Gardner appointed new SBA dean

By SALLY TATO AND JILL SERES
News Editor and Staff Writer

He has the background to move the school on to the next level . . .

John Tower
Interim Dean

John Gardner is scheduled to start his reign as the new School of Business Administration Dean in the same manner that his predecessor exited last spring.

Like former dean George Stevens, Gardner will give the commencement speech at SBA graduation ceremonies in June.

Following an almost year-long dean search, Gardner associate dean and professor of the School of Management at the University of New York at Binghamton has agreed to contract terms with OU and awaits final approval from the Board of Trustees at its February meeting.

He should officially begin on August 1 with an annual salary of $130,000 plus fringes.

Gardner said he is looking forward to returning to the state where he earned his MBA and Ph.D at Michigan State University in Lansing.

"Oakland is a growing area with a good industrial base. I will be working with faculty and the president to look for opportunities with industry," Gardner said.

Faculty in the SBA also look forward to Gardner's arrival.

"He looks like a superb candidate," said Interim Dean John Tower. "He has the background to move

Enrollment spurt raises course issues

Student liaison wants more offerings to accommodate students

By SUE YAX and HEIDI HEDQUIST
Features Editor and Assistant Features Editor

Student liaison to OU's Board of Trustees, Margo Kendzier, raised concerns that although enrollment has reached a five-year high, needs for classroom space and class sections are not being met.

Kendzier brought these issues before the board at its Dec. 7 meeting.

She said that with the increase in enrollment the university should use some of the additional incoming funds to add classes where necessary.

Kendzier stated that if more classes are not added, students could become frustrated and leave OU for another university.

"Students generally come here for the classes. But if, when they get here, the sections are closed, then why should they stay," she asked.

Kendzier feels that money needs to be distributed to academic departments to pay for the additional sections.

"We want to make students happy. We have the resources to make them happy," said Kendzier.

Others agree with Kendzier's views that changes need to be made to ensure OU's enrollment can continue to grow.

"The university has done a great job marketing the campus, but what I am concerned with is now that we have these students, they may not be having access to classes they need," said David Moroz, Academic Advisor, School of Education and Human Services.

"I don't understand how the money flows, but it seems to me that if a school needs to offer

Tranchida found mentally competent to stand trial

By ERICA BLAKE
Editor in Chief

Kenneth Ray Tranchida, the ex-convict currently charged in the September murder of 23-year-old OU student Tina Biggar, was declared competent to stand trial by Oakland County Circuit Court Judge Rudy Nichols last week.

Ken Tranchida

Tranchida, who is charged with first degree murder, underwent a psychiatric examination to determine whether or not he is mentally competent to assist in his defense in his criminal trial.

"The report said that he was in touch with reality and able to stand trial," said

Tranchida's court appointed attorney Michael Modelski, who did not object to the report nor Nichols' ruling.

"However, there is a difference between being competent enough to stand trial and being criminally responsible for your actions," he said.

Modelski said his next move was to acquire a private psychiatrist to evaluate Tranchida and determine whether or not he was criminally responsible, the equivalent to legally insane, at the time of the murder last fall.

"Competence (to stand trial) is irrelevant in determining whether or not someone is legally insane at the time of the crime," Modelski said. "The next step is to prove whether or not Mr. Tranchida was criminally responsible."

Tranchida's psychiatric evaluation, conducted by Dr. Carol Holden at the Center for Forensics

Winter semester registration numbers soar

Lawrence Bartalucci

Registrar Lawrence Bartalucci said that registration totals for the winter 1996 semester hit a peak this year reaching 12,400.

Although only speculating, he attributes much of the increase to OU's latest payment policy which requires full or partial tuition payment about one month prior to the start of the upcoming term.

This policy weeds out potential students who in the past have demonstrated tendencies to register, attend a couple weeks of classes, and then drop without payment, he said.

An estimated 456 students were cancelled following early registration for non-payment for the winter semester.

"It's a big number certainly," Bartalucci said. "But it's the number of people who said 'I can't do what you asked of me.'"

Cancelled students were allowed to re-register during regular registration period which took place last week.

Transfer student Rula Sater doesn't like the registration policy at OU and thinks registration and payment times should coincide.

"It's more of a hassle," she said

Farewell bid to education professor

By SALLY TATO
News Editor

Professor Jim Hughes remembers getting a phone call from Roderic Righter more than 20 years ago, convincing him to fly out to OU for the day in hopes of enticing him into accepting a job offer with the then School of Education. It was the start of a long friendship for the two education professors.

"I found him a great pal, and I found him a great confidant," Hughes said. "He inspired my creativity, and we fit together well as a team. I loved working with him and I'm going to miss him."

Righter died of congestive heart failure at William Beaumont Hospital in Royal Oak on January 3. He was 68.

Righter's wife of 45 years, Elsie, said that about a year and a half ago, doctors discovered a blood clot in his lung that limited his breathing. But it was not until late November that Righter's appetite decreased, and he began losing weight.

It was his dedication to teaching, however, that kept Righter in his classes until he collapsed and was hospitalized during the final week of the fall semester.

"I drove him back and forth to the university. He had to finish that class," Elsie said. "He could have retired and or taken a sabbatical, but he never did. He taught to the very last."

"He was a very caring teacher who was concerned about his students. He spent a lot of time letting them into his classes and he made them work for their grade," Elsie said.

But what students got back in return was

When papers snow the issues

The debate is still on. When is news, news?

The question poses quite a dilemma during a week loaded with world, national, and local happenings.

On other weeks, however, just the tiniest of events, the smallest of mishaps, the otherwise untouched subjects, can become top stories for newspapers.

Look at all the hoopla over the weather.

It snowed.

Not a meteor shower.

Not a world peace issue.

Not a nuclear attack.

Just the cold white stuff that covers our cars while they're parked out in the lots during the course of a winter day.

Just frozen rain.

Hold me back.

Why is it that this simple and usually predictable product of mother nature has managed to smear itself across front pages of newspapers everywhere, including the metro Detroit area?

Granted, in some east coast areas, there has been a high level of snowfall.

That in itself grants those states a small story or a brief blurb.

But the entire top half of the front page? Not if it was up to me.

I'll admit it's sometimes hard to find subjects worthy of belonging on a front page.

