TERRANCE MCGOWAN

MRS. MAE MCGOWAN

Husband Refuses to Talk About Dynamiting of Home

The suspected dynamiter of his wife's home, Terrance McGowan, refuses to make any statement, Det. Lt. John DePauw said today.

McGowan is held for investigation of attempted murder after yesterday's explosion which demolished the interior of his estranged wife's home at 370 S. Edith St.

McGowan, 58, a self-employed house painter, admitted to police that he had purchased seven sticks of dynamite Tuesday, but refused to account for the explosives. He said he bought them for a friend.

Police found a receipt for the dynamite on McGowan when he was arrested shortly after the early morning blast.

Mrs. McGowan, 53, told police she had stepped into the living room to investigate a noise and so missed death or serious injury. The explosion tore up her bedroom seconds after she left the room.

Mrs. McGowan, employed as a maid at the Hotel Waldron, said she had filed a divorce suit against her husband, charging cruelty, both mental and physical, and habitual drunkenness.

On Aug. 13, she obtained an injunction from Circuit Court Judge J. Russell Holland, in which McGowan was ordered to stay away from the home which she owns. McGowan has been living with a married son by a previous marriage.

NOTHING TO SAY
He told police that he has nothing to say until he consults his attorney who is deer hunting on Drummond Island and is not expected back in Pontiac until Monday.

Both the McGowans have been previously married and have grown children. Mrs. McGowan petitioned for divorce early this year, but dismissed the action when she was reconciled with her husband.

"I went to visit my son in Virginia after that," she said, "and came back to find he had sold our bedroom furniture."

To Launch U.S. Program

Defense Department to Name Space Czar

WASHINGTON (INS) — Defense Secretary Neil H. McElroy announced yesterday a "single manager" will be appointed within a month to launch an American program to conquer space.

McElroy said the manager, who will be above all the services, will be in charge of earth satellites for military purposes and anti-missiles.

BEHIND RUSSIANS
The secretary also told newsmen that it is "rather obvious that we are behind the Russians" in the missiles and satellite race.

He declared however, that the United States is in "good shape to develop what it needs" to produce an adequate defense against the Soviet Union.

He said: "We usually have been able not only to close gaps but to do better quickly."

McElroy said the defense budget would have to be increased but felt additional outlays would be "moderate" because of a campaign to eliminate secondary programs within the Pentagon.

He said the United States will concentrate on the intermediate range ballistic missile because it is being developed very successfully and can be deployed at advanced American bases to counter possible Russian advantage with the intercontinental ballistic missile.

McElroy said the new space director had not yet been selected. His announcement was the first official suggestion that America is planning to make military use of man-made moons orbiting around the earth.

However, the guests, of whom several had been questioned in the slaying of Anastasia in a New York City barbershop last month, insist they just happened to drop in on a sick friend at the same time.

43 Die, 15 Hurt as Flying Boat Burns, Crashes

Flaming Craft Plunges Into Wooded Hillside on Isle of Wight

NEWPORT, Isle of Wight, England (AP) — A flaming British flying boat plummeted into a wooded hillside near Newport last night, killing 43 of the 58 persons aboard.

The four-engine Solent, owned by British Quila Airways, developed engine trouble and crashed shortly after it took off from Southampton for Lisbon, Portugal, with 50 passengers and a crew of 8. Many of the passengers were beginning vacations.

All those on the plane were Britons, an Aquila spokesman said. The dead included the entire crew, two of them stewardesses. Forty of the bodies were recovered in the gray mist of morning.

All 15 survivors were taken to a hospital, six of them seriously injured.

A spokesman for the Civil Aviation Ministry said the pilot had radioed he was turning back to Southampton because one engine failed.

He apparently crashed about 15 minutes later. The plane had set out on its usual route in cloudy weather.

TREES SET AFIRE

Trees were set ablaze where the big plane dropped on this popular resort island in the English Channel across a stretch of water also named the Solent from Southampton on the mainland.

Soldiers, firemen, farmers and police pulled survivors and burned bodies from the flaming wreckage.

The first man to reach the wreckage, scattered over an area 100 yards wide, was Harry Tyrrell, a shepherd employed by author J. B. Priestley.

The author, who has a farm nearby, heard the crash from about three-quarters of a mile away as he was returning from a dinner party.

Tyrrell pulled injured persons from the wreckage and was joined by other farm workers and a nearby detachment of troops on a night exercise.

John Berryman, a 44-year-old farmer, and his 16-year-old son, Maxim, were among the first to go into the wreckage, which had slid down the face of a chalk pit and into a wooded area.

"Bodies were scattered everywhere," Berryman said. "Between us we pulled out five women and six men."

The soldiers "were marvellous," Berryman said. "They dashed in." (Continued on Page 2, Col. 6)

Cars Pile Up as Eleven Leave Track

Express Tears From Its Rails; One Man Killed

New York Central Flyer Loses 11 Cars Near White Pigeon

WHITE PIGEON (AP) — Behind schedule and on strange tracks, the New York Central's eastbound flyer, "The Chicagoan," tore off its rails outside this southwestern Michigan town today, killing one man and injuring at least 38 persons.

The flyer, en route from Chicago to New York with 164 passengers, lost 11 cars in the derailment where tracks cross Michigan Highway 103 a mile south of White Pigeon.

One car overturned; others jackknifed in a heap.

"The Chicagoan" had been rerouted at Elkhart, Ind., 15 miles southwest, to avoid an earlier derailment at Archbold, Ohio. It was on Michigan Central tracks running from Elkhart to Toledo and behind schedule because of the switch.

Killed was Henry Nichols, 54, of Chicago, a Post Office Department employee and a mail car foreman.

Twelve injured were hospitalized; seven in nearby Three Rivers and five in Sturgis, 12 miles west. Twenty-one were treated and released at Three Rivers; five at Sturgis.

Cause of the derailment was not determined immediately, but railroad crewmen said there appeared to be some construction and maintenance equipment entangled in the wreckage.

New York Central officials said the train, which left Chicago at 11:15 p.m., would not have been traveling the route it took had it not been rerouted to avoid an earlier derailment at Archbold, Ohio. When it reached Elkhart, Ind., the Chicagoan was sent over tracks of the Michigan Central running between Elkhart and Toledo.

"It was just like being on a roller coaster," said Joseph von Andrews, a Cleveland passenger. "There was a great roar and suddenly passengers, baggage and everything else started flying around the cars."

Three Hunters Die in First Day

One Killed by Gunfire and Two Suffer Fatal Heart Attacks

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
One hunter died of gunshot wounds and two suffered fatal heart attacks during the first 24 hours of Michigan's deer hunting season.

Erwin Scott, 35, of Lake died Friday night in Clare Community Hospital of gunshot wounds suffered when he accidentally crossed the line of fire of four companions while hunting in Clare County.

