JOSEPH B. JEWELL

Pontiac DPW Supt. Joseph B. Jewell was elected president of the Michigan Engineering Society at its 74th annual convention in Jackson which concluded Sunday. He succeeds William N. Kitchen of Battle Creek. A graduate of the University of Michigan College of Engineering, Jewell has headed the public works department here since 1932.

Other new officers included Samuel D. Porter, Ann Arbor, vice president; M. Eugene Malong, Kalamazoo, secretary; D. Bradford Apted, Grand Rapids, treasurer; George M. Foster, Lansing, director at large.

5 Suspects Held in Bank Holdup

Police Say All Admit Daring Stickup; Arrest Solves 3 Other Cases

DETROIT (AP) — Five men suspected in the $30,000 holdup of a Detroit building and loan association were captured in Detroit and Chicago Sunday by FBI agents and police.

And with the arrests, Detroit Police claimed they had the solution to three other major Detroit holdups.

Both the FBI and police reported the five arrested had admitted taking part in the daring noon-day stickup of the American Savings and Loan Assn. on Detroit's northwest side only last Friday.

Authorities reported they recovered $21,493 taken in the Friday robbery, $5,400 in Detroit and $16,093 in Chicago. They also confiscated two pistols.

Police Inspector Carl Falk said that Earl Jacobs, 26, one of two arrested in Detroit, admitted taking part in the $5,000 holdup of a supermarket April 21, the $550 robbery of another supermarket April 30, and the $335 holdup of a linen supply service only last Wednesday.

Guy Bannister, in charge of the Chicago FBI office, identified the three arrested there as Robert G. Hovey, 24; Gordon Anthony Atkins, 25; and Daniel Galindo, 24, all of Detroit. The government men arrested the three as they stepped out of a stolen car.

In Detroit, police arrested Jacobs and Robert Marion Welborn, 24, in two early Sunday morning raids.

Stevens Ordered to Give Names in Peress Case

Group Meets in Secret to Decide on Shortening the Public Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate investigators today ordered Secretary of the Army Stevens to submit the names of Army officials responsible for giving Maj. Irving Peress—described by McCarthy as a "Fifth Amendment Communist"—an honorable discharge.

The action came on a ruling by Chairman Mundt (R-SD) of the committee looking into the McCarthy-Army dispute after the group postponed until later in the day a showdown on the question of cutting short public hearings.

Mundt ordered a closed session at 12:30 p.m., EST to discuss a proposal by Sen. Dirksen (R-III) that public testimony be limited to Stevens and McCarthy and that any other testimony be taken in closed session.

Dirksen's proposal brought a protest from Army Counsel Joseph N. Welch that this would "do violence to justice and equity" and a suggestion from Sen. Symington (D-Mo) that it was an effort to sweep the charges "under the rug."

Symington said he for one insisted the inquiry be held in a "goldfish bowl."

Sen. Potter (R-Mich) retorted there was no effort to sweep the matter under the rug but there was no point in "hearing the same story told 10 times in 10 different ways."

Chairman Mundt, indicating he would go along with the Army, said he felt no procedure should be imposed over objections from principals.

Mundt said if the hearings continue as originally scheduled, it would take at least "three or four weeks more."

Once the argument over trimming down the hearings was laid aside, Roy M. Cohn, general counsel to McCarthy's subcommittee, began questioning Stevens—now in his 13th day on the witness stand.

Cohn demanded that Stevens give the committee the names of officials named in an inspector general's report as having had a hand in the promotion and honorable discharge for Peress.

Peiping Radio Says DeCastries Captive

TOKYO, Tuesday (AP)—A Vietnamese communique broadcast by Peiping Radio said today Brig. Gen. Christian de Castries was among those captured at the Indochina fortress of Dien Bien Phu.

The communique for the first time mentioned the heroic commander by name and confirmed previous reports that he had been made a prisoner.

French Bombers Blast Key Roads

Planes Batter Vietnam Truck Convoys Moving Out of Dien Bien Phu

HANOI, Indochina (AP) — French fighters and bombers today heavily attacked key roads leading northeastward from the fallen fortress of Dien Bien Phu. The roads are jammed with thousands of Communist-led Vietminh troops and big Molotov truck convoys.

Dropping 1,000-pound high explosive bombs and heavily strafing, the warplanes centered their attacks upon the road from Tuan Giao, 27 miles northeast of Dien Bien Phu, and running eastward to Na San, 117 miles west of Hanoi.

It was at Na San in the winter of 1953 and 1954 that the French, as at Dien Bien Phu, had for months put up a valiant resistance against encircling and vastly superior Vietminh forces.

The French evacuated Na San Aug. 11, 1953 and the Vietminh quickly moved into it as a base for pursuing their conquest of the pro-French Thai Peoples country and the eventual attack upon Dien Bien Phu.

Vietminh troops and convoys were reported moving two ways today: into and out of the Thai country of northwestern Indochina.

Those going in may be for reinforcing Vietminh positions in Thai capital of Lai Chau, 200 miles northwest of Hanoi, which the Vietminh occupied after the French pulled out Dec. 11, 1953. They also may be intended to take over occupation of Dien Bien Phu sector from the battle-worn rebels who spearheaded and survived the 57 days of assaults upon the French Union fortress.

Dien Bien Phu, on a road leading southward to the royal Laotian capital of Luang Prabang, might be used as a takeoff base by the Vietminh for a fresh invasion of the little mountain kingdom.

U-M Professors Refuse to Talk at Clardy Quiz

2 Invoke Bill of Rights as 2-Day Probe Starts in Lansing

LANSING (AP) — Two University of Michigan faculty members today refused to answer questions of the House Un-American activities subcommittee on their knowledge of Communist activities.

Dr. Mark Nickerson, associate professor of Pharmacology, relied on the Fifth Amendment to decline to answer the direct question: "Are you now a member of the Communist party?"

Dr. C. Chandler Davis, mathematics instructor at the university, declined on the grounds of the First Amendment to answer questions about his knowledge of the existence of a Communist cell at Harvard University while he was a student there.

"I believe the question of self-incrimination is immaterial here," Dr. Davis said. "The questions oblige me to discuss politics under abnormal conditions. They infringe upon my freedom of speech and of every other citizen because they imply the threat that if opinions are not acceptable to the committee there is a danger of being subjected to the same treatment as witnesses today."

A third university faculty member, Prof. Clement L. Markert, of the zoology department, was also under subpoena and was expected to be called to the stand later in the day.

Dr. Nickerson invoked the Fifth Amendment when asked if he had been a member of the party when he was employed by Johns-Hopkins University in 1943-44 on a secret project for the Federal Office of Scientific Research and Development. He also invoked the same amendment when asked if he had been president of the Book Shop Assn. of Baltimore in 1944.

Dr. Nickerson first invoked the First Amendment guaranteeing freedom of speech. Rep. Kit Clardy (R-Mich), chairman, said that the committee would not accept this excuse and directed him to answer. He then invoked the Fifth Amendment permitting witnesses to refuse to answer questions which might incriminate them.

Dr. Nickerson, the first witness in two days of televised hearings at Lansing, requested the committee to direct television cameras away from him. Under committee rules, the re- (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

Mrs. Arnold and the 11-year-old Arnold twins, Patricia Lou and Edgar Lewis. Census taker was Mrs. Wellington Clements, 197 E. Huron St.

School Census Starting Today

Parents Will Be Asked About Children Up to 20 Years of Age

Forty men and women started ringing Pontiac doorbells today as Pontiac Public Schools' 1954 census got under way.

Census takers will try to get every person from birth through 19 years of age listed on school records by the census deadline June 1.

Parents will be asked their children's full names, exact birth dates, what schools they attend, and other questions.

Paul C. Allison, child accounting director, said the school system is seeking to know the number of possible students, to plan for the number of new classrooms, teachers and equipment required in the next few years.

Last year's school census showed some 30,000 young people in the birth-through-19 age range living in the Pontiac school district, Allison said.

Cold Air Moving South, Normal Weather Expected

Seven days ago frigid air from Canada knifed into the Pontiac area, cutting the temperature 24 degrees in eight hours.

Today that wintry air still covers the region.

But better news was given farmers and gardeners today by W. W. Oak, chief meteorologist for the U. S. Weather Bureau in Detroit.

He said the cold air is moving southeastward and a warming trend has started. Nearly normal temperatures are expected Wednesday.

More scattered frost is due tonight. The official forecast calls for a low of 34 to 38 tonight and a 57-60 degree high Tuesday.

During the week-long cold spell, temperatures have averaged about 12 degrees below the normal 54-degree mean temperature.

Up to today the highest temperature during the siege of cold weather was 56 degrees recorded in downtown Pontiac last Friday. The coldest was 31 degrees May 4.

Oak said he has noticed light frost at his home nearly every day since last Monday.

Damage to early tomato plantings and cherry trees has been severe in Oakland County and other parts of Michigan.

The Detroit meteorologist blamed the unseasonable weather on a huge low-pressure area over the Great Lakes region that has pulled cold air down from Canada.

The mercury has plunged into the 30s daily since the cold air hit.

Today was no exception. The mercury dropped to 36 degrees at 6 a. m. in downtown Pontiac, then rose to 57 at 2 p.m.

And that 58 is welcome. It's the highest reading since May 3.

County Historical Society to Hold Annual Meeting

The annual meeting and luncheon of the Oakland County Pioneer and Historical Society will be held at noon May 19, at the Oakland Avenue United Presbyterian Church. Howard Peckham, director of the Clements Library at the University of Michigan, will be the speaker. Reservations may be made before May 14 with Mrs. H. F. Going, of 214 West Pike St., FE 2-6087.

Agree to Speed the Evacuation of Injured Men

Vietminh Presents Own 8-Point Plan Similar to Korean Demands

GENEVA (AP) — The Communists "totally" rejected French terms for an Indochinese armistice today. They countered with an eight-point plan of their own.

The Communists agreed, however, to cooperate in quick action to remove the wounded from fallen Dien Bien Phu.

The Communist armistice plan was submitted to the nine-party Indochinese conference by the deputy premier of the Vietminh, Pham Van Dong, after he assailed the French plan for an internationally guaranteed armistice. Major points of the Communist plan were:

Recognition of the Communist regimes of Vietminh, Laos and Cambodia—the latter two labeled by the French as "phantom" governments.

Withdrawal of all foreign troops from Indochina.

Free elections, conducted along the lines already proposed by the Communists for Germany and Korea and rejected by the West.

The Vietminh plan, which was expected to be pushed by Soviet Foreign Minister Vyacheslav M. Molotov and Red China's Chou En-lai, was certain to be rejected by the West as unacceptable.

This and the French plan were so far apart they appeared at first sight to be no basis for bringing them together.

One provision of the Vietminh proposal would include a declaration of intent on the part of the Vietminh "to study" the form of association with France within the French Union. A French spokesman labeled this a phony gesture aimed at winning French public opinion.

Other points: A promise by the Vietminh to respect existing French cultural (Continued on Page 2, Col. 7)

Man Swims 2 Hours to Rescue Wife, Son, 8 After Boat Mishap

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—Ten-year-old Darlene Roaten, who doesn't swim, supported herself with a small piece of cork for more than three hours yesterday while the current swept her 10 miles down the Mississippi River.

Her father, J. S. Roaten, meanwhile, swam more than two hours to rescue his wife and their son Bobby, 8, after they and Darlene had stepped off an underwater sandbar into the swift Mississippi current.

Roaten threw them pieces of old life jackets and leaped from their 17-foot motorboat and swam to the rescue of his family. He left another son, Michael, 4, in the boat with the motor idling.

The boat began drifting and Roaten swam after it for more than two hours before he regained it. Then he used the boat to pick up his wife and Bobby but Darlene had drifted out of sight.

She was picked up just before dark by the towboat Zephyr out of St. Louis. A crewman saw her bobbing along in the current. A witness said the piece of cork supporting her was about half the size of a cigar box.

The family was on a pleasure cruise in a 17-foot inboard motorboat. The craft struck a sandbar near an island. All except Michael got out to push the boat off the bar, the water was only six inches deep where the boat ran aground.

"All of a sudden there was no sand, and we were in the water," said Mrs. Roaten after her rescue. "All three of us went different ways."

TWO Birmingham Commission to Hold Hearing Tonight on Rezoning Porritt Land

From Our Birmingham Bureau
BIRMINGHAM — A hearing to rezone the recently annexed Porritt property on Adams road between Maple and Lincoln will start off tonight's City Commission meeting.

Several letters opposing the proposed business zoning on the Adams frontage are already on file. Following passage last week of an ordinance that will allow rezoning of residential property next to business or parking districts for parking use, two requests will be considered for rezoning five lots in the northwest section of the city.

A licensing ordinance to operate in conjunction with the new parking ordinance will be presented by City Planning Director Robert Boatman.

He has also prepared a resolution on the city's objections to the proposed extension of Lincoln avenue from Cranbrook to Lahser.

No Clue Yet Found to Missing Ensign

BIRMINGHAM — A four-day search for Ensign Donald R. Wilson, 24, former Birmingham resident who was reported missing during a Wednesday training flight from Jacksonville, Fla., Naval Air Station, has failed to turn up any clues of the airman's whereabouts. Word of the report, released by Navy officials at the air station, was received here today by Mrs. Myron B. Freeman, sister-in-law of the missing jet pilot. She said that Wilson's wife, Peggy, phoned the news to her from Jacksonville where Wilson was based.

Other pilots in Wilson's formation, she said, reported the incident, but none said they saw his plane drop from the flight near the Cuban coast.

The missing airman is the son of Mrs. Ralph A. Wilson of 19370 Riverside Dr., Birmingham.

Donald, who has been in service about two years, is a Birmingham High School graduate. Prior to his service entry, was attending Georgia Institute of Technology school of pharmacy.

5 Hurt in Car Crash on U.S. 10 Sunday

Five persons were injured early Sunday when a motorist went to sleep on U.S. 10 near Big Lake Road in Springfield Township and his car swerved into oncoming traffic.

William A. Harr, 19, of Detroit, told Michigan State Police of the Pontiac Post that he may have fallen asleep while driving north on U.S. 10, causing his car to swerve into the outside lane of southbound traffic and into a car driven by Carroll L. Bridgeman, 25, of Detroit. Harr was ticketed for reckless driving.

Bridgeman and a passenger, Salvatore Soave, 30, also of Detroit, and Harr and two passengers with him, Miss Janet C. Eulich, 16, and Thomas E. La Rochelle, 19, both of Flint, were treated at Pontiac General Hospital for cuts and bruises.

Awaits Sentence in Store Holdup

Russell J. Courtney, 31, of 1769 Woodward Heights, Ferndale, will be sentenced May 17 for the $4,098.46 holdup of a Huntington Woods supermarket last March 10. He was found guilty Friday by a circuit court jury before Judge Frank L. Doty and was returned to Oakland County Jail until sentence.

A store employee picked Courtney out of a police lineup after his arrest March 14 by Huntington Woods Police and also identified him in court as one of two men who entered the store with drawn guns.

A John Doe warrant has been issued for the arrest of another suspect.

To Mark Day for Cranbrook

Events Sunday Highlight 50th Anniversary of Booth Family Gifts

The 50th anniversary of the first purchase of Bloomfield Hills property for Cranbrook Institutions by George E. and Ellen Scripps Booth will be commemorated Sunday.

The all-day event will be highlighted by a 10:30 a.m. dedication of a new altar built on the site where George Booth's father, Henry, conducted the first public worship. A special Founders Day service at Christ Church Cranbrook will be held at 11:15.

During the afternoon, Cranbrook School's new gymnasium will be named in honor of Charles J. Keppel, member of the school's first faculty and former assistant headmaster. The dedication will be held at 2:15.

Rounding out the program will be a Founders Day tea at Cranbrook House, former George Booth home. Besides the Booth family, guests and graduating groups from Kingswood, Cranbrook, Brookside and Cranbrook Academy of Art are scheduled to be present. A tour of the grounds will follow. The 300-acre campus, housing six educational institutions, was named after the Booth ancestral birthplace in England.

The professor said he had been employed at the University of Michigan School of Medicine since 1951. He earned his medical degree at the University of Utah in 1950 and previous to that he had studied at Johns Hopkins, leading up to a doctor of science degree. He earned his master's degree at Brown University. He said he was born in Minnesota in 1916.

Dr. Nickerson said that during his stay at Johns Hopkins he was employed to handle classified material which at the time was thought to be useful in chemical warfare. He did not further identify the material.

He added he had passed a security clearance but that he did not know who had cleared him.

Before starting the testimony, the committee excused Nathaniel Coburn, associate professor of mathematics at the University of Michigan, who had been subpoenaed. Committee staff members said they had investigated his claim of illness and had found it to be true. Prof. Coburn, however, was held under subpoena.

Nursing School's Open House Visited by 200

Some 200 Pontiac area young women turned out Sunday at McAuley School of Practical Nursing's "Open House" started St. Joseph Mercy Hospital's Hospital Week festivities.

Visitors can tour the hospital itself from 2 until 4 p.m. today through Thursday, with St. Joseph Mercy alumnae as guides. Special demonstrations of hospital equipment are planned for each day's program.

Sunday's open house for young women interested in nursing careers featured Miss Irene Langdon, director of Highland Park General Hospital School of Nursing and Miss Doris Holdwick, McAuley student, as speakers. McAuley students modeled their own clothes in a style show, "What the Well-Dressed Student Nurse Will Wear." The show ended with the four-year-old Wendy Bordeaux, granddaughter of Mrs. Agnes Emery, McAuley housemother, dressed as a student nurse.

Reds Totally Reject French Truce Plan and economic interests in the three states.

A pledge of no reprisals against persons found guilty of collaboration.

An exchange of prisoners of war. An armistice in Indochina. This would be given priority over all other provisions. The Vietnam-proposed armistice would include a "readjustment" of occupation zones, a ban on import of troops and arms in Indochina and control of the armistice by mixed commissions.

At the second session of the Indochina phase of the Geneva Conference, the delegate of the Communist Vietnam regime agreed to a meeting of field commanders in Indochina to arrange evacuation of wounded.

Such a meeting had been asked by the French three weeks ago. The Vietnam move today prompted French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault to remark: "Better late than never."

Today's meeting got off with a wrangle as the Viet Nam delegate and Bidault accused Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov of holding back a Viet Nam letter and allowing, instead, the Viet-minh delegate to speak.

Molotov is today's conference chairman.

The sequence of events, as reported by official French sources, was:

The Viet Nam delegation handed a letter to Molotov, suggesting something be done to evacuate seriously wounded French Union prisoners.

Communities Get Road Funds

Oakland County Units to Share in $1,700,000
From State Fund

Michigan State Highway Department is sending checks for about $1,700,000 to Oakland County and its cities and villages for use on local streets and roads.

The money is part of the $37,268.62 collected in Michigan's Motor Vehicle Highway Fund during January, February and March. The state Highway Department keeps 44 per cent or $25,349.24 as its share of the funds, raised from license fees, gas taxes, and other highway charges.

Oakland County Road Commission will get $1,142,775.11 — more than any other county road commission except Wayne, which gets $4,749,330.15.

Other nearby counties' shares are $178,865 for Lapeer; $163,692 for Livingston; $566,029 for Macomb; and $373,321 for Washtenaw.

Pontiac will get $245,773.25 — the biggest share of any Oakland County city.

Birmingham will get $37,489; Bloomfield Hills $4,982; Clarkson $1,657; Clawson, $12,211; Clifford, $1,226; Farmington, $5,238; Hazel Park $33,411; Holly $4,850; Huntington Woods $11,450; and Lake Angelus Village, $160.

Lake Orion is down for $5,608; City of Lathrup Village, $7,228; Leonard, $1,867; Milford, $5,780; Oak Park, $18,967; Orchard Lake $3,237; Orionville, $1,806; and Oxford, $5,706.