The job hasn't always been easy here at the Post.

It's not from lack of community suggestions. But unfortunately, not everything is news.

That's the main reason we can't grant everyone's request.

The subject may be interesting, but other criteria are involved.

As editors, we have to ask ourselves who our audience is and whether we are issuing a well-rounded quality newspaper every week.

We have to make sure we're touching on topics that could often go unexplored, yet make sure our heads aren't too far in the clouds of reporting to remember that our readers are our priority.

Above all, we have to come to terms with the fact that we aren't a weekly PR publication.

Not everyone is happy with what gets reported in the news.

Even at OU, not everyone on campus is always pleased with what they read, or so I've heard.

When it comes down to it though, it's all a balancing act on our part.

We have to produce a product that, we hope, entices members of the OU community to pick up our paper.

We have to produce a publication that tells the news, good or bad.

And in the end, we hope to have created something a little better than a national weather page.

Professors honored for achievements

Gregory and Reddy honored by OU's Board of Trustees

By IAN HOUSTON

The Board of Trustees honored two faculty members by awarding them distinguished professor status at its December meeting.

"It's a very special recognition for professors," said Interim President Gary Russi, as he announced the recipients: Karl D. Gregory, professor of economics and management in the School of Business Administration, and Venkat N. Reddy, director of the Eye Research Institute.

"I feel very fortunate to be selected," said Gregory. A member of the OU faculty since 1968, Gregory has also been active as an economic consultant. In 1992, he was appointed to Governor John Engler's Council of Economic Advisors. He also has been a member of an advisory committee on trade negotiations under U.S. Presidents Carter and Reagan.

Gregory has also served as interim president and chief executive officer of the First Independence Bank of Detroit, Michigan's first minority banking institution. The founding of the bank was based on a feasibility study he conducted.

Professor Venkat N. Reddy, was recognized for his accomplishments during his 35 year research career devoted to studying the eye and blinding eye diseases. "I've been here since 1968 and it has been my life," said Reddy.

As a co-founder of internationally renowned Eye Research Institute at OU. The ERI is the only National Institutes of Health supported eye research institute in the U.S. not associated with a medical school.

Pool Poses A Problem

ABANDONED POOL: The kidney shaped pool near Katke Cousins Golf Course has been abandoned since lack of funds forced the university to officially shut it down.

Potential dangers from empty pool pose a threat

By IAN HOUSTON AND PATTY YOUNG

More than three years after the university abandoned ship on a historic outdoor swimming pool built by the Wilsons in 1936, state officials question the OU's decision to not have the pool filled in.

District engineer for the Michigan Department of Public Health John Fiero said that there is no law stating that a condemned pool has to be filled in within a specific time requirement but security must be maintained by a good fence with a locked gate.

Fiero also said that even with these measures the pool is still a safety hazard.

"The best fence in the world can still be climbed. It is probably proper to have the university make a decision to bring it back to compliance making it operable or fill it in," he said.

The pool was closed in 1992 when the state health department required a number of repairs amounting to $143,000. After the private swim club which operated the pool failed to raise enough money through its membership and the Board of Trustees voted against any use of university funds to sub-

Construction worker falls

A construction worker was injured on Dec. 28 while working on the south wall of the new Science and Technology Building.

The man was approximately 20 feet high on a temporary scaffold that was spot welded to the wall forms that they were pouring the cement broke and he fell to the ground.

The man hurt his left ankle and was taken to Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital.

Missing Phone

A Hamlin Hall resident told police that on Dec. 19 she was packing her car to leave for the holiday break when, without her knowledge, her cellular phone fell out of her coat pocket.

She did not notice the missing phone until she got home and told police that she is sure that nobody stole it from her coat.

The phone is a black Ameritech cellular phone and is worth $120.

Slip and Fall

A university employee slipped and fell on ice on

Jan. 3.

He told police that he was getting out of his car when he lost his balance on ice in the parking lot.

He injured his back and his right hip.

Hit and Run

A woman told police that on Jan. 3 she was backing her red Pontiac Sunfire out of her parking space in the Northwest lot when she saw another car also backing out on the opposite side.

She stopped her car and honked her horn, but the car hit hers and then drove off.

The woman did not get the license plate number of the car that hit hers but told police that it was a black Pontiac Grand Am.

Investigations continue into death of alumnus

By SALLY TATO
News Editor

Police in Hamtramck are continuing their investigation into the death of OU graduate Kevin Paul Horrigan, 35, and preparing their case for the Wayne County Prosecutor's office, according to Detective Sgt. Kevin Kondrat, Hamtramck police.

Kondrat said that Frank Rembisz, 37, the only survivor of the fatal November 30 shootout in the basement of a home on Wyandotte Street in Hamtramck, has hired attorney Kathleen Kubicki and declined comment or questioning by the police.

Kubicki said police have not contacted her regarding any possible charges against her client.

Detective Aaron Brown, Hamtramck police, said that the case will not be presented to the Wayne County Prosecutor's office until lab results on the 80 pieces of evidence submitted are returned by the Michigan State Crime Lab. Results are expected in two weeks.

"I want everything done before we take this to the prosecutor's office," Brown said.

Two guns were used in the Nov. 30 incident, but Brown could not comment on who fired shots first.

He's expecting forensics results in the next two weeks.

Horrigan received his Bachelor's Degree in General Studies, with a minor in Accounting, from OU in 1988.

He also served on the Alumni Board and remained an active alumni member until 1994, when he did not renew his membership.

EDITOR'S VIEW

New year brings new hope for many 1996 has arrived and with it the usual headaches of a new year. OU is no exception.

Students can be seen sledging through the slush and snow, cursing the lack of parking that always seems to arise with a new semester and fighting the bitter cold that Michigan is known for. However, let's not lose sight of the real situation, that life here is really not all that bad.

Around the world, and even in our own country, this new year for some brought with it continuous fear and suffering. The kind of suffering that pales the importance of a prime parking spot in the OC lot or a poor selection of meals at lunch time.

Following several weeks of relative peace in the war-ridden zone in the former country of Yugoslavia, we come to realize that any sort of cease fire is a welcome relief to those who have spent the last five years dodging bullets with no opportunity of obtaining an education at all.