Paul Bush, 73, of Bessemer suffered a fatal heart attack Friday while hunting in Bessemer Township in the Upper Peninsula.

Leslie Murdock, 51, of Detroit, suffered a heart attack in a hunting camp in Mills Township, Ogemaw County.

At least five hunters were reported wounded.

The statistics were in contrast to those of last year when three hunters died of gunfire wounds in the first day of shooting.

23 DIED IN 1956

A total of 11 hunters were killed by gunfire and 29 were wounded last season while one man was killed in a bow and arrow shooting and two were wounded with arrows. In addition, nine hunters died of heart attacks and two persons died after being lost in the woods.

Good November weather brought a turnout of some 300,000 hunters for the opening of the 16-day season.

Conservation officials have predicted that this year's deer kill will top the 69,940 bucks shot in last year's regular season.

'Not a Flying Saucer in the Lot'

AF Probes Reports of UFOs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force said today it has looked into five recent reports of mysterious lights and strange objects from the sky (UFOs)—and there isn't a flying saucer in the lot.

The Air Force report gave the most severe description—"hoax"—to the most vivid of the stories that began circulating after Soviet satellites turned the attention of Americans skyward. This was a Kearney, Neb., man's account of being shown around the interior of a spaceship by its German-speaking crew.

DISMISS STORIES

But the Air Force technical investigators also dismissed as exag-gerations or misunderstood natural phenomena stories of a huge glowing object touching ground near Levelland, Tex., and causing automobiles to stall; somewhat similar reports from near Alamogordo, N.M.; bright lights seen from a Coast Guard cutter in the Gulf of Mexico and by planes patrolling near White Sands, N.M.

As for the various reports of automobile engines stalling in the vicinity of mysterious objects, the report suggested that, rather than mysterious rays, the cause likely was thunderstorms soaking ignition systems—and, in one case, an automobile mechanic's mistake.

Of the Nebraska incident, the Air Force commented, "Investigation revealed that local officials consider originator wholly unreliable." An earlier news story from Nebraska said the man who told the story had agreed to undergo psychiatric examination.

The Air Force investigators said another observer in the same area had reported his automobile stalling, but that an interview with his mechanic disclosed that repairs had been made on the car's distributor and part of an old rotor apparently had been left in a position which could cause engine failure.

The investigators said that when they checked accounts of a fiery object hundreds of feet long supposed to have been seen by dozens of persons in Texas, they could find only three who saw the "big light." The light, they said, was visible only intermittently, and thunderstorms were raging at the time.

The investigators concluded that what was seen was a natural electrical phenomenon called "ball lightning" or "St. Elmo's fire" and that the same stormy conditions which cause such phenomena might account for wet engines and consequent stalling of automobiles.

The report said stories of a light near Alamogordo strong enough to cause sunburn were not verified on interview with the originator, and that he acknowledged that the fade-out of his radio in the area was the same sort of thing which had happened there before.

Police Interrupt Mob Convention

Break Up Meeting of Gangland Luminaries in Remote Mansion

APALACHIN, N. Y. (AP) — Two state troopers stepped obviously into the parking lot of a remote hilltop mansion, took out their pencils and began jotting down the license numbers of the sleek limousines.

What followed was the break-up of one of the most interesting parties ever held in this southern central area of New York State. State police termed it a national gangland convention.

The 58-name guest list included many of the underworld's luminaries and has attracted the interest of police from coast to coast and the Senate Rakets Investigating Committee.

Speculation has tabbed the Thursday gathering a meeting to carve up the racket kingdom of slain mobster Albert Anastasia or a conference of the Mafia, a notorious underworld organization with roots in Italy.

However, the guests, of whom several had been questioned in the slaying of Anastasia in a New York City barbershop last month, insist they just happened to drop in on a sick friend at the same time.

Hub of Deer Country Many Pontiac Hunters Congregate at Curran

By JACK PATTERSON

CURRAN—Maybe because it was so windy only two of our party including this writer got bucks on opening day of the Michigan deer season yesterday.

The rest of the boys came in with a lot of good excuses, but nothing else.

Weather in this area is too warm and wet for good hunting.

But it doesn't matter too much whether any of us knock off a buck on opening day. The important thing is that we are here, doing what we are doing.

Right now, as far as we are personally concerned, the hub of the Universe is at our own Sleepy Hollow.

We have the usual opening bunch here, Chuck Rogers, Charlie Wood, Bob Oliver Jr., Roy Corwin, one missing face belonging to Harry McNalley of Rochester who will join us tomorrow, and a surprise arrival, Bob Glenn.

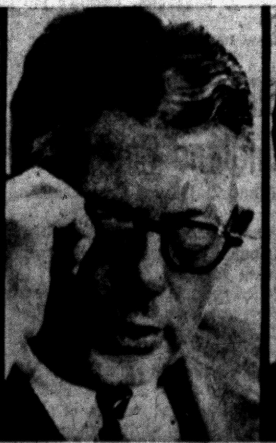

An interesting thought struck us as we came in off the ridges. If we had a rifle with an accurate range of a couple miles, and no trees or geographical features to intervene, we could stand in this spot and reach many of our leading Pontiac citizens.

For example, a little west of north we could lob a few into the Ten-Buck compound among Bob Eldred, Andy Dickinson, Judge Clark Adams, Bob Armstrong, Bill Bundy, Art Nichol, Jim Clarke, Dr. Ed Howlett, Art Compton and any stray gin players from neighboring camps who might be on the premises.

A little more elevation on the rear sight might pick up Al Weber and Ed Buckley roosting nearby.

Although it would be a dirty trick, because he's a nice fellow, we could swing due south and make things hot for Joe Clark, truckaway tycoon and honorary mayor of Curran. In fact, any direction one happened to choose is cluttered with souls from Pontiac. Let's face it. We're surrounded.

We always get rude criticism from some readers on this opening day piece because we have a tendency to use the same old names. Well, critics, let's look at it this way. You find yourself in the heart of Michigan's deer territory on opening day. You need some names for a column. Do you wander the countryside looking for people who aren't home, or use the neighbor's names and put in a good day's hunting? Don't answer that. We know what you'd do, too.

What's Behind Teller's Cage

Public to Get Look-See Monday at Open House of Pontiac State Bank

Have you ever wondered where that check of yours goes after you deposit or cash it with the teller? Well, this question, and many others about the behind-the-scenes operation of Pontiac State Bank and its four branches, will be answered for you at a special open house Monday from 6 to 9 p.m. at the main office, Saginaw at Lawrence Sts.

"This is being held to give everybody an opportunity to see and learn about the behind-the-scenes operation of our bank," said Milo J. Cross, bank president.

The "postronic"—a bookkeeping machine with a magic memory—will be shown and operated for those who attend the open house.

Other machines to be shown will be the recordak, recordak viewer, microfilm process, coin sorter, proof machines, and others.

There will be conducted tours during the three-hour open house, with operations of all departments explained.

