.: "A new president always raises prestige at first. What will follow, we shall see."

Most of the teenagers (64 per cent) feel Kennedy is neither too liberal nor too conservative and about half (48 per cent) say they have changed their minds about him since he has been in office.

"I didn't think such a young president could do so well," explained Joyce O'Dell, 16, of Chicago.

"I thought that interference by the (Roman Catholic) Ernie Altobelli, 16, of Ramsey, N.J., "Now my opinion has changed."

THEY LIKE JACKIE
"One of the main factors in raising our prestige abroad," said Robert Helwig, 16, of Eagle Grove, Iowa.

"The best thing that has happened to our country since the 'Pilgrims,'" said Michael Brand, 17, of San Leandro, Calif.

"I'm getting sick of hearing about her," added Mina Tusk, 16, of New York.

And Gary Shapiro, 18, of Bridgeport, Conn., fumed: "I don't think that the First Lady should be a walking fashion show."

Have President Kennedy's televised press conferences given the American people a new insight into the workings of their government?

About three out of four of the teenagers who have witnessed them say they have.

The conferences have given Donald Brand, 16, of Camden, N.J., "an understanding of the work of our government in a way which is personal to the individual."

"I understand now," said Joyce O'Dell, 16, of Chicago, "how close we are to war."

But Tom Reilly, 16, of Hempstead, N.Y., one of the 85 per cent who told us they have viewed at least one of the productions, finds them disappointing.

"Most of what he said can be found in the newspapers," said Reilly.

You'll probably be able to find a snowman illustration in a magazine this time of year. Clip it out and trace it on onions.

Here's one suggestion—a snowman wall decal, made from adhesive covering material.

If you're artistically inclined, of course, you can draw your own snowman on the covering material without using a pattern.

Women Getting Longer, Rounder
NEW YORK (UPI)—American women have been getting longer and rounder since 1900.

The average woman in 1900 was 5 feet 2 inches tall, weighed 114 pounds and measured 33-24-36, a private survey by a foundation manufacturer showed.

Today's woman is 5 feet 4½ inches tall, weighs 126 and measures 35½-26-38½.

The survey said that the more ample proportions should not be discouraging when one considers that modern woman is more willowy.