Only recently did the terrorist acts plaguing Western Europe come to a halt after many long months of sporadic train and restaurant bombings in France which heightened the awareness of political unrest. Although security remains tight, more people are now feeling safer going to the mall.

Closer to home, many families are still unsure of when the next paycheck will be arriving at the door as the government hashes out what to do about the budget while the striking Detroit newspapers remain at a stalemate.

While 1996 has begun at OU as a typical year with the same, typical dilemmas, around the world it is a sign of a new hope or even, possibly, a sign of changes.

Yes, we will continue to complain about the five minute walk in the freezing cold between classes or the lack of selection at meal time, however, let us not forget that to most of the students, faculty and staff at OU, 1996 marks the beginning of a year of good fortune and peace.

Maybe, this year's resolution should go deeper than another promise to lose weight. Maybe it's the year we should be thankful for stepping through puddles of melting snow on the way to class instead of puddles of blood and realize that although we may be parked far from the buildings, at least OU has buildings to house its students.

Out with the old, in with the new.

THE OAKLAND POST has changed its style. Any comments or suggestions? Let us know.

Letters to the Editor

OU Fraternities welcome new students, opportunities

Dear Editor,

Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity is a proud heritage internationally as well as here on the campus of Oakland University. It is a fraternity founded on the ideals of friendship and the values of "True Gentlemen". Over 240,000 members world wide incorporated these ideals into their every day lives when they started their journey as brothers.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon is known as a social fraternity to most, but there is another side we value just as well. We are heavily involved in our community and our school. ΣAE participates regularly with Easter Seals, The Rainbow Connection, and The Baldwin Community Center. Though the Greek system at Oakland does a great amount for the school, we try to do some individual efforts too. Campus clean ups and spirit weeks better known as "ΣAE Week," are our way of trying to make OU a more interesting atmosphere for all students.

As I already mentioned, ΣAE is proud of its family. Early in January, our OU colony will host a province convention. This will involve undergraduate delegates from Alma College, Adrian, Western University of Western Ontario, U of M, MSU, Ferris State, and GMI visiting our school. We are very pleased to bring these men to our university and are sure they will enjoy their stay. As a welcome to these brothers, to our student body, and to the New Year, we will be hosting "Paddy Murphy." This will be a gangster theme party. If you are curious, look for an ΣAE, or one of our flyers. We would like to have as many students attend as possible.

Before you graduate and head into the next stage of your lives please remember this. The social aspect of OU can be just as important to your marketability as your book work. OU has a tremendous amount of organizations, clubs, and functions to seek out. Make the most of it!

Sincerely,

Ryan Gallant

ΘX Urges Participation

Dear Oakland University Student,

Oakland University has much to offer someone who has enough ambition and dedication to take all they can get and leave the rest for the unmotivated. During your time here you must leave your mark upon this institution, or else you have not given back for all that you have received. A prime example of trying to enhance your college experience is to join a student organization. For myself, and my brothers, the choice was Greek life. We, the brothers of Theta Chi, challenge you to find your niche here at OU and better this school for the youth of tomorrow.

Theta Chi is a fraternity that was built upon extending the helping hand to anyone who is in need. We are a group of gentlemen, probably much like yourselves, who needed, no better yet, demanded more from Oakland University. The only way to achieve these expectations is to help further the excellence at OU. That is the essence of Theta Chi Fraternity.

I am encouraging you to not only look into our organization, but all organizations here on campus. Somewhere there is one that will fit your respective lifestyle. Academic excellence combined with pertinent social skills is an admirable combination that all should strive to achieve. Good luck in finding your place here at Oakland University.

Sincerely,

The Brothers of Theta Chi

Saying Thanks

Dear Editor,

Thank you very much for your article in The Oakland Post concerning the endowment my wife and I have established. Your story was accurate in every detail and, I hope, may encourage other faculty and staff to consider making bequests to benefit OU students. Best regards.

Sincerely,

Carl Barnes
Professor
Art History and Archeology

Expressing gratitude

Dear Editor,

The Women of OU Charity Committee would like to thank the Oakland University community for its enthusiastic support of our requests to benefit the HAVEN. On three separate occasions, we requested donations from the Oakland University Community: first, to donate personal products at the Women of OU Fashion Show; second, to donate linens, blankets and towels at the Thanksgiving Buffet; and finally, to donate toys at Christmas. We received many generous donations including approximately $1,000 in toys and games for the Christmas toy collection.

We appreciate the generosity of the staff, students, and faculty in your caring and sharing.

Sincerely,

Teresa H. Gamboa
WOU Charity Committee Chair

worth the work, according to Barbara Kline, Righter's former secretary for more than 20 years.

"He expected a lot from all of the students, but he gave more than the students. He was always available for them," Kline said.

Brad Gilman, Righter's son-in-law and former student, agrees.

"He had a deep interest in where you were headed in your career," Gilman said. "He was genuinely interested in helping you reach your career aspirations."

Gilman took two popular graduate education courses with Righter at OU.

One was a law class that Righter developed and team taught with a lawyer to inform teachers of their rights and liabilities in the classroom.

"He thought it was important that future administrators knew laws and where they were protected and where they were not," said Gilman, upper school director for Detroit Country Day Schools. "He was very, very law-versed and his wealth of knowledge was just extraordinary."

Psychiatry in Ypsilanti, declared that "although moderately depressed... Mr. Tranchida is capable of standing trial."

The Oakland County Prosecutor's Office acknowledged the ruling and will proceed in the matter.

"Circumstances on Tranchida case are that on January 5 Judge Nichols concluded that (Tranchida) was indeed competent to stand trial," said Ron Covault, Chief of the Circuit Court Division in the Prosecutor's Office.

In the weeks proceeding the trial, the defense will be submitting various motions to the court, including attempts to bar some of the testimony from the October 12 preliminary examination using the argument that Tranchida was not formally informed of his legal rights when first questioned by police.

Modelski also plans to file a motion to move the trial out of Oakland County.

"I fear that the publicity which has been given to this case in Oakland County will make it difficult for Mr. Tranchida to receive a fair trial," Modelski said.

"We will also be raising the question as to whether there was enough evidence to bound Mr. Tranchida over on charges of first degree murder as opposed to second degree (in the district court)."

Tranchida's court date is tentatively set for March 1.