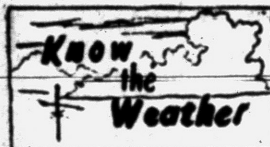

Other attractions will be refreshments, a continuous showing of a movie and a new quarter presented to everyone as a souvenir.

Managing Editor to Attend Meeting

Robert B. Tarr, managing editor of the Pontiac Press, will attend the Associated Press Managing Editors Assn. annual meeting which begins Tuesday. Members will discuss the way the big news of the year has been handled. In 1957, this means a spotlight on science.

Dr. Fred C. Whipple, director of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory in Cambridge, Mass., will talk on "Our Scientific Progress and the Future" on Friday. Dr. Whipple heads the nation's Moonwatch of the Soviet Sputniks.

There will be more spotlights, however, than the one on science as the newspaper executives meet from Tuesday to Saturday. Topics to be mulled over include government, information, segregation, mental health, labor, industry, sports, Hungary, the day-to-day routine of AP reports, and cooperation among members of the news-gathering cooperative, the world's largest.

How do the "experts" make their long-range weather forecasts?

Weather forecasters study of a number of things in determining what the weather will be, in the United States, in a particular future period.

One of the things they watch closest is the buildup and movement of large polar air masses in the polar regions. These air masses spill over and flow down over Canada and enter the United States. They often bring cold or stormy weather.

Their course can often be predicted. If fewer of these polar air masses are indicated, or if they seem weak, then it is likely that warm air masses will push upward and over the United States—or at least over a southerly part of it.

Taking these calculations under consideration, and other factors something more than a "guess" can be arrived at, although the "experts" still miss—and weather remains something of a mystery.

St. Joseph Clinic Goal—to Meet Medical Needs of Unfortunates

When, on Dec. 9, 1944, a frightened mother, her husband in prison and four young children at home, brought her two-week old baby to the clinic at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, even veteran doctors were appalled.

The child, a little girl named Mary, was born with dislocated hips and knees that drew up her legs against her stomach and placed her feet permanently at rest under her arms.

She was just like a little ball," one nurse recalled. "It didn't seem possible she would ever walk."

Because the mother had no means to finance medical treatment, the clinic accepted the tiny patient and there began 12 years of constant treatment, including several corrective operations many casts, braces, special shoes and extensive physical therapy.

In addition to the deformed legs and hips, Mary had club feet, a condition her mother had had before her.

CLINIC RECEIVES AID
The Michigan Crippled Children's Commission assisted in financing the surgery and hospitalization, but St. Joseph's Clinic bore the brunt of the costs, using funds received from the Pontiac Area United Fund.

Gradually Mary began to recover. In July, 1947 the dislocation of both knees was corrected by surgery so they could be flexed fully.

By April of 1949, with the aid of braces and special shoes, Mary could walk for the first time.

In 1951, Mary was fitted with new long braces, and a band which reinforced the pelvis was removed.

Recently, Mary, now nearly 13 years old, left the clinic, as her family moved to Colorado. In her last examination, the doctor found Mary could walk with hardly the trace of a limp and without braces. Her gait is normal, he said, and she has no pain.

ONE OF MANY TREATED
Mary is but one of some 9,000 patients which the hospital clinic sees each year in one of its departments — obstetrics and gynecology, orthopedics, psychiatric, medical, surgery, dermatology, pediatrics, eye, ear, nose and throat, neurology and urology.

Using staff personnel and donated time by community physicians, the clinic actually spends money for medicine, X-rays, laboratory tests, glasses and orthopedic appliances only.

These costs average about $22,000 a year, and the Pontiac United Fund is a source of some 40 per cent of this.

The clinic was founded in 1930 through the support and enthusiasm of the hospital's woman's auxiliary which still gives its financial aid, patients are referred to the clinic by private physicians only.

This year, the clinic switched from a fully free to part-pay basis.

This offers those who wish the opportunity to contribute from 25 cents to $3 per visit toward their treatment.

This was done to avoid a "charity" stigma to which some patients objected, according to Harold E. Brady, assistant hospital administrator. It brings in about $2,000 a year to the clinic out of its $22,000 budget.

"If the Pontiac area United Fund reaches or exceeds its goal this year," Brady said, "it will help assure the continued operation of the clinic to meet the medical needs of the less fortunate in our community like Mary."

Reid, a 50-year veteran of the labor movement who rose through AFL ranks, has been at odds with the UAW-CIO. Only last Wednesday, the State Civil Service Commission reinstated a subordinate Reid fired for alleged tale-bearing to UAW officials.

Reid blamed his dismissal on a "planned campaign" by what he termed certain elements in the UAW. He said "the guy who had most to do with it" was Lloyd Utter of Detroit, a UAW safetyman who formerly was in the State Labor Department.

Reid said: "I understand the UAW figures claimed they had a commitment from the governor not to reappoint me."

Williams told newsmen he had offered Reid two other "less strenuous" governmental posts, but that both were turned down.

The governor said: "John Reid has served the people of Michigan long and well. He brought the accumulated wisdom of years of experience to his position, and he deserves a sincere note of thanks."

Before coming to the Labor Department post, Reid spent 12 years on the State Unemployment Compensation Commission. For many years, he was executive secretary of the Michigan State Federation of Labor.

"In view of the strenuous program we are contemplating, we felt a younger man would be in a better position to undertake the program which will probably last several years," Williams said.

Reid Eased Out of Labor Office

Gov. Williams Appoints UAW Man to Replace Commissioner

LANSING (AP) — Gov. Williams yesterday eased out John Reid as state labor commissioner and installed in his place Russell White, an United Auto Workers Union local president.

Reid, 74, twice before had been appointed to four-year terms in the post by Williams, but was not re-named when the second expired last April and his exit long has been expected.

Red Spy Spread Fear and Misery

How Agent Betrayed Refugees

(This is the seventh of 12 articles in which confessed Soviet spy Jack Soble tells the innermost secrets of an espionage ring in the U. S. of which he was a leader for 15 years.)

By JACK SOBLE
(Written with Jack Lette)

Misery, unhappiness and fear followed in the footsteps of George Zlatovski.

Because of this American Army Intelligence officer turned Soviet spy, the dreaded midnight knock on the door followed hundreds of iron curtain refugees to America.

For years, George and I jealously guarded the secret to the unanswered mystery which plagued the FBI, Congressional investigators and welfare agencies.

How, frightened immigrants asked to no avail, were Russian U. N. and embassy diplomats able to contact them in person or by mail when they were hiding in their newly-found sanctuary under assumed identities?

The activities of Zlatovski, and others like him, gave the Soviet Union an effective weapon in the cold war—one which they spared no effort to exploit.

IMMIGRANTS COERCED

With information supplied by Zlatovski, himself an immigrant from Russia, Soviet envoys were able to seek out and force many refugees to go home or become spies to protect the lives of loved ones.