Vision Testing Begins Today

Junior League Holds Pre-School Program at Stevens Hall

Youngsters were lined up to receive free sight tests this morning when the Pontiac Vision Screening Center opened its doors for a three-day stay here at Stevens Hall, All Saints Episcopal Church, Williams at W. Pike Sts.

Vision tests for children between the ages of 3 and 5 are being given there from 9:30 to 4:30 today, Tuesday and Wednesday. Only a few moments are required and no appointment is needed.

Sponsored by the Junior League of Birmingham, the program is in cooperation with Pontiac Board of Education and city, state and county health departments. It was instituted as a community service for people in all income brackets. Its purpose is to detect vision defects before the child reaches school age.

In the friendly atmosphere of Stevens Hall, trained Junior League volunteers welcome the tots and introduce them to the "sight games" which constitute the examination. The Snellen section of the Massachusetts Vision Test is the one used.

No diagnosis is made, but children whose vision is found to be faulty are referred to the family eye doctor for treatment. No eye drops are administered and the skilled workers are adept at making the tots feel at home.

The center is serviced by 60

Gen. Gruenther Warns Against A-Weapon Ban

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED POWERS IN EUROPE —Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, Allied supreme commander, opened a medical conference today on the treatment of atomic casualties with a warning that frightful as atomic weapons are, they should not be banned unless there is effective general disarmament.

He told 80 high ranking military medical experts from 13 NATO nations that the Soviet proposal to ban atomic weapons without reducing conventional arms would deny the Allies a strength in which they excel and leave the Russians relatively stronger.

The supreme commander urged the surgeons general to carry back to their countries the "peaceful aims and purposes" of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Why are So Many Sufferers from Pains of ARTHRITIS, RHEUMATISM

Turning to PRUVO for Sure Relief?

At first a few—then hundreds—then by the thousands the victims of arthritis and rheumatism have turned to PRUVO Tablets for special scientific relief. "At last," they say, "we have found the answer."

If you suffer aching or even almost torturing, unbearable pain in arms, neck, back, legs — you too may right today change the entire course of your life by turning to PRUVO for quick soothing relief. PRUVO therapy is so sound and logical, so safe and sure that it just naturally will appeal to your good judgment. The function of PRUVO is to break the vicious cycle of pain — the pain which prolongs the spasm of the muscles around the joints and causes the sufferer to refuse from movement. This involuntary result in atrophy or wasting away and finally deformity of the joints.

Pain offers the quickest, longest lasting, non-narcotic relief known to medical science. It contains prescription type ingredients, completely harmless to all organs of the human body, including a salicylate with 5 times the analgesic potency of aspirin — a medication frequently recommended by doctors.

Directions with each bottle tell you how to get the most effective results—and as those aches and pains fade away, it is immediate relief—PRUVO—active—very light massage—easy movement of the affected areas. This is the way to make nature help you by stimulating blood circulation. These simple rules are intended to enhance the pain-relieving effects of PRUVO Tablets.

Is it any wonder that so many are turning to the common sense PRUVO program. Why not join the thousands who are living a better life with PRUVO — only $1.50 for the trial size bottle of 75 tablets — and if you do not start getting pain relief before using half the tablets just return the balance and your money will be refunded in full by PRUVO. Your druggist has PRUVO — and you don't even need a prescription to get this wonderful preparation. Start today!

Don't give up! No matter what you have tried or what you may be using right now — give the PRUVO pain relief program a fair trial. Learn for yourself what thousands of others know about PRUVO for control of arthritis, rheumatism and other attacks of muscular aches and pains when they occur. 90 out of every 100 users have found satisfaction in PRUVO — you, too, can obtain this special soothing relief. Start today!

Remember, PRUVO is the only medication with these prescription type ingredients which costs you just $1.50 for the trial size bottle. Leading drug stores and PRUVO in the Economy Home Size at $4.00 and the Hospital Clinic Size at $7.50.

would probably be filled with economic difficulties which will tempt the Allied nations to dangerously slacken their defense efforts.

Gruenther said the maintenance of the defense effort, despite the West's improved military position and despite money difficulties, will be the big problem of the immediate future.

Keep Sons in State, Actor Asks Court

BURBANK, Calif. (AP)—Actress Susan Hayward is meeting opposition to her plan to take her 9-year-old twin sons with her to a movie location at St. George, Utah.

Miss Hayward petitioned Superior Court Friday for permission to take Timothy and Gregory out of the state from June 1 to July 9. But on Saturday her estranged husband, actor Jess Baker, filed an affidavit saying the boys should not be taken out of the public school they attend. Miss Hayward had said she would provide a tutor to keep up their school work.

A hearing on the matter has been set for May 19. Barker previously obtained a court order preventing removal of the twins from the state. A divorce trial for the couple has been set for June 14.

The Great Pyramid of Khufu or Cheops in Egypt was originally 30 feet higher than it is now. When first built thousands of years ago, it was 481 feet, almost 200 feet higher than the Capitol building in Washington.

PLAN OUTING—These Eastern Junior High School students trace the route to Sleeper State Park where they and 46 other students will take part in a week-long outdoor education program starting Saturday. They are (left to right) Elwin Beatty, of 385 Ferry St.; Sue McMahan, of 48 Auburn Ave.; Roy White, of 66 S. Roselawn Dr., and Myrna Light, of 210 Whittemore St.

50 Junior High Students to Study Nature for Week

Eastern Junior High School pupils are scheduled to leave Saturday for a week's trip to Sleeper State Park, Caseville, to participate in an outdoor education program.

The 50 eighth graders, will be accompanied by five faculty supervisors.

Edwin N. Rydell, director, will be aided by Jean Kimple, Charles Beyette, Mrs. Charles Beyette, all of Eastern Junior High, and Mrs. Ralph Waterman, of Wilson School.

A state forester, a park superintendent, a U. S. soils man and Glenn Husted, Wilson School principal, will complete the list of outside helpers on the conservation trip.

The schedule will include weather forecasting, forestry, game fish, soil conservation, compass instruction, compass hikes and nature appreciation hikes.

Those attending will be Mary Ann Leonard, Pat Tate, Ellen Taylor, Ann Whiting, Lona Lambdin, Beverly Glougie, Sharon Ramsey, Beverly Ledford, Georgia Humphrey and Judy Harnes.

Others going are Carol Olson, Donna Pruett, Karen Green, June Hirsh, Sandra Somerville, Karen Burnworth, Sue McMahan, Jeanette Ohanesian, Sharon Wall, Myrna Light, Carolyn Knisely, Carol Hanson, Carol Ann Wells and Andrea Micu.

Other junior campers will be Earl Brown, Donald Lucas, Robert Randall, Elvin Beatty, Dale Mallett, Lynn Nelson, Chuck Johnson, Larry Workinger, Eric Soderberg, Royce Davis, David Carie, Dale Larvick and Ronald West.

Completing the list of students will be Don Smith, Ralph Ferdon, Albert Hoover, Douglas Lucas, Dale Mellon, Roy White, Larry Colbert, Richard DeCea, Ronald Hopp, Jack Pyle, and Cecil Dumbriege.

Pontiac's School Problem

Let's face it—Pontiac is going to have to do something about its growing school problem.

In 10 years total school enrollment will have increased from the present 17,000 to 23,000. To provide facilities for these children the Board of Education has found that it would have to spend $9,000,000 on new buildings.

These would include a 48 room high school, 48 junior high classrooms, 115 grade school classrooms and 10 small gymnasium-auditoriums. The Board also needs more money because while operating costs are rising, State aid isn't and the operating account will be $685,000 in the red by July, 1955.

That is why the Board of Education is asking school district voters to approve on June 14 an increase in school millage. Briefly, it needs an increase of 6.25 mills for the next three years and 8.75 for the following seven. The net increase would be about $4 on each $1,000 assessed valuation.

We believe the Board is fully justified in asking this increase. As President GRIFFIN put it, Pontiac has come to the end of the road under our present school millage.

In fact, we don't see how the district can afford to turn down this proposal. We are in the very center of the area likely to feel the greatest impetus from construction of the St. Lawrence waterway.

We urge all school district electors to give this matter serious thought. The problem isn't going to solve itself. Either we solve it or pay the price of the only alternative—half day sessions and lower standards of public education.

U. S. Indochina Policy

Because of its timing, just after the fall of Dien Bien Phu, Secretary DULLES' speech on the U. S. position in the Indochina crisis is important to all Americans.

The address possessed an additional quality of timeliness because it was given on the eve of the opening of Indochina truce talks at Geneva.

Both our Secretary of State and an unusual Saturday session of the Security Council pointed to the direction of Administration policy. No announcement came from the Council meeting but Mr. DULLES dealt frankly with the situation in his nationwide broadcast.

He expressed confidence that negotiations now under way with 10 friendly nations would result in a coalition to save Southeast Asia from the Reds. But the Secretary made no effort to hide facts. He admitted that this coalition might involve "serious commitments by us all."

Then came the most important part of the speech—the conditions under which the United States could enter such a coalition. First, Congressional approval would have to be given. Second, there would have to be adequate collective effort.

Mr. Dulles didn't elaborate on these conditions. But he is well aware that there is no enthusiasm either inside or outside Congress for sending troops to Indochina. He must be equally aware that when he talks of "adequate collective effort," the American people have a right to expect a more equal sharing of the burden than was the case in the Korean war.

Failure at Geneva to get any place on the Korean settlement gives little hope for a solution of the Indochina problem. In fact, Mr. DULLES conceded that the result there might be a truce unacceptable to us or no truce at all. Either way, he said, the need for an anti-Communist coalition would be all the more urgent.

Let's not delude ourselves—the fall of Dien Bien Phu has strengthened the Reds' bargaining position, not the West's.

U.S. Butter for Britain

There is hope for a sizable reduction of the Government's surplus butter stock in negotiations Secretary BENSON is conducting with Britain.

Our Secretary of Agriculture wants to sell about 40,000,000 pounds of it to our transatlantic cousins. If completed, this deal would reduce the butter surplus of 364,000,000 pounds by 11 per cent.

Basis of negotiations is a proposed sale at the world market price of 47 cents a pound. While this is considerably below the average domestic retail price of 63 cents, it will cause no loss to American housewives. Under our present price support system we can't have cheaper butter and our surplus can't be thrown on the domestic market.

Existing conditions, therefore, eliminate the question of whether it is wise to sell this butter to a friendly country. Our only choice is either to do that or let the butter spoil.

Moreover, sale of it not only will save the taxpayers money by cutting the cost of price support, but help clear the way for a new policy that won't stimulate the accumulation of surpluses.

We'll praise the energetic ant. But emulate his ways we shan't.

The Man About Town
Pontiac; Lake Port
That Was Plan Under Way in City's Early History

Old age: Something others reach long before you think you do.

The assured building of the St. Lawrence Seaway brings to mind the fact that when Pontiac was first settled in 1818, there was a plan to make it a lake port. It was to be on a system of Michigan canals, the first of which was actually built from Lake St. Clair to a point near Rochester, and used for a few years. This was in the 1830s, but the coming of the railroads stopped all further canal construction on the proposed plan.

Manager of the Detroit Red Wings champion hockey team, tells of being introduced at a Michigan banquet (not in Pontiac) as having been "formerly born in Canada."

Here in the Pontiac Press office we like to receive letters like one from

Elnae Garrett, pupil in grade 6 of Webster School: "Our class enjoyed the tour through your plant and was amazed at the work that goes into just one day's paper."

In my last conversation with our Congressman George A. Dondero, he said, "I'll never be happy until the St. Lawrence Seaway is assured." So, George now has a smile even wider than usual.

Nominated for Oakland County's oldest active business man is

E. S. Ladd of Milford, 87 years of age.

During his recent hospitalization, the Detroit poet,

Edgar A. Guest, received flowers with the simple card, "Pontiac admirers." Eddie now says he's glad he has some admirers here, and wishes they would identify themselves, so he can acknowledge the gift.

Pontiac residents who formerly lived in Millington (and there are said to be many of them) are requested to send their names and addresses to Kenneth Kennedy of that village, so they can be invited to a centennial banquet.

Victor Woods Praises Brotherhood Spirit Displayed in Benefit Concert

There is a project I feel the entire city of Pontiac can be proud of. The MacDowell Male Chorus is giving a concert at Trinity Baptist Church with all of the proceeds going to the rebuilding of Newman Methodist Church.

This reflects an intense spirit of cooperation in this locality. Here you have a singing group dedicated to the memory of a staunch Irish citizen, cooperating with a young Baptist minister in the person of the Rev. Richard Dixon, Jr., in extending a helping hand to the Rev. J. Allen Farker and Newman A.M.E. Church.

In a world torn with strife and misgivings, in a country torn by fears and name calling, in a community where many elements are at variance, it is reassuring to know that there are groups of individuals who practice the spirit of true brotherhood in their everyday lives.

This spirit is certainly in accord with our basic concept of democracy. It is also in strict adherence with our primary interpretation of Christianity.

March of Reds in Asia Closely Parallels Hitler's Goosestepping Into the Rhineland

By DAVID LAWRENCE
 GENEVA — This is May 1954 by the calendar but, historically speaking, it is so closely parallels November 1936 that the resemblance is startling.

For it was then that Hitler marched into the Rhineland while the Allies stood indifferently by and then three years later World War II had broken out.

Has World War III been brought nearer by the events of the last month? Has the atomic war which America dreads so much become inevitable as a consequence of the weakness of the Allies?

For in every country on our side, including the United States, the disunion created by the politicians for partisan advantage has paralyzed the executive power and what should be a firm stand against Communist aggression by an alliance of armed forces has become a faltering attitude at a crucial moment.

The German archives, discovered after Hitler's death, reveal that the Nazi leader was quaking in his boots as he marched into the Rhineland and could have been restrained had the Allies acted together.

Instead, they failed to take any military action because their peoples were shell shocked by World War I and they believed another war was unthinkable.

Today the Communists are flashed with their successes. Perhaps the real turning point, future historians will say, was the refusal of Britain and our other Allies in 1950 to sanction the plan of Gen. MacArthur to pursue enemy planes into Manchuria and to destroy Communist bases of supply in Red China.

The Truman-Acheson administration failed to assert American leadership at that vital stage and the whole course of history was changed.

Indeed when MacArthur was summarily dismissed by Truman, it was like notifying the Communist world that the United States and its Allies were scared and were being bluffed into inaction by talk about the possibility of an enlarged war.

It is too bad that Truman and the Democratic leader of the senate, Lyndon Johnson, are indulging in political attack at this serious moment in world affairs.

But if the Democratic party insists upon making such an issue in the coming campaign, there plenty of proof in the files that the Truman-Acheson administration lost China by listening to unwise advisers, some of whom—including Alger Hiss—were sympathetic to the Communist cause and operated from within the United States government.

For today's troubles of the Allies stem largely from the fact that China was lost to the free world.

There would have been no military aid for the Indochina Communists if China itself were not controlled today by a Communist government, and there would have been no Communist control of Red China if the Truman administration had not allowed Chiang Kai-shek to be undermined by withdrawing American moral support at a critical moment.

There would also have been no chance for a build-up by Communist armies in North Korea to compel the armistice of today if Truman and the Allies had stood firm and fought the Korean War vigorously in 1950 and 1951.

The danger now is that weakness on the Indochina question will incite the Communists in Moscow and Peking to take steps that will bring on World War III.

This grave situation is fully understood by at least some influential segments of opinion in all the Allied countries. Thus, the "London economist" in a recent issue said:

"Long drawn out though the fighting has been (in Indochina), British public opinion has never been encouraged to think out what it means; and as a result, now that a crisis has blown up, people are inclined simply to cry for peace without caring who wins or loses."

"Any war can always be stopped at any time if one side gives in. But if the French and their associated states give up the struggle now, the results will be most dangerous for the British people."

"Indeed, that way of putting

Dieting More Difficult Than to Stop Smoking

 Case L-301: Lorna L., aged 27, is a very attractive wife.

"But, Dr. Crane, my husband says I am too fat," she protested, "and he may be right, for I now weigh 130."

"So I suggested if he quit his cigarettes, then I would go on your famous 10-day diet."

"But he argues that it is harder to quit tobacco than to lose weight. Is that true?"

No, it is more difficult to diet than to stop the liquor or the tobacco habits.

For it is easier to break a bad habit by quitting it entirely, instead of tapering off.

You can thus stop drinking or smoking, all at once. But you can't quit taking food or you'll die.

The dieter simply tapers off to fewer or smaller meals. But this tantalizes his appetite.

We prefer Kefauver's unsponsored charades to the siege of Fort Monmouth. We met more interesting people.

Kefauver's class in applied curiosity were not camera hogs. They all wore expressions they could hide behind.

Most of them had a rubber-stamped education that spanned the trackless wastes from the back of their hands to their mouthpiece's ear.

Their lawyers were all graduates of the three eye league. Not Iowa, Indiana and Illinois. But in cringing, irrelevant and immaterial...

What this gentle inquisition lacked was a capable scolder like the late Senator Tobby. When the knight in the green visor drove up he was loaded like a cross-town bus.

Senator Tobby was the ideal interloper for temporary reforms. His voice was as brittle as soda crackers, his questions as sharp as ungrateful children and his scorn would nickle-plate an iceberg.

This last visible committee was politer than a rich aunt's nephew. It cross-crossed points of order with senator McCarthy.

Dr. Brady Talks of Growth of Tissues, Also Benign and Malignant Degeneration

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Science is knowledge acquired by study or practice. Pathology is the science of the nature and causes of diseases and their structural and functional effects.

The pathologist is a specialist in pathology. His knowledge is important not merely in postmortem examinations but also in biopsies.

Biopsy means scientific examination of living tissue or a piece of living tissue a moment after it is removed.

The pathologist stands by, with microscope ready, to examine the specimen of tissue handed to him or her by the surgeon, and informs the surgeon in a matter of seconds, whether the tumor or other lesion is benign or malignant—whether it is comparatively harmless or cancerous.

This enables the surgeon to make the operation as conservative or as radical as may be necessary.

Thus the pathologist's biopsy is of inestimable value in modern surgery. A hospital without a pathologist is something less than an A-1 institution.

As long as we live millions of our cells per minute wear out and die (degeneration) and are replaced with new cells (regeneration). As the old almanac charlatans liked to tell the customers, the body completely renews itself in this way "every seven years"—seven being such a lucky number, as in the seven years' itch.

After the customers got out of the third grade, however, many of them learned that some tissues of the body renew themselves rapidly, others slowly, and it is ridiculous to guess the average time as seven years or seven months or seven days.

The multiplication, growth, development, formation or generation of new cells exceeds the rate at which cells wear out, degenerate and die up to the peak, or if you prefer, the plateau.

But somewhere along there between 30 and 50 the birth rate (of body cells) in the nerves, the bones, the glands, the muscles, every tissue in the body begins to decline, and when the birth rate falls to or below the level of the death rate the body or the nation carry it in the same pocket where he formerly kept his cigarettes. Then, when jittery, he can go through the same old motions of fishing in his pocket, except he now pulls out gum instead of cigarettes.

Tobacco, liquor and the eating habits all involve a lot of social elements. For when you get together with friends and they suggest a cigarette or a drink or a sandwich, you tend to follow suit as a matter of least resistance.

Thus, if you wish to lose weight, it is well to dine alone. At least don't eat "family style" where extra food is before you in the center of the table for re-fills.

A German scientist, Dr. Bayer, found that even a hen will respond to "company." When a hungry hen had eaten her fill and was standing motionless before the pile of food, Dr. Bayer placed a hungry hen beside her.

When it immediately started eating, the "filled" hen resumed pecking at the grain, too and kept on till she had consumed 60 per cent more.