Honors

"To be among the selected few is really a great honor. There have only been five other professors in OU's history who have been awarded this status," said Reddy.

Another popular class that Righter created was taught in association with Greenfield Village in Dearborn. The purpose of the class was to instruct teachers on how to use the museum as a tool.

Shanna Gilbert took that course about 15 years ago.

"He was so full of enthusiasm," Gilbert said. "When I was teaching second grade I was able to use things that I learned in the course. He turned me on to some things that I thought were going to be so dull."

During his tenure at OU, Righter served on the board of Meadow Brook Hall and was instrumental in bringing back the baseball program to the university and served the first year as head coach in 1987.

He was also a railroading hobbyist and in 1991 he and his wife undertook the restoration of a Victorian cottage in Lakeside, Ohio.

He is survived by his wife, three daughters, Roberta Gilman, Rebecca Smith, Rosemary Hall and sons Deric, David, and Donald, seven grandchildren, and a brother, Guy, of Yorba Linda, California.

A memorial service will be held at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday, Jan. 13 at St. James Episcopal Church in Birmingham.

sidize repairs, the pool was condemned.

Bill Rodgers, manager of the Katke-Cousins Golf Course whose duties also include the pool's upkeep, said OU had attempted to bring the pool up to code when they spent $80,000 for a new pumping system but noted that the following year they couldn't make the pool self sufficient.

During the past three years, the golf course has drained the pool each spring, filled it with water each winter, to protect it from frost and movement when the ground freezes, and sits empty during the summer according to Rodgers.

Southfield Environmental Health Supervisor Galen Garst is surprised to hear that the pool still exists.

"Frankly, I'm surprised to hear the pool's still out there. I would have assumed it was filled in because of the actions we had taken (in the past)," Garst said.

In the months when it isn't cold enough for the water to freeze, leaves fall into the pool and questions regarding safety and health concerns surface.

Garst said a pool full of water and leaves may prevent someone from seeing the bottom of the pool and if a person were to fall in you would never be able to locate them.

He also said the health concerns involved stemmed from the water condition itself as it attracts mosquitoes, algae and other parasites that may be hazardous to one's health.

If the pool is not to be made operable Garst posed an alternative that would preserve the pool's historical value.

"The university could preserve the pool's historical significance by turning it into a fountain so its not full of stagnant water. I'm not saying that's a solution, but it's an option to consider," Garst said.

Former swim club member, David Jaymes liked the idea of turning the pool into a fountain but said that isn't his first choice.

"My first choice is to see it used as a swimming pool," said the Meadow Brook faculty subdivision resident.

Jaymes also disagrees that the pool would not be able to support itself.

"For a long time there was a waiting list and then it seemed like overnight we were told we were lacking members," Jaymes said. He feels that the problems with the pool relate to management and not membership.

Jaymes also said that interest to re-open the pool still exist. "In terms of money we'd be willing to pay our fair share and work to find other people to support the opening of the pool and making its repairs to meet health standards," he said.

According to Bill Rodgers there are no plans at this point to re-open the pool and that people seeking recreational swimming on campus could look towards the new recreation facility to meet their needs.

However, Jaymes says the new facility wouldn't address the needs of the community swimmers who once used the outdoor pool.

"There are very few swimming pools in Rochester, and this was a place where families could swim in the summer," Jaymes said. He added that no one would want to swim in an indoor pool during the summer months.

Ring in the New Year

Now that the holiday season is behind us, we can all get back to normal.

We can take down the trees, put away the holiday trimmings and take back all the unwanted presents we received.

It is also a time to begin making all of those credit card payments on the gifts you bought for others, as well as the things you couldn't resist for yourself. All of the, "Pay nothing until after Christmas" offers which seemed so good at the time have us now kicking ourselves for buying so much.

For those who did not reach their fill of waiting in long lines during the holidays, there is always the knowledge that you'll have to wait just as long to pick up your books in the bookstore.

Of course if the lines in the book store are long, the lines in the parking lot are even worse. It seems as though enrollment has doubled since December and drivers who mastered the fine art of stealing parking spaces while shopping over the holidays, have now decided to use their new found skill here at school.

It seems as if the parking lots have hundreds more cars and the only parking spot is either at Squirrel Road or at Varner Hall when all of your classes are in South Foundation.

Whether the numbers have actually gone up or not we really don't know but it certainly looks that way when you see all of the people around.

Things haven't really changed much since we've been gone. We're still complaining about parking, we still need a president and everyone is fed up with the weather.

But with all that stayed the same, a few new things are happening at OU.

With the start of the new year we begin a whole new set of classes. There are new professors and classmates to meet, new deadlines to keep and a whole new slew of goals to set.

At this point in time most of us are still sticking to our plans of reading the assignment for our class and we plan to start early on the report due at the end of the semester, we'll have it done by the mid-term easily.

But in reality, we will fall behind in our reading within the next couple weeks and will be writing that report while cramming for final exams, but hey it's always good to have a plan.

Speaking of plans, what about all of the plans we made when we rang in the new year?

By now all of us who seemed so determined to stick with our resolutions this year are now thinking they would do better next year.

So, if you've already fallen off of the resolution wagon don't feel bad, so did just about everyone else.

If you are one of the few still hanging on to their New Year's resolutions good for you! But you'd better not hold out too long because you're making the rest of us look bad.

Besides, how do you expect to stick to that diet with Pizza Hut arriving on campus? You won't be able to hold out for too long when you smell those personal pan pizzas cooking.

But don't fret, it is a new year and we all can change. We can try and make the new year's resolutions work. We can stick to our study plans and actually try to be the good students we want to be.

It'll take some effort and if our goals are too high, we may not be able to reach them just yet, but even if we get part way there at least we'll be better off than where we started.

The key is to think positively. Spring will be here before you know it (although right now it seems as though it's going to take forever).

With the arrival of spring comes a new set of fun goals to make up for the unfulfilled winter ones.

So if you don't quite stick to that diet or you fall out of the exercise routine, just think you'll have another chance in just a couple of months.

PEOPLE FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD CONVERGE AT THE AUTO SHOW: Just a quick overview of a couple of displays from the more than 700 exhibits.

Motown hosts the 80th annual North American International Auto Show at Cobo Hall in Detroit.