Thus a new word—"redemption"—sprang up with increasing frequency in the American vocabulary to describe the growing numbers of refugees who were unexplainedly returning to the Communist homeland they once fled.

Moscow immediately saw the tremendous potential when George told me he was fraternizing with secretaries and others in agencies processing large numbers of refugees.

He was told to concentrate on this one endeavor, and did so from December, 1949 to October 1950.

AUSTRIA WAS CENTER

Austria was the natural focal point for these refugees and a logical locale for welfare agencies to process them.

For a short period George worked with one refugee committee. Thus he had access to confidential files which listed the names of the displaced persons, their origin, family history, and most important, locations in the United States where many would be headed.

Other data he obtained by having affairs with secretaries who handled the files.

In this manner, until I re-assigned George to Yugoslavia to report on conditions there for the Kremlin, Soviet agents got the names of hundreds of refugees who were to be engulfed by a feeling of no escape.

GEORGE LIKES SELF

Hard-drinking, terrible-tempered George was somewhat enamored with his own good looks, and Boris Morros, who was a courier for the ring, once used that vanity to his advantage.

Morros, a well-known composer and movie producer, successfully created an impression he was very rich by the way he lived and threw his money around. He was always talking about some multi-million dollar deal he was about to consummate.

Jane and George both were taken in by the colorful, loquacious Morros' outward manifestations of wealth, his high-priced foreign car complete with chauffeur and the trappings of a movie figure—dark glasses and beret.

Just before George moved into Yugoslavia in the winter of 1950 he and Jane visited Morros at the Hotel Raphael, in Paris, where he was staying with his wife, Katharine.

As Jane later told me, Morros told her he was embarrassed to find he was short $4,000 cash to close a lucrative business deal.

BORROWS FROM JANE

In an apologetic embarrassed manner, he asked Jane whether she could loan him the money for a short period.

When she told him she didn't have such large sums, Morros suggested she get it from her well-to-do father.

In the meantime, he promised, he would give George a good job in one of his movie picture ventures. Jane got the money from her father and gave it to Morros. Two weeks later Morros announced he was leaving for the United States for a couple of weeks "on an important business mission."

WANTS MONEY BACK

When he didn't return in two months, Jane began sending him cables and letters demanding her money back. There was no response. In April, 1951, George learned that Morros was in Vienna. He and Jane flew there, confronted Morros and demanded their money.

As Jane reconstructed the incident for me, Morros told them he didn't have the money and couldn't get it for a while. George angrily punched the roly poly Russian in the face, knocking out several of Morros' front teeth.

Grabbing the bleeding, thoroughly frightened Morros around the throat, George, murder in his eyes, warned his fellow-agent: "One of us is no: going to leave this room alive unless I get the $4,000."

Morros telephoned his wife, Katharine, still in Paris.

"Darling," he begged, "I will throw myself in the Danube if you don't cable me $4,000 immediately. I'm in desperate need of the money."

He got the money.

Give First Aid in Poison Cases

AMA Says Treatment Should Begin Quickly, Doctor Called

CHICAGO (INS)—The American Medical Association urges the following first aid procedures in cases of poisoning:

—One person should begin treatment immediately while another calls a physician.

—When only one person is available, he should call a physician first if the poison is a corrosive or a petroleum product. When a non-corrosive poison is swallowed, he should induce the victim to vomit and then call a physician.

—Vomiting should not be induced if the patient is unconscious, in a coma, in a convulsion, or has swallowed petroleum products or a corrosive.

—When retching and vomiting begin, the patient should be faced down with the head lower than the hips to prevent the poison from entering the lungs.

—In the cases of inhaled poisons, the victim should be carried to fresh air, his clothing loosened and artificial respiration begun if the breathing has stopped or is irregular. The patient should be kept warm and quiet.

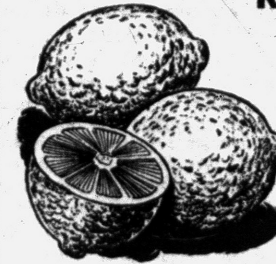

—With skin contamination the victim should be drenched with a stream of water. Rapidity in washing is most important in reducing the extent of the injury.

—Chemical burns also should be washed with large quantities of running water, except those caused by phosphorus. Ointments, greases and other drugs normally used for burns should be avoided.

Greece has little manufacturing. Agriculture is the important industry.

Mixed Feelings Haunt Envoy

Pineau En Route to U. S.

By INTERNATIONAL NEWS
Christian Pineau is a grandfather who writes children's books. He is also one of France's most able diplomats.

And as he is preparing to fly to the United States today he may have somewhat mixed feelings.

FRIEND OF U. S.

He has found a planned Anglo-American sale of arms to Tunisia "contrary to the conceptions of solidarity." But one of his sons is married to an American. Another, Claude, has been Air France manager in Washington. And Pineau himself has been vice president of the parliamentary group for Franco-United States amity.

The 52-year-old son of an army officer recently was appointed foreign minister in the new French government of financial expert and French Premier Felix Gaillard. Before taking the foreign minister post under the previous government, Pineau had been supply minister, public works minister and finance minister.

Courteous, portly and brilliant, he has been something of a shuttler to American shores since the Suez crisis. Even before that he visited often in the Far and Middle East, behind the Iron Curtain, and to most European capitals and South America.

Twice, in 1952 and 1955, he failed to form governments after being designated to try by the French president.

He was born in Chaumont, in northern France, in 1904. He earned degrees in law and political science, and then entered the Bank of Paris with the idea of making it his career. Labor upheavals in the late 1930s turned him to labor problems, and he became an ardent unionist.

During World War II, Pineau founded the underground newspaper, "Liberation." As a resistance leader, he made two clandestine flights to Britain. Twice arrested by the Nazis, he escaped the first time and barely avoided the firing squad the second.

He earned the label "minister with a fist" for his strict enforcement of rationing laws as minister of supply in food-short France after the war.

He is the father of six children, and has written, among other things, four plays and many children's stories.

Warn Churches About Blazes

National Council Report Lists Causes of Fires in Winter Season

With winter fast approaching and all signs indicating it will be a hard one, "typical church fires from a dozen causes, will mean the loss of millions of dollars in property unless precautions are taken in time.

In response to many requests for data on the problem, the Bureau of Research and Survey of the National Council of Churches has published a report in its information service which shows "careless housekeeping" high on the list.

Of more than twelve "typical causes," defective and over-heated heating systems are responsible for 22.5 per cent of the loss, the report shows. "Fire bugs," come second, causing 13.1 per cent, followed by defective electrical wiring and equipment at 12.5 per cent.

The Church Fire Insurance Company, a service organization of the Episcopal Church, and the National Fire Protection Association list lack of sprinklers, unprotected concealed spaces, combustible decorations and draperies, and oiled floors as other major causes of church fires.