Furthermore, we humans tend to eat more when we see more food on the table. Dr. Bayer discovered that a hungry hen would stop at 50 grams of food when she had been placed in front of a 100-gram pile of wheat.

But if she were set before a 200-gram pile, she would keep pecking away till she had gulped down 83 grams of wheat.

So don't sit in front of Thanksgiving banquet tables when you diet, for you will subconsciously adjust your capacity to match the available food in sight.

Dieters need tonic to their morale such as a quick weight loss. To do this sensibly and without use of dangerous drugs, employ my dehydrated diet while it is still cool weather.

Limit your total fluids to one full glass (8 oz.) on the first day. You may have two glasses on the second day and three glasses on the third thru the 10th days.

That plan dries up your saliva and gastric juice so you don't feel much hunger. Meanwhile, set your daily food intake at 800 calories for women and 1,200 for men.

After 10 days, you'll be down at least 10 lbs. Some of this is obviously fluid loss, but your morale is high, so you can then continue on a less drastic schedule until you attain your final goal.

Your stomach will meanwhile have shrunk, so it will register "full" on much less food.

Send for my bulletin "How to Lose 10 Lbs. in 10 Days," enclosing a stamped return envelope, plus a dime. It'll restore your romantic figure.

CIO to Push 'No Raid' Pact

Peace Agreement Seen as Necessary 1st Step Toward Merger

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIO-AFL "no raiding" agreement that has been kicked around for many months appeared likely to get a new shot in the arm at a special CIO Executive Board session today.

Advance word from CIO informants was that, barring an upset, the board members would decide to ask the AFL to go ahead at once with the labor peace plan negotiated last fall by the rival labor groups.

The agreement would bind a union in one federation against seeking to take over members already organized by a union in the other federation. The pact is regarded as a necessary first step toward any AFL-CIO merger.

The CIO, worried that not too many AFL unions would join the pact, decided last March to delay ratifying it. Later it learned that nearly 70 of the AFL's 110 unions were willing to go along, so today's Executive Board session was arranged to reconsider the March action.

There remained the possibility of some powerful opposition, however. The CIO steelworkers headed by David J. McDonald, one of the CIO's largest unions, may balk at approving. The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette reported yesterday that the steelworkers would balk.

McDonald had a private talk here 10 days ago with Dave Beck, president of the AFL Teamsters Union, one of the AFL groups which is opposing the plan, and with John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers.

Lewis is friendly with neither AFL President George Meany nor CIO President Walter Reuther, who are the prime movers behind the "no raid" pact.

Reuther has said virtually all the CIO unions have been ready for some time to go along. But with Beck's teamsters refusing, McDonald's steelworkers may object too.

Bus Strike Hits Pittsburgh Area

Trolley Operators Also Off Job as Union Asks 30 Cents Hour Hike

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh area commuters felt the first real impact of a day-old transit strike today as city officials braced themselves for a long traffic headache.

Mayor David L. Lawrence, who worked vainly to keep 2,700 trolley and bus operators on the job beyond the strike deadline yesterday morning, warned the more than two million residents of Pittsburgh's greater metropolitan area "the transportation curtailment may last months."

The operators, members of Division 85, AFL Amalgamated Assn. of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees, walked off the job after Pittsburgh Railways Co. rejected demands for a 30-cent hourly pay increase. It was the first mass transit strike here since 1924.

Emergency measures were made to handle the thousands of autos expected to jam the already harassed traffic lanes in the city's business district. Mayor Lawrence ordered parking regulations relaxed.

The company which runs about 3,000 trolleys and buses into the business district each day estimated it transports 200,000 workers and thousands more shoppers daily.

All business places, factories and offices planned to operate as usual—meaning thousands of employees, at least, would depend on autos to reach their jobs.

Attendants at parking lots said yesterday's business was no heavier than usual for a Sunday. Church attendance also was reported normal.

Heard in a Pontiac Church Sunday

Pastor Deeg Points Way to Harmony in Home Life

The Rev. James W. Deeg, preaching at Oakland Park Methodist Church Sunday, posed the question "Your home — is it part of the problem or part of the answer?" Oakland Park Methodist Church was founded Oct. 31, 1920, and originally was named St. James Methodist Church. The Rev. Mr. Deeg has been pastor there since the summer of 1952.

REV. JAMES W. DEEG

Aiming his message at the part the family plays in the Christian life, Pastor Deeg used as his scripture text Romans 12: 9-21. His sermon follows:

If there was ever a single word that could be given to characterize our world today it would be the word "troubled".

We may be without a lot of things in our lives, but trouble seems to be the one thing we never are without. It is common to the experience of the human race, and the words of Job simply echo the experiences of humanity. "Man that is born of a woman is of few days and full of trouble."

This is the way things appear to us many times. There are a lot of people like the woman who said, "I wake up in the morning and think of the awful things about to happen to us."

In this old world of ours, there are a lot of people who go to bed at night uncertain that they will see the light of another day.

Think of those gallant men at Dien Bein Phu, holding out until Friday of last week against terrific odds, not knowing whether each night would be their last. Think of their families, spending sleepless nights wondering what became of them.

Though there may be trouble everywhere, we are not left to our own devices. We have a guide-book which, if we will use it, will help us find our way.

We can start with trouble and end with hope. Like the Apostle Paul says, "Tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience; and experience hope." Our guide-book will enable us to do that.

Jesus said, "In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer for I have overcome the world."

How can we start with trouble and end with hope? This achievement can only come when we get back to the central fact of our faith — the revelation of the God of love in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Jesus was able to make this revelation because it was a part of his experience in the home of Mary and Joseph. He came out of a Godly home. In this home Jesus was taught thoroughly and reverently to know God. It must have been there that He saw love abound and transcend all obstacles and win great victories.

He must have found in that home that which the scriptures speak of as the perfect love which casts out fear. When He spoke of the loving care and concern of the heavenly Father, He was surely speaking of something that was a part of his own experience.

A lesson is learned when it is lived, and Jesus learned well because the lessons were lived with in the home. As He grew into manhood, He adopted those patterns of home life.

Love is not learned by rote, it must be lived and experienced. Our problem seems to be to put God as He is revealed in Jesus Christ into the home. If our homes and families are plagued with fear and trouble, we need to find that perfect love which casts out fear.

Our love needs to be made more perfect. This fact is quite evident we know from the breakdown of so many of our modern homes.

The secret of happiness is in the basic Christian concept of love. It is expressed for us in many ways in our guide book for living, the Bible.

The scripture lesson we are using today, if incorporated into the lives of our modern homes, would go a long way in casting out fear and relieving troubled minds and hearts, removing tensions, and contributing to the happiness of every member of the household.

Such happiness, being contagious, will spread over all the land; sorrow and trouble will flee away, and the world will come to know peace.

"Let love be genuine, hate what is evil, hold fast to what is good; love one another with brotherly affection; outdo one another in showing honor. . . . Serve the Lord, rejoice in your hope, be patient in tribulation, be constant in prayer."

If this be the way, is your home part of the problem or a part of the answer?

Couple Tell True Story of Their Forty Years

By BILLY ROSE

Last night, about 10:30, I dropped into the dining room of the Astor Hotel for a bite to eat and found the place almost empty.

Empty, that is, except for a group of people sitting around a table with a lot of flowers on it.

"What's going on over there?" I asked the waiter.

"A wedding anniversary," he said. "The gentleman at the head of the table is Mr. Schill—he's the president of a big research laboratory. Next to him is his wife, and the rest are children and grandchildren."

A minute later, as I pretended to study the menu, the chef himself wheeled in an enormous pink and white cake with lighted candles on it.

Mrs. Schill took a deep breath and, with the help of a couple of the youngsters, finally managed to blow the candles out. Everyone at the table laughed and applauded, and someone yelled, "Speech!"

The old lady got to her feet, looking a little teary. "Thanks, children," she said. "As you know, I'm not one for making speeches. All I can say is—well, I've been very happy ever since I married your father forty years ago."

She sat down and her husband stood up. It was obvious he was feeling no pain. Not wobbly, but mellow as you can get this side of wobbly.

"Friends, Romans, countrymen," Mr. Schill began. "For the past thirty-nine years, your mother and I have been celebrating our wedding anniversaries in this very room, and my speech has always been pretty much the same. How we fell in love the first time we met, and how I wouldn't give her a moment's peace until she promised to marry me."

"Well, children, it so happens that nothing could be further from the truth, and tonight, with your mother's permission, I'd like to set the record straight."

"As you've all heard many times, when Mother and I first started keeping company, I was working as handyman for an old Dutchman who had a laboratory in an East Side basement. My pay was eight dollars a week."

"On the other hand, your mother, I don't have to tell you, came from a well-to-do family. It goes without saying that I loved her, but I didn't like the prospect of her having to support me."

"So, being a proud sort of cuss, I decided one day to stop seeing your mother. But she'd have none of it. She used to phone me half a dozen times a day, and come around to get me when I was through working. And finally, when the date for our wedding was set, it was she who set it."

"Well, as the big day approached, I got a bad case of nerves. I knew her father wasn't too keen about his daughter marrying a nobody, who spent his spare time pattering with a gadget then called the wireless. In those days, and I can't say I blamed them, a lot of people thought Mr. Marconi's dings would turn out to be a dud."

Mr. Schill reached for his wine glass and took a sip.

"A couple of nights before the wedding," he went on, "I took your mother for a walk on Riverside Drive and told her I couldn't go through with the marriage. To my surprise, she didn't seem at all upset."

"You're entitled to change your mind," she said, "but I'm sure you wouldn't want to make me look silly before my friends and relatives. Instead of you jilting me, I'd appreciate it if you made it look as if I had jilted you."

"Her plan was a simple one. The wedding would proceed on schedule, except, at the last minute, the bride would fall to show up. That way, there could be no question about who had jilted whom."

"Naturally, I agreed, and on our wedding day I put on the striped pants and cutaway I had rented and went to the church. As the procession started, I stood at the altar with my best man. First came the flower girls in pink, and then rows and rows of bridesmaids in blue—there were sixteen of them."

"Well, you can guess the end of the story. As the organist played the wedding march, your mother, all white lace and satin, came down the aisle on her father's arm, and the smile on her face was as sly as the one on the Mona Lisa."

"There was nothing I could do. Had I made a bolt for it, they would have hung me from the organ pipes."

"That," concluded Mr. Schill, "is the story of how your mother, bless her treacherous little heart, double-crossed me forty years ago. And judging by the happy faces around this table, I would say it was the most successful bit of bamboozling since Eve got Adam to eat that apple."

The old gentleman sat down, and his wife got to her feet. "I'd like to propose a toast to Mr. Marconi, and tell you a little secret," she said.

"In 1929, when the market crashed, your father saved my wife, bless his soul, from going into bankruptcy. The money he lent him, and it was quite a lot, all came from a radio invention he dreamed up while he was working for the old Dutchman on the East Side."

The whole family rose to drink to Mr. Marconi, and a minute later the maitre d' came over to my table.

"I have a message from Mr. Schill," he told me. "He says you can stop hiding behind that menu, and he would like to send over a glass of champagne."

Creator of 'Lil Abner
Calls McCarthy a Poet

DURHAM, N. C. (AP)—Sen. McCarthy is a poet. That's what cartoonist Al Capp said last night to a Duke University audience here.

"He's a poet," said the creator of 'Lil Abner,' "he came into a world that isn't beautiful and he uses poetic license to try to create the beautifully ordered world of good guys and bad guys that he wants."

"He seems at his best when terrifying the helpless and naive," said Capp.

Four Are Killed in Jordan Clash

3 Israeli Soldiers Die, 2 Policemen Missing, One Farmer Dead

JERUSALEM (AP)—Three Israeli soldiers and a Jordan farmer were reported killed in clashes along the Israel-Jordan frontier yesterday. Two Israeli policemen were reported missing and believed dead. Jordan officials said their forces killed an officer and a private from the Jewish nation in repulsing an attack by a band of 90 Israelis on the Jordan village of Ilin, in the Hebron area.

The officials said the Israeli band fired on Jordan members of the U.N. Mixed Armistice Commission and its American chairman, U.S. Navy Cmdr. Elmo Hutchison, when they went to Ilin to investigate the incident.

The Jordanians also charged that Israelis kidnaped an Arab farmer and killed him near Zaboia village, in Jordan's northern sector.

Across the frontier, an Israeli spokesman said a force of armed Jordanians invaded Israeli territory near Khirbet Ayalin, in the south Judean mountains, wounded two Israeli policemen and took them into Jordan. Later, he said, a Jordan broadcast reported two Israelis — believed to be the policemen — had been found dead on the Jordan side of the frontier.

In another statement the Israeli army said raiders from Jordan attacked an army post in the same area late yesterday with mortars, killing one Israeli soldier and wounding two more before they were driven back across the frontier.

Jordan demanded a meeting of the Mixed Armistice Commission, which Israel is boycotting. The U.N. Security Council also is to meet Wednesday in New York to debate other recent Israeli-Jordan clashes.

KALAMAZOO (AP)—Language was just another barrier to be surmounted by three Latvian DP girls.

Now Western Michigan College has graduated Anna Salne, Rita Pokornis and Ausma Skerbele with high honors — though they didn't know a word of English when they came to America five years ago.

All three, one-time German DP camp inmates, are taking jobs on university faculties—Miss Salne at Michigan State, Miss Skerbele at Ohio State and Miss Pokornis at Wisconsin.

Mediators See End of Strike

Hope to Settle Wage Argument of Workers at Briggs Stadium

DETROIT (AP)—"We'll have ushers, groundskeepers and ticket takers if we have to call in all the wives and have the ballplayers remove the tarpaulin."

Walter O. (Spike) Briggs, Jr., president of the Detroit Baseball Co., made that statement yesterday in the face of a proposed picketing of Briggs Stadium Thursday night when the Detroit Tigers meet the New York Yankees.

Richard W. Cordtz, Detroit head of the AFL Building Service International Union, said the 145 members of the local which services Briggs stadium would picket to back up wage demands.

State mediators hoped for settlement today.

Queen and Duke Visit 'Rock'; Spain Protests

GIBRALTAR (AP)—The royal yacht Britannia brought Queen Elizabeth II and her family to "The Rock" today for their gala reception before they sail home to Britain.

Most of Gibraltar's 25,000 inhabitants, undampened by neighboring Spain's protests against the royal visit to the colony, crowded the harbor area to watch the Queen and the duke step ashore.

In Spanish Algeciras, the principal reaction reportedly was one of disappointment that the population could not cross over to greet the Queen. Generalissimo Franco's government banned border crossings during the visit to demonstrate official anger at Britain's refusal to recognize Spanish claims to Gibraltar.

A 21-gun salute from the British cruiser Glasgow echoed back from the Spanish hill as the Britannia passed through the breakwater.

For young Prince Charles and Princess Anne the biggest excitement came when the Britannia overshot her docking berth. The royal children watched at the afterdeck railing as the yacht moved astern into her proper position.

The children were not scheduled to come ashore during their parents' stop here until tomorrow.

Turkey Replies to Red Protest

Charges Russia Exerts Pressure to Bar Efforts at Collective Security

ANKARA, Turkey (U)—Turkey accused Russia today of exerting pressure by propaganda and other means to force countries to give up their efforts toward collective security.

The charge, in firm, energetic language, was in a note to Moscow which the semi-official Anatolia News agency released here. It replied to a Soviet protest two months ago against the recent Turkey-Pakistan alliance.

Pakistan last week rejected the same Soviet protest. The Karachi government said it was only exercising its sovereign right "to take all measures of self-defense."

Turkey denied the Russian accusations she was working against peace and added such accusations "are not only made by official and political means but also by propaganda and publications."

"It is clear," the Turkish note said, "the Soviet Union tries to hold Turkey and other nations working for peace and security and promotion of cooperation among nations as responsible for present world tension."

"No doubt the purpose behind the Soviet government action is to exert pressure on world opinion to force it to give up these efforts, which are aimed to strengthen collective security."

Norway Convicts 5 as Russian Spies

KIRKENES, Norway (U)—A Norwegian court has found five Norwegians guilty of spying for the Soviet Union. It sentenced four of them to jail terms ranging up to four years and ordered them to pay the government the 28,100 kroner (about $4,000) the Russians had paid them.

The fifth defendant could not be sentenced because of the statute of limitations.

All were convicted of spying on civilian and military installations, including air bases and defenses along the border between the Soviet Union and Norway's northern province of Finnmark.

The prosecution's star witness was Soviet Intelligence Lt. G. F. Pavlov, who gave himself up to Norway last summer and obtained political asylum.

The revenue system of the U. S. government is primarily based on six taxes: personal and corporation income; estates and employment taxes; and levies on liquor and tobacco and other excise brackets.

Air Reserves Are Asked to Appear at Blood Drive

FERNDALE — Members of the 960th Air Reserve Squadron are requested to be present at the Armed Forces blood drive which will replace the regular squadron meeting tonight.

Capt. Lee Kenney, squadron commander, urges all members to appear in uniform between 2 and 8 p.m. at Wilson High School, University and Paxton.

Norway Detects Foreign Planes

U. S. Craft Identified; Country Requests Allies to Respect Borders

OSLO, Norway (U)—Scandinavian countries have reported more mystery flights over their territory by foreign aircraft. One such plane was identified as American, the Norwegian said.

Lt. Gen. Finn Lambrechts said yesterday Norway would ask Allied nations to be sure their planes respect Norwegian territory. Violations, he said, could weaken his nation's defense.

Lambrechts said two unidentified planes were observed during the last few days in northern and central Norway. Commenting on similar flights over Finland and Sweden, he said that in at least one case the identity of the plane was established as American.

In Stockholm, the Swedish defense staff said several planes crossed into Sweden from Finland Saturday. They flew at a high altitude over Juoksengi. Finnish officials confirmed the Swedish report.

Similar flights over southern Sweden and the sound separating Denmark from Sweden were reported April 29.

A British imperial gallon is 25 per cent larger in liquid content than a standard American gallon measure.

Recreation Director Will Speak at Banquet

Dave Ewalt, director of the Pontiac Department of Parks and Recreation, will give an illustrated talk on "Getting Your Dollars Worth" at the annual Father and Son Banquet of the Whittier-Jefferson Junior High School PTA. The program, open to the public, will start 6:30 p.m. Thursday in the multi-purpose room of Jefferson Junior High. Tickets may be obtained from PTA members and at the door.

Hero Dog Entries Close on Wednesday

Persons wishing to nominate dogs for the annual "Hero Dog Award" at the Oakland County Kennel Club's show, May 23, must file their entries not later than Wednesday.

Information about the act of heroism performed by the animal, newspaper clippings concerning such acts, or other authentic facts should be addressed to Gordon Farham, Salem, Mich. Show will be held at the Detroit Artillery Armory, West Eight Mile road.

Announce New Way To Shrink Painful Piles

Find Healing Substance That Relieves Pain—Shrinks Hemorrhoids New York, N. Y. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to stop bleeding—without surgery. In case after case, pain was relieved promptly. And, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place. Most amazing of all—results were so thorough that sufferers made astonishing statements like "Piles have ceased to be a problem!"

The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne®)—discovery of a world-famous research institute. Now this new healing substance is offered in ointment form under the name of Preparation H. Ask for it at all drug stores—money back guarantee.

Weekend Toll Includes Boy Killed by Blades of Power Mower

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Three men fatally injured in an auto-truck smashup near Ann Arbor raised to 12 today Michigan's weekend traffic death toll.

A boy was killed when caught in the blades of a power lawnmower in Belleville, outside Detroit.

Victims of the auto-truck collision 4½ miles north of Ann Arbor on U.S. 23 were William Paul Dow, 42, and Joseph John Lynch, 61, both of Ann Arbor, and Everett Wade Coleman, 31, of Sidman, Pa.