By PATTY YOUNG
Assistant Photo Editor

Get your motors running and cruise down to Cobo Hall, downtown Detroit, this week to catch a glimpse of The 1996 North American International Auto Show.

The auto show hosted by Detroit for the past 80 years, annually combines automotive tradition with flourishing futuristic concepts.

One of the many innovative concepts this year on display at the show evolved from OU. Members of OU's Society of Automotive Engineers have been involved in building and improving supermileage vehicles since 1984. SAE has entered those vehicles in numerous competitions in which the organization has been successful in taking top honors.

Junior engineering major, Jeff Fenoseff and engineering graduate student, David Stiles were on hand to answer auto show goers questions about last years two award winning vehicles showcased. Both were pleased to show Detroit a little part of OU.

"I think it's excellent exposure for OU. It allows the public to see what we are doing at Oakland," said Fenoseff. The exhibit had experienced so much exposure the first day of the show that virtually all of SAE's giveaway buttons, bookmarks and literature had run out. "It's been pretty busy. We have the ideal location right next to the virtual reality ride and the restrooms," laughed Stiles.

In addition to OU's supermileage vehicle, there are over 700 models derived from 40 manufacturers which marks for some heavy competition. Automobile manufactures used every element imaginable to design extraordinary displays to race for the consumers interest.

Entrancing viewers with a huge wall of video screens playing scenes from the recently released blockbuster movie "Goldeneye" starring Pierce Brosnan as the new James Bond, BMW drew in so many people continuously that auto show goers waited like circling sharks around the revolving sports car in hopes of getting behind its wheel.

"The James Bond car is one of the coolest cars I've ever seen," said 33 year old George Winston from Brussels, Belgium. "I liked the tan leather interior and overall its style."

Marketing style and elegance, GMC opted to develop an artistic setting for its 1996 truck series. The trucks are set up as pieces of art in a gallery. Jeep Wrangler climbed to a new altitude by creating a rock mountain set equipped with two jeeps and a rock climber.

Making a change for the better

By JILL SERES
Staff Writer

It's a new year, new semester, new books, new professors and another chance to make and break New Year's Resolutions. People make them about studying harder, eating better, doing more for others or quitting smoking. "This is going to be my year, so I'm going to do better in school, remain serious about my classes," said Marcus McDaniel sociology junior. McDaniel was proudly keeping his resolution on the second day of the semester. Another studious male who has made them before but never managed to keep them, made two resolutions this year. "... actually stay focused this year in school. And watch what I eat, but I kind of blew that already," Mack Hendricks, a computer science senior, said. Eating and losing weight are popular themes in resolution-making. "... try to lose ten pounds and stop procrastinating," Amanda Trim, communications senior, said. Trim has not yet managed to keep any resolutions, but perhaps this will be her year to succeed. Another person that always makes them but never keeps them is Teresa Martin, education senior. "... lose weight, spend less of my husband's money, and stop dropping in on my former professors - I've broken that one already," Martin said. Health-conscious Sue-Ellen Parker, education freshman wants to give up smoking. "I'm going to quit on the 9th, because I just got back from vacation, and it's cold out. I want to study more - I'm going to read the assigned books," Parker said. Abby Miller, English and Russian junior prefers to make her commitments on a daily basis, rather than just once a year. "We should be making resolutions every day - I try to - from a God perspective," Miller said. She works on one thing at a time every day until it's right, then moves on to the next. Dave Cameron, journalism junior, has just one thing to work on this year. "... to improve my speech, because I stutter," Cameron said. Cameron has made a commitment to attend speech therapy sessions at Beaumont Hospital this year. He's given up on trying to make minor resolutions because he only keeps them for about two weeks. It seems that the older we get, the less likely we are to make New Year's Resolutions. Paul Franklin, Coordinator of Campus Programs and John Gardner, Final Dean candidate of the School of Business Administration, said they just don't make resolutions any more. We make 'em, we break 'em and sometimes we keep 'em. Happy New Year.

Political camping trip

By AMBER FOULKROD
Special Writer

What would three political titans have to say to each other during a weekend alone in the woods? That's what Mark St. Germain speculates upon in his comedy, Camping with Henry and Tom, currently running at the Meadow Brook Theatre. "Advanced sales for the play are going extremely well," said Mike Vigilant, Public Relations Manager for Meadow Brook Theatre. Vigilant attributes these sales to, "word of mouth, pre-play publicity and the strength of the characters." The play bases its story on an actual camping trip that Henry Ford, Thomas Edison and President Warren G. Harding took in 1921. In reality the trio was surrounded by a huge entourage of reporters at all times. St. Germain, for the sake of the play, allows them to escape into the woods. Unfortunately for the characters of the play, their plan goes awry when Ford's model T crashes into a deer and then a tree, and they become temporarily stranded. The play then explores what might have happened if these three powerful figures had found themselves in this situation. On the agenda is a startling revelation by Henry Ford, proclaiming that he wants the president's job. Moreover, he's willing to do whatever it takes to get it, including revealing President Harding's mistress and illegitimate child. That's the beginning of a lengthy discussion, during which President Harding and Henry Ford take opposing sides. Thomas Edison gets appointed referee, and spends the rest of the play serving as a witty commentator on the foibles of humankind. Booth Coleman, better known to Meadow Brook Theatre goers as Ebenezer Scrooge, stars as the witty Thomas Edison. Coleman won a "Best Actor" award from the Detroit Free Press for his work in 1991's Inherit the Wind, another Meadow Brook Theatre production.

CIPO This Week!

We hope you are excited about the 1995/96 year. Please read this ad on a weekly basis to find out some of the programs and services available to you. CIPO PROGRAMS will offer a variety of programs this year which we hope the OU community will find interesting and enjoyable. The fall schedule includes:

Annual Leadership Retreat
The third annual all campus/off campus leadership retreat will take place January 12, 13, & 14. If you have signed up but not received your confirmation and information sheet, please come into the CIPO Office!

Blood Drive
Oakland University's Winter Blood Drive will take place on January 17 and 18, 1996. You can call CIPO at 2020 to make an appointment. Help us avoid long waits by signing up early! Help spread the word and get others to give also. Every pint counts.