It was also disclosed that many churches carry inadequate fire insurance, particularly considering the rise in building costs in the past 20 years.

However it was noted that in some states insurance rate credit can be obtained by churches which install proper fire extinguishing systems.

Japan Studies Evangelism Plan

Divides Work by Types, for Labor, Occupations and Prisoners

Evangelistic leaders of the United Church of Christ of Japan have been studying three specialized types of evangelism in recent months — labor evangelism, occupational evangelism, and prison evangelism.

In keeping with its 1957 theme, "Spread the Church Into Society," the United Church held a conference on "occupational evangelism." Discussion was concentrated on the special programs at 38 churches throughout Japan, which had been selected as occupational evangelism centers.

The United Church is endeavoring to find methods of reaching workers in all types of occupations with the Christian message.

Along a similar line, the United Church is holding "Labor Gospel Schools" in three Tokyo area churches. The schools, held one night a week for six weeks, are for persons who will go as Christian evangelists to the labor masses of Japan.

STUDY WORK IN PRISONS

Ministers concerned with taking the Christian message into Japanese prisons have also been re-evaluating their work.

About 150 pastors engaged in prison evangelism have been discussing recently the responsibilities of religious leaders to prisoners, what the prisons desire of religious leaders, hindrances to work with prisoners, rehabilitation of prisoners after release, and provision of housing for released prisoners without homes.

The United Church is planning to build an institution to help rehabilitate ex-convicts and to help them in finding jobs.

The chairman of the United Church's Committee on Prison Evangelism has said there are many cases of prisoners "who have finished their terms going back to the way of evil because of a lack of a job and a home."

The Rev. Dr. Ross W. Sanderson, consultant to the Department of Urban Churches of the National Council of the Churches of Christ, told the delegates city growth will sooner or later wipe out all distinction between rural and urban America.

Dr. Sanderson said: "There is not one Gospel, one way of life, one ethic for rural America and another for urban."

The Rev. Mr. Gardner was graduated from the St. Paul Bible College in 1950. Following his pastorate in Savage, Mont., he sailed with his family for Thailand for a five year term under the Christian and Missionary Alliance.

After a two year language course in Thai, he was engaged in pioneer evangelistic work in Buriram Province.

The Gardners and three sons returned to the United States in July. Mr. Gardner is the son of Frank J. Gardner, a Pontiac resident who moved recently to Arizona.

Services are scheduled for 9:45 and 11 a.m.; 6:15 and 7:30 p.m.

Told to Minister in Cities' Slums

300 American Baptist Pastors Get Challenge on Urban Religion

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—About 300 American Baptist pastors, laymen and executive leaders attending the first American Baptist Urban Convocation here this week were told to "think urban" and to minister in the city with its slums as well as the nicer suburban areas.

"Our very survival depends on learning how to live in the city," the Rev. Paul O. Madsen told the delegates in an orientation address.

Rev. Madsen, secretary of the Department of Cities of the American Baptist Home Mission Societies, said, "American Baptists have been basically a rural denomination, but America is largely urban now."

The Rev. Dr. Ross W. Sanderson, consultant to the Department of Urban Churches of the National Council of the Churches of Christ, told the delegates city growth will sooner or later wipe out all distinction between rural and urban America.

Dr. Sanderson said: "There is not one Gospel, one way of life, one ethic for rural America and another for urban."

Name Layman of Year
The National Capital Area Council of Churches has named John G. Ramsey "Layman of the Year."

Mr. Ramsey, an official of the United Steelworkers AFL-CIO, is a member of the general committee of the National Council of the Churches of Christ and Economic Life and also holds offices in United Church Men and on the Council's business and finance committee.

Shortly before her death, Mrs. Bohlen, an active Churchwoman, expressed a wish that part of her estate go "to the cause of the Bible and the Gospel."

Her children carried out that wish by offering the greater part of her estate to the Society.

The income from the fund is still being used every year "to promote the cause of the Bible and the Gospel in foreign lands, especially in Liberia."

Since the establishment of this first fund in 1857, with a principal of $25,000, the trust funds of the Society have grown to number 686, with a principal, as of Dec. 31, 1956, of $19,595,610.49.

Ready Passion Play at Oberammergau

For the thirty-sixth time in slightly more than 300 years, the devout villagers of Oberammergau in the Bavarian Alps are preparing its world-famous Passion Play, to be given again in 1960, according to the German Tourist Information Office.

Every ten years — except during major wars — since 1633, the villagers have enacted the Passion of Christ in fulfillment of a vow made after the Thirty Year's War when their prayers for delivery from the plague were answered.

Practice plays based on other parts of the Bible—currently it's "Job"—are given to help train actors and chorus members during the intervening years.

The Proxy Murder

By ERLE STANLEY GARDNER

Copyright 1937

THE STORY SO FAR: Jerry Conway is alarmed by an advertising campaign Clifford Farrell, discharged employee, is conducting to obtain proxies and out Conway at a stockholders' meeting. In a mysterious telephone call a woman calling herself Rosalind offers to supply Conway with a list of the proxies Farrell has acquired. Though he suspects a trap, Conway agrees to follow directions and obtains a key to a hotel suite for the meeting, but instead of finding Rosalind there a young woman, scantily attired, pointing a gun at him. He takes the gun away. Since it has been fired recently Conway suspects a frame-up and calls Perry Mason, attorney. Mason goes to the hotel room and finds a woman murdered. He traps Evangeline Farrell into admitting she is Rosalind, the divorcée. Farrell wants to help Conway. Farrell is having an affair with Rose Calvert, a secretary. Mrs. Farrell is digging up a revolver from the yard of the motel where Conway stayed. In a hotel room Mason finds a bullet from the murder gun imbedded in the mattress. Conway is charged with first degree murder. Sgt. Holcomb is questioned, then Farrell, who admits there was a phony proxy list. Rose Calvert reserves in the hotel suite in the name of Gerald Boswell but the hotel clerk is confused about the delivery of messages.

Chapter 30

Perry Mason said to the witness, Robert King:

"On the 16th of October when the occasion was more fresh in your mind, you stated to Paul Drake, the detective, that you had delivered the message to him: Did you not?"

"I may have said so, yes," King answered.

"And if you could have made a mistake in confusing Paul Drake with the defendant, isn't it possible that you could have made a mistake in regard to Rose Calvert and that it was some other young woman who rented the suite, 729?"

"No, sir. I am positive of my identification and I am not going to let you confuse me."

"Thank you," Mason said. "That's all."

Dr. Malone came forward, was sworn, identified himself as Dr. Klenton C. Malone, an autopsy surgeon who had performed the autopsy on the body of Rose Calvert.

DOCTOR TESTIFIES

He testified as to the single bullet wound, the direction and nature of the wound, the fact that death was instantaneous, that there had been but little external bleeding, that the wound was a contact wound, meaning that the gun had been held directly against the body when the wound was inflicted.