The Washtenaw County Sheriff's Office said the three died as Dow smashed into the rear of an automobile-hauling truck, whose driver had stopped to give aid to another motorist who had slammed into a tree.

John Gareau, 25, of Roseville was killed and his four children injured seriously Saturday night in a two-car collision at Groesbeck Hwy. and 11-Mile Rd. outside Detroit.

Charles Halston, 11, of Detroit was killed Saturday when his bicycle collided with two cars on a Detroit street.

J. C. Terry, 20, of Paw Paw was killed Saturday in a traffic accident involving two cars and a truck on U.S. 12, eight miles west of Kalamazoo.

Mrs. Lelia Snell, 32, of Crystal Falls was fatally injured Saturday night when she lost control of her car on an Iron County road, 10 miles west of Crystal Falls.

Benjamin Tipton, 34, of Detroit, a pedestrian, was killed Saturday in a traffic accident on a Detroit street.

George Lakonen, 52, of Detroit was fatally injured in a two-car collision on a Detroit street early Saturday.

Sgt. Ransome E. Ward, 24, of St. Louis, Mo., was killed on Ford Road en route to Detroit from Willow Run Airport where he was stationed.

An unidentified pedestrian, about 65, was struck and killed by a car in Detroit's suburban Berkley. Police said he stepped into the path of the car.

John Greenwood Jr., 6, of Detroit's suburban Belleville was fatally injured Saturday when he got caught in the blades of a power lawnmower.

Harold W. Hinckley, 4, of Grandville was fatally injured Sunday while crossing U.S. 31 14 miles north of Manistee. State Police said the boy ran in front of a car driven by Merritt D. Bryant, 39, of Belding.

Police Hold Man on Dope Charge

Booked for investigation of illegal possession of narcotics, William Thomas, 29, of 70 Bagley St., faces further questioning today, according to Pontiac Police.

Sgt. Donny Ashley, head of the vice bureau, and Detective Raymond E. Meggit said they found 48 marijuana cigarettes and 17 capsules of heroine in Thomas' possession Saturday night.

Thomas was arrested in a south-side Pontiac bar after the two officers received an anonymous telephone tip. Ashley said the confiscated dope is worth about $100.

Ashley said Thomas would be arraigned in Municipal Court either late today or tomorrow.

Man Given Probation for Concealed Weapon

Ephraim Bentley, 25, of Saginaw, was placed on one year's probation today by Circuit Judge Frank L. Doty for carrying concealed weapons.

When Bentley was arrested by Pontiac Police last Jan. 29 for speeding a .32 revolver was found in the glove compartment of his car. He pleaded guilty April 26.

Community Service Class Set for May 12

Barney Hopkins, secretary-treasurer of Michigan CIO Council and Miss Madeleine Half, director of Pontiac Child Guidance Clinic, will speak at this week's "Know Your Community Services" class. The meeting, second in a series, is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at Local 594 Hall, 90 Mt. Clemens St. Hopkins will explain United Fund and tax-supported services local people can use and Miss Half will detail the Child Guidance Clinic's work. The "Community Services" classes, open to the public free of charge, are sponsored by Pontiac-Oakland County Industrial Union Council, CIO, and Pontiac Area United Fund. Anyone who wants to attend can call the CIO Council office, Federal 4-0579, for reservations or just "drop in" at the Wednesday session.

Steals $4.20 at School The Jayne Adams Grade School in Waterford Township was broken into Saturday night and $4.20 taken from a filing cabinet, according to Township Police Chief Frank Van Atta. Thieves entered by breaking out a section of window and unlocking it, Van Atta said.

2 Hurt as Car Upsets John C. Bollen, 27, of Detroit, and Sam A. Lacey, 27, of Arlington, Tex., were injured early today when their car overturned at West Maple and Haggerty Rds. in Commerce Township, Oakland County sheriff's deputies said. Both men were treated at Pontiac General Hospital for head cuts and bruises. Bollen told deputies he tried to avoid a car which ran a stop sign.

Couple Returns From 3-Week West Coast Vacation

Doing their bit to make ACE breakfast a success Saturday were Virginia Fowler of Pine Grove avenue, Dorothy Virtues of Lincoln avenue, Mrs. Melvin H. Johnson of Royal Oak and Josephine Stilwell of South Shirley avenue (left to right). Devon Gables was the setting for the annual May Breakfast.

70 Members, Guests Attend ACE Breakfast

Seventy members and guests attended the annual Association for Childhood Education May Breakfast served at Devon Gables Saturday morning.

Music was furnished by Mrs. Harold Laudenslager of Webster School. Mrs. Melvin Johnson, president of ACE, greeted the guests and introduced J. Cecil Cox, assistant superintendent of Pontiac Schools, and Gerald White, coordinator of elementary education.

Reports from delegates to the ACEI study conference were given, with Mrs. Thomas Dodson and Josephine Stilwell reporting. Mrs. Claire Hinkley, secretary-treasurer of MACE, and Elizabeth Halsey reported on the state convention.

Officers for 1954 who were introduced are Miss Stilwell, president; Mrs. Dodson, vice president; Nancy Prevette, recording secretary; Geradine Gibbs, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Alton Madden, treasurer, and Mrs. Melvin Johnson, adviser.

Arrangements were made for the breakfast by Dorothy Virtues, chairman; Mrs. Alford Rothweiler and Mrs. Everett Peterson, co-chairman. Mrs. N. R. Smith, Barbara Cullin, Mrs. Jean James and Virginia Fowler had charge of decorations.

Jean D. Eiter Speaks Nuptial Vows

Jean Dorothy Eiter spoke her vows with Norman Roger Ream in a ceremony performed Saturday morning at St. Michael Church.

For her wedding the bride, who is the daughter of Henry O. Eiter of Murphy avenue, chose a gown of Chantilly-type lace featuring a sweetheart neckline. A bouffant skirt of nylon tulle over taffeta and an apron-effect of Chantilly-type lace leading into a cathedral-length train were other features of the gown.

A shell of lace and seed pearls held her fingertip veil, and she carried a bouquet of white roses and carnations centered with a white orchid.

Mrs. Richard Molter was matron of honor and the bride's two sisters, Mrs. Leonard O. Ward and Joyce Eiter, served as other attendants. Flower girl was Linda Molter of Drayton Plains.

The matron of honor's gown was of yellow lace over taffeta with a bouffant skirt of nylon tulle. A matching lace jacket with a Peter Pan collar and a matching headpiece completed her costume.

Identically styled dresses of aqua were worn by the bridesmaids, and the flower girl wore a yellow taffeta dress and carried a basket of white rose petals.

Richard Molter was best man, and ushers were Jerry Comos and Glenn Templeton, both of Roseville. Larry Molter was ringbearer.

A reception was held at the Knights of Columbus Hall at 7:30 o'clock. For greeting guests, the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Hulda Ream of Grosse Pointe, chose a light blue dress and a corsage of pink roses.

For a trip to Florida the bride changed to a blue-gray suit with navy accessories and the white orchid corsage.

Sunset Club Host to Flint Old-Timers

Sunset Club members were hosts Thursday afternoon to 49 members of the Jolly Old-Timers Club of Flint.

A cooperative dinner was served at Wilson School and Charles Rawlins of Pontiac League of the Blind entertained with piano selections. Henry Griswold showed a display of hand carving and George Balch of the YMCA entertained with magic tricks.

Dale Stewart sang "The Robe of Calvary" for the group. On the refreshment committee for the afternoon's meeting were Mrs. Bertha Luke, chairman, Mrs. Marian Disbrow, Mrs. LeRoy Shafer and Mrs. Emma Sullenger.

Lines Have Houseguests

Stanley Kipps Are Home

Returning Sunday to their home on Doris road were the Stanley Kipps who spent three weeks on the West Coast. They drove out with a nephew, Forrest Meek, and while there they visited their son-in-law and daughter, Lt. (j.g.) and Mrs. J. H. Eichstedt at Long Beach, Calif.

They also called on other former Pontiac residents including the George Simpsons, the Burt Wardens and the Fred Bowers, all now living in California.

On their return trip they made stops in San Francisco and Salt Lake City.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Maynard of Dundee, Fla., former Pontiac residents, will be houseguests of the Paul Lines of Wards Point drive for the next few weeks.

Later in the summer the Maynards will travel to their cabin at Drummond Lake for the remainder of the season.

Adriana Scarpelli of Central avenue was on board the S.S. Independence when it docked recently in New York City.

Wilma Lois Campbell, daughter of the John L. Campbells of West Longfield avenue, is on the dean's list for the winter quarter at David Lipscomb College, Nashville, Tenn. She is a sophomore chemistry student at the college.

Among the 39 graduates to receive diplomas from Grace Hospital School of Nursing May 17 will be Lois M. Thurman, daughter of the Isaac Thurmans of North Shirley avenue, and Ruth J. Schrubba, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Schrubba of West Stratmore avenue.

Ann Zducic of West Walton boulevard and Joan Mazza of Oakland avenue are working on the production staff for Marygrove College's production of "Romeo and Juliet" to be given May 19 and 20.

Don't Keep Child's Love to Yourself

Direct His Young Emotions Outward Toward Others

By MURIEL LAWRENCE

The other day I sat in an advanced class at the New York School of Social Work. Our lesson was discussion of the case record of a 9-year-old child, frightened by a parent's desertion.

We came to a paragraph that read: "This afternoon Caroline told her social worker that she loved her. The worker replied that she liked Caroline, too; and that many other people she'd not yet met would also like her."

Our reading was interrupted by the teacher. He asked, "Why was it good for the worker to respond to Caroline's admission of love by telling her that others beside herself would like her?"

"Because it was reassuring?" queried a student.

"Not quite," the teacher said. "It was good because it is discipline for you not to monopolize a child's love. It is good not to localize his love in you personally. It is always good to suggest that his love will grow and enlarge as he grows to embrace many people."

I was impressed by this professor's counsel to his students. It seems so universally important that I am reporting it to parents.

Whether we are the social worker of a neglected child or the mother of one we cherish, it is always a temptation to take personal pride in his admission of affection.

This pride, overwhelming us, can lose us our chance to suggest his emotional powers will expand. It can trick us into treating his love as a completed thing, so that as we reach out our arms to him, we fail to say: "Oh, how glad I am that you love me. And how glad I am that all the other people who will be wanting you to love them, too."

So this is very important counsel, especially for mothers of little boys. If they want to encourage manliness, applying this counsel is one of the ways to do it. For a little boy who becomes suddenly conscious of loving his mother very much is, to a high degree, open and vulnerable to her influence.

If, to this emotionally exposed little son, she suggests her own joy at the prospect of sharing him with others, she has begun to free him to manhood. She's begun the work of sending him toward love for another woman without guilt or fear of hurting her.

To apply this testing counsel will be a triumph for us. It will mean that we have already accepted our proper place in our son's life—and that instead of centering his love upon us, we have the strength to turn it outward.

One trouble with the government is too much overhead and too much underhand.

Lad Doesn't Come Crawling to Her

Girl's 'Not Speaking' Game Backfires

By ELIZABETH WOODWARD

Some of you figure refusing to speak is about the worst punishment you can deal out. Withholding your recognition, turning your back, ignoring some boy you're cross with is supposed to crush him to the ground. It's supposed to show you're displeased. And you hope it will bring him crawling around for your forgiveness.

The funny thing is that the girl who "stops speaking" would be the first to make up. Once started on this little freeze-out game of hers, she knows no way to back-track and call it off.

She has to find a legitimate excuse — one that is convincing to her and obvious enough to him — to make speaking again make sense.

The "not speaking" game locks many a girl out. Makes her so unapproachable that a boy won't bother. Makes her so cool and aloof that he isn't interested. And the longer she keeps it up, the less chance there is of his ever speaking to her again.

This girl is beginning to find that out. She writes:

"Dear Miss Woodward: I met Joe in school last year and had three dates with him, then I didn't see him all summer.

"When school started again in the fall, he started going out of his way to be with me. He waited for me after school, waited for me between classes and at noon.

"His friends told me he liked me. And I liked him until he was seen with the girl he used to go steady with. I was shocked to hear about it! Though he had mentioned one time that he had gone steady before he met me, we had never discussed the subject in detail.

"But since he was seen with that girl I haven't spoken to him. He knows why I'm not speaking — but he has made no attempt to explain himself. I really need advice."

I strongly suspect you'll never get an explanation from him — for the simple reason that he may figure he owes you none. He may go farther — and consider your attitude completely unreasonable. He may figure that a girl who gets mad over nothing holds no charm for him.

How did you ever happen to mount that high horse anyway? Why did you take his being seen with an old friend of his as such an insult to you? What possible connection has it with you?

He has other friends, undoubtedly — girls to whom he is pleasant and polite when he sees them. Maybe he even has dates with them.

You don't mention that you were going steady with him. And even if you were, you don't mention giving him the benefit of the doubt. You were shocked! You thought you owned him. You didn't wait for an explanation before showing your wounded pride.

You got mad first — and now you're waiting for an explanation that may never come. Refusing to speak to him (even though he knows why) has locked you out in the cold.

And that's just where you may stay until you thaw yourself out!

Mary Margaret McBride Says:

No Steak on Her Menu--but She Still Has Hexitols

"Sympathetic" of Kansas City, Mo., writes, "I'd rather read a cookbook than a novel any time and so one of my very favorites of all your columns was your food dream the other day when you were so hungry."

"But, just now, sitting down to a dinner which includes fried chicken, mashed potatoes just the way you like them best—fluffy as a cloud—young asparagus with butter sauce, topped off with Boston cream pie. I suddenly began to worry about you and your diet."

"If I'm ever again to enjoy my own vittles without torments of conscience, I simply have to know that you're getting nourishment at least. So please tell me as soon as possible, what are you eating these days?"

What am I eating these days? Oh, Sympathetic, you'll be amazed. I've just finished some sorbitol and mannitol and if you never heard of them, I can tell you they are hexitols. Also I consume considerable gum arabic, glycerine, lecithin, purified edible cellulose, citric acid and vegetable gum.

Of course, there aren't the names you'd find on my daily menu if I had one printed, but they are listed on the wrappers of the various items I eat in an effort to fill without fattening. Other notations on these packages say, "No sugar, no shortening, made without salt."

Sometimes there's a phrase like this: "Non-nutritive artificial sweeteners to be used only by those who must restrict their intake of ordinary sweets." I keep wondering whether that is a warning or merely something inspired by the Pure Food and Drug Act.

In a simple little seasoning I often get all of these: Choline, potassium chloride, ammonium chloride and tricalcium phosphate. "Hardly any food value at all," triumphantly asserts the label on a coffee-flavored item high in favor with me just now. Another wrapper urges me to be sure that all my internal organs are functioning properly before I partake of what's inside.

My great favorite is a main dish made of Jerusalem artichokes that promises on the package to have three distinct flavors, first Brazil nut, then as you chew it, a kind of coconut taste, and finally as it goes down, celery!

Don't let anybody fool you, Sympathetic. I've read those reassuring pieces all about how the diet has never been so well-fed in his life and yet he's dropping 14 four pounds a week. He keeps telling you how he has learned to love his meat and vegetables without salt, his fruit without sugar.

But take it from me, he is just making the best of a bad bargain and turning a liability into money-making.

Well, I've lost 12 pounds, Sympathetic, allowing for the five I put back that time I wrote the column you're talking about and went on a food spree that lasted two days and two nights.

But I'm going on with my regime all right and don't mind what I said about sorbitol and mannitol. At least, I have them!

When you pull the dowel down, the rubber band snaps the cardboard and spins it away! Sandpaper your gun well, and you may want to give it a coat of stain.

Send 3 Weeks in Advance

First Come the Invitations

(Editor's Note: First of a series of seven articles by Emily Post covering all phases of wedding etiquette.)

By EMILY POST
Going to be married soon? Then you'll have lots to think about if you want your wedding to proceed smoothly.

Even before you plan your trousseau you should make up your invitation list so that you can get your order for the invitations to the engravers and have them mailed out well in advance of the great day.

Invitations should be sent out in the names of the bride's parents, assuming both are living or that a divorce has not taken place. In the latter case, the invitations are sent out in the name of the bride's mother.

The wording of the invitation where parents are living together reads:

Mr. and Mrs. John Abbot Doe request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter
Cynthia Anne
to
Mr. William Brown Smith
(etc., etc.)

Mr. William Brown Smith on Saturday, the twelfth of April at four o'clock
Trinity Church
Chicago, Illinois

In cases where father is not living, the first line of the invitation reads:

Mrs. John Abbot Doe (etc., etc.)
Or where a widower sends out the invitation:

Mr. John Abbot Doe (etc., etc.)
When a couple has no relatives or close friend to send out the invitations, they may send them in their own names thus:

The honor of your presence is requested at the marriage of Miss Cynthia Anne Doe
to
Mr. William Brown Smith
(etc., etc.)

In cases where a widow has remarried she sends an invitation to her daughter's wedding in her new name, but the invitation is worded:

Mr. and Mrs. John Jones Brown request the honor of your presence at the marriage of Mrs. Brown's daughter,
Cynthia Anne Doe
(etc., etc.)

One thing to remember is to send an invitation to the bridegroom's family. They will want to see what it looks like and it may be a treasured keepsake.

All invitations should be mailed at the same time, correctly three weeks in advance of the wedding.

Cigarette Case Lost by Woman

Hostess Wonders What to Do About Missing Valuable

By EMILY POST

An unhappy situation is described in the following letter: "I gave a large party at my house two days ago. The next day I received a telephone call from one of the guests telling me that she forgot her cigarette case at my house and asking if I had come across it."

"I told her that I had not but would look for it. I have searched high and low, but no trace of the cigarette case, and I can only imagine that one of the guests inadvertently picked it up and put it in her bag thinking it was hers, and that she perhaps has not yet discovered it."

"The cigarette case was quite a valuable one and I feel terrible about this. What am I supposed to do about it? Would it be proper to call my guests and ask if they had taken it by mistake?"

Answer: It would be entirely proper to phone your guests one by one and ask each if by chance she has found an extra cigarette case in her bag. Beyond this there is really nothing you can do.

Dear Mrs. Post: Is makeup in bad taste on members of the bereaved family? My father died recently and I understand my sister and I are being criticized for wearing lipstick to the funeral.

I can't see why it should be necessary to look like a ghost, which certainly would not lessen our sorrow. I would very much like to have your opinion of this.

Answer: So much makeup as to give an appearance of artificiality is really shocking when worn by one in deep mourning. To add a little color to the lips would not be wrong.

Dear Mrs. Post: How does one make friends in a new neighborhood? We're building a new house but don't know anyone around.

Answer: Beyond showing a readiness to be friendly when people greet you, or being accompanied by an engaging puppy, there is nothing to do but to try to be — and therefore look — happy!

"Very soon I will be sending out the invitations to my wedding and I would like to know how the second envelope is inserted into the mailing one."

You put it in so that the name on the inside envelope is seen right side up as it is lifted out of the mailing envelope.

"We have received an invitation to a wedding reception addressed Mr. and Mrs. John Jones and Family. There are five in the immediate family — mother, father, two daughters and one son. Will you please tell me how such an invitation is answered?"

If you know them formally, you write:
Mr. and Mrs. James Jones
Misses Mary and Alice Jones and Mr. John Jones accept with pleasure.

If you know them very well you would write: "The Joneses, all five, accept with pleasure."

Next: Showers, Luncheons

If you need leg flattery—

No tight pull over heavy upper leg. Choose the skirt, slit at sides for that totally relaxed approach to dressing.

Miss L. F.—Not a tense moment in play clothes this summer. They don't force, they don't squeeze the life out of you. They ease up at the waistline and definitely around the thighs to give leg beauty.