Trip to Europe
This year's trip will feature London, Paris and Berlin. The trip will take place May 7 - 21, 1996. The cost will be $2820 based on fifteen participants (price will be lowered to $2495 if there are 25 participants), which will include transportation, lodging, tours and much more. Pick up a brochure at the CIPO Service Window.

The trip is brought to you through the cooperative efforts of CIPO, Department of Modern Languages, Department of International Studies and the Honors Colleges.

The Student Life Lecture Board
The SLLB presents award winning author Terry McMillan on Tuesday, January 30, 1996 at 2:30 p.m. in the Crockery. McMillan wrote three books including "Waiting to Exhale".

Tickets on sale at the CIPO Service Window. Prices are: $3 for OU Students, $6 for OU employees & $9 for the general public. All tickets purchased on or before January 29 will be discounted $1 each.

In addition all OU students and staff who buy a ticket will receive a free ticket to Patricia Russell-McCloud's February 8 lecture.

Student Organizations
New Student Organizations may be registered prior to February 2, 1996. Registration forms are available in CIPO. Student Organization Training Session for Organization Presidents and Treasurers will be held:
Monday, January 22: 10:00 a.m. & 6:00 p.m.
Tuesday, January 23: 3:00 p.m.
Wednesday, January 24: 2:00 p.m. & 6:00 p.m.

Men extend streak to five games

By CHRIS TAIT
Sports Editor

The men's basketball team rolled in the new year by sweeping a two game series in the Upper Peninsula and garnering Head Coach Greg Kampe's 200th win.

The first stop was at Lake Superior State University, where the Pioneers dropped the Lakers 90-81 last Thursday. The win upped Kampe's record to 200-122 over 12 seasons.

Senior Tom Marowelli led the way for OU with a double double. He netted 26 points and pulled down 13 rebounds, leading all players in both categories.

With all of its starters scoring in double digits, the game marked the return of the previously high-scoring Pioneer offense.

Before the Christmas break, OU had struggled on offense and seemed to over pass the ball, giving up wide open shots.

"In the beginning of the season people were scared to take the open shot, but now we really have our confidence back," Marowelli said.

He added that part of the reason for making the extra pass is because the team is very unselfish.

Agreeing, Kampe said that winning his 200th game is nice, but it is really something that he can really appreciate 30 years from now when he looks back on his achievements.

"I don't think that it is something that you get caught up in. Right now, we're focusing on winning a conference championship, trying to get back to the NCAA Tournament," Kampe said.

Strange as it may sound, Kampe told his troops to play like it would never score another point and to rely on defense to win the ballgames.

"When we came back from break, we were worried about our offense, but he told us to rely on our defense," Marowelli said.

Part of the problem, he added, was that the team was trying to push the issue on offense and letting the offense dictate how good the defense was.

The veteran players responded to the challenge. Senior Matt Stuck added 16 points, and seven rebounds, while juniors Dan Buza and Kevin Kovach both scored 12.

The Pioneers set the net on fire in the first half to hold on for the victory.

In the first half, the Pioneers shot 61.3% from the floor and 64.7% from behind the three-point arc going 11-17. At halftime the Pioneers led 49-34.

The next stop was Northern Michigan University where Stuck scorched the Wildcats for 25 points and seven rebounds as he led OU to its first sweep of the UP with a 89-67 win last Saturday.

This game was different that the LSSU game because the team used a strong second half to clinch the victory as Stuck lit up the net going 8-8 from the floor and scoring 20 of his 25 points in the second frame.

"Stuck played above and beyond both days. In fact, Saturday's game was probably the single best performance of his career at Oakland and it came at a very important time. That's the sign of a true leader," Kampe said.

OU also received a belated Christmas present at NMU as sophomore guard Denny Amrhein returned to the lineup after missing five games with a stress fracture in his right foot.

Kampe said that Amrhein is playing at about 90% and was quick with the ball and distributed it well during the 20 minutes he played.

"All of the credit has to go to Denny and to our trainer Tom Ford. Denny was very diligent in doing what it took to get his foot ready," Kampe said.

The Pioneers posted good numbers in the second half, improving on its first half against LSSU. It shot 72.4% from the floor, 78.6% from three-point land and 75% from the charity stripe.

Four other players scored in double figures: Marowelli had 10, Buza had 15, and Kovach had 19 and freshman Matt McClellan had 10.

Struggling in the first half of the NMU game, McClellan provided the spark from off the bench to keep OU in the game.

In 14 minutes, McClellan posted 10 points, 9 rebounds and was 2-3 from the free-throw line.

"We have to get him more minutes," Kampe said, adding that the toughest thing for this budding star is playing behind a strong group of seniors.

Kampe also said that the performance of McClellan in the NMU indicates the depth of this year's squad.

"You've got to have more than a starting lineup to win, and our bench is very solid," Kampe said.

The Blimpie Basketball Classic

In the final days of the old year, OU hosted the Blimpie Basketball Classic Dec. 29-30.

In the opening round the Pioneers faced Aquinas, which had already upset OU at the Calvin Thanksgiving Classic, 72-83.

This time however, OU carved up Aquinas 100-66 and sent the NCAA a message.

Addressing the importance of

the win, Kampe said that "we needed to win that game, and we needed to win it decisively so the people at the NCAA, when they select teams for the tournament can say that it was just a fluke that Aquinas beat Oakland. By beating them by 34, I think that we did it."

Kovach was the offensive star of the tournament scoring 25 against Aquinas, and then paced OU with 24 against U-M Dearborn in the championship game as the Pioneers won 86-61.

This senior class marks the first time in OU history that a class has swept the Blimpie all four years.

The Pioneers host Northwood University tomorrow as the team looks to extend its five game win streak. However Kampe said that his team will be challenged by the style the NU plays.

"Northwood is off to one of its best starts, and they have a player that is leading the nation in scoring. They'll pose a challenge because they are very athletic and they drive at the basket," Kampe said.

He also said that Saturday's game against Grand Valley State University will be tough because of the strong tradition of the school, and they are usually one of the better teams in the league.

FORCING THE PLAY: Junior Kevin Kovach puts the shake-and-bake on the defense. Kovach lit up the nets for the Pioneers in the Blimpie Basketball Classic over the break.