"When was the time of death?" Elliott asked.

"I fixed the time of death at between six-fifteen and seven o'clock on the evening of October 16th."

"Did you recover the fatal bullet?"

"I did."

"And what did you do with it?"

"I turned it over to Alexander Redfield, the ballistics expert."

"Was present when the autopsy was performed?"

"He was."

"Cross-examine," Elliott said to Perry Mason.

"When did you perform the autopsy?" Mason asked.

"It was the morning of the 17th."

"What time on the morning of the 17th?"

"About seven o'clock in the morning."

"Is that the time you usually go to work, Doctor?"

"No, sir. I was called to perform this autopsy by the district attorney. I was asked to perform it as early as possible."

"When were you called?"

"About ten o'clock in the evening."

"Why didn't you perform the autopsy that night?"

"There was not that much urgency about it. The district attorney wanted to have certain information by nine o'clock in the morning. I started the autopsy so I could give him the information he wanted."

"Rigor mortis had developed when the body was discovered?"

"I understand it had."

"When does rigor develop?"

"That is variable, depending upon several factors."

"Can you give me the approximate times during which rigor develops?" Mason asked.

"That I cannot," the witness said. "The authorities are in great dispute as to the development of rigor. Persons dying under conditions of excitement or emotion may develop rigor almost immediately. This is also true if death has been preceded by a physical struggle."

"I may state that there were

conditions existing in this case which made it appear rigor had developed with considerable rapidity."

"Did you consider rigor mortis in connection with determining the time of death?"

"I did not. I determined the time of death from the contents of the stomach and intestines."

"Did you know when the last meal was ingested?"

"I was told that time could be fixed with great certainty. I know that death occurred approximately two hours after the last meal had been ingested."

"You were told when the meal was ingested?"

"Yes."

"That was hearsay?"

"It was the best information I was able to get."

"It was hearsay?"

"I WAS TOLD . . ."

"Naturally, Mr. Mason, I wasn't with this young woman when she took her lunch. I had to rely on what was told me."

"You didn't consider rigor mortis as an element in fixing the time of death?"

"I did not. There were indications that rigor mortis had set in almost immediately."

"What about post mortem lividity?" Mason asked.

"The lividity had apparently just begun to develop. However, Mr. Mason, I didn't see the body at the time it was found. The deputy coroner made those observations."

"Now, then," Mason said, "the wound in that body is as consistent with suicide as with murder, isn't it, Doctor?"

Dr. Malone hesitated, then finally said, "No, sir, it is not."

"Why?"

"From the position of the wound and the course of the bullet it would have been virtually impossible for a right-handed woman to have held the weapon in exactly that position. And if the weapon was held in the left hand the posture would have been cramped and somewhat unnatural."

"Moreover, Mr. Mason, we made chemical tests on the hands of the decedent to see if there was any indication a weapon had been held in the decedent's hand. There was none."

"You used the paraffin test?"

"Yes."

"Thank you," Mason said. "That's all."

Elliott called Dr. Reeves Garfield, who testified that he was from the coroner's office, that he had gone to the scene of the crime within an hour after the body had been discovered. He had supervised the taking of photographs and had made on-the-spot observations.

"BODY WAS CLOTHED?"

He has assisted in performing the autopsy. He gave it as his conclusion that death had taken place some time between six-fifteen and seven o'clock.

"Cross-examine," Elliott said.

"That I cannot," the witness said. "The authorities are in great dispute as to the development of rigor. Persons dying under conditions of excitement or emotion may develop rigor almost immediately. This is also true if death has been preceded by a physical struggle."

"I may state that there were

"The body was clothed when you saw it?"

"Yes."

"In rigor?"

"I will say this: it was partially in rigor."

"What do you mean by that?"

"Rigor mortis begins at the clin and throat muscles and slowly spreads downward until the entire body is involved. Then rigor begins to leave the body in the same order in which it was formed."

"And rigor varies as to time?"

"Very much. Much more so than many of the authorities would indicate. A great deal depends upon individual circumstances. I have known of one case in which rigor developed almost immediately."

"What was the reason for that?"

"There had been a physical struggle, and an emotional disturbance at the time of death. I have known one other case where rigor was quite well developed within thirty minutes. And by that I mean a complete rigor."

"Under ordinary circumstances, the onset is much slower than that?"

"Oh yes. Much slower."

Gaillard Seeks Confidence Vote

French Assembly Seen Backing New Premier on Financial Plans

PARIS (U)—Just 10 days after he was voted into office to end France's longest postwar cabinet crisis, Premier Felix Gaillard was forced today to demand a vote of confidence to push financial reforms through the National Assembly.

The Assembly is expected to vote Tuesday on Gaillard's proposals to raise taxes and cut expenditures in an effort to lift France out of a financial morass. Observers said Gaillard probably would win.

Gaillard asked for the confidence vote about dawn today after an all-night Assembly session. Earlier in the session he warned that such disagreements within the NATO alliance as the raging dispute over arming Tunisia might split up the Atlantic allies.

French anger at U.S. and British shipments of small arms to Tunisia yesterday was expected to unite the deputies behind Gaillard because few would be willing to vote out his cabinet during the arms negotiations.

The 38-year-old Premier's position also was considered secure because of the fresh memory of the 37-day cabinet crisis which ended Nov. 6. No alternative government is in sight and a defeat for Gaillard, forcing him to resign, would leave France without leadership at a critical time.

Charlie Chan in Stew

WILMINGTON, Del. (U)—An old Wilmington law has Charlie Chan, alias Anthony Nardi, in trouble. Nardi, wearing a Chan mask and pulling a ricksha, has been roaming the streets in nearby cities as a promotion gimmick for a Charlie Chan television program. But in Wilmington it's against the law to wear a mask in public. Nardi was arrested and will be given a hearing in Municipal Court.

Houston Balloting for City Officials

HOUSTON, Tex. (U)—About 100,000 Houston residents were expected to vote today for a mayor, eight city councilmen and a city controller.

Most observers expected a Dec. 3 runoff to be required in the four-man mayor's race and several council contests. They looked for Mayor Oscar Holcombe, seeking his 12th term and long called the Old Grey Fox of Houston, to be in the runoff.

Other candidates for mayor are former City Atty. Lewis Cutler, Councilman Gail Reeves and Dr. Ira Kohler, a former city councilman.

A record 264,476 persons were eligible to vote in this largest Texas city.

STYLISH GABLE—This gable is an eye-catching highlight of the ranch house's exterior. The front is finished in vertical wood boards.

On the left there is stone facing. Planter boxes add more decorative touches.

ROOM FOR ALL AGES—Outdoor recreation space for both children and adults is separate in this plan. Follow it as you read the room-by-room description of the house.

Gabled Ranch Separates the Kids From Adults

So you're thinking about building a new house?

Between your hour of decision and the house itself, there are many important steps to be taken: (1) Choose your land with care! Its location and suitability to your own particular needs are vital. Consider, is it convenient to your job? Easily accessible to church, school and stores? (2) Financing? Determine what financing is available to you—and the most convenient way to handle it to meet your own budget requirements. (3) What will it cost? Talk it over with a builder and get an estimate of the construction cost.

Now, the house itself? Let's visit The House of the Week, HW-69. This house was designed by Herman H. York, a prominent small home architect. Let's go with him on a supposed tour of this ranch, planned for maximum comfort and leisure. (As we breeze along on this visit, follow the tour by referring to your floor plan.)

York meets us inside the foyer and tells us: "I like to feel this entrance has hospitality. Because of the clear glass panel, you feel you've been welcomed into the house before you're really there. The planter, too, goes right through the glass, extending a welcome inside and out."

Visible from the foyer is a bar and a fireplace. It's a two-way bar, ready to serve on either side. The fireplace has an open end, making it partly visible from the dining room and fully visible from the living room.

The bar and fireplace are in a brick-faced unit which stands in the center of a space divided into four parts for the foyer, the living room, the dining room and a multi-purpose area.

"Women as a rule," York interjects, "prefer a separate dining area. And there are two things that can be done here. You could panel the end wall of the living room its entire length. This would serve to tie the living room and the dining room together. If you want a separate dining room, it would be a simple job to enclose the area with arched openings."

Now we're in the "multipurpose" area. It has an indoor grill set in one end of an exposed brick wall. The other side of the bar faces into this area. There are built-in TV and Hi-Fi cabinets and built-in book shelves.

"On a Sunday afternoon," York explains, "when visitors arrive, you can walk directly through this area to the rear lawn and around to the outside terrace."

This walk takes you through sliding glass doors—and onto a flagstone play terrace for children. There's a sandbox and swings for the kiddies. Their play can be supervised from the kitchen through a corner picture window.

A step to the left from the play terrace through sliding glass doors and we're in the bedroom area. Some of the bedroom area could be earmarked for the children, hinges.

As a decorative finish, edges can be trimmed with metallic tape, with easy access from the play area to the children's bathroom. The master bedroom has multiple closet space, a smart vanity before a mirrored wall—and a roomy bath with a king-sized shower.

Into the hall outside the master bedroom, we're only a few steps from the bar. York directs us toward the outside terrace. En route we stopped briefly for a look at the kitchen. Everything is there for mother—plus a dinette and a snack bar! Out on the terrace, York points out: "You can see that the exit from the two-car garage is sheltered. The garage, incidentally, has a work bench and storage cabinets for tools."

Square Footage

This nine-room ranch style house has 2,106 square feet, excluding the space occupied by the two-car garage. It has plenty of room for everyone.

On the flagstone outdoor terrace there is a picnic table and an outdoor grill. You could almost see hot dogs sizzling on the grill—and the picnic table supporting bowls of color-splashed salads. And frosty desserts.

Later, we went for a turn around the house by way of the service walk. We were in front of the house again and we paused for a good look.

A gable jutted down over the sheltered front entrance and the picture window of the master bedroom. On the bedroom side of the front wall, there was stone facing. The remainder of the front had been finished in vertical wood boards to give pleasing contrast to the horizontal elongation of this trim ranch house.

Here's a house, we thought, we just can't live without. Room for leisure! Buoyant for happy living! We just have to send for this study plan!

Give Man Den for Relaxing

A man must be free! And if you want to keep your man, it's a mighty good idea to let him "feel free" right at home. The question comes up, however, "How can I give him his blessed freedom without turning the entire house over to him?" Easy. Give him a den.

A den is a room where the man of the house can forget about ashtrays once in a while. It's a room where he can "stretch out" both spiritually and physically. It's his little fort, snug and tight against everything, in a world that may often seem to be altogether too busy, too frantic and (in a whisper) too darn feminine!

A den is a sort of emotional depression chamber to which the mighty man can retreat to be gradually relieved of some of life's everyday pressures. He emerges smiling again, without any fear of the "bends"—the kind that cause him to go on a diet of milk toast and creamed chicken.

Being a man, he'll be stubborn. Best bet is to let him do most of the planning for the den. What's wrong with that old pantry off the kitchen? How about the spare guest room downstairs? And the attic?

Given the opportunity, your man will choose sensible materials for the wall and floor—rugged materials like ceramic tile which is really man-proof. Real tile can't be dented, burned or stained. Besides, it comes in a wide variety of sizes, colors and shapes that stimulate original design.

You might want to give him some tips on stainproof upholstery and drapery design. But let him pick his own furniture, his own pictures, books and other accessories. Could be you'll find a new man by letting him go—into his den!

Nap Protects Your Rug

The nap of a rug contributes more than mere good looks. It is a cushion too, and protects a rug when people walk on it. Rug care should include keeping the nap as close to its original state as possible.

Paint Mirror for Holiday Party Decor

One of the handiest places to exercise your creative talents is on the living room or dining room mirror.

According to June Cabot, a home arts consultant for a glass company, mirror decorations are easy to do, and in their simplicity they have more appeal than complicated decorations which require a lot of time to make.

One popular method is a series of free-hand sketches on the glass surface with whipped soapuds, either plain or mixed with food coloring. Stenciling of more exacting designs can be done with paper patterns and a pressurized can of silver or gilt.

If you prefer, colored sketches or pictures appropriate to the occasion can be cut from magazines and pasted directly on the front surface of the mirror.

These appealing decorations are just as easy to remove as they are to apply. A light rub with a damp cloth returns the mirror to its original lustre.

The beautiful Royal Hawaiian Hotel, at Waikiki Beach, recently was redecorated, using over 2,550 gallons of a deep shade of pink paint.

State Farmers' Income Shows Upturn in 1956

EAST LANSING (AP) — After four years of continuous decline, earnings of Michigan farmers showed an upward turn in 1956, a farm business report showed today.

Michigan State University farm economist John Doneth said an analysis of 526 farm records that the labor income received by these farmers averaged $2,646 last year. This was more than twice the average labor income for 1955.

Students will act as guides. Refreshments will be served after the last "class" bell.

White Lake Township The Lee O. Brooks PTA will meet on Monday in the multipurpose room of the school.

A potluck dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m. and Kenneth Winship will show his pictures taken in Europe last summer.

It will take place at the Bea McDonald School at 8 p.m. Mrs. Richardson and sons, who operate the Bob and Don Hobby shop near Brown City, will be the guest demonstrators. A panel of parents and students will assist the demonstrators.

Mrs. Richardson suggested youth leaders and any other parties interested in handicraft would benefit by this display. Marion Bloss, local photographer, will be at the meeting to discuss the taking of individual pictures.

Brandon Township Brandon Township Schools PTA will meet in the auditorium Monday at 8 p.m.

Avondale All parents in the Avondale School District are urged to attend the special meeting to be held on Monday, at 8 p.m. at the high school.

The Avondale Citizens Committee has invited representatives of the County Sheriff's Office, Michigan State Police, Oakland County Road Commission, State Road Commission and the American Aggregates Co. to participate in a panel discussion with members of the Citizens Committee.

They will attempt to promote greater traffic safety in the community and especially in regard to the school children.

Discuss Plans for Recreation

Independence Township Residents to Establish Activities Program

INDEPENDENCE TOWNSHIP—Progress is being made on plans for a recreational program for Independence Township.

At a meeting held at the Town Hall, Ernest Blohm, executive secretary for the Inter-Agency Council for Recreation in Michigan, presented several aspects on the meaning of recreation. Tom Belton, director of recreation in Waterford, outlined the recreational program of Waterford Township.

Independence Township Board and the Clarkston Community School Board have voiced their approval of the program within their financial limits and have agreed to discuss and give their formal consent to set up a Recreation Commission for Independence Township.

A meeting will be held for interested people in the area Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Methodist Church, Clarkston.

William Godfrey, chairman of the group, at this time will report on the board meetings. A program will be set up under volunteer leadership to coordinate various club activities in the township.

Persons wishing to volunteer help will be welcomed and may contact Godfrey by calling MA 5-2087.

To Target 5,000 Miles Away

Snark Carries Warhead

CHICAGO (AP) — The Air Force has disclosed that its intercontinental guided missile, the Snark, recently carried a simulated hydrogen warhead to a target 5,000 miles from its launching point.

The announcement yesterday termed the Oct. 31 test flight "the world's first known demonstration of a true intercontinental missile capability" and said the Snark hit "with unprecedented accuracy."

In its first detailed description of the flight—released simultaneously in Chicago, Los Angeles, New York and Washington—the Air Force said "the range demonstrated by the Snark places any target in the world in range of United States bases."

Expect Ruling on Village Vote

High Court May Soon Decide on Rochester's Incorporation Impasse

A Supreme Court decision is expected soon that will end the Rochester Village incorporation stalemate.

The ruling will be on an appeal of a 1956 court decision that favored an election for incorporation as a city.

The ruling centered on three petitions for incorporation. In April, 1956, the Board of Supervisors was ready to set an election on the basis of the third petition, when a Rochester and Avon Township group filed suit against the county, claiming the petition was not valid.

The group pointed to the first petition, claimed the board of Supervisors should take action on it, and argued that the other two be shelved for a legal waiting period of two years.

The law quoted in the case was that petitions covering the same territory must not be considered oftener than once in two years, and that petitions must be considered in the order of their filing with the county clerk.

Circuit Judge Timothy C. Quinn heard the suit and ruled against this argument, Judge Quinn's ruling was appealed in December, 1956.

Legal delays then followed, blocking a hearing on the case until two weeks ago.

Youngsters Fire Many Questions About Sputniks

DENVER (INS) — A major consequence of the Russian satellite launchings seldom discussed — by the scientists, at any rate — is the vast new field of questions opened by the always-curious youngsters.

A Denver father asks that a set of stock answers be launched along with the next satellite to such questions as:

- Why did they do it?
- Why doesn't it fall?
- Why don't it bump into the moon, the clouds, the mountains, heaven???
- When it falls will it hit someone on the head?
- Won't it break when it falls?
- ...Then why did they do it (again)?
- Why does it go "beep beep" — Is that its horn?
- How can the doggie sleep when it goes "beep beep" all the time?
- Can we hear the dog barking? ... Why not? ... I want to hear the dog barking.
- How can the doggie come down when he wants to go home?
- If it goes in circles won't the doggie get dizzy?
- Will you build me a satellite, daddy?

And, as if the questions weren't enough, the father complains, there are the near-accidents caused by the childish shrieks from the back seat of the car.

"There it is, daddy... I see it, I see it!!!"

Waterford Library Sets Overdue Fee

After Dec. 1, all Waterford Township residents using the library in the Community Activities Building will be charged a two-cent fee for each day that a book is overdue.

This rule will go into effect because of the large number of new volumes that has been added to the library shelves. These should be circulated to as many readers as possible, according to Librarian Mrs. Kenneth Valentine.

So far, the library has had a no-charge policy and people have forgotten to return the books after they have read them. Mrs. Valentine explained. She said that some of the books that are returned are more than two years overdue.

Recently, the Waterford Township Junior Chamber of Commerce Auxiliary donated $100 for the purchase of new books for children.

Waterford Board Will Study Rural Zoning Changes

A special meeting of the Waterford Township Board will be held at 8 p.m. Wednesday, to study the rural zoning changes, recommended by the Township Zoning Board.

The present laws were set up approximately ten years ago, and due to the tremendous growth in the township, the need for revisions have become increasingly apparent, according to supervisor Elmer Johnson.

The changes recommended by the zoning board include revisions in building codes, types of buildings in specific areas, and restrictions of construction work in various zoning districts.

Johnson said that the zoning board has spent considerable time compiling the amendments to the zoning law, and that the board will study the recommendations thoroughly before taking action.

A public hearing date will be set following the Wednesday meeting, Johnson said.

Over Arms Shipments to Tunisia

Allied Quarrel Breaks Out

By JOHN H. MARTIN INS Foreign Director

A new allied quarrel has erupted over arms shipments to Tunisia amid repeated warnings that NATO solidarity is gravely threatened.

Despite angry French protests, the United States and Britain have decided to send token arms shipments to Tunisia, the former French protectorate, whose president Habib Bourguiba, has been feuding with the French.

Inevitable French domestic politics, the old unsolved Algerian question and the East-West conflict all have contributed to this new dispute among the three major western allies.

Bourguiba asked for arms last July, putting the United States and British allies of France on the spot in their dealing with the new North African state.

Since then, the French have stalled in direct answer to Washington, London or Tunis. The French have not refused to ship arms, as suggested by Washington and London, but they wanted an over-all agreement made, presumably guaranteeing that the arms would not get into next-door Algeria or be used to aid the Algerian rebels.

What reportedly decided Washington to act swiftly this week was news that Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser is detaching some of his shiny new Soviet-made equipment and sending it to Tunisia in a propaganda display.

The French themselves do not object to Tunisia obtaining arms, but they want to do it in their own way. French Foreign Minister Christian Pineau said the Anglo-American decision is contrary to the Atlantic solidarity concept. This is another way of saying the French, who granted independence to Tunisia, regard the Anglo-American arms deal as meddling in their special areas.

The French and other nations also have shown plainly their discontent with the United States and British atomic weapons monopoly within the North Atlantic treaty alliance.

They want a distribution of tactical atomic weapons to all members capable of using them and a greater sharing of atomic information.

Rumblings inside NATO, including the Algerian and now the Tunisian affairs, once more reveal the great headaches involved always in any alliance. The more nations in an alliance, the more chance of disagreements.