KIDNEY BEAN CASSEROLE
By Mrs. Leah Herveat

1 No. 2½ can kidney beans
1 cup cooked rice
1 No. 2½ can tomatoes
1 slice bacon
Green pepper
Salt and pepper
1 onion, chopped

Cook green pepper and onion in fat until onion is transparent. Add beans, rice, tomatoes and seasoning, simmer in frying pan for 20 minutes.

Pour in a greased casserole. Put strips of bacon on top and bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven.

Millinery Classes Have 'Gimmick'

By ANNE HEYWOOD

Whenever a woman wants to make money at home by teaching, she must be sure she has some specialized slant, something which makes her services doubly desirable.

For example, the other day I met a woman who teaches other women how to make hats.

Now, if that were all she did, she would probably run into difficulty getting enough pupils and making any money. But this woman has, so to speak, a "gimmick."

"Hats are the most important part of a costume," she told me earnestly, "but on top of that, they can be the making of your whole appearance."

"The right lines in a hat will minimize a too-long nose, or a fat round face, or a receding chin. You see, I have a much too big, squarish face. Because of that, it was almost impossible for me to find a decent hat."

"I went to the library one day and read all the books I could find on beauty, and on drawing and on design."

"By working out a formula I came to see exactly what lines would make my face seem a better shape. I really studied the subject, and pretty soon I was advising friends."

"I remember one woman whose thick neck and double chin made her miserable. Well, with exactly the right lines in her hat, she looked like a new woman."

"Naturally," she continued, "it was frequently hard to find the hats I wanted, ready-made. So I went to school and learned how to make hats."

"It wasn't easy, but I had such determination that I did manage to learn how. After all, it was a question of making hats myself or being stuck without the kind of hats I knew I needed. And vanity is a strong motivating power."

"Now I have two classes a week, right in my home, teaching women how to make hats that really suit them."

Missionary Is Speaker for WCTU

Incidents relating to her work as a missionary in the Belgian Congo were told by Mrs. Fred Ludwig to members of the Pontiac Federation of WCTU at the recent May Breakfast held in Central Methodist Church.

She said there is hope for converting heathens, and she cited examples where witch doctors have been converted to ministers. Mrs. Ludwig was introduced by Mrs. John Watkins, program director.

Mrs. Joseph Greece, 18th District WCTU Federation president, also spoke. She asked for a rededication for the temperance cause as "an organization of Christian women banded together for the protection of the home, the abolition of liquor traffic and the triumph of Christ's Golden Rule in custom and in law."

Mrs. A. D. Stimer greeted the guests and Mrs. L. G. Rowley led group singing accompanied by Mrs. John Venneman.

Mrs. Eleah Patten led the flag salute and Mrs. Frank Clemens announced a banquet to be held soon at Oakland Avenue United Presbyterian Church by Anna Gordon Unit.

Announcement was made of an opportunity to train for leadership in Christian temperance fields through a training school at Bay View. Dues paid by members go toward the training program and toward the world organization.

Israel's Birthday to Be Celebrated

Corinne E. Wright Wed

Palms and gladioli banked the altar of Central Methodist Church Saturday evening when Corinne E. Wright spoke her vows with Richard G. Ervin. The Rev. Milton H. Bank performed the service.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Roy B. Wright of Garland avenue, Sylvan Lake, and the late Mr. Wright. The George P. Ervins of Crescent drive are the bridegroom's parents.

For the 7:30, ceremony Corinne chose a gown of embroidered organdy over white tulle. Short sleeves, a portrait neckline and a wide tulle sash with streamers to the hem were highlights of the dress.

The full ballerina-length skirt was held out with a hoop. A small embroidered organdy bonnet held her illusion veil and she carried a bouquet of white roses, stephanotis and ivy.

Shirley Husted was maid of honor, and Evelyn Bochnig was bridesmaid. They were dressed in aqua and yellow organdy dresses, respectively, with matching organdy picture hats, and they carried French baskets of spring flowers with matching streamers.

Jerry Ervin was his brother's best man, and ushers were Mickey Bradley, Clarence Sproull and George Kimball.

The bride was escorted to the altar on the arm of her uncle, Clair Wright. Mrs. John Nicolls Jr. sang the bridal recital.

A reception in the church parlors followed the ceremony. Receiving the 200 guests, Mrs. Wright chose a gray silk shantung dress with white accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. Mrs. Ervin wore gray and white silk print with white accessories and a pink rose corsage.

For the wedding trip the bride changed to a navy linen suit with a red topper, navy accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Boy Falls Off Train, Loses Part of Leg

PORT HURON (U)—Seven-year-old Randall Clement, of Port Huron, lost part of his left leg Sunday when he slipped while playing on a moving freight train and fell under the wheels of a boxcar. Police credited Boy Scout David Schlemmer, 12, with saving the youngster's life. David heard Randall call for help and stopped the bleeding by applying pressure on an artery. Randall's leg was amputated just above the ankle by the wheel of the train.

J. Edgar Hoover Gets Rid of Politics in FBI, Makes Police Work Honorable

(Editor's Note: When he took over as acting director 20 years ago, J. Edgar Hoover found the FBI loaded with political hacks whose only qualification was friendship with a local politician. Here's the story of how he has raised it to the nation's law enforcement agency and a behind-the-scenes look at the way the FBI works, day to day.)

By DON WHITEHEAD
By The Associated Press
Copyright 1934

WASHINGTON (U)—J. Edgar Hoover's greatest pride on this, his 30th anniversary as FBI director, is this:

"I'm proudest of the fact that we've made law enforcement an honorable profession. In all my career that achievement has made me happiest."

"By observing civil rights, by eliminating the third degree and the evil practices that once existed, we have achieved a standing in the country of which I'm proud. And it's largely due to the character of our personnel."

Hoover said he is hopeful the FBI will be divorced for all time from partisan politics and that his own successor will come from FBI ranks.

Looking back over the stormy years of FBI development, Hoover said in one of his rare interviews: "I'm heartily in favor of promoting from within the bureau."

"When I took over the directorship in 1924, FBI agents held their jobs because of political ties. They were political appointees, and the only requirement was 'Do you have the endorsement of your committee?'"

"I stopped that. All my assistants and associates have come through the ranks. My feeling is that my successor, when the time comes, should be designated from the ranks. Not on any basis of seniority, but on ability."

"We have developed some fine executives within the FBI. You can't buy the kind of energy and devotion they've given to the bureau."

The general impression has grown through the years that the FBI is a one-man show, largely because the name J. Edgar Hoover has become linked inextricably with the name FBI. Hoover does have the final decisions, but in the background is a 10-man brain trust through which Hoover works in directing his fight against crime, espionage and subversion.

Each morning at 10:30 Hoover's 10 top aides gather in what is known as "the executive conference." Associate Director Clyde Tolson is chairman in the absence of Hoover. With him are Assistants to the Director L. V. Boardman and Louis B. Nichols, and the assistant directors and division chiefs.

Discussing this executive conference meeting, Hoover said: "I don't want yes-men. I must have the arguments for and against each question. I can't accept recommendations without reasons."

"We get everything out in the open. I will not stand for griping and grapevine gossiping. If anybody has got a gripe, I tell my people to go to someone who can do something about it or bring the gripe to me. I just won't have belly-aching behind the barn door."

Just what kind of a bureau did Hoover want to develop when he took over the directorship in 1924? What was his concept of FBI responsibilities?

"When I was a special assistant to the attorney general in the early '20s," he said, "I saw the defects in the evidence with which attorneys had to work. There was a need in the department for persons trained in the gathering of evidence."

"In our law schools we study subjects such as equity, evidence, procedure and codes. But I marvel at the lack of instruction on how to go out and build a case that will stand up in court."

"What I saw in 1919-20 was that cases were not built. Evidence was gathered haphazardly and with no continuity, although evidence is the basis for proving innocence or guilt."

"In the FBI, I tried to build on the basis of what you find in a large law office where one section deals with the trial, another with briefs, another with evidence, etc. After all, the Department of Justice is just a large law office for the American people and in the FBI we have the agency that gathers the facts."

"We don't try the case. We don't evaluate the evidence. We merely act as the service agency. 'I thought our agents should have legal training or be experienced in accounting, and that is our standard."

Those first years were ones of reorganization, building up a corps of agents trained in law and accounting, and establishing uniform rules of conduct and procedure."

Then came the gangster era—the wild rampage of gang rule, gang murders, kidnaping, bank robberies and reigns of terror by underworld mobs working with crooked politicians, crooked courts, crooked police officers."

The kidnaping of Charles A. Lindbergh Jr., stirred the nation. And then "Pretty Boy" Floyd, Vern Miller and Adam Richetti slaughtered four police officers in trying to free a pal, Frank Nash, from their custody. This was the bloody "Kansas City Massacre" of June 17, 1933. Ironically, the hoodlums killed Nash too in the wild shooting.

In the breakdown of local law enforcement, enraged citizens demanded action from the federal government. Congress in 1934 passed a series of crime bills which almost overnight changed the FBI from an unarmed force with no authority into a crime-fighting organization.

FBI men were authorized to carry arms and make arrests. It became a federal crime to kill a government agent. Laws were passed giving the FBI authority to go into action against kidnapers, extortionists, bank robbers, racketeers and criminals fleeing across state lines to avoid prosecution.

Hoover built up a giant master file of fingerprints, established a national crime laboratory for scientific analysis of crime clues. He started the National Police Academy, where police from all over the nation come to study FBI crime detection methods and the scientific means of gathering evidence. The facilities of the FBI were opened to all local law enforcement agencies.

By 1933, he reported that not a single organized crime gang was operating.

"I started the national academy to break down the feeling of jealousy and resentment toward the FBI men. In these classes, the men have come to know each other, to recognize their mutual problems and how best to solve them."

"Now we are able to work with men who speak the same language we speak."

"But I say this: A community gets no better law enforcement than it deserves. Once a group of Eastern businessmen came to me. They said they had raised money privately, quite a sum of money, and they wanted me to help them use it to improve law enforcement in their city."

"I told them to take their money and go home, and do the job themselves. I told them if they'd take off their coats and apply themselves, put the finger on venal politicians and put men into office who are dedicated to good public service, they'd get good law enforcement."

Cost of Painting Bridge Over Hudson $150,000

NEW YORK (U)—A crew of sure-footed painters have started work on the George Washington bridge, a job that will take them to girders 600 feet above the Hudson River.

The span, highest suspension bridge in the world, is 252 feet above the water even at its lowest points.

Cost of the project, which will take 50 painters about two years to finish, is estimated at $150,000, including $35,000 for 11,000 gallons of paint.

Largest medical bill payment ever made for Michigan people!

Blue Cross - Blue Shield pay out more dollars for hospital and doctor care, provide worry-free protection for more people in Michigan than all other kinds of medical bill protection combined.

Your Michigan Blue Cross - Blue Shield paid out $91,299,797 for subscribers in 1953. As of today the total paid out for hospital and doctor bills during the last 15 years is more than $400 million.

The most successful protection against hospital bills

Blue Cross is the most successful idea ever devised for protection against hospital bills. Non-profit, it is the only organization for hospital care officially approved by the American Hospital Association. Over 3,000,000 Michigan people have Blue Cross. Chances are, your neighbor has it. Talk it over with him—and see if he doesn't agree that there is no finer protection at any price!

Hospital Service Protection... the Blue Cross way

Blue Cross differs from other kinds of hospital protection, because it supplies service protection. This is important since you rarely know in advance how much a hospital bill will cost you. So you can't feel really safe with protection that limits you to $10, $15 or some other set amount per day.

When you become a member of a Blue Cross Group it is like becoming the "owner" of a wide range of hospital services in advance of need. Then, when you need hospital services... such as bed and board, expensive extras like oxygen, drugs and medicines, operating room, and others... these services are automatically yours. And this same protection holds for every enrolled member in your family. Blue Cross hospital service benefits are available in more than 200 Blue Cross participating hospitals in Michigan alone.

Doctor Bill Protection... the Blue Shield way

Paying doctor bills is different from paying hospital bills, because in almost every case, your doctor can tell you beforehand what his charge will be. The thing he can't tell you, however, is when you are going to need his services. So, against that need, Blue Shield offers a smart way to safeguard your savings... to take doctor bills in your stride.

Blue Shield offers two basic plans—one, a straight surgical plan, the other, a medical-surgical plan. Under either plan, Blue Shield pays generous, specific amounts directly to your doctor for thousands of surgical procedures, including maternity care. And in non-surgical cases, under the medical-surgical plan, Blue Shield also pays liberal amounts for your doctor's visits to you in the hospital. Often the doctor's full bill is covered.

The cost is low

For only pennies per day, Blue Cross - Blue Shield provide you with the most complete protection against hospital and medical bills it is possible to obtain. To help keep cost low, Blue Cross - Blue Shield do not pay for purely diagnostic treatment—or for procedures which can properly be done in a doctor's office... except emergency treatment as covered in the contracts. You, too, can help keep cost low by using Blue Cross - Blue Shield only when necessary.

There's no red tape!

When you have to use Blue Cross - Blue Shield, there are no claims to make... no long waits for payment. All you do is present your Identification Card to your hospital or doctor... and Blue Cross - Blue Shield pay them directly.

How to get Blue Cross - Blue Shield

Ask your employer or your union representative how you can get low-cost Group Enrollment. A company with as few as 5 employees may qualify as a group. Check your Farm Bureau or Grange. Write or phone your nearest Blue Cross - Blue Shield office.

Wilson Wins Strong Support in Capital in First Year

BY BEVERLY SMITH,

Washington Editor of The Saturday Evening Post
(Reprinted from the May 1st issue of The Saturday Evening Post and copyrighted 1954 by the Curtis Publishing Company.)

In these days of atomic weapons and transoceanic bombing planes, it might well be said that our lives are in the hands of a stocky, white-haired man named Charles Erwin Wilson, the Secretary of Defense. Whether our armed forces are strong enough (a) to deter any sane enemy from attacking us, and (b) to win the war if the Kremlin starts one—this must depend considerably on the judgment and ability of Secretary Wilson.

Since Americans have a life-or-death stake in this gentleman, they may like to know exactly what kind of a fellow he is. Yet even the careful newspaper reader and newscast fan must have a somewhat confused view of him.

Since coming to Washington, Wilson's reputation has been taken for a rollercoaster ride. In recent months his prestige has been rising steadily again, with Congress, with the press and with the military. President Eisenhower's faith in him remained high all along, though no doubt he is pleased that others are beginning to appreciate the quality of his Defense Secretary.

When Mr. Eisenhower, soon after his election, announced that he was appointing as his Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, president of General Motors, there was widespread public approval. It seemed most proper that the head of America's largest manufacturing corporation should tackle the problems of America's largest governmental department. Mr. Wilson's patriotism was applauded.

Here was a man at sixty-two, giving up irrevocably a job paying him over $600,000 a year, to take on, at modest Government salary, the really appalling task of running the Department of Defense.

This sunny climate of approval, soon after Wilson reached Washington, clouded into a series of chilling squalls. To mention a few: His initial reluctance to dispose of his GM stock, as the Senate confirming committee felt the law required, was put down to narrow selfishness, though some quite other motives were involved. As soon as he clearly understood the views of the committee, he complied with their every demand at heavy loss to himself and his family, but this point got little attention amid the general tut-tutting.

"What's Good for GM (And Vice Versa)"

In a story leaked from a closed committee session, he was quoted as saying, "What's good for General Motors is good for the country." He never said it—I will give the exact quotation later—but the sentence was broadcast nationwide as that of a man who would put his company ahead of his country.

When he found that the Air Force had $5,000,000,000 more than it could rationally spend in the ensuing year, he pulled the money back. Some Air Force enthusiasts jumped to the conclusion that this was an attempt to cut the very gizzard out of our air defenses. They spread the word that Wilson was "putting dollars ahead of our national security." (Not much is heard about this now from the Air Force, which is continuing to grow in strength and modernization.)

Meanwhile, throughout the armed services, many a droll story was told about Secretary Wilson's ignorance of military matters. When he visited a ship, camp or air base, it was reported, he asked the most elementary questions about all sorts of things.

If he failed to get an answer from the general or admiral in command, he pursued his questions down the line to such lowly beings as lieutenants and enlisted men. He was quite shameless, it seemed, about displaying his ignorance.

Each such incident was minor enough in itself. But taken together they began to erode and distort—in the politico-public mind at least—the reputation Wilson had built up in a lifetime. They seemed to show him as narrow, selfish, shortsighted, dollar-minded and not too bright. The professional gossips, always eager to give a man a boost—toward the skies—began to weep crocodile tears over Wilson's troubles and predict his imminent resignation.

Wilson met the chorus of criticism with an outwardly bold and cheerful front. He continued to work prodigiously hard, to ask his innumerable questions and to hold the interminable conferences which are a peculiar feature of his operating procedure. He consoled himself with the old saying, "If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen," and one of his favorite cartoons showed him smiling as he was burned at the stake.

But there was one person who knew he felt the strain. That was his wife, Jessie Ann Curtis Wilson. In the more than forty years of their happy marriage it had been her husband's custom, when he came home in the evening, to talk over with her some of the problems of the day's work. Now, returning to their Sheraton-Park apartment after ten or fifteen hours at the Pentagon, her husband was silent and preoccupied.

One evening she said to him, "Erwin, aren't you ever going to talk things over with me the way you used to do?"

"Yes, Jessie," he said. "Of course. As soon as I have something to talk about."

Secretary Begins to Climb On Top His Job

Slowly, steadily, Wilson's work began to show results. It became apparent even to skeptical old-timers in the Pentagon that Wilson was getting his almost impossible job under control; that he was at least well started in his attempt—the most ambitious ever made—to introduce clear policies, improved organization and efficient operations throughout the worldsprawling vastness of the armed services.

SECRETARY OF DEFENSE CHARLES E. WILSON

Gradually he resumed his custom of talking a bit when he returned home in the evening. The time came when he talked with such enthusiasm that Mrs. Wilson was tempted—friends aver—to say, "Mercy, Erwin, can't you talk about anything but your old Defense Department?"

By November he was telling a little story about his own difficulties. A senator, he said, was asking a young General Motors executive about what kind of a new car to buy. The GM man suggested that he try one with automatic transmission.

Said the senator, "I've never had one like that. When there is no clutch pedal, where do I put my left foot?"

Said the General Motors man, "Why, senator, just put it in your mouth, like my former boss always does."

Washington Learns About Big Executive

Wilson's troubles were partly due to the fact that he did not understand Washington. Even more, perhaps, they were due to the fact that Washington did not understand him. He was the victim of a misconception. Politics, press and Pentagonians along the Potomac, never having seen anything precisely like C. E. Wilson, had formed a sort of preconceived picture of what a "big business executive" must be like.

According to this popular stereotype, such a man thinks only in terms of dollars; he is a high-pressure operator; his time is money and you are lucky if he allows you fifty seconds to state your views. He speaks incisively, makes lightning-quick decisions and snaps out orders so fast that his galloping staff of yes men can hardly keep up with him.

Maybe there are such business executives—it seems to me I've seen them in the movies—but Wilson is not one of them. He flunks out on all the specifications. He considers dollars important as one form of measuring rod, but his idea of good organization is people working well together toward objectives they understand—once you achieve that, the problem of dollars is relatively simple. He is not a high-pressure but rather a low-pressure or slow-pressure man who achieves his ends by patience and persistence. It is true he has great "drive," but it is the drive of a distance runner rather than a sprinter.

If his time is money, he is apparently unaware of it. If your conversation develops interesting new facts and ideas, he will talk with you all day and half the night—dinner and other engagements forgotten. Recently two stalwart young officers tottered forth from such a session.

Said the senator, "I've never had one like that. When there is no clutch pedal, where do I put my left foot?"

Doesn't Seem to Need Either Food or Sleep

"That Mr. Wilson," said one plaintively, "he doesn't seem to get hungry like other people."

"No," said the other, "or tired or sleepy either."

His speech is not normally incisive, but exploratory. He likes to talk back and forth, in and out, and all around a subject. Eventually he fences it in with a clarity and accuracy beyond misunderstanding, but in the course of his explorations he may drop many a tentative sentence which, plucked later from its context, will give a quite false idea of his meaning.

In ordinary conversation such sentences are disregarded; in the watchful glare of Washington publicity they have given Wilson the foot-swallower label.

Before I forget it, let's try to clear up that famous "What's good for General Motors" statement. For more than a decade Wilson has been saying, "What's good for our country is good for General Motors."

It was widely hailed as an enlightened attitude for the head of a great corporation. Came January 15, 1953, and Wilson was appearing before a closed session of the Senate Armed Services Committee considering his confirmation as Secretary of Defense. Senator Hendrickson, of New Jersey, asked—I quote from the printed record—"... if a situation did arise where you had to make a decision extremely adverse... to the company, in the interests of the United States Government, could you make that decision?"

Replied Wilson, "Yes, sir; I could. I cannot conceive of one because for years I thought what was good for our country was good for General Motors. And vice versa."

As you see, Wilson was going fine until, through carelessness or just to round out the sentence, he dropped in those three ambiguous little words, "and vice versa." They might be interpreted "and what is bad for our country is bad for General Motors."

But the senator present—not Hendrickson—chose to interpret them otherwise and, shortly after the "closed" session adjourned, was gleefully spreading the word that Wilson said, "What's good for General Motors is good for the country." To this day, throughout America, otherwise well-informed people believe Wilson actually said that. And to this day, Wilson, whenever he says "vice versa," flinches, smiles ruefully, and says, "Wait—I better watch that vice versa."

New Secretary Not Given to Snap Replies

Returning to Wilson's failure to conform to Washington's preconceived stereotype, he does not make "lightning-quick" decisions. He can make a fast decision in a crisis but, time permitting, he explores a problem with an exhaustive and almost exasperating thoroughness. If the decision is a fundamental one, the process may take days or weeks or months.

He calls in all the important people concerned; he calls in others, however obscure, who may have new facts and ideas on the subject. Questions, suggestions, discussions go on seemingly without end. From time to time, Wilson will shift position and advocate an opposite view, just to test the arguments; this is embarrassing to any yes man who may be present.

"Those marathon conferences of Wilson's—we used to call them 'C. E.'s World Tours,'" I was told by one of Wilson's old colleagues in Detroit. "When I first sat in on them I thought they were a damn waste of time. I would say to myself, 'Why doesn't he cut the gab and tell us what to do?' It took me quite a while before the practical results taught me what he was driving at."

"From these discussions Wilson gets not only all the main facts but all the pros and cons, the ramifications and the booby traps in a complex problem."

"So does everybody else who sits in. I guess it is Wilson who finally leads the way to the decision, but when the decision is reached, all those present feel it is their decision. Having participated in the solution, they know all the reasons for and against it. They can explain it to their subordinates all the way down the line."

"The decision isn't just words written on a piece of paper—it's a clear line of thought in their own minds. Therefore they can make it work, the whole organization can make it work."

Understanding "New Look" in U.S. Defense

"Of course, every executive has his own methods. I've known some of the bing-bing, snap-snap boys who are very good. Maybe they get action quicker than Wilson. His way takes more time. It takes Wilson's kind of nerves, patience and mental capacity. It takes skill. I tell you, to keep those discussions from sidetracking into a bum argument or a bull session."

"But for solid results, for clear long-range policies, for getting a whole big organization pulling together in the right direction, I've never seen anybody up to Wilson."

Finally, as must be clear from the above, Wilson is not a man who barks out a drumfire of orders. If anything, he gives too few of them. The military, long trained to depend on specific orders—preferably in quadruplicate—are sometimes uneasy under Wilson's looser, persuasive rein. At General Motors, even an oral conference decision would flow smoothly down the organization line. At the Pentagon such decision, lacking the customary paucity of paper work, is likely to drift to a stop among cautious colonels in the middle echelons.

In fifteen months Wilson's work has modified Washington's original quaint stereotyped picture of him. But no very clear picture has emerged to replace it in the public mind, and some misapprehensions remain.

Maybe this is a good time to take a careful "new look" at this man upon whom our safety so largely depends. If we can understand him better as a person it may help—more than charts and statistics—to grasp what he is trying to do at the Pentagon, and what his so-called "new look" means in our national defenses.

Wilson Started Life in Engineering Job

It may help to remember that he did not start out as a businessman at all. His education, the first ten formative years of his manhood, were devoted to his profession as an electrical engineer, and he was a brilliant one.

He still has the mind of an engineer, a student, a technician. He has the intense concentration of the scientist, and sometimes the absent-mindedness. Wilson was past thirty before it was discovered that he had, besides these scientific-technical gifts, a high talent for administration and business management. The combination is rare. It carried him to the pinnacle of America's manufacturing industry.

The advent of atomic and electronic weaponry has made the Defense Department, beyond question, the most highly technical organization in the world. Consequently this lesser-known side of Wilson—his technical and technological insights—may well prove as important to our defenses as his executive ability, which he calls the ability "to get people working well together."

Charles Erwin Wilson was born on July 18, 1890, in the little town of Minerva, Ohio. Incidentally, about a dozen weeks later, a child named Dwight Eisenhower was born in the little town of Denison, Texas. Erwin's father, Thomas E. Wilson, was principal of the Minerva school, where his mother had also been a teacher. (Wilson's family, and close family friends, have always called him Erwin.)

(His old friends in the automobile industry call him C. E. His newer friends in Washington call him Charlie.)

Defense Secretary Began Life Humbly

Wilson, the auto man, grew up among the simplicities of the horse-and-buggy age. One of his earliest recollections is of sitting in a tin tub with his baby brother, while his mother carried water from the pump on the porch and the kettle on the stove. The house was lit by oil lamps, which Erwin later had the chore of filling and trimming.

He never saw a horseless carriage until he was fourteen, when an Oldsmobile chugged through town. He and the other boys raced along after it and, as he remembers, "I could practically keep up with it."

Wilson's people on his father's side were mostly farmers; on his mother's side blacksmiths, carpenters and storekeepers.

His great-grandfather Wilson, a farmer, lived to be ninety-eight, when he caught pneumonia from shucking corn all day in a cold rain.

Wilson himself has always been interested in farming, especially on the scientific side, and in the selective breeding of dairy cattle.

On his farm in Michigan he and his son, Edward, have worked out a careful long-range project to develop, by cross breeding of Sindi Brahmas and Ayrshires, a dairy animal which can thrive and produce well in hot climates. An incident here shows how Wilson tackles a subject.

"When we first got started on this project," Ed recalls, "I used to enjoy talking over the simpler problems of genetics with my father. One day when he was going off on a trip I bought him a big, learned tome on the subject. When he got back, the fun was gone—he knew so darned much about genetics that I couldn't hold up my end of the conversation."

Son Ed Speaks Up to President Eisenhower

Of course Ed, like the other Wilson sons and daughters, is prejudiced in his father's favor. At a gathering soon after the election Ed was introduced to General Eisenhower. "General," he said, "I think you are the second-best-qualified man in the country for your new job."

Eisenhower, after a quizzical moment, glanced across the room at the elder Wilson, smiled broadly and said, "I see what you mean."

During the campaign Ed had been an active leader in the Michigan pro-Eisenhower forces. Later, when Wilson was appointed Secretary of Defense, Ed joshed his father about "riding into office on my coattails."

(If I seem to be roaming around a bit, remember that I'm trying to follow Wilson's own exploratory methods.)

As a boy in small-town Ohio, Charles E. Wilson was taught many a lesson by his schoolteacher parents.

The three he remembers best are these: (1) Education is not an unpleasant duty, but an opportunity; (2) Work is a normal part of life; and (3) It is always worth making a special effort to get along with people. Erwin was also a great favorite with his Quaker grandmother, though the old lady would often scold him, saying, "Thee hears, but thee does not heed."

Great Concentration Part of His Makeup

Wilson sometimes shows this trait today, yea, even unto senators or generals, who may put it down to indifference or arrogance. His friends attribute it to his occasional intense concentration.

When Wilson is hot on the trail of an elusive idea, they say, you couldn't snap him out of it with a baseball bat. They also claim that he hears you, automatically files your remark in his mind and, an hour or a day later, will come up with a closely reasoned answer.

If senator or general has departed in a dudgeon, however, he may miss this happy ending. Regular reporters at the Pentagon have learned to allow for this habit of Mr. Wilson's. "Give him time," they caution a newcomer, "and you will get your answer."

When Erwin was 13—the Wilsons were now living in Mineral City, Ohio—he was stricken so heavily with typhoid fever that his life was despaired of. His Quaker grandmother hurried to the Wilson home to nurse him. During his long convalescence this religious old lady struck a bargain with the boy. If he would read the Bible through, every word, she would then teach him to play cards. In the following weeks Erwin read the Bible from cover to cover, not missing a single beget. Then grandma, true to her word, taught him to play pinocle and euchre.

Had Early Interest in All Mechanics

From the beginning, the boy was fascinated by everything mechanical, and he was lucky in having neighbors to abet his eager curiosity. The blacksmith let him work the bellows and hand him the tongs.

A schoolmate's father, a section hand, let the boys work the hand-car on a siding. He lived right next door to two locomotive engineers. Charlie Diebolt ran the passenger locomotive to Cleveland and Bill Diebolt ran the freight. Erwin's blue eyes gleamed with excitement as these kindly men explained the new automatic couplings or the new air brakes which could hold a train even if the grade coming down from Sandville.

They even let him—moments of glory!—ride a way with them in the locomotive cab. (Look out, old Iron Horse—some day that boy's factories will make Diesel electric which will run you ragged.)

Another schoolmate's father was a coal miner. Sometimes he let the boys come to the mine and help him load coal, which they considered a privilege. By now a little power plant had been built in Mineral City, bringing electric light, running water and modern plumbing. Erwin "hung out" a lot at the power plant, trying to learn what electricity was and how the old Brush generator worked.

He was allowed to reach out his hand and "take the static from the belt," and sometimes to take a turn at stoking the boiler.

"I don't know whether they let kids do things like that nowadays," says Wilson. "I suppose it's considered too dangerous. But it was certainly a fine thing for me. It gave me the feel of how things work."

Wilson Graduates From H.S. at Sixteen

When Wilson was in high school his family moved again, this time to the outskirts of Pittsburgh. He graduated from Bellevue High and, just turned sixteen—he had skipped a couple of grades in school—went on to study at Carnegie Tech, Pittsburgh. (Continued on Page 18, Col. 1)

Prestige of Defense Secretary Continues Steady Rise

burgh's still new but already renowned engineering school.
By living at home he could do this at modest expense, though it meant three hours a day on the streetcars. He helped out by working in the summer at twelve cents an hour with a company making filament lamps.

He completed Tech's tough electrical-engineering course in three years, graduating among the top two or three in the class. He was not quite nineteen years old. Whether because of his youth or because he was reputed to do integral calculus in his head, his nickname was "Wizard."

In those days Westinghouse Electric used to search out star graduates of the top engineering schools and offer them jobs as student engineer apprentices. Young Wilson was one of those so chosen. He went to work for Westinghouse in July of 1909 at eighteen cents an hour, and boarded in Wilkesburg, Pennsylvania. The house where he boarded later made a great change in his life, for his landlady's daughter had a friend named Jessie Ann Curtis.

Wilson was immediately smitten by Jessie's beauty, charm and intelligence. The fact that she had a job—unusual for young ladies in those days—as secretary to three physicians, added to his admiration for her skill and gumption. First thing you know they were engaged, though they had to put off the marriage for eighteen months so they could save up enough for house furnishings.

Marries Jess Curtis on $80 a Month Job

"I had to save enough not only for my trousseau," Mrs. Wilson recalls, "but for sheets, pillowcases and things like that. By the summer of 1912 Erwin had been raised to eighty dollars a month and we thought we could make a go of it." They were married in September.

Money was not plentiful, however, and there was a close race between Wilson's salary raises and additions to the family. "We had to think twice before we went to the movies, even when the nickelodeon was really a nickel," Mrs. Wilson says. The young couple kept a garden and a large flock of chickens, not only for the table but for sale in the market. The time came when Mrs. Wilson hated the sight of a chicken, whether in the farmyard or on the table.

When her husband got his next raise she took a firm stand. "Erwin," she declared, "I can't take care of the children and the chickens too." The chickens went.

Though Wilson's salary was still modest, he had begun to attract the attention of the higher-ups at Westinghouse. While still working in the shops he had shown a rare talent for simplifying processes and improving equipment design. One day he was summoned, in his greasy overalls, to the desk of the great B. G. Lamme, chief engineer at Westinghouse, who was ranked by many with Steinmetz as an electrical genius. There sat the mustachioed Lamme, in his shirt sleeves, on his head the tall derby hat he always wore in working hours as a kind of badge of authority.

Becomes Assistant to Famous Engineer

"Young man," he said, "how would you like to sit across the desk there and help me?" Wilson was overwhelmed, but not too overwhelmed to grab the offer right on the fly. He knew how great a privilege it was for any engineer to work with Lamme.

Wilson's two years as junior assistant to Lamme were invaluable to him. The older man was not only a genius as an inventor, research man and designer, he had a wide-ranging mind in many fields. George Westinghouse had had the bold—some said radical—idea of reducing the customary industrial work week from sixty hours to fifty-four.

This meant that the lucky lads at Westinghouse, after ten hours a day from Monday through Friday, and four hours Saturday morning, had Saturday afternoons off. ("The new leisure.")

As noon approached on Saturday, Mr. Lamme, with a ceremonial gesture, would remove his derby hat and plunk it down on the desk. This meant that the work week was over and he was ready for general conversation: whether about the engineering problems of building the pyramids, or the exciting future possibilities of radio transmission, or the many a slip between the cup (of research) and the lip (of production), or the puzzling new organizational problems of a big technical outfit.

Young Wilson Begins to Follow Automobile

In some ways Wilson could help his preceptor. While Steinmetz approached his goals via mathematics, Lamme preferred to proceed experimentally and graphically. When Lamme had developed his concept, he found that Wilson could translate it into mathematical formulas, thus making it more comprehensible to the engineers who had to work with it.

Also Wilson, who shared Lamme's intense interest in improved design, helped him set up a course in design for younger engineers, serving as a sort of "assistant professor" in design. Meanwhile Wilson was doing some designing of his own. In 1912—the year he was married—he designed the first automobile-starting motors made by Westinghouse. He became more and more interested in the automotive side, and in 1916 was put in charge of all Westinghouse automobile-electrical-equipment engineering.

When World War I came along, Wilson was offered a captaincy in the Army. In spite of his growing family, he wanted to take it, but Westinghouse raised a fuss. Wilson's special skills, they declared, were too important to the war effort to be spared.

Accordingly the company sent him to Washington on a series of special jobs for the Navy, the Army and the fledgling Air Corps.

He designed and developed radio generators and dynamotors for the Army and Navy, a primitive crystal set, granddaddy of the "walkie-talkie" for the infantry, and a little generator to stick on the tail wing of a 1918 airplane.

He designed the electrical equipment for the Army's "B" truck. Wilson and his work here were watched with special attention by O. F. Conklin, an executive of Remy Electric, which was a subsidiary in the recently organized General Motors. Conklin was the man who later persuaded Wilson to go to GM. Thus Wilson's first tasks in the national defense led him toward GM, just as his achievements at GM eventually led him back to the Department of Defense.

Has Offer Tripling $250 a Month Salary

Soon after the war, Conklin came through Pittsburgh and sent word that he wanted to see Wilson about a big new job. Wilson wasn't interested; said he wouldn't even talk to Conklin; but Mrs. Wilson insisted it was only fair to hear what Conklin had to say. Grumbling, Wilson went into Pittsburgh to see Conklin. At this time Wilson was making $250 a month.

Conklin more than tripled the ante, and offered Wilson the job of chief engineer and sales manager of Remy's auto division. Wilson said he would think it over. The money tempted him, but he liked Westinghouse and knew he was on the way up. What finally swayed him was that Westinghouse decided to move their automotive-equipment branch to an Eastern city.

If he had to move anyway, Wilson preferred to move toward Detroit. So, in the spring of 1919, Wilson regretfully took leave of Westinghouse and Mr. Lamme, and moved with his family to Detroit.

A curious postscript on Lamme's judgment, and on the qualities of the pre-General Motors Wilson, came to light while Wilson was preparing this article. I was talking to a former Westinghouse executive. He said that many years after Lamme's death, in 1924, an old document was discovered in the company's files. It was a long confidential memorandum written by Lamme in the spring of 1918—a painstakingly detailed attempt to estimate the comparative abilities of forty-eight of the brilliant young engineers who had worked under his tutelage over a period of ten years.

One by one, he rated each of them on analytical ability, initiative, originality and resourcefulness, executive ability, accuracy and reliability, and personality.

Then he toted up each man's composite score. (On my promise to draw no invidious comparisons among these men, many of whom are now eminent in the industrial world, I was allowed to see a copy of this remarkable document.) Among the forty-eight, Wilson's score was top. Considering how things have turned out, old Mr. Lamme's 1918 form book shows him as a pretty good handicapper in the ability sweepstakes. And he was far ahead of the crowd in spotting Wilson's executive ability.

Things Don't Go Too Well Around Detroit

In Detroit, Wilson did not find things as rosy as he had expected. Remy Electric, a struggling subsidiary, was having its troubles. It was something of a stepchild in the General Motors family. As sales manager, Wilson found himself trying to sell a line of products he was not satisfied with; as chief engineer he could not do much about this from his Detroit office, because the Remy factory was down in Anderson, Indiana.

It was decided he could do more good if he lived in Anderson. When he came home and told Mrs. Wilson they were moving again, she rebelled. She liked Detroit. She wasn't going to move to some strange little town in Indiana. Absolutely not.

At this point, Wilson, who was perhaps not entirely happy about his new job, lost his temper.

"It was the only time I ever saw him really angry," says Mrs. Wilson, "and at me! He turned white and shook his fist right at me and he said, 'Young woman, where I go, you go!'" It was some time before the frightened Jessie could summon a smile to calm the storm and ask sweetly about travel arrangements.

At Anderson, Wilson went into the factory and began one of his thorough explorations. He found that the products, while of good quality, were not well designed for mass production; too many kinds of machine tools were required; lacking a smooth flow of ma-

FAMILIAR POSE—Secretary Wilson illustrates a point in a pose that has become familiar to all who terials, inventories piled up wastefully and lopsidedly. The company had good men, but they were working at cross-purposes.

Wilson Encounters Resistance at Remy

At Westinghouse, Wilson had been the fair-haired boy. At Remy it was different. He was "the stranger who comes in to change things." It was his first encounter with this deep-seated human resistance to change.

He was to encounter it in other places later on, including the Defense Department. As he pushed ahead with radical new designs at Remy, even Conklin seemed to cool off toward him.

Then came the sharp business slump of 1920-21. Why, it was asked, try to rebuild the ship in a storm? Wilson plugged along with his changes, but it was a tough winter for the family. The children all got whooping cough and Wilson caught it.

Another child was on the way. Money was so tight that Wilson's salary was not paid for many weeks. He did not tell Jessie, but went secretly to the bank and borrowed money to keep going. He was heartened when the banker said, "Your face is good enough security for me."

"For quite a while there," one of his old Remy friends recalls, "C.E. and I never knew whether we'd have a job the next day."

Jim Mooney Assists Wilson in Dark Hour

In those days, too, Wilson came glumly home. Sometimes he would wonder whether anybody understood what he was trying to do. Somebody, his wife would assure him, must be watching his work. Apparently she was right. Detroit sent down one of their best executives and engineers, J. D. Mooney, who was later to head General Motors overseas operations. Mooney studied the situation and gave Wilson a free rein.

With Wilson as factory manager, the new designs began rolling nicely, and sales were no longer a problem. In 1925 Wilson was made general manager of Remy. The next year Delco, another electrical company, in Dayton, Ohio, was joined with Remy.

Wilson became president and general manager of the Delco-Remy Corporation, which then had about 12,000 employees.

Wilson devised a plan by which, through consolidation of all ignition work in Anderson, $5,000,000 a year could be saved. The trouble with it was that, if done suddenly, it would leave a skilled-working force of several thousand in Dayton without work.

Wilson wanted to save the $5,000,000, but not at any such human cost. He would not move work out of Dayton until he could move in new industries to take up the slack. In effect, he created two new industries. The first of these was the mass production of fractional-horsepower electric motors.

These are the useful little gnomes that do so much work around the house, in the refrigerator, the washing machine, the oil burner, and so forth; and there are hundreds of them in one of our modern bomber planes. These had hitherto been made on a job-lot basis.

Next, Wilson acquired the rights to the Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers. These had hitherto been a costly fancy item for motorcars.

With mass production, Wilson got costs down so that the shock absorbers became standard equipment, first on Buicks and then quickly on other makes. As these two industries thrived, the working force in Dayton was not merely retained but grew in size.

Now Wilson Is Made G.M. Vice President

By 1928 this series of solid successes had made Wilson a marked man in General Motors. He was made a vice president of the parent company and moved to Detroit to head the entire group of accessory companies, and to acquire new companies as advisable.

In the next two or three years this work gave him an intimate knowledge of the people and organizational structures of an extraordinary variety of companies. From this he learned that organization cannot follow rigid rules; it must be adapted to people and circumstances. Recently, at the Pentagon, reporters asked Secretary Wilson whether Army, Navy and Air Force should each have the same organization.

He said, "That is what I'd like to look into carefully. In my experience at organization, there's not necessarily any perfect way that a thing has to be done. It is always a compromise between what's been going on in the past, what seems to be the ideal way of doing it, and the personalities and capabilities of the people that are available."

That is a fair sample of his thinking, and a refutation of the idea that he expects to "make the armed services over into an image of General Motors."

Wilson Saves Run on His Bank in Anderson

Recently in Detroit I learned of a revealing incident from Wilson's past. One afternoon in the early 1930's, as the big depression deepened, Wilson, in Detroit, received a telephone call from his friend, Linfield Myers, in Anderson. Mr. Myers, head of a bank in Anderson of which Wilson was still a director, said there was reason to fear a fatal run on the bank in the morning.

Without hesitation Wilson took all of his GM stock, of which he had now acquired a comfortable holding, endorsed it and put it at Myers' disposal with no strings attached.

Next morning the run started like a house afire, but when word got around that C. E. Wilson had thrown practically his entire savings into the breach, the run stopped.

"Things like that," said my informant, "put Wilson's integrity simply beyond any question. As we say out here, 'You can always give C. E. the last count on your money.' That may explain why Wilson was irritated at first, or maybe bewildered, when senators seemed to imply that he might betray his country's interests because of some stock he held."

Knudsen Assigns Him G.M. Labor Relations

In 1937 C. E. Wilson was handed one of the toughest problems of his life—one which was to occupy much of his energy and thought for the next fifteen years. The sit-down strikes and labor wars had stormed into Detroit, and auto executives were baffled by the new phenomenon. One day Wilson was called in by Big Bill Knudsen, then president of GM.

"You take care of this labor business," said the Grand Old Dane, who perhaps distrusted his own hot temper. "You've got more patience than I have, and you talk more."

The admonition of Wilson's parents, "make a special effort to get along with people," was now to meet its severest test, but Wilson's patience and stamina served him well. If the labor people wanted to talk all day and all night, that was O.K. with him. Wilson's position was not a pleasant one.

He was under a constant cross fire: labor said he was too tough; management said he wasn't tough enough. Some executives called him "Compromise-Everything Wilson." He was reported to have shocked one of his business colleagues, who was complaining about labor's extortionate demands, by remarking, "Well, the have-nots are greedy too."

On one point Wilson was adamant. He would not stand for unauthorized strikes, the so-called "wildcats." He served notice on the union to that effect, and instituted a training program among the company's supervisory personnel, to make sure they understood the grievance procedures and would resort to no unfairness or bullying toward workers. The policy paid off. Employee relations improved, and GM has been singularly free of the wildcats which have plagued other companies.

Made President G.M. Beginning Year 1941

In 1939 Wilson was chosen executive vice-president of GM. In 1940, when Bill Knudsen went to Washington to help spur America's defense production, Wilson became acting president. When Knudsen felt his defense work required him to resign from General Motors, Wilson was chosen as president on January 6, 1941. Just at this point Wilson, ice-skating near his home, had a fall which fractured his hip and laid him up in hospital for weeks.

It was while lying in the hospital that he began to think out the ideas which were eventually to be adopted generally in the big labor agreements of the automotive and allied industries.

To avoid big strikes every year or so, long-term agreements were needed. If these were to stand up, they must have a "escalator" clause adjusting wages to changes in the cost of living. Also—and this was Wilson's unique contribution—workers should be entitled automatically to a raise of about 2½ per cent a year, so that they would share fairly in industry's steady improvements in technology and production.

This was Wilson's controversial "improvement factor." It was assailed by management as too costly; by unions as tending to shove aggressive unionism into the background. It was not until 1948 that Wilson, working with Walter Reuther, of the United Auto Workers, was able to achieve such an agreement, and then for only two years. In 1950 a five-year agreement including these features was signed which is still in effect and has been widely copied.

Holds This His Best Aid to Labor Relations

Wilson considers this his greatest contribution to good labor relations, efficiency, stability and industrial peace. He is especially proud of all the letters he has received from workers' wives, saying in effect, "Now we can plan ahead for the children."

The broken hip brought Wilson another small windfall, which he declined. In the spring of '41, still on crutches, he was called to Washington to testify before a labor mediation board. It was a hot day and a grueling session.

Afterward Wilson hobbled out and sat down on the steps to rest his aching bones. His clothes were even more rumpled than usual, his vest more strewn with cigarette ashes. He held his crutches in his left hand; with his right he laid down his hat and then mopped his brow. A passing stranger paused, looked at him sympathetically and dropped a quarter in Wilson's hat.

"Thank you kindly, sir," said the president of General Motors, handing back the coin. "You had better give that to somebody else."

In the following years Wilson was engaged in converting General Motors plants to war production, retraining hundreds of thousands of workers to new skills, and constantly readjusting production lines to new demands in weapons. Under his supervision GM flexed its muscles and turned out guns, tanks, planes and other war equipment to a total value of about $12,000,000,000.

In the course of this, and later, during the Korean war, Wilson learned a good deal about the operations of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

When he came to Washington in 1953 to be Secretary of Defense, he was by no means the novice which his habit of asking questions suggested.

Technical Knowledge Big Aid in Defense

Some extremely able and devoted men have served as America's Secretary of Defense. Wilson came to the job with certain special advantages in experience and circumstance over his predecessors.

For one thing, as mentioned, he is a technical man, and Defense is now the most technical thing there is. Its new weapons are on the very frontiers of scientific advance; its production problems are more complex than those of any one private industry. Much of Wilson's life has been devoted to research, development, design and production.

He has a personal acquaintance and prestige among production men which has already shown results in cutting down "lead time" on new weapons and speeding production schedules.

Secondly, he is the first Defense Secretary with long previous experience in managing a huge organization. General Motors is so big that "no one man can possibly see it all" or study its operations with his own eyes. Wilson, in his many years at General Motors, had to learn the techniques for bringing such an organization within the compass of the human mind.

Now, in the even bigger Department of Defense, he is trying to apply such techniques to set up clearer policies, clearer lines of responsibility and co-operation. I recently asked Wilson to tell me in simplest terms what he was trying to do.

"Nine out of ten people," he said, "want to do the right thing. They want to feel they are doing something valuable, doing it well, and not having their time wasted. I'm trying to improve the organization so that more people know what's expected of them—what's the right thing to do."

Brings in 30 Top Men to Help on Defense

Wilson's third advantage is that he was not stuck with an "inherited" staff. Coming in with a change of Administration, he was given a free hand to pick all his chief assistants.

He chose a number of able members of the old regime, but he also brought in about thirty top men from American industry, men skilled in the techniques of modern management.

Wilson and these like-minded men, according to one of the holdovers from the old regime, "are making the greatest mass attack ever attempted against inefficiencies in Defense."

How far they will succeed remains to be seen. In a job of this magnitude it may take another two years to appraise results.

Finally Wilson, who came in as the Korean war drew toward a close, has a calmer atmosphere and more time to work out his plans. His predecessor, Robert A. Lovett—whom Wilson greatly admires—had to wrestle with the enormous military build-up which followed our defeat at the Yalu.

He did not have much time to perfect organizational improvements. He saw the need for such changes, and suggested some of those which are being made.

The much talked of "New Look" in Defense is not entirely new and not entirely Wilson's. When the new Chiefs of Staff were chosen—Admiral Radford, Chairman; General Ridgway, Army; Admiral Carney, Navy; and General Twining, Air Force—Wilson asked them to make a reassessment of what America needed for adequate defense.

The chiefs studied the situation and discussed it with Wilson. When they made their report, Wilson discussed it further at great length with President Eisenhower and his top policy advisers of the National Security Council.

Air Force Has Added Responsibility Today

Briefly, the New Look is, militarily speaking, a recognition that the new atomic and other weapons have reached the point where they are no longer auxiliaries. They have brought in such revolutionary new power that they must be integrated throughout our defenses.

This means greater emphasis on the Air Force, since this arm is mainly responsible for defending America against atomic attack, and carrying atomic retaliation against the enemy.

It means we are determined to keep our supremacy in the new weapons. If we are to do this, at a cost which America can sustain for the long pull, it means we must make some cuts in the Navy and greater cuts in the size of the Army. Thus the Army will be gradually cut from its 1,500,000 in Korean days—to about 1,000,000.

Last spring the Air Force was unhappy; now it is the Army. Wilson believes an Army of 1,000,000, with better efficiency, morale and weapons, can have as much combat strength as the earlier Army of 1,500,000. One of the chief things Wilson is working on now is to get the Army's wholehearted cooperation in this effort.

Wilson has been depicted as chiefly a dollar-saver. It is true that he has cut waste and made notable savings in dollars. But the wastage in Defense which disturbs him most is the human wastage as represented in the tremendous turnover of manpower in the armed services.

When a highly skilled man fails to re-enlist—and re-enlistments are lagging alarmingly—it means not only a loss of the ten to fifty thousand dollars it cost to train that man; it means a weak spot in the outfit until his successor is trained.

Wants More Men to Make Army a Career

Wilson has not yet said much about this, but it is close to his heart. It is a thorny problem and he is studying it with his usual thoroughness. He wants to enlarge the stabilizing, highly qualified core in each of the services. To do this, the service must be made more attractive as a career.

Clearer policies and organization will make the service more satisfying to good men, he believes, but something more is needed. In recent years many of the "fringe benefits" and privileges have been chipped away from the military man and his family by legislation.

Some of these should be restored, and certain new securities added. Wilson thinks. In this he will need help from Congress, and he believes he will get it.

Wilson has always insisted that he puts defense first, dollars second. Some people remain skeptical.

Here is one little point which may bear on the argument.

Wilson, as you may have gathered, is a devoted family man. He has six children and fifteen grandchildren. They are his pride and joy. Practically all of them live in the Detroit area—certainly a primary target area in case of enemy atomic attack.

It may reassure some parents to know that the Secretary of Defense shares their human concerns.

Popularity Rising in Washington Area

For several months the press corps at the Pentagon, which earlier had regarded Wilson with what one reporter called "a built-in antipathy," has been revising its opinions sharply upward.

Once Wilson had "asked enough questions to begin answering some," he initiated weekly press conferences. He allowed no "planted" questions; he was "on the record"; and he labored patiently to give honest answers within the limits of security. Often this is hard going for him.

Many questions skirt close to the security line. As he struggles with the answers, his feet, visible beneath the table where he sits, turn and twist restlessly as if in sympathy with his thoughts.

One reporter, fascinated by the complex maneuvers of the secretary's shoes, recently wrote a light article on the subject, claiming that observers could read Wilson's thoughts by watching his feet.

At the next press conference Wilson ostentatiously draped a curtain over the front of the table so that his feet could not be seen. The curtain was marked: "Top Secret."

Soon afterward Wilson was talking with President Eisenhower at the White House.

"Mr. President," he said, "I believe I'm getting along a little better. They're working on my feet now, instead of my head."

Secretary Has Great Affection for President

That was a joke, son, but I think it came from the heart. In effect, Wilson was telling Eisenhower, for whom he has a proud and almost boyish admiration, "Look, boss, I've made some bobbles and I've had a kind of rough time, but I believe I'm making real progress with this Defense job you trusted me with."

Sun to Explode, but Don't Worry, Professor Says

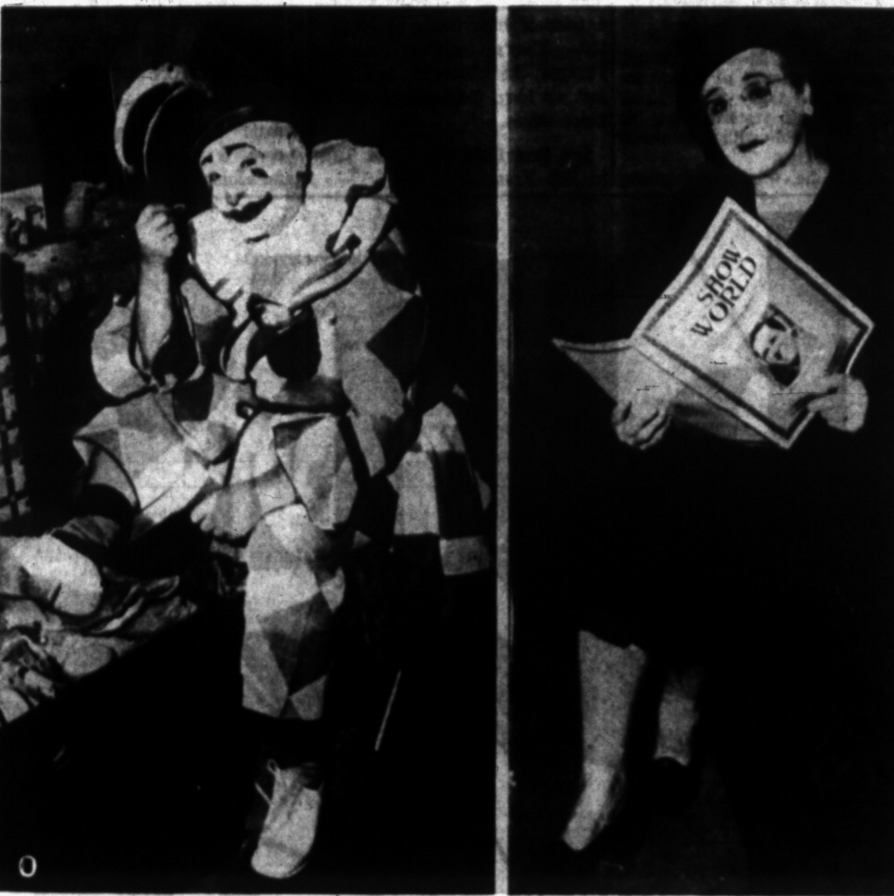

BERKELEY, Calif. (U)—The sun is going to blow up and destroy our entire solar system—but don't fret about it.
 Dr. Walter Beade of the Mt. Wilson and Palomar Observatories who made the prediction in a lecture at the University of California says it won't happen for a couple of billion years or so.
 He explained that as Old Sol gets older it gradually changes its hydrogen into helium. When 12 per cent of the hydrogen thus is transformed, he added, things will get so hot the sun will explode and wipe out all planets in its system.

Schnozola Up in Air Over Plans

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (U)—Last night the Great Schnozola did his swan song for the Comedy Hour, but he's not through with TV.

Jimmy Durante told me the reason he won't be back on the Sunday night extravaganza: "They're changing the whole setup on the show. The advertising agency is taking over most of the shows (20 for next season). NBC has the rest and they wanted me to do only three or four next year. I don't want to do that. I think a comedian shouldn't be on any less than every four weeks."

"It's okay for guys like Martin and Lewis, because they're doing pictures too. But I don't want to do only three or four a season."

Last night's show marked the end of Durante's association with the hour-long extravaganza. For three years, he was one of the kingly of the All-Star Revue. When that series hit the rocks, he was switched over to the Comedy Hour, for which he has done eight shows this season.

What about next year?
 "I don't know what I'll do," said the Schnoz. "I might do a half-hour show every other week. This hour-show routine is kinda rugged. All that memorizin' to do! Most of the other stars read their lines off cards and prompts. I can't do that. I can't see that far without my glasses."

Jimmy, who has never been noted for a fabulous memory, faces the added burden of being on-camera for most of the show. And he always has special songs which require lots of memorizin'.

He emphasized that he wouldn't do a show every week for all the money the network could offer him. He'd like to alternate weeks with another show.

Jimmy is under long-term contract to NBC, so he's obliged to stay in TV, but he wants to anyway.

"I think it's wonderful," he said. "It's a lot of work puttin' on an hour show, but after it's all over with, it don't seem so bad. And the reaction from the fans! It's wonderful. I'll never forget the letters I got from the first show I did. Great letters, and they didn't even ask for an autographed pitcher."

"I also got a great reaction from the last show I did—the one with Liberace. The people were wild about it."

Richards Joins Stengel in Praising Tigers

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer
Rival American League clubs are beginning to take the amazing Detroit Tigers seriously.
Last Sunday, after the Tigers had blanked the Yanks at Yankee Stadium, New York Manager Casey Stengel called them the most improved club in the league.
Yesterday, after the Tigers had whipped the Chicago White Sox

3-2 in the first game of a double-header and then played to a 10-inning 0-0 standoff in the second game, White Sox Manager Paul Richards repeated what Casey had said.
Today the Tigers are in first place with 11 victories against five defeats, a half game in front of Chicago, a full game ahead of Cleveland and two ahead of the defending champion Yankees. They return home with a brilliant 5-1 record for their first road tour.

In other American League games, Baltimore defeated Cleveland 2-1 in 10 innings, and the Yankees whipped and tied Philadelphia in a doubleheader. Three home runs gave the Yanks a 7-4 opening game triumph and rookie Bill Skowron's run-scoring single in the eighth gave them a 1-1 tie in the second game, halted after nine innings because of darkness.

Rain washed out a scheduled doubleheader between Washington and the Red Sox in Boston.
Brooklyn opened up a half game lead in the National League, nipping the Philadelphia Phils 2-1 while the second place Cincinnati Redlegs split a doubleheader with St. Louis. The Redlegs came back to win the second game 6-5 after the Cardinals had captured the opener 10-4. The New York Giants walloped Pittsburgh 5-1 and the Chicago Cubs edged out Milwaukee 5-3.

Carl Erskine outpitched Robin Roberts as the Dodgers swept the three-game series from Philadelphia. Erskine permitted only five hits but was in constant hot water with nine bases on balls. Five double plays helped him. The Dodgers snapped a scoreless duel in the seventh when Sandy Amoros doubled in a run and scored on Billy Cox' single.

The heaviest player on the Philadelphia Athletics is outfielder Bill Renna. He weighs 220 pounds.

The best lifetime batting average on the Milwaukee Braves is Andy Pafko's .291.

NCAA Pleased With Progress

Policy-Making Group Takes Action Against 7 Schools

CHICAGO (AP) — Colleges have made "notable progress" in eliminating athletic abuses, said the president of the NCAA today following the group's censure of seven member schools.
A. B. Moore, head of Alabama's graduate school and NCAA president, declared in a statement ending a special meeting of the NCAA Council in Chicago:
"It appears that intercollegiate athletics has done much to curb the excesses and abuses which were a part of its tremendous post-war expansion. Our intercollegiate activities are on the upswing toward a positive future."
The policy-making council on Saturday placed Kansas State and North Carolina State on a year's probation and "severely" reprimanded five other schools—Seton Hall and four members of the Border Conference.

Lady Wrestler, 5-3, 230 Will Wed Conqueror

BOMBAY (INS) — Miss Hamida Bana, India's gift to the wrestling profession, is looking around for new worlds to conquer.

There's a rumor in Bombay that the lady grappler, who stands five feet three inches and weighs something over 230 pounds, has promised to marry anyone who can defeat her. Last week she felled a well-known Punjabi wrestler in one minute, 32 seconds flat.

Now she has announced plans to invade Europe and challenge leading European wrestlers.

Her visit may place something of a strain on that continent's resources, since her daily diet consists of 12 pints of milk, six bowls of soup, four large glasses of fruit juice, a chicken, two pounds of mutton, one pound of butter, six eggs, two pounds of almonds, two loaves of bread and two plates of biryani (rice and mutton).

Entries Open for Three Southfield Softball Leagues

Entries are still open for Class A, B and C softball leagues in Southfield Township. There is no age limit in Class A. Class B includes players from 18 to 21 years old and Class C, 14 to 17.

Interested teams should contact recreation director Robert Hall at 24675 Lahser road, Detroit, 19.

Cranbrook Nine Bows

Steve Hayes of Cranbrook, author of a no-hitter earlier this season, tossed 2-hit ball against Western Reserve of Hudson, O., Saturday, but lost a 2-0 decision due to a 1st inning wild streak.

He walked two men, hit one and yielded one hit as Reserve scored twice in the 1st frame. Cranbrook got four hits, but failed to score.

My Greatest Shot

By DUTCH HARRISON
My greatest shot put me in a play-off which I lost, but it still gave me the thrill of pulling off a big one.
It came on the last hole of the Los Angeles Open in 1951, played over the Riviera Country Club course. Tommy Bolt and Jackie Burke were the leaders as I went to the 18th hole. I needed to pick up a stroke to catch them and it was the final round.

The hole is a 440-yard, par 4 and is regarded as one of the finest finishing holes in golf. Trapped to the left and right and with a bank behind the green, it is a thorough test of golf.

My drive was down the middle and for my second shot, I selected a 3 wood, keeping in mind my need for that birdie if I was to gain even a tie.

I hit a real golf shot, laying the ball within a foot of the cup. There is nothing sweeter than salvaging defeat—if only for a time—and this shot made me feel like a new man. I knew how Lew Worsham felt when he holed out with his famous wedge shot at Chicago Tam O'Shanter last year. I holed the putt for a birdie 3 and tied for the lead.

The next day, I'm sad to report, I lost the play-off. Bolt took first money.

But that big wood shot still was

Phillips 66 presents the first All-Weather Motor Oil which has proved it meets the most exacting standard ever established for automobile lubrication...

Mil-0-2104, Supplement 1 level.

Phillips 66 Trop-Artic THE ALL WEATHER MOTOR OIL

THE toughest standard ever set up for automobile lubrication is the Mil-0-2104 Supplement 1 test. New TROP-ARTIC is the first all-weather motor oil to meet the requirements of this test. It is an oil which will serve you winter and summer... an oil so good it can double the life of an automobile engine!

Compared to ordinary motor oils, new TROP-ARTIC reduces ring wear 40% or more. It cuts oil consumption 15% to 45%. It keeps pistons and bearings cleaner... longer-lasting. It saves you money by increasing gasoline mileage. This has been demonstrated in tests representing more than 150,000 miles of driving.

TROP-ARTIC is truly an all-weather oil... S.A.E. 10W through S.A.E. 30. Therefore it flows instantly for easy starting at sub-zero temperatures, and yet it retains the film strength necessary to prevent engine wear under high temperature driving conditions. It isn't just heavy duty. It's double duty.

Any car, in any climate, at any time of the year will perform better with Phillips 66 TROP-ARTIC. It is a worthy companion product to Phillips 66 FLITE-FUEL, the new high performance gasoline recently introduced by Phillips. This year of all years it pays to have your car serviced at the station where you see the Phillips 66 Shield.

MSC Still Deep; 'M' Uncovers Fullbacks

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Three items of note came out of football practice games at Michigan State and Michigan Saturday. Michigan State's Spartans are probably just as deep in football talent as they were last year when they went to the Rose Bowl. Michigan's Wolverines are not as deep as they would like to be.

But the Wolverines apparently have some unexpected strength at fullback.
At the East Lansing field, Spartan 1st team lost 13-7 to the 2nd team. But the regulars were without the services of at least three of last year's stars, who are still in school.

At the Ann Arbor campus, Wolverines first team cracked the second team's line for seven touchdowns, four of them scored by two young fullbacks.
Only one touchdown — a pass from Duncan McDonald to Ron Kramer of East Detroit — came by way of the air.

Fred Baer, a veteran, and Dave Hill of Ypsilanti, hit for two touchdowns apiece operating from the fullback slot.
A surprising freshman from Bay City, John Greenwood, scored twice for the 1st team, too.
The game showed either that Michigan's offense is stronger, or that its 2nd string isn't as good.

Terry Barr of Grand Rapids, freshman halfback candidate, was on the sidelines in sweat clothes. Doctors decided not to operate on his injured knee. Instead he'll take special exercises.
At East Lansing there was more rain, sleet and snow, and the Spartan game bogged down into a defensive battle.
Two Spartan stars from last year were playing with the baseball team — Earl Morrill and Johnny Matsock. Leroy Bolden, flashing Flint halfback, only played a while because of a charley-horse.
"It's nothing serious," coach

Jet Action Wins Withers, Gets in Preakness Picture

By ORLO ROBERTSON
NEW YORK — Jet Action, newest threat for the $100,000 added Preakness at Pimlico May 22, probably is the only horse in history whose success can be traced to beauty treatments.

The son of Jet Pilot, 1947 Kentucky Derby winner, thrust himself into the Preakness picture last Saturday.

Nine months ago it was doubtful if the colt from Mrs. Elizabeth N. Graham's Maine Chance Farm ever would develop into championship caliber.

After running out of the money in two races, Jet Action felt like doing a little skylarking one night last August at Saratoga. He broke out of his stall, ran loose in the stable area and even ventured into town. He returned from his wanderings with skinned knees and assorted cuts and bruises.

Mrs. Graham, a cosmetics manufacturer, spent many hours each day treating the colt with her own products.

In the Preakness, a test of a mile and three-sixteenths, Jet Action probably will run against all the top three-year-olds except Determiner, the Derby winner. That includes Correlation, beaten Derby favorite; Hasty Road, second to Determiner; Hasseyampa, third in the Derby and Fisherman, a disappointment at Churchill Downs.

Floyd Patterson May Get Maxim If He Beats Turner

NEW YORK — Floyd Patterson, the wonder boy of the 1952 Olympic boxing team, may be heading into deep water if he gets past Jesse Turner tonight at Brooklyn's Eastern Parkway.

Kid Gavilan for Johnny Saxton although he's the No. 1 challenger, boxes a middleweight, Italo Scorticini of Italy, on the Saturday night series (ABC-TV) at Syracuse, N. Y. They fought a draw in Miami, Jan. 16.

Joe Maxim, the clever ex-champ with the talented left hand, is being talked up as Patterson's next opponent with a tentative June 7 date. Pal Joey is head and shoulders above the type of boys Patterson has been knocking over in 12 pro fights.

Heavyweights take over Wednesday night (CBS-TV) out of Washington with Coley Wallace, the Joe Louis movie stand-in, boxing Billy Gilliam of Newark, N. J. Ralph (Tiger) Jones, No. 3 middleweight contender, tops the Friday show against Jacques Royer of France as boxing returns to Madison Square Garden for the rest of the season. The show gets the usual network treatment (NBC-TV and ABC-radio).

Turner, actually a middleweight, lost a decision to Eduardo Lausse, the Argentine, a few weeks ago. He weighed 157 that night. Patterson weighed 167 when he outpointed Alvin Williams, April 19. He is having a little trouble building up to the 175-pound class.

Coach Gets 'Lesson'
WINFRED, Mont. — Football coach Chuck Kettering will think twice before giving "lessons" to his physical education class. Kettering decided to give his Winfred High School class some pointers on football. He was hospitalized with leg injuries received during the "lesson."

With the Patterson-Turner match the Parkway ends its television contract with DuMont, switching to ABC Monday May 17 with an Orlando Zulueta-Percy Bassett match.

Astronomers Hope to See If Mars Has Mountains

WASHINGTON — Explorers of a world 40 million miles away hope to discover this year whether there are mountains on Mars — and if not, why not.

At Lamont-Hussey Observatory in Bloemfontein, South Africa, astronomers of an American "Mars Expedition," sponsored by the National Geographic Society and Arizona's Lowell Observatory, now are probing such Martian mysteries. Their work is part of a coordinated worldwide study of earth's neighboring planet in 1954.

This is a year of "near approach" of Mars. By June 2, the red planet's orbit will have brought it closer to the earth than it has been since 1941. During coming months, from Bloemfontein and at least 17 other observatories, men will be watching and photographing Mars around the clock.

Scientists are unsure about the presence or absence of mountains on Mars. They agree that there are deserts, vast areas of unchanging brick-color that give the planet its reddish tint even to the naked eye. They know too that there are darker, blue-green areas, caused perhaps by living plants such as lichens or moss, as well as white polar caps that grow and shrink with the Martian seasons. There are no seas or oceans.

If mountains exist, it is felt, they too should be covered with the white substance that rims the polar regions. Temperatures would be colder on the heights. And mountains, or the lack of mountains, would be a key to the internal composition of the planet.

This question Dr. E. C. Slipher, leader of the Mars Expedition and an authority on the planets, hopes may be solved at Bloemfontein. By measuring the diameter of Mars more exactly than ever before, science may learn more about the planet's composition, and from that, whether mountain-building forces could have ridged its surface.

Other observatories working under coordination of the International Mars Committee, which met in Washington March 9, will attempt to observe Martian mountains directly. At Mount Palomar in California, Johns Hopkins University scientists will use the giant 200-inch Hale telescope to make temperature readings for various points on Mars.

Zhukov Praises War-time West

But Russian Marshal Calls U. S. Aggressor Since V-E Day

MOSCOW (U. S. — Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov, commemorating the World War II victory in Europe, conceded yesterday that Britain and the United States played a heroic wartime role. But afterward, he charged, America turned toward a policy of aggression.

A lengthy article by the first deputy defense minister was displayed prominently in Pravda, the Communist party organ, to mark V-E day. The piece was considered an event because prominent officials seldom write for Soviet newspapers and such praise for the West is rare.

Zhukov paid particular tribute to President Eisenhower and Britain's Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, saying, "It was under their leadership that the United States and British forces repeatedly routed the German Fascist troops."

Assailing America's later "aggressive foreign policy," he said U. S. ruling circles "have created a large number of military bases and various military blocs directed against the Soviet Union and the peoples' democracies."

He said Russia was undismayed, however, because it has the world's best army.

He said that the people of Europe and Asia "do not want to be cannon fodder" for the United States and never will accept her "antidemocratic ideas."

BOARDING HOUSE

Wheat Is Loser More Than Rest

CHICAGO (AP)—Small losses were recorded in grains on the board of trade today, wheat losing the most ground. Old crop soybean futures resisted the selling pressure.

Selling in wheat appeared based on prospects of a bearish government crop report after the market closes today, slackened fears the United States might get involved immediately in the Indo-China hostilities and additional light moisture in parts of the winter wheat belt over the weekend.

Other cereals mainly took their cue from wheat with May and July soybeans doing better than the rest of the market because of light stock coverings.

Wheat near the end of the first hour was 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 lower, May $2.01, corn 1/4 to 1/2 lower, May $1.53, oats 1/4 to 1/2 lower, May $1.35, rye 1/4 to 1/2 lower, May $1.45, soybeans 1/4 to 1/2 higher, May $3.95 and 1/2 cents lower to 2 cents a hundred pounds higher, May $18.57.

Teacher on TV Has Good Stuff

Crew Stops Laughing as Program Is Given Many Awards

By ALINE MOSBY

HOLLYWOOD — Television executives laughed when a plumpish, motherly school teacher began her one-woman nursery school program last year, but today she's passed Arthur Godfrey in popularity.

Dr. Frances Horwich was a department head at Roosevelt College in Chicago when NBC asked her to star on the first program to teach pre-school children.

The moguls thought her title "Ding Dong School" was silly. The crew on the stage chuckled when she faced the camera and began to talk slowly, in simple language so the audience of sub-small fry could understand her.

"I knew lip reading, and I could tell what they were saying," she smiled today. "Some of the remarks were pretty rough."

But today the crew members came to me with questions on how to bring up their children. And once when I had live chickens on the show many of the crew had never seen chicks and they were fascinated.

School has been showered with awards. Columbia University even established a scholarship in Dr. Horwich's name.

Miss Francis, as she's called, receives "at least 50" requests a week before parent-teacher groups or at schools.

"Her 'class' is figured at 6½ million youngsters. She's received 140,000 fan letters and last Christmas counted 7,000 cards.

Some TV stars collect lavish gifts from admirers. The teacher gets such mementos as a beetle (dead) and some little boy's front tooth.

On Dr. Horwich's program she shows the unseen pupils how to finger paint, play with puzzles or listen to music. Animals, dolls from various countries and other objects of interest are televised.

She feels the program is useful because "it gives many children benefit of a nursery school who otherwise couldn't go."

She thinks parents also should watch the show because "it helps them understand their children."

"It's a heavy responsibility to teach millions of children," she said. "Once I said all fire engines were red. I was deluged with mail from Hartford, Conn., where fire engines are white."

The teacher, wed 23 years, has no children herself.

"Yes, I do," she reconsidered. "I have 6½ million children."

Members of Iran's numerous physical fitness clubs exercise four hours a day, six days a week while a drummer beats time and recites poetry. The tradition of these clubs, called "Houses of Strength," goes back some seven centuries.

DANE IN DEMAND — Handsome Dane Clark, who has a secure position in the movie world, is rapidly building a solid reputation in the field of television as a forceful and dynamic performer.

The dark-haired actor has appeared in many productions, including the "Philco Playhouse" and the newly launched video series "Justice."

Jane Greer Gives Birth to 7 Pound Baby Boy

HOLLYWOOD — Film producer Edward Lasker and actress Jane Greer are parents of a son, their third boy.

The infant weighed 7 pounds 5 ounces when he was born at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital—Saturday night.

De Gaulle's Visit to Triumph Arch Sets Off Fights

PARIS, (U-P) — Gen. Charles de Gaulle's pilgrimage "alone" to the tomb of France's Unknown Soldier touched off a fight yesterday between police and Gaullist supporters. A number of civilians and 11 police were injured.

De Gaulle boycotted the official observance of V-E Day Saturday to dramatize his opposition to the European army treaty. Instead, he said, he would go alone yesterday to the tomb at the Arch of Triumph.

Some 15,000 spectators gathered in the plaza around the arch. Almost as many police were ordered out to forestall demonstrations. Authorities feared might grow out of public feeling aroused by the fall of Dien Bien Phu, in Indochina.

De Gaulle's visit to the tomb went off without incident. Only moderate cheering greeted the tall and graying general as he was driven to and from the arch. But after he left the plaza, some 400 persons tried to break through the police barrier and the lights ensued. There seemed to be no ordered direction of the crowd, which finally was dispersed.

Hides of circus elephants are oiled regularly to keep them from cracking.

WHY a Vegetable Laxative is better for CONSTIPATION

Dr. P. M. Edwards, a noted Ohio doctor, sure knew his medicine when he prescribed Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets for constipation. Olive Tablets are a pure-vegetable laxative—so much better than harsh, jolting ones. Olive Tablets give a complete cleaning out yet are so gentle. You can take them for years without any harmful effects.

Olive Tablets give more natural-like bowel movements. No purging! No griping! No inconvenient urge! Olive Tablets clean out waste, gassy bloats from entire intestinal tract to help you feel fine!

How do you like your coffee?

Hot! Warm! Cool! Iced! Black! With cream! With sugar!

A million different people would have a million different answers. But probably they would all be thinking . . . "I'd enjoy my coffee more if it only cost me less."

We can't help but agree with that.

But we do have a few thoughts about coffee quality and about coffee prices. Will you spare a couple of minutes to read them?

A cup of good coffee!

There are three essential elements to a cup of good coffee . . . aroma, flavor and strength. And it takes just so much coffee with each cup of water to obtain the right balance of all three qualities.

Some coffee roasters claim you can get 60—70—or more cups from a pound of coffee. Of course you can. You can get 100 cups if you don't care how the coffee tastes, and are satisfied with just a brown-colored cup of hot water.

But, believing as we do in how a cup of good coffee should taste, we recommend the standard of measurement approved by The Coffee Brewing Institute, Inc. (2 level tablespoons of coffee to each 6-oz. cup of water).

Even at present prices, coffee made this way at home costs only about 3 cents a cup. And what else served in the American home gives so much satisfaction—to so many people—at such little cost—as a cup of good coffee!

Coffee quality and coffee prices!

The price you have to pay for coffee today concerns us just as it does you. But the cost of green coffee is the largest single factor in determining the price at which roasted coffee can be sold. And that cost is something over which we have no control. There is no coffee grown in the Continental United States. It all has to be imported at prices that have been established in a world-wide market.

We believe (and certainly hope) that coffee prices will be lower when Brazil, the largest coffee-growing country, recovers from the crop damage brought about by frost last July, and when all the Latin American countries, from which most of our green coffee comes, are again producing enough to meet the increasing world demand. We don't know how soon this will be. No one really knows.

In the meantime, we have to keep on paying the going price for the carefully selected green coffees that we must buy for our blend in order to maintain the traditional uniformity and high quality of Hills Bros. Coffee.

Never in the 76 years since our company started in business have we even considered lowering our standards . . . "giving a little less" just to sell at a lower price. That isn't the way we operate. Good coffee is the only thing that Hills Bros. know how to live with.

Considering the price you have to pay for any kind of coffee today, coffee-quality becomes more important than ever. If you have used Hills Bros. Coffee, you know what we are talking about. If you haven't—there is a pleasant surprise awaiting you.

Our new product coming

During the past few years, many people have been attracted by the convenience of Instant Coffee. Perhaps some have wondered why Hills Bros. didn't have a product of this type.

We could have offered you an Instant Coffee at any time during the last 20 years. But we have continued our research and development since 1934 because we were determined that when we put our name on Instant Coffee it would combine real coffee-quality with coffee-convenience.

Now, we can announce that before this year is out, you will begin to see our new Instant Hills Bros. Coffee on your grocer's shelf. It will be the Instant Coffee of superior quality. In your cup, it will not only look like coffee—but taste like coffee, with all its "lingering goodness." It will "Take the work out of wonderful coffee." It will guarantee you "Good Taste . . . No Work . . . No Waste."

The best there is in coffee

Our business is "coffee exclusively," and the achieving of perfection in coffee-quality is our basic objective. That is why we can promise you that in both kinds of Hills Bros. Coffee—our ground coffee in vacuum-packed cans, and our new Instant Coffee soon to come—Hills Bros. will always give you the best there is in coffee.