Women's BBall splits series

By CHRIS TAIT
Sports Editor

The women's basketball team started the new year off by splitting a road series in the upper peninsula against Lake Superior State University and Northern Michigan University last week.

The Pioneers dominated the second half of last Thursday's matchup with LSSU to win 75-56. However, the offense stalled as it headed to NMU where it lost 66-63.

Head Coach Bob Taylor said that getting the lead in the first half was the key to winning. "We were up by five at the half, and their team isn't suited to be a come back team. They are big and strong, and as they forced the tempo, it played into the quickness of our team."

Senior Heather Bateman led the scoring effort notching 20 points and adding seven rebounds. Juniors Lori Young and Alyson McChesney chipped in 11 points and six rebounds each.

Usually a scoring threat, senior Deanna Richards couldn't get her shots to fall, going 2-8 from three-point land. Not putting up the big offensive numbers, she played strong on the boards collecting a team leading 11 rebounds.

"She is a good shooter, and if you accept when the shot falls you have to accept when it doesn't," Taylor said.

He thought his team played well, especially out rebounding the league leader in rebounding.

However the story was much different on Saturday when OU faced NMU. In this game Richard came ou on fire, hitting for 23 points and leading the offense. Bateman added 18 points and 10 rebounds. Senior Kristen Francis was limited to just six points, but ripped down 14 rebounds, 13 of which were off the defensive glass.

the School on to the next level which is working with the business community. I think he's the person who can lead us in that direction."

Gardner comes to OU with a full portfolio of credentials. His most recent from Binghamton where he created and raised financial support for the Center for the Study of Ethics and Behavior in Accounting (CEBA) at the university.

Other accomplishments since starting at Binghamton in 1989 include:

- Working with Price Waterhouse to provide financial support for the School of Management Honors Program.
- Establishing a Corporate Associates Program between the School of Management and local corporations.
- Developing a five-year accounting program.
- Developing an Honors Program for the top 10 percent of incoming accounting and management students.

"I'm delighted with our choice," said Eileen Peacock who headed the SBA dean search committee. "I think he has a lot of experience with dealing with the business community, and he's also quite well known in academic circles which also its obvious advantages. He brings to the university a new set of contacts."

Gardner also brings to the Motor City his "baby."

His baby, a tan with black interior 1969 T-Bird, once belonged to his mother and has only 34,000 miles on its 429 cubic inch 360 horse power engine.

He's looking for a town house or apartment to rent in the Rochester area, close to coffee shops, bike trails and a gas station.

Gardner will leave his 1957 Chevy Bellaire with one of his three sons, but brings his Suzuki Intruder low-rider to Michigan.

When he's not working on his vehicles, Gardner enjoys scuba diving, lifting weights and has recently started snow skiing.

Gardner describes himself as a very balanced person, and believes that he will be able to work in a way that takes care of his responsibilities both inside and outside OU.

"Program development, continuing education and relationships with companies are all important," he said. "The dean has to spend a fair amount of time externally, but I don't ignore problems."

He is looking forward to working with faculty to make the program more exciting.

"You should be proud of the faculty at OU," Gardner said.

Meanwhile, complaints filed by The Oakland Post in October for alleged state open meetings act violations by the search committee during their weeding out process are still pending in the Oakland County Prosecutor's office.

Classrooms

more sections that they know would be filled and would bring more money to the university, that they should," said Moroz.

However, class sections cannot be added without classroom space. Classroom space seems to be a fairly new problem on campus within the last few years.

"I am seeing this problem not only from an advisor's standpoint but as a graduate as well. I don't recall ever having to run around for teachers' signatures or being on a waiting list for classes. Now it seems to be becoming more the norm," said Moroz.

He feels that steps are being taken to accommodate, but at a rate that cannot keep up with the numbers. "I don't think anyone anticipated it (enrollment) to increase so quickly," Moroz said.

He also feels that it is easier for some departments than others. "We are offering more classes at elementary schools," Moroz said of the School of Education and Human Services, "But that's a luxury that other departments don't have."

While OU is trying to accommodate more students by offering courses at extension sites and establishing complete degree programs off campus as well, demand for classes on campus is growing.

Kevin Early, assistant professor of sociology, believes that before the university can grow, some changes need to be made internally.

"Before we do anything we need to get a president. Then, we need to have an advocate in Lansing like our sister schools do," he said.

Early feels that he would rather see OU make necessary changes internally by adding buildings and updating equipment than seeing growth off campus. "I would rather be at a good small school than a mediocre big school, Not that OU is a mediocre school, if it was I wouldn't be here," he said.

"Just as a child grows into its body, a university has to grow into its body as well. OU is overgrown," Early said.

Kendzier hopes that OU will be able to provide adequate class space and previously unoffered sections of classes to ensure that enrollment will continue to grow. "We've gotten them here, now let's keep them here," she said.

Swimmers win in Hawaii

Dual meet undefeated streak continues

By CHRIS TAIT
Sports Editor

Surf, sun, sand, and some competition were all on the agenda for the men's swimming team as it headed to Hawaii.

The team left for Oahu on Dec. 21 and returned home on Jan. 5 to prepare for the new semester.

The men extended its dual meet unbeaten streak as it defeated the University of Hawaii 128-94, Dec. 30.

The Pioneers won 12 events, paced by Senior Chris Zoltak's 50-yard freestyle and 200-yard backstroke victories.

The winning 400 Medley Relay unit of Zoltak, senior Jens Kristensen and juniors Joe Snyder and Jay Judson helped OU climb out to an early lead as it won the opening event.

The Pioneers also grabbed the third and final scoring position in the opening relay.

Junior James Collins swam to first place finishes in the 200-yard Butterfly and the 500-yard Freestyle events.

The main reason the Pioneers packed up their bags was for some tough competition from big Division I schools at the 21st Annual Rainbow Invitational. The swimming and diving meet was hosted by U-H Jan. 2-3.

Participants for the men included: U-H, OU, Northern Illinois University, Drury College, Purdue University, Villanova University, and University of Wisconsin.

Men's Swim Coach Pete Hovland said that the weather and facilities were both excellent.

"You couldn't be in a more gorgeous place, so there were plenty of distractions to keep their minds off how hard they were training," Hovland said.

To be sure. The training included two sessions a day, seven days a week for two and a half hours at a time.

Although the meet wasn't geared to OU's advantages like team depth, the Pioneers placed fourth out of seven teams.

PU won with 145 points, with U-H taking second with 73. Then the log jam.

U-W earned a third place finish with 68 points, followed by OU with 67 followed by Drury with 66. VU and NIU rounded out the bottom.

Hovland said that he was very pleased with the team's performance, which met the goals it had wonders for our attitude," Hovland said.

He added that for the team to swim as fast as it did, as hard as it was training is a good indication of just how solid the team is.

The trip was designed for competition and to give the team a major opportunity to bond and get to know each other better.

"I think that we're a lot tighter of about other places to go."

As he thought of ideas, he remembered swimming in Hawaii when he was in College at Chico State University.

"I worked all spring and summer on putting the trip together, but they raised all of the money themselves by working at the Gus Macker Tournament, and as ushers at Lion's games," Hovland said.

He said that the results of the trip are so great that he is looking at going every four years, or possibly every other year.

One of the conditions that Hovland placed on the team was that most of the team had to go on the trip.

"I told them that 98% of the team had to commit to doing this because I am not going to go on a training trip and leave people home and have them miss out on the team camaradery that takes place on a trip like that," Hovland said.

Only two swimmers didn't go on the trip, and only one was for personal reasons. The other, Arthur Albiero, didn't attend because he was competing in the Brazilian Nationals.

The main deterrent, he said, is the cost. "The team would definitely like to do it again, but financially I don't know," Hovland added.

One of the biggest advantages of swimming at the invitational was that every school other than OU and Drury was Division I.

Hovland said that the meet provided the type of competition that is hard for the Pioneers to find.

He added swimming against opponents that are stronger and from bigger schools will be a huge benefit in March at the NCAA II Championships.

The Pioneers get another shot at a Division I team when Eastern Michigan University comes to town Friday.

"They're good we know that. Being able to go toe-to-toe against quality competition, that's what is going to prepare us come March," Hovland said.

set for the meet.

"Only eight people advance to the finals. Our goal was to get at least one person in a final for each event, and we did it all except for one event," Hovland said.

OU won both the 100-yard Backstroke and the 50-yard Freestyle. Junior Raffi Karapetian earned the first Pioneer victory in the free, and Zoltak earned the other in the backstroke.

"I think that swimming against Division I schools like Purdue did a unit than we were in the first semester. That is a real positive," Hovland said.

This was the first time that OU has traveled to the Rainbow Invitational. In previous seasons the team has traveled to south Florida, usually Ft. Lauderdale.

Hovland explained the reason for the change in scenery: "Our seniors and the rest of the team felt that they got tired and were getting bored, believe it or not, going to Ft. Lauderdale. So, they approached me

Basketball

The biggest flaw for the Pioneers was its 26 turnovers and going 12-28 underneath the basket.

Taylor said that the offense never got in sync and NMU played real strong defense.

The game came down to the final minutes when OU grabbed its first lead of the game to lead 63-62, but NMU scored the final four points to clinch the win.

"We forced them to take a tough shot, about a 12-footer, which they made. Then, we missed a good shot and had to foul," Taylor explained.

NMU made their free throws and took the victory away from OU.

Taylor said the win would have put OU one step closer to being in the driver's seat in the league, but it still has an impressive 10-2 record and the loss only puts more pressure to win tomorrow night against Northwood University and Saturday at Grand Valley State University.

"Northwood is playing really well. They beat Lake Superior," Taylor said, adding that NU likes to play a half-court game and take advantage of its size. "The key will be playing our game and controlling the tempo."

Taylor also thinks that the Pioneers will be in for a real battle when it faces GVSU because the teams are so similar, with both playing an up tempo style.

Will work for points

POINTS IN THE PAINT: Senior Heather Bateman works hard to score down low. Last week Bateman led the Pioneers to a victory over Lake Superior State University as she netted 20 points and seven rebounds. In Saturday's loss to Northern Michigan University she posted 18 points and ripped down 10 rebounds.

"This is very creative," said 45 year old Mitzeal Shanize-Veranian from the Ukraine who was amazed by the extremes that the companies went to in displaying their automobiles.

OU alumni Kim Beal, '74 and Gay Chrostek-Beal, '71 visited the show with their daughter Alison. They also were impressed by the Jeep Wrangler exhibit. "Every couple of years we come down and each show has central exhibits that make it unique," said Kim.

Beyond the spectrum of the automotive kind, the show offered numerous other special features that lures people back to the show in 1997. Demonstrations of skill by the 1996 U.S.

Olympic Gymnastic Team attracted hundreds of people. Race car fans waited in long lines to compete against the infamous Mario Andretti on a virtual reality ride at an additional cost. Fans of indoor soccer, ice hockey and indy car racing could meet and get autographs from players or drivers.

Defensemen Randy Prescott and midfielder Doug Landefeld of the Detroit Rockers indoor soccer team said the team has participated in the auto show for the past three years and said that they enjoy doing it.

"I think we have a pretty good position this year. We have had a steady stream of people come through and we're getting a lot of exposure so that's good because one of the problems with the team is that we don't get enough exposure," Prescott said.

CALL FOR NOMINATIONS 1995 Teaching Excellence Award

The Senate Teaching and Learning Committee is pleased to announce a call for nominations for the 1995 Teaching Excellence Award. One award will be made for the academic year 1995-96 to a full-time, tenured or tenure-track member of the Oakland University faculty. The award includes a cash stipend of $2500, provided by the Oakland University Foundation and will be presented at the fall 1995 commencement.

Nominations may be made by any member of the Oakland University community, including faculty, students, alumni, administrators, and staff. The letter of nomination should contain sufficient supporting statements to permit an initial review of the nominee. Examples of bases on which faculty might be nominated include:

- Superior classroom performance
- Innovative instructional practice
- High educational standards
- Maintenance of a productive or inspirational learning environment.

The Committee will contact the nominees and the chairs of their departments to request additional information. Previous Teaching Excellence Award winners and current members of the Teaching and Learning Committee are not eligible for nomination. A plaque containing the names of previous Teaching Excellence Award winners is on display in the lobby of Kresge Library.

Nominations will be accepted through February 1, 1996. Letters of nomination should be sent to:
