Message Spurs Hunt for Submarine

Radio Call Hoax?

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The massive search for the atomic submarine Scorpion and her 99-man crew centered off the Virginia capes today after receipt of a radio signal from a sender identifying itself as the missing craft.

A patrol plane and six ships reported picking up last night a "very clear" signal. But a Navy spokesman said early today, "It could be a hoax."

★ ★ ★

Cmdr. T. L. Ingraham, public affairs officer of the Atlantic Fleet's submarine force also told a news conference, however: "The Navy still maintains hope."

The submarine, missing since Monday, is the object of the greatest air-sea search ever mounted by the Navy — 10,000 men, 55 ships and 30 planes.

NO FURTHER MESSAGES

The radio message was picked up when the patrol plane receiving it was 110 miles east of Norfolk. Search units were concentrated in an area stretching from 110 miles to more than 300 miles east of Norfolk. But no further radio transmissions were reported.

The sole message said: "Any station this network. This is (and then gave the code name for the Scorpion)."

★ ★ ★

The Navy said the code name has been repeated numerous times in communications among the search force ships and planes.

Ingraham said the Navy did not definitely believe the message came from the Scorpion. He added it could have come from a shore radio.

CAUTION URGED

The Pentagon previously cautioned against overoptimism that a dramatic development had occurred. Like Ingraham, the Pentagon said the message could have been a hoax.

Navy sources said one of the craft picking up the message was the nuclear submarine Lapon, which was 300 miles east of Norfolk. They said the Lapon took a bearing of 075 degrees east northeast of the signal, which would place the transmitting point farther out to sea.

Ingraham said, "It is extremely doubtful that a transmission of this type could be originated by a submarine that may be submerged or bottomed in that vicinity"—the general area where the signal was heard.

He said the Scorpion "certainly would know a search was in progress for her" and "she would be on the surface" transmitting.

Ingraham reported the ocean in the general area where the signal was heard is 12,000 feet deep. This is well beyond the continental shelf, which extends some 70 to 80 miles seaward.

Explosion at Day Nursery Kills 7 Children, 2 Adults

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A flaming gas explosion wrecked a suburban day nursery yesterday, killing nine persons, seven of them children, 16 months to 4 years old. Three other children were injured.

Two women employes of the nursery in suburban Hapeville perished while trying to save the young children in their care.

"When you're crawling around and you hear babies pleading, and you can't find them, it hurts," said L. F. Redwine, who works nearby and plunged into the shattered building to help rescue the children.

Fire Chief J. P. Nunn said the explosion occurred after the operator of a bulldozer struck a gas line in front of the building. The escaping gas filled the basement of the nursery and was apparently ignited by a water heater flame or other spark, Nunn said.

AT HOME

Nunn was at his home in the same block as the nursery when he heard the explosion.

Police said the nursery manager, Mrs. J. M. Gardner, 50, of Hapeville, died in the flaming building after going back inside to try to evacuate the children.

★ ★ ★

Also killed was Mildred Reeves, about 30, of Atlanta, a nursery employe.

The immediate efforts of nursery employes and nearby workers kept the death list from rising higher, witnesses said.

The children were taking their daily nap when the gas line was broken, a nursery employe, Mrs. Willie Lee Reeds, said. Employes started taking one group of children to an adjoining house, then the explosion came.

It was hours before authorities could identify the seven dead children.

But after checking with the families of every child registered at the nursery, Hapeville police said only seven children were still unaccounted for.

Police identified the victims as Gail Cumby, 4, Hapeville; Roger Buckley, 2, Hapeville; Denise Emphrles, 2, Hapeville; Julie Whidby, 2, Forest Park; Ronnie Wilson, 3, Hapeville; Shelley Little, 16 months, East Point, and Michael Kingston, 2, Union City.

Income Tax Hike Near-Certainty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It appeared almost certain today that President Johnson would get his long-sought income tax increase, but he will also have to swallow an unwanted $6-billion cut in federal spending ordered by the House.

Passage of the 10 per cent income tax surcharge was a virtual certainty after the House yesterday defeated attempts by liberal House members to reduce the cut to $4 billion.

Congressional leaders expected passage on June 12. The Senate, which already has approved the tax increase and spending cut, was also expected to pass the House version and send it to Johnson for his signature.

The compromise hitching the surtax to the spending cut originally was worked out in the Senate when the tax-writing House Ways and means committee refused to act on the tax increase.

★ ★ ★

The big spending cut was the price Johnson had to pay to get economy-minded congressmen to okay the surtax.

Memorial Day—and Another War

By Newspaper Enterprise Association

It was in 1868 that John A. Logan, commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, directed that all G.A.R. posts set aside the 30th of May "for the purpose of strewing with flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country during the late rebellion."

At first, and for long afterward, called Decoration Day, the day was later changed to Memorial Day and came to be a time in which to honor the dead of all wars, not just those of the Civil War.

Today, the heroes' graves we would strew with flowers have multiplied by the tens of thousands and lie scattered about the entire world.

In the 100 years since that first Memorial Day, five more wars have called America's sons to fight and die in places far from home, places whose once-strange names are indelibly etched into history — San Juan Hill . . . Belleau Woods . . . Bastogne and Iwo Jima . . . Missionary Ridge . . . Khe Sanh . . .

★ ★ ★

Reckoning the Vietnam conflict from 1965, when massive American involvement began, 1968 marks the 14th year that Memorial Day, a day born in the aftermath of war, has been observed in the midst of war.

Fourteen years of war as opposed to 86 of peace — or what passes for peace in the affairs of nations.

★ ★ ★

Mathematically, peace would seem to have the best of it. Each new war, however, and each between wars period, has seen the development of ever more terrible engines of death.

The present "limited" war has witnessed the routine employment of more concentrated destruction than even during World War II. The brief desert battles in the six-day Arab-Israeli war eclipsed even the mass tank warfare of 1941 and '42 in numbers of vehicles engaged and destroyed.

Yet, men have managed to limit war, compared to what they could unleash. (Though what soldier killed this morning died a "limited" death?)

★ ★ ★

There may be wars and rumors of wars as far ahead as we can see. The graves will multiply, so long as the ideals for which the first American soldier died require the extreme sacrifice of succeeding generations of brave men.

But one day the last soldier's grave will be filled. This we must believe. And on that day, perhaps a new verse to the beloved "Taps" will tell all those who rest in honored glory that their deaths were not in vain, that —

War is done,
Stilled the guns,
O'er all lands, on the seas, in the sky,
All is well,
Soldier rest,
God is nigh.

News Flash

Swiss bankers warned today the entire western monetary system could collapse because the French franc had become "practically unsaleable" despite efforts by the United States to save it.

Switzerland's "big five" banks issued orders to all its branches to stop buying francs.

"We make no exceptions for any sellers," a Zurich banker said.

In Frankfurt, the West German Central Bank also stopped buying francs.

News Briefs off the Wires

PARIS (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle returned to the Elysee Palace today for a cabinet meeting that may decide his own political future and that of the government in the midst of France's strangling wave of strikes and social upheaval. De Gaulle presides over a meeting of the Council of Ministers this afternoon. A decision is expected to be taken at that time on whether the president should resign or stay at his post.

Morse Appears Victor

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Sen. Wayne Morse of Oregon hasn't claimed victory, but he appears today to have won renomination in the Democratic primary. Morse, 68, had 49 per cent of the vote with 97 per cent of the state's precincts reporting. His chief opponent, Robert B. Duncan, 48, had 47 per cent of the vote.

Busy Day for Johnson

AUSTIN, Tex., (AP) — President Johnson launched a busy Memorial Day sojourn to his Texas ranch today, calling for prayers for peace and conferring with his Vietnam military commander and an Asian ally. Gen. William C. Westmoreland and Australian Prime Minister John G. Gorton flew to join Johnson at the LBJ Ranch. The three were to appear on a nationally televised and broadcast news conference in the ranch plane hangar at 1:30 p.m., (EDT).

Loan-Truth Bill Signed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Johnson signed into law yesterday a measure which will require sellers to fully inform customers of the charges they impose on installment and other credit purchases.

★ ★ ★

The disclosure on interest rates, service charges and other extras will be mandatory starting July 1, 1969.

Backers Get Busy

DETROIT (AP) — In the wake of Sen. Eugene McCarthy's upset victory over Sen. Robert F. Kennedy in the Oregon primary, backers of each presidential candidate stepped up efforts to win support for their man among Michigan delegates to the Democratic national convention. Supporters of McCarthy claimed his victory over Kennedy should keep delegates chosen at this weekend's state convention from stampeding to Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey. Kennedy forces, obviously stung by his defeat Tuesday in Oregon, yesterday trotted out a new Labor for Kennedy group headed by presidents of two massive United Auto Workers locals.

Rain Adds Road Peril

By the Associated Press

Rain slicked highways had posed a hazard to motorists in many parts of the country today as thousands filled the nation's roadways on this first full day of the extended Memorial Day weekend.

The toll climbed slowly and reached 20 early this morning.

Pontiac Press Photo by Edward R. Noble

LEST WE FORGET — Despite the holiday air surrounding Memorial Day, traditionally the signal for the beginning of summer activities, lies the understanding that this is a solemn day. In the Pontiac area, as across the nation, many a prayer and gun salute will resound to honor those who died defending our country. This World War I fieldpiece under a lowered flag at Perry Mount Park Cemetery, provides a symbol of the day's basic solemnity.

Review of Case Urged

Killing of Jimmie King 'Legal'

A coroner's jury yesterday found that Jimmie King, 17, was killed in the "act of fleeing from police in the commission of a felony" and that there was no unlawful act involved in the shooting.

★ ★ ★

The jury, however, recommended that because of conflicting testimony the Oakland County prosecutor should review the case.

King was fatally shot the morning of Dec. 7 by Pontiac police after a chase in a stolen car.

★ ★ ★

A coroner's jury, called on the order of the Oakland County Circuit Court judge, heard testimony yesterday from four witnesses, two police officers and two clerk-dispatchers of the police department.

REFUTE TESTIMONY

The dispatchers both testified under oath that one of the officers involved in the chase knew that it was King they were chasing before they shot him.

★ ★ ★

The police officers testifying yesterday, however, refuted that testimony.

Members of the coroner's jury said that the case should be reviewed because of the conflicting claims.

★ ★ ★

"It is apparent that someone is lying," one juror said.

OFFICERS' TESTIMONY

Chief Assistant Prosecutor Thomas G. Plunkett Jr. said, after being informed of the jury's decision: "We will be happy to review it any time evidence brought to our attention in this matter and would respect the request of the inquest to do so."

★ ★ ★

According to testimony of officers Travis A. Lively and Dennis Mutrynowski, both 27, — taken last week — they shot at King while they were chasing him driving a stolen car and after he abandoned the car and was attempting to elude the officers on foot.

Both officers testified that they had no idea of King's identity before he was felled and they saw him lying on the street, bleeding from the wound which eventually killed him.

★ ★ ★

Testimony of the two police dispatchers — both Negroes — was that either Lively or Mutrynowski had radioed to the main police station that they were chasing King before he was shot to death.

IMPLICATION

The implication of that testimony is that the officers knew King — a juvenile — and shot at him with that knowledge.

Mutrynowski and Lively testified that they had arrested King about a week before in connection with another stolen car.

★ ★ ★

Whether or not the officers knew that it was King they were chasing likely will not change the fact that the Oakland County prosecutor has declared the shooting a justifiable homicide, observers acquainted with such proceedings said.

According to Michigan law, any police officer has the authority to shoot at a person fleeing a felony if that person refused to stop for police.

According to Dr. Bernard D. Berman, Oakland County health director and the county's medical examiner, King was killed by a bullet from Lively's police service revolver.

★ ★ ★

Lively said he fired after repeated warnings and was aiming at King's legs in an attempt to halt his flight. According to an autopsy of King's body, he was killed by a bullet which entered hi right buttock and severed a femoral artery in his right leg.

Robber Abducts, Slugs City Man

A Pontiac man was abducted, held for an hour and 40 minutes, hit on the head and robbed of $8 last night, according to Pontiac police.

★ ★ ★

According to police reports, Craig and his son, James, 12, visited the store. When they returned to their car, a man was in the rear seat and he grabbed Craig and ordered the son to leave the car.

★ ★ ★

Calories Don't Count At U. S. Military Academy

West Point Menu: Food Galore

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — That trim, well-conditioned cadet at the U.S. Military Academy consumes more calories than a combat soldier—and almost twice as many as a civilian.

He and his 3,200, West Point classmates annually go through 135,000 loaves of bread, 80,000 pies and cakes, 800,000 cups of ice cream, tons of meat and vegetables and more peanut butter than you'd care to count the calories for.

★ ★ ★

The academy's menu board does the caldrie counting for the cadet, and each one averages between 4,500 and 5,000 calories per day.

"Five thousand calories seems like an awful lot, but believe me these cadets run it off," says Maj. Jerry L. Hearn, officer in charge of the cadet mess.

USED UP FAST

When the day begins at 6 a.m. and includes a required athletic program in the afternoon, the calories go very fast. As the dietitians figure it, a cadet uses up 4 calories per pound of weight per hour of running; 4.5 calories, swimming; 1 calorie, typing and even .7 calories eating.

Cadets gain or lose as much as 20 pounds when they arrive as freshmen, but after about two months the weight-gaining evens out. They end up with an average gain of eight pounds for the entire four years.

"Nutritionally, with 5,000 calories, you can't miss," said Capt. Bonnie Moscatelli, the chief of food srvices division at the academy's hospital and a member of the menu board. The real problem, she said, is pleasing the individual tastes of 3,200 cadets who have "immature stomachs."

Pizza and steak are their favorites, with asparagus, brussels sprouts and liver at the opposite end of the popularity scale.

A big event for the cadets is the traditional Wednesday steak night.

"If I didn't have steak on Wednesday night," said Hearn, "I'd have a riot on my hands. Besides the cadets have a strong argument—they say Pershing and Eisenhower had it, why change it. They had it and look how they turned out."

On a typical Wednesday the cadets begin the day with chilled apricot halves, assorted dry cereals with light cream, scrambled eggs, crisp bacon, hashed brown potatoes, hot raisin muffins, toast, butter, assorted jams and jellies, coffee and milk.

For lunch, they might be served pork chow mein with mushrooms and bean sprouts, steamed rice, fried noodles, cottage cheese, jubilee salad, bread, butter pineapple sheet cake with butter cream icing, iced orangeade and milk.

With their sirloin steak for dinner, they get french fried potatoes, buttered succotash, chef's salad bowl, garlic bread and butter, blueberry pie a la mode, coffee, iced tea and milk.

Pay Tribute to Servicemen Who Died for Our Freedom

(EDITOR'S NOTE: In keeping with our policy of publishing guest editorials from time to time, our Memorial Day editorial has been written by Lieutenant Commander Herman L. Zeller, Commanding Officer, Naval Reserve Training Center in Pontiac.)

By HERMAN L. ZELLER, Lt. Cmdr.

Memorial Day is here once again and to the great mass of working Americans it will be just another day off during the week. Quite probably the most significant event will be the big race at Indianapolis, or the baseball games.

ZELLER

Some of us may go see the numerous parades in this area or even be so patriotic as to participate in them. We may even be blessed with decent enough weather for a family picnic. But how many Veterans' graves are decorated with flags and flowers this day? How many of your neighbors are flying the American flag in front of their homes?

★ ★ ★

One must go back to the days of the Civil War to arrive at the origin of Memorial Day, or Decoration Day as it was originally known. Times, we say, were different then and the national feeling ran closer to home. We were engaged in a tremendous struggle and it seemed only fitting and proper that a day be set aside to honor the fallen soldiers and sailors of that war.

During the course of the following century we became involved in two world wars and numerous other military actions. American soldiers and sailors fell in every one of them and still we honored them and glorified their Country.

Yet, today we say things are different. Different from when? Different from what? We are still Americans with the same guaranteed freedoms. Our pace of life may be accelerated and our conveniences more numerous, but there is no basic difference. We are essentially a peace-loving people who only wish other people the same peace.

★ ★ ★

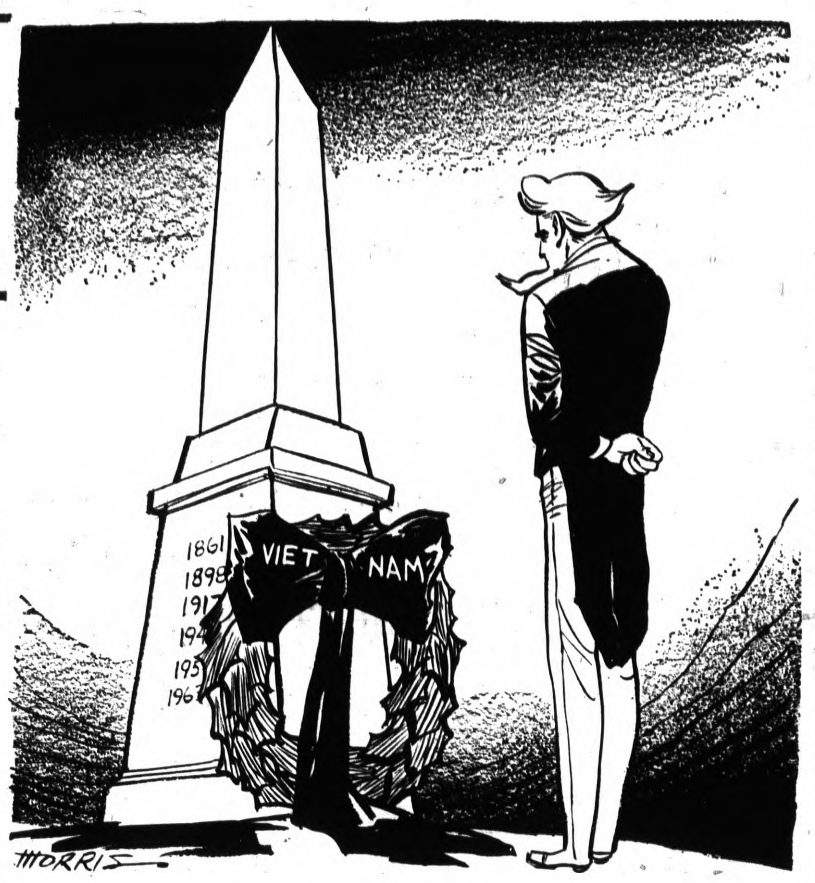
It is a simple thing for those who have not lost a loved one to ignore the deep significance of this day. The attitude of revelry soon overshadows the real meaning of Memorial Day.

★ ★ ★

In our community we have widows and parents of young loyal American servicemen who have given their lives in Vietnam. This day will not go unheeded by them for their memories are still too fresh to forget.

★ ★ ★

Let us all, young and old alike, reflect a moment through the course of American history and give praise and thanks to those soldiers and sailors who have passed on in the name of freedom that we today may enjoy the privileges of watching the big race, the ball games, the parades and the picnics as free Americans.



And May We Never Forget!

U.S. Maritime Might Is Leaking at the Seams

It wasn't so many years ago that the U.S. might well have been called a coastal nation. Its inhabitants lived largely near the sea. They built ships and sailed them. The people understood ships, they were proud of them. The U.S. Clipper ships were known around the world. Today, it is a safe bet that you couldn't name a U.S. cargo ship.

As a nation that depends on ships to move its products of farm and factory to countries around the world, we are largely dependent on foreign vessels. Since we are a maritime nation, this is sheer folly in peacetime and holds the seeds of disaster in a military emergency.

★ ★ ★

High military and civilian officials are calling on Congress for a strengthening of the U.S. Merchant Marine in the most forceful language they can command.

Leading steamship line officials, most notably those from a group of 13 companies operating 270 regularly-scheduled vessels in U.S. foreign trade from all coasts, are doing one of the most important selling jobs in this Country's history.

They are working to show that we are a maritime nation. They travel from city to city showing different regions, with cold figures, its dependence upon foreign trade. They have developed a Trade Expansion Program tailor-made to national needs at a time when increased exports have become a necessity. They are working to reawaken pride in the U.S. maritime tradition.

★ ★ ★

The Clipper ships have passed into history, but underestimation of our maritime needs could be the Achilles heel of U.S. security.

Justice Black's Views Show Change

By RAYMOND MOLEY

The convulsions that are so shaking what we choose to call our American civilization have finally revealed the essential inconsistency in what only a decade or two ago was called "liberalism. "For the modern liberal," unlike the liberal of a century ago, favors a greatly expanded, centralized authority but at the same time he loosely sustains all forms of personal freedom under the Bill of Rights.

This conveniently overlooks the necessity that there must be civil order if there is to be any freedom for the individual.

Indeed, the distinction between liberty and freedom should be very clear: liberty is something ordered and limited by authority; freedom, unlimited, is lawless license.

The bitter harvest of that inconsistency is what we are facing today.

Our Constitution sought effectively to reconcile civil order and personal liberty. For it is at once a charter of liberty and a pattern of public order and security.

AGE, MATURITY

One of the modern liberals who with age and maturity is now seeking to recover that constitutional balance is the venerable Justice Hugo Black.

As a senator before his 1937 appointment to the Supreme Court, he was a howling scourge of big business. And for many years he adhered, sometimes in the majority and sometimes in the minority, to those earlier prejudices.

More recently the flavor and implications of his opinions have revealed a considerable change in outlook. This change he has documented in three lectures at the Columbia University law school as late as March 1968.

He gently reminded the court that its governmental function is to interpret rather than to make laws. For he said, "The founders wrote into our Constitution their unending fear of granting too much power to judges."

MAJOR DISAGREEMENT

On two points especially he has disagreed with recent decisions of the court. One is the habit of applying the rule of "reasonableness" to laws of Congress or the states.

Here he believes that the court, by applying its own idea of reasonableness, is rejecting the guided by their own ideas of reason.

★ ★ ★

He also rejects the court practice in recent years to create a new right of "privacy."

He said in his lectures that since no such right is guaranteed by the Constitution the court has no power to create it.

★ ★ ★

He now says that in the interest of public security an individual's privacy may be invaded by various forms of police eavesdropping.

Due to Feud With Russia

Fidel Forgotten 'Rebel Prophet'

By LEON DENNEN
NEA Foreign News Analyst

NEW YORK — Fidel Castro, once the idol of the New Left, is no longer a revolutionary hero even to students in Latin America.

In Paris, West Berlin, Rome and New York, rioting students urged revolutionary action in the name of Trotsky, Mao Tse-tung and even Ho Chi Minh. Some remembered Che Guevera and long-forgotten anarchists and terrorists like Bakunin and Nechayev.

In Communist Czechoslovakia and Poland, on the other hand, students and intellectuals fighting for freedom cheered the American flag. Soviet writers, on trial for their liberal views, based their right to dissent on decisions of the U. S. Supreme Court.

But no one, East or West, remembered that Fidel Castro also considers himself a revolutionary "prophet." Even in Latin America, Cuba's bearded Lider Maximo has become the forgotten man of the world revolution.

RENEWED CALL

To remind the world that he still is in the revolutionary business, Castro recently issued a renewed call for guerrilla struggles in Latin America under the slogan, "Arms, money and teams of guerrillas to liberate Latin America."

But his call was ignored, primarily because Russia, for the moment at least, is more interested in profitable trade with the Latin-American capitalists than in world revolution.

★ ★ ★

As a result, the conflict between pro-Soviet and pro-Cuban Communists in the Western Hemisphere has become more intense.

The most striking examples of this are in Venezuela and Guatemala, where a handful of pro-Castro guerrillas have recently been expelled from the official pro-Russian Communist parties. Similar conflicts are now raging in Brazil, Nicaragua, Chile, the Dominican Republic and other Latin-American countries.

TIED TO FEW

There is no doubt that Castro's eclipse is due to his quarrel with Moscow. The existence of his dictatorship depends on Russia's economic aid. But he believed that he could defy the Kremlin leaders, undermine their influence in Latin America and still get their help.

Castro has perhaps gone further than any other national Communist leader in exploiting for his own purposes the political possibilities opened up by Russia's break with Red China and the fragmentation of the Red monolith.

★ ★ ★

But the Russians were not frightened. They met Castro's challenge by applying a calculated measure of economic pressure. This found expression in the prolonged and tortuous negotiations over a new Soviet-Cuban trade agreement.

The Russians never made a secret of the fact that they consider economic aid primarily as a political weapon.

FINALLY AGREED

They finally agreed to a flow of aid and trade to Havana sufficient to preserve Moscow's role as the mainstay of Castro's regime, but not enough to meet Cuba's rapidly expanding needs.

The Cubans must meet their growing economic problems with a series of belt-tightening austerity measures.

★ ★ ★

By applying economic pressure, the Russians obviously want to keep the Cuban dictator busy at home. But Castro is still fighting back. He is still trying to meet the Russian challenge through "political judo." Even the failure of Che Guevara's military adventure in Bolovia has not abated Cuban efforts to keep the pot boiling in Latin America.

But for the present, at least, Castro's star is in eclipse. Even revolutionary dictators must feed their hungry subjects.

Bob Considine Says:

2 Retiring Football Giants Owed Much to Marshall

NEW YORK — People . . . places . . . pros . . .

The professional football world has been sorely diminished by the retirements of George Halas of the Chicago Bears and Sonny Werblin of the New York Jets.

CONSIDINE

Each created a dynasty. Each presented superstars. Each added to the structure of a sport that has soared past baseball as the "national pastime."

★ ★ ★

Both owed a lot to George Preston Marshall, who owned the Boston Redskins and 31 years ago, moved the franchise to his home town, Washington, D.C., and renamed the club the Washington Redskins.

★ ★ ★

One week, many years ago, the Redskins beat Halas' Bears 7-3. Two weeks later, Halas' Bears beat the Redskins 73-0. George shrugged and said, "Well, can't win 'em all."

SHOWMANSHIP

Marshall gave to pro football the showmanship that had been the exclusive property of the amachoors: bands, glamor, cheerers and high-stepping people.

★ ★ ★

He added more, such as Santa Claus arriving on the 50-yard line at Griffith Stadium by helicopter, his wife (George's), film star Corinne Griffith, "The Orchid of the Screen Pass," wrote "Hail to the Redskins" to no less stirring a tune than "Yes, Jesus Loves Me."

George is ill now and his place as president of the Redskins has been taken by the famed attorney Edward Bennett Williams. But what he contributed to sports is not likely to pass from memory.

Bill Corum, observing the Redskins and their followers spilling into New York one happy day in the long ago, commenced a story with something like "George Preston Marshall and his 15,000 Redskin fans slipped quietly into town yesterday behind a 75-piece brass band and paraded up Broadway to the Polo Grounds."

Paris Talks Are Respite for Ho

By RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA) — From detailed information this reporter gathered in his recent trip to Southeast Asia, there is no doubt that Ho Chi Minh is in deep trouble.

CROMLEY

He is facing dissatisfaction —and a jittery population—at home. He is plagued with manpower shortages. Great dissatisfaction exists among North Vietnam's mistreated minorities.

His officials daily bring him longer lists of work slowdowns and growing nonco-operation with the government by farmers and factory workers alike.

Animosity is growing between the guerrillas of South Vietnam and the North Vietnamese invasion troops. Sometimes this dislike verges on hatred.

Reports circulate of quarrels within Ho's own inner circle. Considerable grumbling occurs within the middle hierarchy of the North Vietnamese Communist party.

Food is short. Comforts are scarce.

★ ★ ★

Ho's army is plagued by a growing shortage of experienced officers and men. In his political underground, Ho has not been able to replace adequately the top-flight men he has lost through death, desertion, old age and discouragement.

A growing tiredness pervades his junior-executive political and economic organizers.

Meanwhile, Ho is running up a heavy debt to Red China and Soviet Russia for arms, Chinese labor and supplies that he can't afford.

★ ★ ★

With heavy aid commitments in Cuba, the Middle East and Africa, the Soviet Union is likewise feeling the pinch.

So Ho needs some sort of a respite to enable him to continue his war against South Vietnam.

Thus the Paris talks.

★ ★ ★

Just by agreeing to talks, Ho has persuaded the United States to continue a bombing cutback that has relieved Hanoi, Haiphong and most of North Vietnam's other populated areas from the harassment of daily bombing. This reduces his domestic strains.

It has made it possible for Ho to step up the infiltration of troops and materiel into South Vietnam. It has sparked suspicion, infighting and division within the South Vietnamese government.

Ho's first objectives would be achieved by continuing these talks as long as possible so that the United States would continue its bombing holdback.

Communist doctrine would call for making uncostly but psychologically significant concessions — such as freeing U. S. flyers — when necessary to keep the United States from resuming heavy bombing of the Hanoi-Halphong area and other key regions of North Vietnam.

Meanwhile, under cover of sensational raids, Ho's men in South Vietnam will attempt to rebuild and strengthen their underground political structure in the hamlets and increase their organizational network in the cities. For this is what the war is all about.

★ ★ ★

This means the United States, while talking in Paris, had better make certain that its civilian pacification work, its building of South Vietnam's democratic political understructure and its training of the South Vietnamese army moves ahead now at an accelerated pace.

Serviceman in Vietnam Sends Message to Youths

(Editor's Note: "Buzz" is the son of Mrs. John Palcsak, 3534 David K, Waterford. The letter below was recently received by Buzz's sister.)

My dear sister, you asked what I would say to your friends who will soon graduate from high school and have their service time ahead of them. I would tell them not to worry about Vietnam until they are sent there. Not everybody goes—just the more fortunate ones. All my buddies in the Army—in the real action—write that it's bad, real bad, but they know as well as I that we've a job to do and someone has to do it or get overrun with Communistic lies and treacheries back home.

BUZZ

If it's war, let's fight it here and not wait for it to reach our loved homes in our own wonderful country. Your friends lived through the Detroit riots, didn't they? With all the riots and turmoil back home, which is worse —home under distress or Vietnam? I'd tell them to think about our homes, our loved ones, the great nation we live in, the rights and freedoms we have, and then let them think and worry about Vietnam.

★ ★ ★

I don't like the thoughts of dying any more than anyone else, but I have faith in my country and love and respect its people.

★ ★ ★

If I must die to help protect their rights and freedom, I will. I never want anyone to tell me what to say, read, or study; that I cannot pray; how many children I can or cannot have; how I must raise them; what job I must do; or if I could attend church or not. Would that be living? Not for me, sis, and I know it isn't for your friends, either. I thank God I can fight for freedom and our own rights in the hopes of permanent peace.

Do Parents Know of Children's Vandalism?

It's too bad parents don't know more of what their children are doing. Our mailbox was destroyed by a firecracker. I wonder how parents of vandals would feel if their belongings were destroyed.

Resident Reports Seeing 'Echo' on Travels

Just returned from a 25,000 trip of two and one-half months to New Zealand, Australia and quite a few South Pacific Islands. Read in your paper of Echo which seems like a friend as we used to watch it circle two or three times each night. For two years we have not seen it. Coming out of our hotel in Auckland, my wife happened to look up and it was in a perfect sky for observation. We spoke to quite a few people and they are smarter than most Americans as they all knew about it. We watched for it nightly thereafter but were unable to see it again.

New MEA Boss Backs 'Teacher Power'

SAGINAW (AP) — The president-elect of the Michigan Education Association — Gene R. Duckworth of Delta College — has a term for a fast-growing influence in school systems throughout the state.

He calls it "teacher power" and says education for Michigan children will be greatly improved because of it.

★ ★ ★

On July 1, Duckworth will take over the reins of leadership for the 64,000-member MEA representing the majority of Michigan's 84,000 public school teachers.

During a year's leave of absence from his assistant professor of speech post at the community college located north of Saginaw, he will head the association representing teachers in 529 school districts and five other two-year colleges.

'RESPONSIBLE APPROACH'

How does he view the MEA's role in teacher negotiations which resulted in strikes last fall in 37 school districts across the state and at the five community colleges?

Duckworth said the MEA will continue "a responsible approach to teacher militancy."

★ ★ ★

"There is a difference between a militant attitude and acting responsibly," he said. "The MEA treats the law with respect and uses the legal process to test the law if there is an area of dispute. This will continue."

"The Holland case had significance throughout the United States," he said, referring to an April 1 decision by the Michigan Supreme Court dissolving an injunction forcing teachers in the Holland school system back to work.

ENCOURAGING AGREEMENTS

The opinion said that the fact teachers are on strike doesn't automatically justify court orders forcing them back to work.

Duckworth pointed out that the MEA is encouraging agreements between local associations and school boards by June 6. He added that mediation and fact-finding are encouraged by the MEA if no agreement is reached.

★ ★ ★

"Hopefully this won't be a rough fall . . . but if it is it will be only after we have done all we can to get fully negotiated agreements," he said. "If there are any interruptions of service, it will only be as a last resort. We don't use it as a threat or a club."

The problem, as Duckworth sees it, is school finance.

'COLLISION COURSE'

"I feel we are on a collision course with the property tax," he said. "The MEA has taken a stance on taxation. I think the property tax just can't do the job. The income tax should have helped us more than it did. It turned out to be just another tax."

The MEA position on state financial support is: "immediate attention to the need for adequate financial support of public schools by the state of Michigan with wide variations in local ability to pay and in current investment per student among school districts, the state must provide greater equalization of financial support . . ."

Duckworth feels the state is undergoing a "teacher revolution" and the development of "teacher power" which will bring about changes for the better in public schooling.

"Increased salaries aren't the purpose of negotiations," he said. "There is a credibility gap in that the public doesn't understand what can be accomplished through negotiations. There has been an entire upgrading of the educational system."

MAIN GOAL

He said the teachers' main goal is to provide the best education for the children of Michigan.

"We have to get people to understand the legitimate expense of today's modern education so they can meet those expenses," said Duckworth. "Initially this will be expensive but in the long run it may be less expensive."

A number of factors have combined to create the teacher movement, Duckworth said.

"The tremendous demands on schools have caused a need for more money which hasn't been available," he said. "There also has been an increasing sense of teacher frustration because of bureaucracy in school systems."

DISTRICTS DECREASE

He said there were over 125,000 school districts in the early 1930s throughout the United States. Now there are 24,700. Michigan had 7,000 in 1912 and now has just below 700, he said.

"Larger school districts had to have increased staffs," Duckworth said. "This led to increased impersonalization and teachers were lost in the numbers. When a teacher needed something there was a web of administration and complexity to weave through."

★ ★ ★

Another factor which led to the teacher movement for recognition is the number of men in the profession who were more interested in it as their life work.

The MEA president-elect is a graduate of Jackson High School. He received his bachelor of science degree in speech in 1952 and a masters degree in speech education in 1953, both from Northwestern University.

LECTURER

He was a lecturer in dramatic production at Northwestern for two years and worked as technical director of the Children's Theater, one of the nation's leading children's theater enterprises. He served for three years in the Air Force and taught from 1955 to 1965 at Mount Pleasant High School. He then came to Delta.

Duckworth has been active in the MEA since 1955. He has worked on various committees, was president of the Mount Pleasant MEA District, represented Region 12 for five years and was on the MEA executive committee for three years.

He lives with his wife and two daughters in Mount Pleasant.

Watch Racket Plagues Buyer, Maker

By LOIS FRIEDLAND

A stranger in the plant or office approaches you flashing what is apparently a gold wristwatch.

Lois Friedland

He may open the conversation with any number of approaches such as "I won this Hamilton in a card game," or "I need money quickly It's really a $125 or $150 watch but I'll let you have it for . . . how about $25?"

★ ★ ★

This scene with minor variations is being reenacted everywhere in the U.S., according to Don Finney, manager of Connolly's Jewelers of 65 N. Saginaw.

At first glance, the watch appears to be an authentic brand, but when examined carefully, the fine writing on the face which appears to say Hamilton actually says Hormilton; what appears to read Longine in flowing script, turns out to be Longune or Lonjin.

BUYER CHEATED

The buyer has been suckered into purchasing a fake: a watch with a simple clock movement and no jewels in an aluminum or alloy case. The watch is worth $7 to $12 at most.

An increasing number of people have been coming to jewelers to have these watches fixed. They say the purchases were made in a plant, a bar, or a bus station, and that the timepieces stopped running a few weeks later, according to Finney.

★ ★ ★

"There is no service on these watches because there are no parts available. There isn't anyplace to send the watch to be fixed," explained Finney.

Jewelers suspect the watches are coming from the Chicago area.

'RACKET THRIVING'

Finney explained that the racket is thriving because there are always people willing to buy the watches because they think they're getting a good deal.

"The easiest person to fool in the world is a person looking for a bargain. He or she will believe anything as long as they believe they're getting something for nothing," commented Finney.

★ ★ ★

The peddler lets the customer commit himself. He'll show the watch to a prospective buyer who usually will say, "Oh, that's a Longine! The peddler never says yes it is — or no it isn't.

There are a combination of reasons why the counterfeiting hasn't been stopped, according to Finney. First, the laws covering this type of fraud are weak. These laws, which control the peddler, but not the supplier, are difficult to enforce, he said.

EXPENSIVE TO OBTAIN

Civil injunction procedings can be instituted against distributors and manufacturers but they are expensive to obtain and rarely can a manufacturer obtain damages from the distributor.

Thirty states have adopted counterfeit trademark statutes that help.

★ ★ ★

Another major problem is the uninterest of various enforcement authorities, according to Finney. With such problems as marijuana and the counterfeiting of money the police don't worry too much about counterfeit watches, he said.

One counterfeiter, after his arrest, told a court clerk that he stayed in the business because it was so profitable.

$20,000 PROFIT

He explained that he bought watches for about $4 apiece. He sold 5,000 a month easily and made about a $20,000 profit. He said he got anywhere from $15 to $50 a watch depending on the market.

Jewelers have learned to recognize these watches quickly by studying the usually altered or misspelled trademark.

★ ★ ★

They also look for the key words "astromatic" or "agromatic" since they appear on many of the dials.

The trade-name companies reportedly are suffering.

Hundreds of these counterfeit watches come back to legitimate factories for repair.

MANUFACTURERS BLAMED

The owners are told they have purchased a counterfeit and they immediately blame the name manufacturer who, the owner claims, should have stopped the fraud.

Armadillos Shed Light on Factors in Heredity

By Science Service

WASHINGTON — Since the beginning of the century, the gene has been regarded as the only carrier of heredity — the process that makes eyes blue or brown, people short or tall.

Now grave doubts are being raised by well-known scientists and a battle rages.

At the forefront, oddly enough, are quadruplet armadillos.

Molecular biologists have believed that DNA (deoxyribonucleic acid), the material of which genes are made, is the master of the cell. Learn how to control the master, therefore, and you might control the development of cancer or be able to produce better human beings.

MUDDIED SOMEWHAT

This bright picture is being muddied somewhat by recent findings which indicate that the rest of a living cell may have a lot of influence on the decisions of the master.

A recent development — and a quartet of young armadillos — at the University of Texas in Austin may provide food for thought for participants on both sides of the battle. Drs. Eleanor Storr and Roger Williams reported the results of a study of armadillos recently to the National Academy of Sciences in Washington.

Armadillos have the useful characteristic of bearing litters of quadruplets. While most animals that bear litters produce several eggs, each egg developing into one fetus, the armadillo produces one egg only. Very early in the development of the fertilized egg it splits four ways and each section develops into a fetus.

Thus each of the young has exactly the same inheritance, the same genes as all the others. Like identical human twins they could be expected to be very similar in appearance.

★ ★ ★

They aren't similar. Drs. Storr and Williams found wide variations between littermates.

The researchers theorize that when the original egg divides four ways while the nucleus and its gene-bearing nucleic acid divides evenly, there is an unequal division of the egg's cytoplasm among the four sections.

Since the genes in each section are identical, the wide variation between littermates must arise from the difference in the cytoplasm, a clear argument for some form of cytoplasmic, non-DNA, control over gene expression.

Thus while the DNA may be the source of all the information on which the life process depends, several factors may determine the extent to which its orders are carried out.

3 Devote Lives to Aid Brazil Indians

POSTO LEONARDO, Brazil (AP) — In the 4½ centuries since the white man first set foot in Brazil, the native Indian population has dwindled from 2 million to 100,000 because of slaughter, wars and disease.

Today two white men and a woman, forsaking civilization for the jungle, live in this Indian country in Central Brazil's Mato Grosso to preserve the South American red man and his way of life in hopes of some day integrating him into Brazil's multi-colored society.

★ ★ ★

Dozens of Indian children play and romp in nine villages clustered around this outpost in Xingu National Park. The unusual thing about this is that there are so many children healthy enough to play.

Just a few years ago, nine out of 10 of them would have died before their first birthday. But not a single child here has died of disease in four years.

CHIEFLY RESPONSIBLE

Chiefly responsible for this are the brothers Orlando and Claudio Villas Boas and an attractive young nurse, Marina Lopes de Lima.

The brothers have dedicated their lives to protecting the Indians of Central Brazil from extermination and in more than 20 years of jungle life have kept several tribes from being wiped out.

★ ★ ★

They stand a world apart from an unfortunately more common breed of jungle dwellers who have systematically exterminated Indians in vast areas of Brazil, helping reduce their numbers to a little over 100,000 in a country of 85 million.

Greed for land, minerals, animal skins and rubber have been incentives for the massacre of entire tribes and the destruction of their culture.

7 YEARS AGO

But in the Xingu National Park no one can kill Indians, and few white men are even allowed near them. The Villas Boas brothers were instrumental in having the park established seven years ago as a preserve for the Indians and their culture, as well as the area's fauna and flora, which cover virtually every species of animal, plant, bird, fish and insect known in Brazil.

The park is open only to official visitors and scholars as well as doctors and others helping the Indians. It's off limits to sightseers and missionaries.

★ ★ ★

Although a part of the Indian Foundation of the Interior Ministry, and formerly run by the now-extinct Indian Protection Service, the park is really an almost autonomous operation run by Orlando and Claudio Villas Boas with the help of a third brother, Alvaro, who directs their supply and communications from a Sao Paulo apartment. A fourth brother, Leonardo, who also worked with the Indians, died several years ago.

Posto Leonardo, the larger of the stations in the park, is named after him and serves as the park's headquarters. It is run by Orlando Villas Boas, now 50. Claudio operates out of Diaurum, a smaller post in the northern section of the park.

'IN OWN CULTURE'

While concentrating on health, the Villas Boas brothers also are intent on preserving Indian culture.

"The Indian can only survive in his own culture," says Orlando.

★ ★ ★

"Where attempts have been made to integrate the Indian into white society he has disappeared."

But the brothers don't want to keep the Indian on a shelf forever.

MORE RECEPTIVE

They argue that when society is less economically oriented and more receptive to alien influences it will be possible for the Indians to gradually become integrated.

The 1,600 Indians who live in contact with Posto Leonardo and Diaurum are wholly self-sufficient and happy within their own culture, without being self-conscious about what other "backwardness."

★ ★ ★

They fish, hunt and grow all the food they need. They wear clothes only if bothered by mosquitoes.

Chief Tacuna heads the Kamaiura tribe but he can't tell you how many Indians are under his leadership — one reason is that he can't count.

NOT IMPORTANT

But counting isn't really important in the Xingu Indian culture, and Tacuna is pretty good at the thing that do matter.

He can track a jaguar for hours and drop him with a single arrow. He can spot a monkey high up in a tree branch in the jungle and send an arrow streaking into it long before the monkey knows he's been seen.

★ ★ ★

His 100 or so tribesmen live in six large houses built around an open square about 900 yards from a large lake. The village is about eight miles from Posto Leonardo.

★ ★ ★

Like all Indians in the Xingu region, the Kamaiura live in dark tall houses made of a bamboo framework covered with thatch. They are waterproof, cool and mosquito-free because of the smoke that always fills them from a hearth in the center.

VIRTUALLY IDENTICAL

Egg-shaped, and as much as 75 to 100 feet along their major axis, the houses are virtually identical throughout the region. They are occupied by entire family units — including cousins, aunts, uncles, and grandparents — with as many as 30 or 40 people living under the same roof.

They sleep in hammocks and eat around the hearth.

In the typical Xingu village the men farm, hunt, fish and build. They also move around to trade with other tribes, or to court the women of other villages.

The Villas Boas brothers estimate that there are about 5,000 Indians living in the Xingu National Park.

YET TO BE PACIFIED

Of these about 1,600 live in the 16 villages served by Posto Leonardo and Diaurum.

★ ★ ★

The other 3,400 include about 1,000 members of the rough Krain-Akore tribe, which has as yet to be pacified.

The brothers also estimated that another 2,500 peaceful but as yet uncontacted Indians also live in the park. The calculation is based on air sightings of villages.

India Greets Spring With Holi, a Festive Bit of Madness

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Spring rites vary a good deal from country to country, though they are all generally happy festivals to welcome the warm weather. In India, there is something called Holi, basically a Hindu festival. It's not for the meek and mild, this touch of spring madness.)

By JOE MCGOWAN JR.

AGRA, India (AP) — Every spring, Indians indulge themselves in a touch of madness — a festival called Holi.

Throwing off the shackles of winter boredom, Indians spend the night of a full moon burning effigies of evil gods and all the next day dousing each other with buckets of colored water or smearing each other with dye powders stirred into clinging paste.

★ ★ ★

The timid and the meek wisely stay indoors during Holi, and only the extremely brave or uniformed foreigner ventures forth.

Because the merry-making often gets out of hand, authorities in New Delhi this year invoked emergency regulations prohibiting the throwing of colored water or dyes on anyone unwilling to take part.

SIGNS POSTED

Authorities in this city were somewhat more realistic. They posted signs in the major hotels advising foreign tourists to remain within the hotel compounds during the day of Holi.

★ ★ ★

Two Russian women tourists who decided to see for themselves made it barely one-half block from their hotel before giving up and rushing back to their rooms, drenched with colored water and their hair and faces smeared with brightly colored powders.

★ ★ ★

Foreigners were told the festivities ended at sundown, and the following day would be safe for travel. But this word didn't reach one village about 60 miles west of Agra, where the peasants barricaded the highway the day after Holi.

★ ★ ★

They drenched passersby and, in the case of one car carrying two Americans, they smashed the windows and threw colored water on the couple when they declined to get out and be "entertained."

ROWDY STUDENTS

In New Delhi, rowdy students stopped buses and demanded "contributions" of money to buy sweets. They threw colored water on those who refused and beat up some young men who tried to protect their girl friends.

A dispute over water throwing in Allahabad disintegrated into a communal clash in which two young men were stabbed to death.

★ ★ ★

But generally, the celebration was lighthearted merriment.

Holi is belived to have originated in the days of Aryan invasion of the subcontinent and is thought to have been a harvest celebration. Even now, celebrators put on their very oldest garment on Holi so the colored water harms nothing valuable. And the next day, new spring clothing is put on, much in the fashion of the Christian world's Easter.

EFFIGIES BURNED

On the eve of Holi, piles of firewood are placed in key intersections of villages and cities. Effigies of the evil gods are erected atop the piles and after sunset, they are burned.

★ ★ ★

The next mornig, some young men roam the streets with long willow switches flailing at passing bicyclists or pedestrians. This is supposed to be an act of driving out whatever evil spirits were not burned the night before.

★ ★ ★

Few women brave the streets, but instead all the members of a family will gather at a grandparent's home for a private celebration in an enclosed courtyard.

★ ★ ★

One reason the celebration often gets out of hand is a homemade drink usually prepared for Holi. Called Thandai, it has a milk base to which is added ground cucumber seeds, melon seeds and hemp juice. After fermenting for a little while, the mixture becomes rather powerful.

FRIENDS EMBRACE

Late in the day, while some of the heavier imbibers sleep it off, others walk through the streets exchanginging greetings. Old friends will embrace, wish each other prosperity, and apply a dab of colored paste to each other's forehad.

★ ★ ★

Although Holi is basically a Hindu festival, it is often celebrated as well by Sikhs and Moslems.

★ ★ ★

As one Indian writer put it this year, "Here, at least for a few hours, people sink all differences and come together. They throw off the veneer of formality and free their spirit by singing, dancing and daubing one another's faces and clothes."

Studies Aim at Large Space Station

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The Defense Department is conducting three major studies that could lead ultimately to a large multipurpose military manned space station.

The studies concern escape devices, a reflyable spaceship that could land like an airplane, and the station itself.

★ ★ ★

Col. Francis X. Kane, director of development planning, Space and Missile Systems Organization, Air Force Systems Command, discussed them here last week at the annual conference of the Aviation-Space Writers Association.

Before any of them could become actual programs their usefulness and cost-effectiveness must be demonstrated, he said.

COOPERATION

Kane reported the Defense Department and National Aeronautics and Space Administration are cooperating on proposals for space rescue and escape systems.

"For the time being," he said, "we are continuing to use redundant critical systems to assure as much reliability as possible as a means of avoiding space emergencies.

★ ★ ★

"But we can forecast that emergencies might occur in space in the next 10 years, so we're looking into the problem, detailing the most critical possible emergencies and determining the best way to escape from them."

Kane said major emergencies would involve explosion, meteoroid puncture and fire.

MULTIMANNED

He said that any approved escape vehicle probably would be multimanned in case of injury to one or more men.

"We also are asking such questions as: How many men should each vehicle carry? What subsystems should be aboard? How will they communicate with the ground? Should they be rigid or expandable?"

Discussing the reusable, maneuverable spaceship — the socalled lifting body — Kane said: "We've concluded that with a lifting body we can steer to a variety of landing sites with all-weather capability. We're looking at pop-out wings so the craft can operate like an airplane after it has reentered the atmosphere from space."

Under consideration, he said, are craft that could be flown as many as 50 times and that both manned and unmanned versions are being studied. They could be used for ferrying astronaut crews and supplies between earth and large space stations.

MUST PROVE UTILITY

"We can build a multipurpose space station," Kane said. "But we must prove its utility. At present we are studying logistic requirements, life support systems and the like. We're asking how big the crew should be — 6, 9, 12 or more men?

"How often should we change the crew — every 30, 60 or 90 days? Or should we leave some of them up there a year or more? Is it better to have the station above or below the Van Allen radiation belt? If we're in the belt, what protection is needed?"

★ ★ ★

He said many of the answers will come from two small space stations being planned — NASA's three-man Apollo workshop and the Air Force's two-man manned orbiting laboratory. Both are expected to be flying in the early 1970s — one to pursue military, the other scientific and peaceful goals.

★ ★ ★

If they prove the feasibility of a large station, a go-ahead may be given. Then there will arise this question, already under discussion, whether the military and NASA programs should be combined into one or more national space stations.

275 Scouts Participate in Outing

Some 275 boys spent a weekend with nature recently while attending the Pontiac District Camp-O-Ree at Camp Agawam, the Boy Scout camp in Orion Township.

★ ★ ★

The campers, 19 troops split into 36 patrols with five to eight boys each, came to the camp Friday evening to set up their camping equipment for the weekend.

After spending the night in tents they had set up, the boys got up to cook their breakfast over a camp fire and eat on tables they had built by cutting down tree branches and lashing the wood together with twine.

★ ★ ★

The scouts spent the morning working on gateways and cleaning up camping areas.

114 ACRES

Camp Agawam, which was purchased in 1918, contains 114 acres of the shore of Tommy's Lake.

★ ★ ★

Each summer 1,000 boys attend the camp, coming in one-week shifts. The summer term is seven weeks long. The camp is used for weekend camping for the winter and as facilities for training courses for adult Scouters.

★ ★ ★

The Scouts attending the Camp-O-Ree spent the afternoon participating in games and a gold rush.

The goldrush is an adventure trail created by a scoutmaster with various trail-solving problems.

BROKEN BONES

The boys follow the trail and are checked on how they perform. Such emergencies as a person pretending to have a broken arm or leg may arise. Other tasks include reading trail signs, map work and using a compass.

The boys also are judged on how they sterilize water for drinking. They take muddy water and run it through a hankerchief to strain out the mud, boil it and then aerate it.

★ ★ ★

The evening's entertainment was an order of the arrow call-out. This is a ceremony where order-of-the-arrow Scouts dress like Indians and tap new members.

Each Scout in this order has been elected by the members in his own troop. Requirements include having spent 15 days and nights living outdoors.

The Scouts returned home Sunday after services.

Howard Bone of 1634 Inverness, Sylvan Lake, was chairman of the camping and activities committee which organized the Camp-O-Ree.

'Galloping Swede,' 76, Hits the Montana Campaign Trail Again

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Hugo Aronson, the "Galloping Swede" who rose from penniless immigrant to governor of Montana, is galloping down the campaign trail again at the age of 76.

The big, strong Swede who still speaks English with a heavy accent is roaming Montana's vast mountains and plains trying to obtain the Republican gubernatorial nomination for his friend, Lt. Gov. Ted James.

Aronson also is Richard M. Nixon's Montana campaign chairman despite the fact that Nixon has endorsed James' opponent Gov. Tim Babcock, in Montana's June 4 GOP primary.

Aronson is just as rough and tough as in the days when he bounced oil trucks labeled "The Galloping Swede" down dusty depression oil-field roads in the 1930s.

WORN OUT?

"I thought maybe the name of J. Hugo Aronson might be getting worn out like an old shawl," he said. "But when I got to campaigning I found the people are just as kind to this immigrant boy as they ever were."

The grand old man of Montana politics still expresses disbelief at what has happeneed to him since he stepped off a boat from Sweden in 1911 at the age of 20 with $25 in his pocket and an English vocabulary that consisted of three words: "Ham and eggs."

★ ★ ★

He worked in Boston until he picked up enough English to order something else to eat. Then he rode freight trains across 38 states until, on a hot July day in 1914, a brakeman kicked him out of a boxcar in the southern Montana town of Columbus.

"Columbus discovered America and I discovered Columbus," Aronson said.

He parked his clothes on a fence and went for a swim in the icy Yellowstone River, only to emerge to find a mule chewing up his pants. He wandered into town in rags and somehow wrangled a farm job pitching hay.

From there he went to the Montana-Wyoming border where he established a homestead on which he still pays taxes. He got into the oil business, building rigs, and figured out a way to move 85-foot derricks without dismantling them. That was a milestone in the industry.

After Army service in World War I, Aronson moved to the booming northern Montana oil-fields around Cut Bank. He got his nickname because he ran as he worked, and his oil business flourished. He started his own company and founded the oil towns of Oilmont, Gallup City and Santa Rita. He became president of a bank in Cut Bank and bought a 4,000-acre ranch, but continued rig building, trucking, pipelining.

ELECTED TO COUNCIL

In 1934 he was elected to the Cut Bank City Council, then in 1938 to the Montana House, and in 1944 to the state senate.

"When they wanted me to run for governor, I told them I didn't have the qualifications," he said. But he ran in 1951 and won, and won another four-year term in 1955.

★ ★ ★

Since his retirement from active politics in 1960, he has lived on the shore of Flathead Lake in northwestern Montana, but he can't get off the campaign trail. He feels Nixon will be nominated and will be the next president.

"This 'Galloping Swede' is sincere when he says he'll never even be able to repay the interest on the debt he owes his adopted state and his adopted country," Aronson said. "You people born and raised in this country take too damned much for granted."

★ ★ ★

He was asked if he thought an immigrant today could accomplish what he has.

"That," said Aronson, "depends on the immigrant."

Scientist Cites Early Tool Use

By National Geographic Society

WASHINGTON — Dr. Louis S. B. Leakey has unearthed evidence that a bone-smashing African ancestor of man used a crude stone hammer 12 million years ago.

"This discovery marks a very important milestone in our understanding of man's evolution as a toolmaker," the British anthropologist explained.

The prehuman hominid, Kenyapithecus wickeri, apparently hammered open animal skulls and bones to reach the brains and marrow. Dr. Leakey found fossil bones of animals with evidence of deliberate fractures.

The new finds were made at Fort Ternan, Kenya, with support from the National Geographic Society, a long-time sponsor of Dr. Leakey's search for early man.

ANIMAL FOOD

"It is possible to say," Dr. Leakey reported, "that as far back as 12 million years ago our prehuman ancestors in Africa had started to make use of animal food to augment their vegetable diet. In order to do this they had begun to make use of stones as hammers.

"Amongst the discoveries at Fort Ternan is one of the stones which was used for this purpose. It clearly exhibits considerable damage along two angular edges, as a result of usage."

Tale of New Student Twists

Princeton Grips Today's Tiger

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Princeton University, which gave the name the Silent Generation to the students of the 1950s, has shucked that image in this year of campus unrest.

In the past year:

1. A member of the radical Students for a Democratic Society was elected president of the student government.

★ ★ ★

2. A Negro was elected president of the sophomore class.

3. An SDS-organized demonstration for student power drew 1,000 students to the office of the university president.

4. Thirty students were arrested while protesting an on-campus Defense Department research installation.

222 YEARS OLD

These were among changes the 222-year-old Ivy League institution underwent in a school year in which rebellious students seized university buildings on dozens of campuses across the country.

Yet, the protests at Princeton were less militant, more refined than those, for instance, at Columbia University, a fellow Ivy League member.

★ ★ ★

And, the trappings that gave rise to Princeton's image as a gentlemen's school are still very much in evidence on the plush green campus in central New Jersey.

Eating clubs, long a symbol of Princeton's exclusivity, line tree shaded Prospect Street where upperclassmen dine and dance in 19th century elegance.

IMAGE CLUNG TO

Most of Princeton's clean-shaven, well-starched underclassmen still cling to the image of well-educated, socially minded young men.

"Image is a very real part of life here," said Richard Rein, chairman of the Daily Princetonian, the undergraduate newspaper. "Princeton students work hard and then party hard as hell on weekends. That's part of the image."

★ ★ ★

But the feeling persists on campus that something, indeed, has happened to staid-old Princeton, something that has thrust the university into the social concerns of the 1960s.

Before the demonstration last fall at the Institute for Defense Analysis facility, the only previous time large numbers of Princeton students were arrested was in 1963. That year the students rampaged down the main street of town and past the governor's mansion, resulting in about 30 arrests.

SPRING FEVER CITED

The acknowledged cause: spring fever.

The Silent Generation, a term depicting the lack of political and social involvement by the nation's college students, was the title of a book by a Princeton politics professor, Otto Butz. It consisted of interviews with Princeton undergraduates who discussed their concerns and goals.

★ ★ ★

Involvement is now more intense—Princeton students are demanding a greater voice in the running of the university.

Last month, nearly 1,000 students, including SDS students and sympathizers, marched on Nassau Hall, where President Robert F. Goheen has his offices, to press for greater student-faculty voice in the administration of Princeton.

This touched off a series of faculty and administration meetings, and a study is now in progress to determine what the role of the students should be in running the university.

But Goheen, Class of '40, sees no radical change taking place.

★ ★ ★

"Princeton is always changing," he noted in an interview. The 49-year old president, who favors tweed sports jackets and bow ties, acknowledged, however, that today's Princeton undergraduate differs from previous students.

"Students then were less diversified, less prepared and not as competitive as today's are," he said.

LESS WELL-HEELED

In past years, Princetonians were a well-heeled group, with most coming from preparatory schools. Today, 60 per cent of the undergraduate come from public high schools, and half of all students receive some form of financial assistance.

The club system, Princeton's version of fraternities, has suffered as a result. While some 70 per cent of Princeton undergraduates belong to the 15 eating clubs, membership in one club dropped so low this year that it went out of business for financial reasons.

★ ★ ★

"The clubs were formed in an era when all students were from prep schools," noted James Britt of Trenton, president of the Interclub Council. "The total club influence is still great, but has dwindled considerably."

It was in the clubs this spring that a petition was circulated asking, in effect, for the censure of the Daily Princetonian because of its editorials favorable to SDS. The petition drew about 500 signatures.

FOR COEDUCATION

Last year a faculty group called for an end to the club system and for the establishment of coeducation as remedies for "an unhealthful social climate."

The club system was assailed by Woodrow Wilson when he served as president of Princeton 60 years ago. The system received nationwide attention in 1957 when surveys disclosed that three-quarters of the rejected candidates were Jewish.

★ ★ ★

The outgoing president of the student body, Marc Lackritz of Cleveland, Ohio, favors the club system, but says the social alternatives at Princeton need broadening.

"Interestingly enough, as social alternatives have expanded, the student body has changed." Four club presidents, including Lackritz, are Jewish.

CLASS PICKS NEGRO

Elliott Moorman of Newark, one of about 50 Negroes among the 3,200 undergraduates, is president of the sophomore class. He chose Princeton over Harvard, Yale and Notre Dame because at Princeton there was "the challenge of changing attitudes."

Moorman and others feel the school should do a lot more, particularly in riot-stricken Newark, but Goheen commented: "If we had more people and more money we could do more."

★ ★ ★

Except for several Negroes who attended Princeton in the 1700s, there were no Negroes at the university prior to World War II. The school has accepted more than 70 for next fall's freshman class.

"Ever since World War II we've been looking for qualified Negro students," said Goheen.

PREPARATION LACKING

"Unfortunately, far too few Negroes receive schooling opportunities to permit them to do well in institutions like Princeton."

The lack of Negroes at Princeton prompted Moorman to call it "the northernmost Southern school."

★ ★ ★

Protest at Princeton has so far been unmarked by violence or vehemence.

Princeton SDS had considered a one-day sit-in at Nassau Hall, but the plans were canceled at the urging of the "social Democrats" in SDS, as one student put it.

Goheen, in his 11th year as president, believes that what happened at Columbia could occur at Princeton.

"A few radical revolutionaries would be very happy to see the university brought to a halt," Goheen said. "But it's a very small number—even of SDS itself."

The SDS chapter, headquartered in the basement of a student activities building, numbers about 100 students and several hundred more sympathizers.

Increase Payments on Federal Debt Up More Than Expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of paying for the federal debt—already at record levels—will go even higher than originally thought this year because of the current period of tight credit.

The increase, however, is expected to be relatively small.

Interest payments on the federal debt are now expected to be close to $14.5 billion for the fiscal year which ends June 30, or about $150 million more than anticipated last January.

This would mean a year-to-year increase of about $1.1 billion from the $13.4 billion actually paid to carry the debt during the previous fiscal year. The cost of borrowing money in the current inflationary period has increased rapidly even for the Treasury Department which can command the lowest rates in the country because its securities are considered the safest of all investments.

'NO QUICK CURE'

The extent of that spiral was underscored Monday by Chairman Arthur M. Okun of the Council of Economic Advisers, who said the nation is experiencing an inflationary epidemic that even a tax increase could not quickly cure.

Until President Johnson's proposed 10 per cent income tax surcharge is enacted, Okun said in a memorandum made public by the White House, "There will be growing strains on prices, costs, imports and financial markets at home and abroad."

But even with higher taxes, Okun said the route back to price stability will be "long and difficult" and will require the cooperation of the private sector. "It is crucial that we begin the journey now."

★ ★ ★

It was the latest in a series of urgent appeals from the administration for higher taxes.

Only last week, however, the Treasury paid the highest rate since the Civil War to borrow $1.5 billion. And rates this week, although lower, are still close to the top of the scale.

REFINANCING

The Treasury borrows at least $2.7 billion each week to refinance part of the federal debt.

When the department reestimated its interest payments last January for the current fiscal year, it used interest rates in effect last December.

★ ★ ★

Rates actually declined during the early part of this year but in the last two months have shot upward.

The $352-billion federal debt is composed of treasury securities held by individuals in the form of savings bonds and by banks, savings and loan associations, insurance companies, corporations, state and local governments, the Federal Reserve System and government investment accounts such as the Social Security trust fund. Some of these securities mature each week and the Treasury must borrow money to pay them off.

★ ★ ★

Part of the Treasury's problem is Congress' refusal so far to adopt the surcharge. The department had figured on $2.7 billion in additional revenues during the current fiscal year from the surcharge and the speedup in corporate tax payments.

It has been forced to borrow additional money to make up some of this loss. It absorbed the rest.

For the next fiscal year, the Treasury figured interest on the debt at $15.2 billion. This figure could come close to the mark if taxes are raised, it's believed.

But without higher taxes, officials won't even hazard a guess on what the interest payments might be.

Theater Stage for French Revolutionaries

PARIS (AP) — Young Frenchmen trying to make a revolution insist they have no single headquarters. If they did it would be the 24-hour-a-day political meeting installed in the Odeon Theater a few blocks from the Sorbonne.

The meeting goes on in the orchestra, boxes and balconies. Behind the scenes—literally—is the headquarters of the Odeon Committee of Revolutionary Action.

★ ★ ★

"The purpose of the revolutionary movement," it says, "is to create a revolutionary situation . . . consequently, the only action that is effective and useful to the revolutionary movement is an action of destruction, a permanent fight against the present society."

The committee has no visible chief, and its members do not like to give their names. But leaders are clearly emerging. One is a blond, 27-year-old journalist who wants to be known only by his first name—Alain.

OPPOSES ORGANIZATIONS

Alain says the committee includes people who belong to several revolutionary parties, Communists among them, but no one is allowed to join as a representative of a party or a trade union. The committee opposes all such organizations as part of the society it wants to destroy.

Similar committees exist at the Sorbonne, at an annex on the Rue Censier and at the University of Nanterre, where Daniel Cohn-Bendit, best known of the student leaders, was a student. He has now been expelled from France.

★ ★ ★

More attention is being focused on the Odeon, because of its central location. Nanterre is in the suburbs, and the Rue Censier is some distance from the city center.

Alain insists there is no question of leadership by one committee, and that there is close contact among them. The students pride themselves on being individualists and the anarchists' black flag flies over the Odeon and other occupied buildings. Next to it is usually a red flag, which in Europe is associated with all leftist movements—not just the Communists.

SEIZED MAY 15

Young revolutionaries seized the Odeon on the night of May 15. As the last spectators emerged from a guest performance by the Paul Taylor Ballet, an American group, the first small groups of students and actors went in. There was no resistance. Almost at once the nonstop political meeting was on and the committee was at work in the offices.

★ ★ ★

Someone painted the word "ex" in large letters before the name "Theatre de France" above the arcaded facade. In the lobby over the old box office a sign says: "The ex-Odeon Theater is no longer a theater, but a revolutionary political speakers' platform."

★ ★ ★

The stage is not used except for a few spectators.

★ ★ ★

The chairman walks up and down the center aisle of the orchestra, giving the floor first to someone in the orchestra, then to someone in the second balcony. One recent morning he was a middle-aged man in a dark blue suit with short sleeves and no necktie. That afternoon it was a younger man in a bright red cap.

Entrance is free and the meetings are usually packed, with a long line waiting outside. One reason is that all the Paris theaters and many movie houses are closed, while television is giving nothing but a news program once a day.

Space Talk Set

Dr. Willy Ley, a pioneer space authority, will talk on "The Universe Around Us" at 8:30 p.m. June 6 at Southfield High School Auditorium, 10 Mile at Lahser.

The lecture is sponsored by Oakland Community College and the Cranbrook Institute of Science. Public admission is $1.50.

MEMORIAL DAY 'TAPS' — A bugler sounds "Taps" at the Tomb of the Unknowns, Arlington National Cemetery, during Memorial Day ceremonies in 1961. The wreath is from President John F. Kennedy and was placed at the memorial by Georgia Sen. Richard Russell.

Tragedy Gave Birth to 'Taps'

By ARLEEN ABRAHAMS
Associated Press Writer

It never made the Hit Parade but over the past century its plaintive notes have been heard by Americans again and again. And on May 30, when most of the country will mark the 100th official anniversary of Memorial Day, the playing of "Taps," as usual, will sound the keynote of the observance.

★ ★ ★

"Taps," that melancholy bugle call which signals both the close of a soldier's day and the end of his life, came out of the Civil War at about the same time of the first unofficial observance of a Decoration Day.

★ ★ ★

In July 1862, the Union Army of the Potomac was engaged in a series of exhausting battles near Harrison's landing, a small Virginia town on the James River.

One night, Capt. Robert Ellicombe, of the Union Army, was aroused by the moans of a wounded Confederate soldier in the no man's land separating the Union and Confederate forces. He decided to rescue the man.

SHOCKING DISCOVERY

Crawling cautiously, Ellicombe made his way to the wounded man, pulled him to the Union lines. But the trip was too much for that Johnny Reb. By the time Ellicombe completed his mission, he was dead.

★ ★ ★

Examining the body by the dim glow of a lantern, the captain suddenly went cold with shock — it was his own son! (Another version holds that it was his nephew.) The boy had been studying music in the South and without telling his father had enlisted.

★ ★ ★

The heartbroken father received permission to give him a military burial behind the Union lines. As a final gesture of farewell, Ellicombe had a bugler play a few bars of the handwritten music found on a piece of scrap paper in the boy's pocket. The music was the original notes for "Taps."

★ ★ ★

A few days later that piece of paper came into the possession of Gen. Daniel Butterfield, Ellicombe's commanding officer.

HEARD FIRST TIME

Gen. Butterfield summoned a bugler named Oliver Morton and instructed him to arrange the notes for a new bugle call which would replace the old "Lights Out."

★ ★ ★

That night "Taps" was heard for the first time as the official number heralding the close of day.

★ ★ ★

The call was quickly picked up by other units. By May 1868, when Gen. John A. Logan, commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, issued the first official proclamation setting forth May 30 as a day "for strewing with flowers the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country in the late rebelilon," "Taps" was the official military bugle call.

OBSERVANCES

Known as Decoration Day until 1882, Memorial Day now marks tribute paid in the United States to the dead of all its wars.

★ ★ ★

Observances include military and civic parades, decorating with flowers the graves of American servicemen in foreign known Soldier in Arlington cemeteries, water services for National Cemetery. Fittingly, those who died at sea and cere- these official observances close monies at the Tomb of the Un- with the playing of "Taps."

Ho Is a Simple, Yet Complex Man

RED ENIGMA
BY WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Chances for peace in Vietnam and Southeast Asia may rest on the frail shoulders of a spindly old revolutionary who just turned 78. What manner of man is he, what manner of Communist?

History may one day find that President Ho Chi Minh of North Vietnam was one of the most widely misread and misinterpreted leaders of his era. His legacy is likely to include a never-ending quarrel about what might have happened if Americans, French, Russians, Chinese and all the rest had read him differently.

★ ★ ★

Those who take the position that the French, and then the Americans, blundered in their dealings with Ho point out that he neither acts nor talks like the stereotyped Communist of the Soviet Union or Europe, that he seems to have little in common with the fanatical men who run Communist China.

What other Communist leader calls his people his "nieces and nephews," or even, at times, "my children?" What other Communist leader avoids the complex cliches of Marxism-Leninism and talks instead in the homely, simple phrases of the peasantry?

SIMPLE, COMPLEX

Those who have known Ho well over the years picture him as a simple man who is extremely complex and who, when the occasion demanded, could be hard as nails.

"Uncle Ho" seemed to have a faculty for exercising a hyprotic power over those with whom he came into direct contact. He had a way of acting shyly and charmingly clumsy in the presence of visitors, particularly foreigners. He would go out of his way to be polite and considerate. His translucent features would be wreathed in a saintly smile, his reedy voice soft, his clothing crudely simple even to the sandals made of old rubber tires, his favored footgear for padding about noiselessly in his modest Hanoi cottage.

At the same time, this apostle of violence also could be and often was an advocate of peaceful solution.

The saga of Ho spans more than half a century of conspiracy, revolution and war. His personality has been idelibly stamped not only upon the North Vietnam he has ruled as president, but upon communism in all Southeast Asia.

FATHER FIGURE

Indeed, had it not been for the physical presence of "Uncle Ho", the war in Vietnam might have been a different story. Many — friends and foes alike — say it has been the father figure of Ho which provided the cement holding the guerrilla movement together in South Vietnam.

With the single-minded intensity of a crusader, Ho intruded himself upon the history of Southeast Asia and played a large part in its development. He took on one adversary at a time: first the Japanese occupation forces in World War II, then the Chinese occupation forces, then the French, then the Americans.

★ ★ ★

While preparing for war with France in 1945, Ho talked of peace. He would, he insisted, have been willing to see Vietnam within a French union if that had meant independence within that framework, and he even risked the condemnation of his own party in this. Perhaps it was only strategy. But it required all Ho's extraordinary persuasiveness to sell the idea to his own Viet Nam Doc Lap Dong Minh Hoi — League for Independence of Vietnam, or Viet Minh for short.

★ ★ ★

Perhaps if the French had accepted, Ho's Vietminh eventually would have ruled all Vietnam. But in any case, it was the French whose stony position prevented agreement and who bombarded Haiphong at the end of 1946, to start the war.

50 YEARS A RED

Ho Chi Minh has been a Communist for at least 50 years, as a youth, traveling around the world by working at a variety of occupations, he rubbed elbows with some of the luminaries of the movement's early days. He belonged to a school of nonorthodox Communists of revolutionary days, men who professed faith in dogma but declined to be bound by doctrinaire shibboleths.

Through it all, he was the son of his father, an Annamese village aristocrat who was a violent nationalist, a man who hated colonialism and hated the French colonists. Perhaps Ho embraced communism mostly as a tool to further his own nationalist ambitions. Perhaps he would have wound up a nationalist Communist, probably keeping both Moscow and Peking at a arm's length, had his revolution succeeded in taking all Vietnam.

★ ★ ★

Now that Ho is 78, it is possible that Americans and others are attributing to him more power than he really has. But it seems likely that Ho still has enormous influence in North Vietnam, that he remains the inspiration and the leader-figure.

Should North Vietnam now choose a road to peace, Ho will be influencing that decision at the expense of his life's dream — a Vietnam united into a single state with himself as its architect.

Choice of Wedding Cake Is Bride's, According to Recent Investigation

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My younger sister is being married soon, and she wants to have fruitcake for her wedding cake because it can be made earlier and will keep better.

ABBY

Others we've asked say that the traditional wedding cake should be white.

★ ★ ★

Sis says that Luci Johnson had fruitcake at her wedding, so there can't be anything wrong with it. Who's right? SIS

★ ★ ★

DEAR SIS: Having recently researched the history of wedding cakes, I can tell you there is no such thing as a "traditional" wedding cake. Your sister may properly have anything she wants.

★ ★ ★

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to a very nice fellow from Italy. We have been dating for four years now. He came to this country when he was only 16 years old. He is now 28. He makes good money and he speaks very good English.

He never mentioned the possibility of his going back to Italy to live until a few months ago. I always thought he liked it here so much. Now he tells me he would like to live in Italy.

Do you think I should give up my family and my country for this man?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: If you have to ask, the answer is no.

DEAR ABBY: After 10 years of a childless marriage, my husband and I adopted a beautiful baby girl. We were—and still are—on cloud nine. She was a gift from heaven because a year later we were blessed with our own little son! And the following year, another son. We should be happier than ever, but here's the problem:

My husband's father, who was against our adopting the little girl in the first place, goes out of his way to hurt the child. He favors the boys with gifts and treats, and leaves the little girl standing without—hurt and pleading for recognition. Behind our backs he refers to the girl as "that illegitimate b---- John took to raise." She is a sweet and adorable child, and much prettier than his own "blue blood" granddaughters.

★ ★ ★

We don't want to cause trouble so we make excuses for Grandpa's slights, but how can I stand by with my blood boiling and say nothing? When we leave his home I promise I'll never take the children there again, but I always weaken and do, hoping he'll behave better. What can be done?

NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: If you subject your daughter to Grandpapa's cruel treatment you are as guilty as Grandpa. Let him know that you will tolerate no more of his unfair and unfeeling conduct. Deny him the privilege of seeing all your children until he agrees to mend his ways. He may never agee, which will be his loss.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WASTED THREE YEARS IN MIAMI:" If a man is admittedly a "playboy" who doesn't want to settle down with one woman—that's HIS business. But he shouldn't do business with a 22-year-old girl who has marriage in mind.

Resetting Screws

Screws and bolts which support weight such as doors or cabinets frequently loosen with age. Here's a solution. Instead of just tightening the screw back into place, apply plastic steel in the hole, then replace the hardware while the glue is still wet.

Great-great-grandmother Mrs. Cleve E. Eaton, here for a recent visit from Grover Hill, Ohio, completed this local five generation group. She is holding five-week old Michael, son of Mrs. Michael Kasargian of Beverly Island Drive. Standing at the rear are baby's great-grandmother, Mrs. Robert C. Frayer of Middle Belt Road, West Bloomfield Township, and grandfather Don R. Frayer, also Beverly Island Drive.

Case No. F-587

Second Wives Beware

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE

CASE F-587: Evelyn Z., aged 28, was a widow.

"But a year after my husband's death in Vietnam," she said, "I met a wonderful man who teaches in high school.

"We dated for six months and then he asked me to marry him.

"I debated [illegible] for a few weeks; then accepted.

"And we have been very happy the past two years except that after the baby arrived, my husband has been caustic and fault-finding.

"He also criticizes me before guests and doesn't show me any affection at all in public.

"Yet I think he still loves me. But, Dr. Crane, why is he so cruel and hypercritical?"

BEWARE!

Girls, if you have ever been married before and then take a second husband, beware!

Widows are not quite as likely to be treated like Evelyn as are divorcees.

But both types of women must constantly keep in mind the fact that their new husbands are "testing minded."

And by "testing" minded," I mean they are trying to find out if their wives carry the torch for the former mate.

Alas, most wives don't even realize that they are being tested.

So they act like the usual, relatively frigid wife, especially after the first baby arrives to divert most of their attention.

But the average male, even in this late stage of civilization, has a false concept about a woman's eroticism.

★ ★ ★

"Every woman is wildly passionate," runs this weird notion, "especially if she really loves a man."

But the typical husband's idea of "wild passion" is decidedly different from what the normally happy wife demonstrates.

For though wives are ardently in love with their mates and are quite happy, they still subconsciously avoid and evade their husbands on many occasions when the latter seek erotic satisfaction.

Alas, the wife's evasive tactics and procrastination just play into the huband's growing suspicion that she is fonder of her first husband.

So the new husband tends to become jealous.

For he thinks he occupies a secondary place in her affections.

It usually isn't true at all, but he is POSITIVE that it is!

Since you second wives don't even dream of the dangerous ideas percolating through your husband's mind, you are innocently swept nearer and nearer to the "Niagara Falls" of your second marriage.

Redcap Recalls Career Highlights

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP)—Retiring after 42 years as a "redcap" at Pennsylvania Station here, 69-year-old Melvin L. Reddick recalled helping dozens of world-famous people with their luggage during that time, but added that the number of celebrities and wealthy Baltimoreans traveling by train is diminishing.

One unforgettable occurrence during his career was the time he was handed a baby. "This woman turned to me one day," he said, "and asked if I would hold her baby while she went to the ladies' room. She never came back."

The engagement is announced of Cynthia Louise Byer and Jerry S. O'Hanlon. The bride elect is the daughter of the Allen Byers of Detroit. Her fiance, who resides on Bass Drive, Commerce Township, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Webb of Port Richie, Fla. The couple is planning a June 29 wedding.

Ticket Sales Soar at OU

Meadow Brook Theatre reports that advance sales of tickets for its 1968-'69 season are up by approximately 900 per cent over the comparable period of last year.

"Early Bird" season ticket sales passed 2400 last Friday, says managing director David Bishop. The theatre had sold 273 advance season tickets by the close of its first season last May 28.

★ ★ ★

After the curtain falls on the final performance of "The Sea Gull" Sunday evening, the theatre will be dark until October. The repertory group takes their current play to New Hampshire for five performances, their first away from the Oakland University home.

View on Basics of Farm Problems

By BETTY CANARY

My apologies to farmers both in and out of the NFO. Several farmers said they thought I had, in a previously written column, tried to depict them as, well, less than intelligent. That was not my intention. As for my "not understanding the farmer's problems," I'm not going to pretend that I do, even though that might give him a laugh or two, which he could certainly use right now.

★ ★ ★

I am not a farm expert, only a writer, and I cannot type out in neat little lines solutions to his problems. Frankly, I doubt that a farm expert can come up with tidy solutions.

★ ★ ★

As for what one gentleman calls my "urban attitude," I know what he means although I cannot agree that I have it. This "urban attitude" is what a woman had when she asked me once, "What is that?" as we were floating down the Mississippi river during a tour Mrs. Lyndon Johnson made of the Midwest. I looked at the name tag the woman wore and read "Voice Of America." Would you believe "that" was a grain elevator?

★ ★ ★

She wasn't joking and, once I realized it, I explained to her the simple mysteries of a grain elevator. Then I stood watching the murky water and wondering how this writer could hope to interpret the feel, the wonder, the life of this country to others if she had never seen even a picture of a grain elevator.

To the farmers and their wives who wonder if I have heard such terms as "parity" and "soil bank" and "subsidies," the answer is, yes. When I ate homemade coffee cake in farmwives' kitchens, my interest was more than academic when they discussed egg production.

★ ★ ★

When my newspaper beat was county news, I not only took pictures of the first tomato of the summer and had a squash that looked like a man plunked down on my desk, but I sat through many a long meeting while farmers worried aloud about their problems.

I am sorry to say that in that same county there are now only TWO full-time farmers because, in order to feed their families, the others have had to take either full-time or part-time jobs in nearby cities.

Financial Plague Dooms Future for Ypsilanti Greek Theater

YPSILANTI (UPI) — The Ypsilanti Greek Theater appears doomed.

The theater will never put on another season, according to William F. Anhut, a director and president of the Industrial Development Corp. which handled the YGT's finances until earlier this year.

"This thing has been dead," he said. "People just refuse to believe it."

SUCCESS

The theater seemed a smashing success when it opened in 1966 with Dame Judith Anderson in Aeschelus' "Oresteia" and the late Bert Lahr in Aristophanes' "The Birds."

Reviewers came from New York, Boston, Washington, Philadelphia, the West Coast and Canada, from Chicago's three main papers and from dozens of other cities in Michigan and surrounding states.

★ ★ ★

A few of the reviews were mixed, but most of the critics liked both productions, were amazed that a relatively small community could bring off such a big endeavor and were lavish in their praise of the Greek theater concept.

What few apparently were aware of, even among the directors, was the spending of money which should have been set aside for Social Security and federal income tax withholding of YGT employes and cast members.

DEBT

A recent Chamber of Commerce accounting showed the theater is faced with more than $500,000 in debts, after spending more than $1.1 million.

The debts include $55,000 to $80,000 which the Internal Revenue Service is demanding, $270,500 in loans, $2,055 interest on the loans and $147,214 in unpaid bills — not including debts written off by various merchants and individuals as contributions.

★ ★ ★

Week after week the theater seemed in danger of closing because of an inability to meet the payroll. But it survived the full season due to last-minute contributions and the ill-fated discontinuance of payments into the tax escrow accounts.

Every fund-raising attempt since the fall of 1966, from public appeals to benefit performances to the hiring of a fund raiser, has failed to make either a significant dent in the debt or bring in enough money to make a second season likely.

These Worriers Need Our Reassurance

By MURIEL LAWRENCE

DEAR MRS. LAWRENCE: Our 17-year-old son is in the hospital with severe injuries resulting from a car accident. But, as the doctor assures us that he will recover from them, this is not the problem. The problem is my mother-in-law. At any family crisis, she goes to bed with "heart flutters." As if my husband weren't worried enough about the boy, she calls him every night to talk about "poor Al," how wrong the doctor may be and how Al may be an invalid for the rest of his life. She is so selfish . . .

ANSWER: Let your husband try saying this to her: "Al's accident is not your fault. Nobody could possibly blame you for it. You weren't there to prevent it."

It may not work. On the other hand, it might. It just might get her out of bed and over those "heart flutters" and badgering behavior.

People who carry on like this when any family trouble occurs blame themselves for it. They go to bed, not with "heart flutters" but with fury at trouble's presumption to occur. For such people are Absolute Power-Claimers.

When circumstances get out of hand and produce a grandson's car accident, they have an awful time with themselves. Whatever concern they feel for the grandson is swallowed by horror of the possibility that they're not Absolutely Powerful. Which is why they need so much reassurance of blamelessness.

If we don't know this about them, their carryings on can drive us almost as crazy as they are.

Actually, they can't help this badgering. It is the consequence of cruel childhood training which made them so ashamed of any weakness in them that they could only deal with it by denying its existence, so they endow themselves with the power of God to so organize the world that it appears consistently "good" and obedient to them.

They look "selfish" but they're not. They're just furious at the circumstance which has suggested that horrifying helplessness to them. If we can convince them that their helplessness is O.K. with us, we can sometimes make it a little more comfortable for them.

Hang Blinds, Wash Outside

When cleaning Venetian blinds, clean the cloth tape as well as the slats. An easy way to do this is to hang the blinds on two nails on an outside wall. Commence by scrubbing one side of the closed slats and tapes with a scrub brush dipped into detergent suds.

★ ★ ★

Then hose off the blinds with clear water. Turn the blind around, keeping the slats closed, and do the same thing on the other side. Let the blinds dry with weights on the bottom to stretch the tapes.

Too-high heat or too-long cooking is the chief cause of liver becoming hard when cooked.

Mend Scorched Carpet

DEAR POLLY — I suggest that Mrs. J. M. McC. remove the scorch from the top of her carpet by shearing it off with sharp scissors. I have done this and it is scarcely noticeable. Of course, the type of carpet and its weave would have something to do with the success of this method. — MRS. M. H.

★ ★ ★

DEAR POLLY — To patch small holes in carpet that were caused by cigar or cigarette burns, I run the vacuum over the rug and take a bit of the nap from the sweeper. Put a little glue at the bottom of the hole and insert this nap into it. Flatten out the surface with your foot and the hole will not be noticeable. — MRS. P. N.

PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY — How can one soften the bristles on a hair brush? Those in my recently purchased dresser set are as stiff as wire. Another question is: How to whiten a white mink collar that has yellowed? — MARY ELLEN

DEAR POLLY — Just recently I started to make a batch of cookies and was rushed for time. To my despair, I found that my brown sugar had dried hard as a brick.

I brought a pan of water to a boil, removed it from the heat, placed a lump of brown sugar in a colander on top of the boiling water (not touching the water) and covered with a towel. After a few minutes, the sugar softened until I could easily crumble it with my hands. It was soft and moist as brown sugar should be. — MRS. V. McC.

DEAR GIRLS — I liked using a strainer better than a colander so if the sugar should start to crumble none would fall through as easily. — POLLY

Cook a Batch of Buckles for Belts, Booties

Here's a way to outfit yourself with a whole bevy of belts for what little it costs to buy grosgrain ribbon or felt and bristly velcro for the closings. The buckles which will really give smash to your sash, you'll custom-make in the kitchen out of a clay concocted of baking soda and cornstarch.

★ ★ ★

And if you want to be frightfully "in," you'll make up smaller matching sets of buckles for your shoes. They'll give last year's models '68 pizazz so you can trip brightly through summer with a whole new wardrobe of shoes. Here's the procedure, starting with the clay:

In a saucepan combine 2 cups baking soda (1 1-pound package) and 1 cup cornstarch. Add 1-¼ cups cold water mixing until smooth. Bring to a boil over medium heat, stirring constantly. Cook a minute longer or until mixture looks like moist mashed potatoes. Transfer to a plate promptly; cover with a damp cloth and when cool enough to handle, knead a little as you would dough. Store all but a handful of clay in a closed pliofilm bag.

To make belt buckles, roll out clay on waxed paper to ¼-inch thickness. On top of clay place pre-cut cardboard patterns of squares, rectangles or triangles sized to match the width of your belt ribbon. Use duplicate patterns for shoe buckles sized to fit the shoes. With a sharp knife and ruler, cut clay away from around patterns.

★ ★ ★

You can cut out circles with cookie cutter, glass or jar lid. Pierce holes with toothpick an inch apart and a quarter of an inch in from the edge of design for sewing onto ribbon.

★ ★ ★

For a fun, look-see touch, press mirrors, 1-inch in diameter, into centers and plastic silver paillettes into side edges. Both come in little packets and are available in dime stores and hobby shops. Remove mirrors once you've made the indentation. You'll glue them in place later.

★ ★ ★

Now let buckles sit overnight to dry and harden. In the meantime you can be preparing your felt or ribbon. For a 24-inch waist, you'll need a 30-inch length for each belt. For added stiffness sew on a corresponding length of canvas or similarly tough fabric that you may find in your mother's scrap bag. Sew a half inch wide strip of velcro to each end of your lined ribbon for the closure.

★ ★ ★

Now for the painting — use water colors, tempera, or whatever you have on hand. Pick colors that go with your wardrobe, and the more madly you mix them the better. Then dip buckles in a panful of shellac for a ceramic-like finish. When thoroughly dry, sew each onto its ribbon with nylon thread; and lastly paste mirrors back in place with white glue.

★ ★ ★

To plant buckles on shoes, take two half-inch wide strips of adhesive tape, each about five inches long, and anchor them onto the inside of shoe toes at opposite sides so that the two pieces cross as they emerge from shoes. Fold over the top of toes. Fold back again so that sticky side is up, and press on buckle.

A buffet in Mrs. Mosser's home is slated from 4 to 7 p.m. the same day. The pair was married June 11, 1918 in Seaforth, Ont., and came to this area in 1928.

There are 15 grandchildren.

Will Wed in Fall

A Sept. 7 wedding is planned by Patricia Ann Klobnock and Faye Franklin Vanderpool.

Their parents are the John D. Klobnocks of Emerson Street and the James F. Vanderpools of Fourth Avenue.

Dustpan, Broom in Combination

A snappy new idea to make it easier for a woman to keep the house neat is sweeping into popularity. The idea combines the best features of the household dustpan and the kitchen broom.

★ ★ ★

The dustpan and broom stand 16 inches high for easier use. The six-inch-wide broom snaps inside the dustpan for compact storage. Big crumbs and small spills in the kitchen or the patio are removed quickly.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ramin of June Street, Avon Township announce the engagement of their daughter, Loretta of Farmington, to Clarence Strong Jr. He is the son of the senior Clarence Strongs of Briggs Street. A July 13 wedding is slated.

Holiday Includes Two Celebrations

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph O. Allen have invited relatives to their Cooley Lake Road home today to celebrate the fifth birthday of their twins, Scott and John.

★ ★ ★

Grandmother, Mrs. Clarence Hardenburg and Mr. Hardenburg of Durnham Street, will be there along with Mr. Allen's brother and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Allen, from Milford, and their two children, Jeff and Greg. The Allens' other three children, Sue, Chip and Jim will complete the gathering.

Sisters Comprise Bride's Court

With her four sisters as attendants, Gladys Irene Carter recently became the bride, of William Dennis Heiligenthal.

Connie served as maid of honor, Nancy as bridesmaid, Joyce and Janice as flower girls.

Their parents are Mrs. Marie Carter of Dewey Street and Herbert Carter of Richmond Street.

ATTIRE

For the evenings vows in First General Baptist Church, the bride chose a full length organza gown with tiered overskirt and long sleeves.

Her court train was accented with four rows of lace appliques. She carried a cascade of roses and carnations with trailing ivy.

The son of Mrs. Raymond E. Heiligenthal of North Tasmania Street, and the late Mr. Heiligenthal, was attended by David Beaupre, a cousin, as best man with ushers Daniel King and David Thompson. Jeffrey Hooker was ring bearer.

Following a reception in the Roosevelt Hotel, the couple left for a honeymoon in Niagara Falls.

Efficient Closet Idea

To keep a neater clothes closet and to prevent coat hanger hooks from interlocking, separate them with a four-inch diameter disc cut from stiff cardboard. Cut a center hole large enough to slide easily on the clothes rail, making a slit in the bottom so that you can slip it over the rail.

Speak Vows

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Parsall of Clayburn Avenue announce the recent marriage of their daughter, Pamela Sue, to Airman 1-C Gary H. Jacobs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Jacobs of South Shore Drive.

Airman Jacobs is stationed in Libya

Heading the evening's agenda was the installation of officers for the coming year with Alice Jackson as president and Mrs. Don Griffin, vice president.

★ ★ ★

Other new officers are Mrs. William Killen and Mrs. Thomas Mosley, secretaries and Mrs. Thomas Ogden, treasurer.

Mrs. Don Griffin was also awarded the Exemplar degree and a special service award, the Order of the Rose, was given to Mrs. Ray Slaughter and Mrs. H. R. Richardson.

Michigan's Pickles Star During Special Week

By JANET ODELL
Food Editor, The Pontiac Press

Gov. Romney has declared this week "Michigan Pickle Week." It is appropriate for a state that ranks first in the production of pickles.

At one time the amount of pickles sold topped in dollars all other vegetables. Surprising, but stop and think how often you eat pickles. At our house, it's often.

★ ★ ★

Molded salads are a cool thing to serve in warm weather. It's fun to purchase a fish mold for a molded fish salad. Use your imagination when you start to garnish it. Here, pickles can be a help too.

This recipe calls for inexpensive canned mackerel.

Pickle Mackerel Loaf

1 can (15 ounces) mackerel, drained, boned and flaked
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons prepared horseradish
1 cup drained sweet pickle relish
¼ cup melted butter or margarine
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon paprika
Salt and pepper to taste
¾ teaspoon Tabasco
3 cups mashed potatoes
¾ cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon sweet pickle liquid
Sweet gherkin slices for garnish

Combine mackerel, milk, horse-radish and sweet pickle relish. Mix with electric mixer. Add butter, mustard, paprika, salt and pepper, Tabasco and potatoes to mackerel mixture; mix well.

★ ★ ★

Turn into oiled fish mold or 1½ quart mold. Chill 2 to 3 hours. Unmold on serving platter.

GLAZE

Combine mayonnaise and sweet pickle liquid; mix well and spread over molded fish mixture. Garnish with gherkin slices, as desired.

★ ★ ★

What's tuna fish salad without the addition of sweet pickle relish? Cheese, eggs and dairy sour cream add more protein and a tangy taste to these hearty sandwiches.

Tuna Bunwiches

8 sandwich buns, split
¼ cup (½ stick) butter, melted
½ teaspoon garlic salt
1 can (7 oz.) tuna, drained and flaked
3 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
1 cup (4 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese
¼ cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped pimiento-stuffed olives
2 tablespoons diced pimiento
2 tablespoons minced onion
1 tablespoon sweet pickle relish
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ cup dairy sour cream

Mix garlic salt into butter; brush on cut sides of buns. Place on baking sheet and toast under broiler until lightly browned.

★ ★ ★

In a bowl toss together tuna, eggs, Cheddar cheese, green pepper, celery, olives, pimiento, onion, pickle relish and lemon juice. Gently fold in sour cream, blend well. spoon mixture onto bottom half of each bun (approx. ½ cup per bun).

WRAP

Wrap each sandwich in aluminum foil. (If desired sandwiches may be prepared up to this point and refrigerated until ready to heat before serving.) Warm sandwiches in preheated 325-degree oven 25-30 minutes. Makes 8 sandwiches.

★ ★ ★

Dill pickle liquid gives barbecue sauce a teasing sharpness. Use it to baste a rolled shoulder lamp roast you cook on the outdoor grill or your rotisserie. It's different.

1 5-pound boned shoulder of lamb, rolled and tied
1 teaspoon whole cloves
¼ cup salad oil
2 tablespoons dill pickle liquid
⅓ cup firmly-packed brown sugar
¼ cup finely chopped dill pickles
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon allspice

Stud lamb with cloves. Arrange lamb on spit. Cook in rotisserie or on outdoor grill about 2 to 2½ hours, or until meat thermometer registers 175-180 degrees (depending upon desired degree of doneness).

★ ★ ★

Combine remaining ingredients; stir and heat to boiling point. Baste lamb frequently with sauce while cooking. Makes 8 servings.

HORS D'OEUVRE

If you're in the market for a great new hors d'oeuvre, here's the place to start. Bake a sponge roll, similar to, but less sweet than jelly roll cake, and fill it with a delicious deviled ham mixture. Pickles add to the pleasing taste, of course.

Deviled Ham Sponge Roll

4 large eggs, separated
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon minced parsley
½ cup sifted regular flour
2 cans (each 4½ ounces) deviled ham
2 tablespoons slightly drained sweet pickle relish
Large pimiento-stuffed green olives
1 tub (4 ounces) whipped pimiento cream cheese, at room temperature
½ cup coarsely chopped parsley
½ cup coarsely chopped toasted filberts

Grease a jelly-roll pan (about 15 by 10 by 1 inch); line bottom with wax paper; grease paper.

★ ★ ★

In a large mixing bowl, with electric beater, beat the egg whites until foamy; add salt and sugar; beat until whites hold stiff against peaks when beater is slowly withdrawn.

★ ★ ★

At once, without washing beaters, beat the egg yolks until they begin to thicken and are lemon color; fold into the beaten egg whites with the minced parsley; gradually fold in flour.

Turn into prepared pan, spreading evenly. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 8 to 10 minutes.

FILLING

Meanwhile, in a small bowl, mix together the deviled ham and pickle relish.

★ ★ ★

With a small spatula, loosen "cake" from sides of pan; turn out onto a clean tea towel; peel off wax paper. At once spread with deviled ham mixture. Place olives along 10-inch edge and roll up from 10-inch edge; cool.

★ ★ ★

Cover with transparent plastic wrap; chill. Frost roll with pimiento cream cheese; cover again with plastic wrap and chill again.

★ ★ ★

One hour before serving, mix together the coarsely chopped parsley and the filberts and roll the frosted roll in the mixture, patting it in gently; let stand at room temperature this hour before serving.

Makes 8 servings.

Roll Out and Cut Hamburg Patties

When entertaining a bunch of friends at a hamburger fry, try rolling out the hamburger steak to the desired thickness with a rolling pin, between layers of waxed paper, so that it will not stick. Cut with a biscuit cutter. You will find this method much quicker than the usual way of making patties.

SPRINGTIME SALAD BOWL — Every day in the year brings us lettuce as crisp as Iceberg dressed with Lemon Garlic Dressing and garnished with cheese strips.

Garlic Flavor High in Spring Salad

"Ho! Tis the time of salads!" This is one of the lines from "Tristam Shandy," a novel written about two centuries ago. Then, unlike today, green salads weren't taken for granted.

★ ★ ★

In England — and throughout the temperate zone generally — there were months without a spear of green. When, finally, the northbound sun warmed cottage gardens, the first bowlful of greens marked a red-letter day. "Ho!" was truly an expression of surprise and delight.

SPRINGTIME SALAD BOWL

1 small clove garlic, crushed
2 cups soft bread cubes tablespoons butter or
3 tablespoons butter or
1 small head Iceberg lettuce
¼ medium-sized head curly endive
2 fresh scallions, finely chopped
½ pound American cheese, cut into ¼ inch strips
Tomato wedges
Lemon Garlic Dressing

Saute garlic and bread cubes in butter until bread is golden brown. Set aside for later use. Wash lettuce and endive; dry thoroughly and tear or cut into bite-size pieces. Toss in salad bowl with scallions.

★ ★ ★

Arrange cheese and garlic croutons on greens. Garnish with tomatoes. Just before serving toss lightly with Lemon-Garlic Dressing.

Lemon Garlic Dressing

¾ cup olive or salad oil
¼ cup fresh lemon juice
1 clove garlic, finely minced
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon sugar
⅛ teaspoon ground black pepper

Place all ingredients in jar with tight-fitting lid. Cover and shake until well blended. Yield: 6 to 8 servings.

Q. What's the name of this meat cut?

A. Lamb shank.

Q. Where does it come from? How is it identified?

A. A lamb shank comes from the front leg of lamb. It contains two fore shank bones, and part of the arm bone. Layers of meat surround the bones. All of the cut is surrounded by a thin, parchment-like covering called "fell." This is to be left on during cooking.

Q. How are they prepared?

A. By braising or cooking in liquid. After they're cooked until done, they may be boned and stuffed. They are also served with the bones left in. To braise lamb shanks, they are usually dredged in seasoned flour, then browned slowly in lard or drippings. After the drippings are poured off, a small amount of water or other braising liquid is added, the utensil covered tightly, and the shanks cooked slowly for 1 to 1½ hours. To cook in liquid, brown the shanks, or not as desired. Cover the shanks with water. Cover and simmer until tender, 1 to 1½ hours. One lamb shank weighs from ¾ to 1 pound. Allow one shank per serving.

Familiar Salad Has New Taste

Kids are so fond of carrots and raisins that they are sure to go for this slaw variation, flavored with American blue cheese. Combine 2 cups grated raw carrots and 1 cup seedless raisins. Mix together 1 teaspoon sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup mayonnaise and ½ cup (about 3 ounces, crumbled) American blue cheese.

Stir the dressing into carrots and raisins, tossing lightly. Serve in lettuce cups.

Vary the Flavor

For an unusual supper treat or to liven up your family's appetite if they are becoming tired of scrambled eggs, try adding a pinch of savory. Their interest will immediately pick up, and eggs will beomce a favorite again.

Opening lead—♣Q

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Today's hand was played in the early days of contract. Not exactly this hand, but one similar enough so that the result was the same.

JACOBY

South was one of the first great contract authorities. North was young Oswald Jacoby. The game was rubber bridge and the stakes quite high for those Depression days although they would mean little in today's inflation.

South liked to bid no-trump and his opening no-trump bid was an indefinite sort of strong hand with no-trump distribution. Needless to say, four aces and a king filled the bill nicely.

As you can see North responded with a two heart call. He knew that South would bid again. When South jumped to three no-trump, North went after 100-honors in hearts and rebid his nice suit. When South persisted with no-trump, North decided quite properly that South held all the aces. North bid a heart slam.

★ ★ ★

It did him no good. South went right on to six no-trump and North gave up the hopeless struggle.

South played with perfect technique. He won the club opening and led a low spade to set up a possible squeeze if diamonds did not break. Unfortunately for North and South the diamonds did not break and the squeeze didn't materialize. South got his 150 ponits for the aces but game, slam and rubber had gone into limbo.

★ ★ ★

Oswald Jacoby was mad then. He is still mad 35 years later but with the passage of time some of his anger is turned against himself.

He knew that his partner liked to play no-trump. He should have realized that he was not going to get to play the hand and should have given up at three no-trump.

True, the heart slam was there since playing at hearts he could ruff his fourth diamond but what good is a heart slam when you aren't going to be allowed to play in hearts?

What do you do now?

A—We have a slight preference for a four-heart bid, but no criticism for a pass. Let your conscience be your guide.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Instead of bidding one no-trump your partner responds two diamonds to your opening spade bid. You rebid two hearts and he jumps to four hearts. What do you do now?

LBJ Travel Drive Only Somewhat Successful

LONDON (AP) — President Johnson's "save the dollar" campaign is holding down the flow of American tourists to Europe and luring more European visitors to the United States.

But the campaign to reduce the U.S. tourist deficit by $500 million apparently has not been as effective in either direction as Johnson wanted.

★ ★ ★

Travel agents in some European countries report more Americans than ever will come this year despite Johnson's appeal for them to spend their holidays — and their dollars — at home.

The increase, however, would have been bigger if the President hadn't spoken, they say.

BIG INCREASE

Experts like Juan Trippe, retiring chairman of Pan American World Airways, say European tourists visiting the United States will increase by as much as 40 per cent and reduce the deficit substantially.

The Commerce Department's "Visit U.S.A." campaign is attracting thousands of Europeans for a Stateside vacation, but American travelers still outnumber and outspend the Europeans by a fat margin.

Some Europeans appear to be frightened off by the violence of the past few American summers. One Swiss travel official said: "The publicity about race riots probably makes some people think twice about visiting the United States."

"We are booked full for the summer," said one London hotel operator, "but if President Johnson passes his travel tax it might hurt business." So far, though, the talk of Americans staying home hasn't had any effect at all."

4,000 MORE

Country by country, tourist authorities report the following:

BRITAIN: In February, the latest month for available figures, 25,200 Americans arrived, 4,000 more than last year.

A British Overseas Airways Corp. spokesman said: "We have a six or seven per cent increase in bookings from the United States this summer. All the airlines are watching very carefully, though, on the American travel tax — if it really bites, there could be cancellations."

★ ★ ★

A spokesman for the luxury Savoy, Claridge's, Berkeley and Connaughts hotels said: "We are absolutely packed, and 50 per cent of the guests in the Savoy are American."

The U.S. Consulate reported 65,654 Britons have applied for American visas so far this year — only 155 more than last year, but increases are expected.

WITH RELATIVES

British Travelers can take $120 out of the country. Most British visitors to the United States stay with relatives.

SOVIET UNION: About 20,000 Americans visit Russia yearly and Moscow is clearly expecting more this summer. A chain of special "dollar stores" has been expanded, stocked with goods Russians can't buy. New hotels are going up, and cities formerly barred to tourists are open.

★ ★ ★

HOLLAND: More than 250,000 Americans come to Amsterdam every summer. Officials — and canal boat operators — expect an increase in 1968. KLM Royal Dutch Airplines, is promoting a "Discover America" program, and offering discounts on car rentals and entertainment.

★ ★ ★

FRANCE: One major tourist agency reports American visitors have been dwindling for five years. Another 50 per cent reduction is predicted this season.

BIG ATTRACTIONS

More French tourists — possibly 200,000 — will visit the United States this year, many attracted by the fair in San Antonio and the Olympic games in Mexico.

ITALY: Officials predict the same number of Americans will come this year as in 1967, a non-boom year. The reason: cheaper prices in Spain and Yugoslavia and reduced through-traffic to Greece and the Middle East because of tension there.

★ ★ ★

GERMANY: Lufthansa Airlines and hotel officials report traffic from the United States is steady. More Germans are visiting the United States than ever before — 15,419 went in the first quarter of 1967 and this year the figure is 17,977.

SPAIN: Spain got almost 18 million tourists last year and 708,761 of them were Americans. Officials expect a decline this summer because of Johnson's appeal.

SOME CANCELLATIONS

SWITZERLAND: American visitors increased by 23 per cent in January and February, but a hotel spokesman said some cancellations were expected. Fewer Swiss are going to the United States, and America's disturbances are given as one reason.

★ ★ ★

AUSTRIA: In February 17,243 Americans came, 5,000 more than last year. Figures for the spring show a decline. More Austrians are applying for American visas, but trips there are still too expensive for most.

★ ★ ★

NORWAY and SWEDEN: The Norwegian Travel Association and Swedish officials expect the same number of Americans this year as last. The Scandinavian Airlines System foresees increased travel in both directions across the Atlantic.

YUGOSLAVIA expects Americans to keep coming at last year's rate. Greece, heavily dependent on tourist traffic, has suffered because of its political troubles. American tourists have virtually abandoned the Arab countries since last year's war. Travel to Israel, however, is up.

Drama Took Over in '67-'68 Broadway Year

By WILLIAM GLOVER
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK — Musicals, the special pride and joy of Broadway, took a back seat to drama during the 1967-68 theatrical year.

Artistically, it was a season to commend rather than hail. Statistically, both activity and prices were up.

During the production year that ends technically on May 31, showgoers will have seen 73 new exhibits and anted up $56 million at the box office.

In comparison, there were 64 arrivals in the previous semester with an over-all take of $52 million. And the year before that, the respective figures were 55 und $50 million. The steady increase in grosses has resulted to some extent from higher ticket prices necessitated by rising costs.

RATIO UNAFFECTED

One statistic, the hit-flop ratio, remained stubbornly unaffected by all the creative endeavor that ranged from calculated shock to formula slickness. Several shows ranged to the limits of vocal and visual frankness.

Excluding repertory enterprises which are inexorably committed to deficit financing and limited run "prestige" presentations, 59 commercial shows arrived. Of these, 11 already have paid off or give every evidence of eventually rewarding their angels.

★ ★ ★

Several other still-running entries could join the charmed circle.

To get the fiscal picture of Broadway in proper perspective, two other factors must be mentioned. Nine holdover smashes from earlier seasons continue to pile up profits and five other long runs wound up during 1967-68 with a profit of over $400,000.

HEALTHY ROAD YEAR

Also, about a dozen touring versions of Broadway winners prospered during a healthy road year.

Standout performers were Helen Hayes, Joel Grey, Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme, Albert Finney, Zoe Caldwell, Ingrid Bergman, Colleen Dewhurst and Melvyn Douglas.

★ ★ ★

The palpable new hits, now running, include "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead," the top prize-winning drama from England; Arthur Miller's "The Price," Neil Simon's "Plaza Suite," and the blithe London trifle, "There's a Girl in My Soup."

Of 13 musical ventures, only "George M!," "Golden Rainbow" and "The Happy Time" appear potential dividend reapers. Among the most monumental disasters in the song-dance category were "Darling of the Day" and "I'm Solomon."

CLOSED PAYOFFS

Closed payoffs include Marlene Dietrich's fabulous in-person engagement; Eugene O'Neill's somber posthumous piece, "More Stately Mansions," and by slim margins, Peter Ustinov's "Halfway up the Tree" and Edward Albee's "Everything in the Garden."

Other quality assets of the season were visits by the Vienna Burgtheater, the Polish Theater of Poland and the work of the APA-Phoenix company.

Worthy too are the still-running "Joe Egg," "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie" and the recently arrived "Soldiers."

★ ★ ★

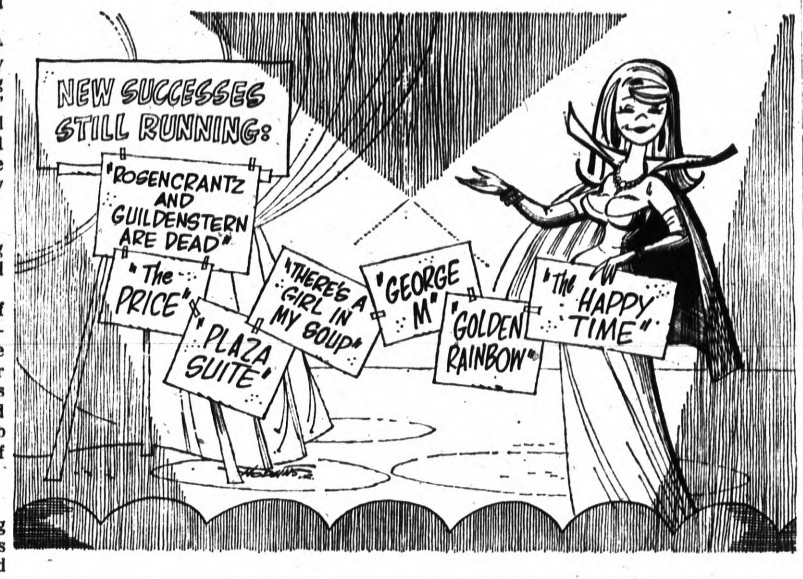
The Lincoln Center Repertory, badgered still by errors of omission and commission, gave evidence of growing strength with "The Little Foxes," "Tiger at the Gates," "Saint Joan" and "Cyrano de Bergerac." APA scored its biggest hit with "The Show-Off."

On the downbeat side, established authors, including Robert Anderson, Henry Denker, Harold Pinter, Gore Vidal and Tennessee Williams, found the going rough. Even Bernard Shaw, in a one-man condensation "By George!," failed to please critics or populace.

New writers had plenty of opportunity, being involved in 22 presentations. The four that made the biggest impressions were Tom Stoppard with "Rosencratz and Guildenstern," Terence Frisby who delivered "There's a Girl in My Soup" and Peter Nichols, "Joe Egg." Britons all. The lone domestic standout was Mrs. Jay Presson Allen with "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie."

★ ★ ★

The public, as usual, proved tougher than the critics, speedily ignoring seven plays that won majority approval, and reversing the pundits only once.



State Gears for Tourist

LANSING — The Michigan State Highway Commission, recognized nationally for its travel information program, is ready to extend another welcome to vacationers.

Some 800,000 persons are expected to stop this year for free travel counselling service at the Commission's eight travel information centers, and increase of about 100,000 over last year.

The centers are on main highways at six points of entry — New Buffalo, Monroe, Port Huron, Sault Ste. Marie, Ironwood and Menominee — and at Clare and Mackinaw City. By late summer, a ninth center will be in operation on I-69 near Coldwater.

For several weeks, maintenance crews have been busy repairing and redecorating the information center buildings and grooming the surrounding picnic grounds.

RACKS STOCKED

Literature racks, filled during the winter with information on winter sports, have been stocked with summer folders, and literature storage shelves are being restocked, literally by the truckload.

Last year, travelers selected and carried away more than 2.5 million maps, directories, schedules, brochures and booklets telling about travel attractions, how to reach them and where to stay.

It is expected that the 1968 total will exceed three million.

New Idea Aids Fresh Water

By Science Service

In coastal areas, when fresh water is pumped in large quantities from underground water-bearing formations the pressure often becomes low enough in the aquifiers that salt water from the ocean can leak in and contaminate the fresh.

Several ways of preventing this have been tried, but with limited success.

Now two California inventors have patented an idea which may show promise. It consists of pumping a dam down a well to block off the contamination.

A series of holes is drilled in a line between the fresh water supply and the incoming salt water.

★ ★ ★

A slurry of clay or other non-water-soluble material is pumped down the first hole, while fresh water is removed from the second in conventional fashion.

Then the process is shifted so that slurry goes down the second hole and fresh water comes up the third, and so on until a wall has been built blocking the aquifier off from the salt water.

Seek to Free It From Portugal

Rebels Fight for Mozambique

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP)—The former professor eyed suspiciously the door of a hotel suite.

"I may be killed any day—but there will be victory," said Eduardo Mondlane, 47-year-old leader of an East African group seeking to wrest Mozambique from Portuguese rule.

★ ★ ★

The odds are against him, but he is used to overcoming odds. His Front for the Liberation of Mozambique, Frelimo, went into action in 1964 with 250 armed men. Today it claims to be able to field a force of 10,000 men—and to have knocked out 6,000 Portuguese troops. But Frelimo is not without inside stresses.

Mozambique is the East African outpost of Portuguese rule. The United Nations General Assembly has condemned Portugal's refusal to free it along with Angola and Portuguese Guinea on the west coast. Portugal denies they are colonies and says the opportunities of Portuguese citizenship are open to all the people.

HARVARD-EDUCATED

Mondlane is a native of Mozambique who was educated in South Africa and at Harvard and once taught anthropology at Syracuse University in New York.

The Portuguese admit to having an army of 42,000 in Mozambique. Mondlane says the figure is closer to 65,000. "It is not the soldiers we are concerned about; it is the airplanes," he says, adding that antiaircraft weapons are expected soon.

★ ★ ★

His group claims control of the northern province of Niassa—"We control the border. The Portuguese army is in garrison and comes and goes by air." Mondlane says. He says he was in Mozambique in mid-May and his men also are active in the provinces of Cabo Delgado, Tete and Zambesia.

"Whenever the Portuguese consider a town not to be on their side they bomb it with antipersonnel weapons. They count all dead as freedom fighters," he adds.

"We only attack armed men, usually at close quarters, and count them when they fall. We are extremely structured. No one who shoots does so without direction."

Arms come from sympathetic countries, including Communist China, the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia as well as African countries offering British and Belgian weapons.

★ ★ ★

Frelimo operates a school in Tanzania to prepare leaders for the day when it hopes Portuguese rule is ended.

Mondlane, whose library is filled with revolutionary works from Spanish, North Vietnamese, Greek, Chinese and other masters of the art, also faces nonmilitary opposition. He has a white American wife whom opponents criticize on racial grounds. Mondlane has headed Frelimo since he was elected president at its first congress in 1962, and some think it is time for a change.

THEY MUST SERVE

Students at its Mozambique Institute know they must serve at least three months in Frelimo's military arm sometime between the age of 18 and 22—usually after graduation from the American financed

Some students have opposed this recently, and others opposed use of the Portuguese language in the institute and the employment of Portuguese teachers and doctors. The institute, closed since March because of disputes, is expected to reopen soon.

One day this month it took scores of steel-helmeted riot police, augmented by fully armed soldiers of the Tanzanian Field Force to restore order at Frelimo headquarters when a verbal dispute became a melee involving knives and clubs.

Five were injured, two seriously, and 18 arrested. Mondlane, who was out of the country at the time, said none of those who attempted to smash their way in were Frelimo members.

PRIEST IS FOE

His most vocal opponent, the Rev. Mateus Gwenjere, a Roman Catholic priest, said the dispute started because some members were demanding a general election within Frelimo.

Shortly after the arrests, the Daily Nation, circulated in Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania, praised Mondlane editorially as "a man who is likely to control a not insignificant country in this part of the continent in the foreseeable future." "He is a capable leader and a wise statesman," it said. "He deserves the support of Africa and the world."

★ ★ ★

Mondlane, expressing embarrassment at the lavish praise, said: "That is the kind of thing that happens when you are dead."

Dress Up Hall With Paneling

The easiest way to dress up an entrance hall is to panel one or more walls using solid lumber to provide the distinction this area deserves.

Western hemlock, cedar and ponderosa pine are good choices.

It's Time to Hit Up the Old Memory Bank

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — The greatest reward of age is memory.

It alone makes growing old worthwhile.

The young delight in fantasies of the future; their busy minds paint pretty picture fables of life as they dream it may be.

BOYLE

But memory is the master painter in the calmer minds of those who have been longer touched by time. It presents in fadeless colors not the scenes of what-may-be but the scenes of what-has-been. Memory makes the past not an enemy but a consolation.

* * *

You've trudged many a far step along life's highway yourself if you can look back and remember when —

* * *

Some unknown classmate penned an unsigned inscription in your high school yearbook: "Roses are red, violets are blue, somebody loves you — you'll never guess who."

Every kid in the family hated the chore of having to go down in the basement on winter nights and bank the coal fire in the furnace. Who knew what terrible demons lurked in those terrible cellar shadows?

Before he fell asleep a small boy would spend a delirous 10 minutes scratching the marks left on his legs by the elastic bands he used to keep his long black stockings up.

The height of devil-may-care for a lad was to put his cap on backwards and ride down a long hill on his bicycle without holding on to the handlebars.

You could drive out of his mind every grown-up within two blocks of your home by putting a tin penny whistle in your mouth and blowing bird calls on it from morning to dusk.

TRIP TO WOODSHED

Any "war between the generations" usually ended in a trip to the woodshed, from which youth limped out later a weeping loser.

Only poor people were on diets, and they called it "doing without."

Home didn't seem quite home in the occasional summers when a wren failed to build her nest in one of the front porch eaves.

The traditional symbol of a grandfather was a long white beard, and the surest way to throw one of these old gaffers into a tantrum was for a smart aleck to ask him, "Grandpa, do you sleep with your whiskers under the covers or over them?" His usual tart reply: "That's for me to know, sonny, and you to find out."

Those were the days! Remember?

Defense Dept. Offers Riot Rules for Soldier

By JERRY BAULCH
Associated Press News Feature

WASHINGTON — What should a young soldier do when he is called on unexpectedly to face a mob?

For one thing, he shouldn't have to decide too much, because the fundamentals have been spelled out for him in a new Defense Department pamphlet.

BAULCH

The publication is for general use and not merely for those troops who are getting actual training in situations where snipers, arsonists and looters are confronted. The emphasis is on "techniques of control and application of required force without endangering the lives of innocent civilians."

The 17-page document, long in preparation, came out as rioting and unrest erupted across the country, triggered by the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

For the young man who may some day find himslef in uniform with a rifle, facing a crowd of his fellow Americans, the booklet gives this advice:

"Acts of violence may be committed by either crowds or mobs. A crowd is merely a group of angry and unorganized people. As a group, they lack unity and courage. A mob is a determined crowd that is no longer afraid of the law or the consequence of lawlessness. When the presence of troops can control the group, it is still a crowd; when weapons must be used the crowd has become a mob."

A FEW LEADERS

Noting that any such crowd has a few determined leaders—often professional agitators—many zealous active participants and a larger number of spectators, the pamphlet says:

"The spectators at first are harmless, being drawn in the group for many reasons such as excitement to witness a possible fight or possibly for a chance to engage in looting . . .

★ ★ ★

"A mob always begins as a crowd and it is at this stage that the group is most easily controlled.

"It is dangerous to allow a crowd to secure an initial success, for the prospect of victory can swing the sentiments of the spectators to the side of the rioters.

GRAVE ERROR

"By the same token, arrogance, viciousness, or an unjustified act of violence by a soldier is a grave error. Soldiers must realize that the group may try to get them to commit unjustified acts of violence.

"Occasionally, women and children may be placed at the forefront of the crowd to molest soldiers. They may try to seize the rifles of the men in the front ranks. Taunts, curses and other minor annoyances are to be expected and soldiers must ignore them.

★ ★ ★

"It is imperative," the pamphlet says, "that a single soldier never be allowed to grapple with a single rioter. Since the mob usually will outnumber the soldiers, each individual rioter must be made to feel that his action toward one soldier will be opposed by all soldiers.

"Acts of physical resistance by the crowd must not succeed. However, lawless acts, especially when committed by women and children, must be met with restraint on the soldier's part.

FELLOW CITIZENS

"Soldiers serving in a civil disturbance operation must realize that the crowd or mob is composed of fellow citizens . . . Thus, all soldiers must fully understand the requirement to use only minimum force to restore order."

The pamphlet says National Guardsmen and active Army soldiers who are called to such duty will be given a card, with specific instructions, which they must carry with them at all times during the operation. It contains these special orders:

● "I will always present a neat military appearance. I will conduct myself in a soldierly manner at all times and I will do all I can to bring credit upon myself, my unit and the military service.

★ ★ ★

● "I will, if possible, let civilian police make arrests, but I can if necessary take into temporary custody rioters, looters and others committing serious crimes. I will take such persons to designated military authority as soon as possible. It is my duty to deliver evidence and to complete evidence tags and detainee forms in accordance with my instructions.

● "I will not discuss or pass on rumors about this operation.

AVOID DAMAGE

● "I will avoid damage to property as far as possible.

● "I will not load or fire my weapon except when authorized by an officer in person, when authorized in advance by an officer under specific conditions, or when required to save my life.

● "I will be courteous in all dealings with civilians to the maximum extent possible under existing circumstances.

● "I will not mistreat civilians, including those I am controlling, or those in my custody, nor will I withhold medical attention from anyone who requires it.

FREEDOM OF MOVEMENT

● "I will allow properly identified reporters and radio and television personnel freedom of movement, unless they interfere with the mission of my unit."

The pamphlet says "such service is seldom anticipated and never pleasant, but all soldiers must be prepared to serve if the need arises."

Army doctrine, it says, "is readily adaptable" to dealing with such things as snipers, arsonists and looters.

Hawaiian Gala to Honor King

Kamahameha Day Recalls Early Ruler

WASHINGTON — Kamehameha Day is June 11, and all the islands of Hawaii will be in their most gala mood.

The 50th state's unique celebration recalls the memory of King Kamahameha I, the "Napoleon of the Pacific," a near-legendary figure whose birthday is unknown and whose gravesite remains undiscovered.

★ ★ ★

The four-day festival of parades, pageants, and aquacades ranks among the Nation's most colorful, the National Geographic Society says. Many island towns and villages celebrate, but Honolulu enjoys the most elaborate festivities.

The day begins with outrigger canoe, surfboard, and swimming races. Whole pigs and leaf-wrapped fish are cooked in deep pits for the traditional luau. Natives perform ceremonial dances, and the audience joins in a songfest.

BIRD-FEATHER CAPES

Islanders don capes fashioned from o-o and iiwi bird feathers or cloth and paper substitutes. Horsewomen, called pa'u riders, wear gaily colored gowns. Masses of 40-foot leis are draped on the revered statue of Kamehameha I, across from Iolani Palace, until only the head shows.

A torchlight procession often precedes the luau. The leader, surrounded by men carrying torches of kukui nuts, represents Kamehameha (kaMAYhaMAYha).

Hawaiians have observed the holiday since 1872, when the monarch's grandson, Kamehameha V, proclaimed June 11 La Hoohanao o Kamehameha I — literally, "to turn the thoughts back to Kamehameha I." The initial celebration was modest: Special horse races were run in Honolulu. Six months later, Kamehameha V died, ending the dynasty.

The reason for the selection of June 11 is puzzling. The great warrior was born on a stormy November evening, tradition says, in the Feudal village of Aineka on the island of Hawaii. Historians place the date between 1737 and 1758.

LAW CODE ADOPTED

During his 24-year reign, the king upheld the ancient tabu system, but welcomed modern ideas. He built a strong central government, checked oppressive chiefs, and adopted uniform laws.

The colorful, six-foot-six, 250-pound monarch ruled from a native hut used as a palace. Upon his death on May 8, 1819, his bones were ceremoniously bundled and hidden in a secret lava grotto. "Only the stars of the heavens know the resting place," islanders say.

LSD in Cure of Alcoholics Contradictory

By Science Service

BOSTON — LSD treatment of alcoholism is producing contradictory results from laboratories. At least two separate studies report dramatic success with LSD therapy; an equal number report no special benefits to justify use of LSD over conventional treatment for alcoholism.

Both claims may be true.

Contrasting reports turned up this week at a meeting of American psychiatrists where Dr. Arnold M. Ludwig of the Mendota State Hospital in Madison, Wis., stated he is "forced to conclude from study of 176 alcoholics that LSD is no more effective in rehabilitating alcoholics than traditional methods."

Dr. Ludwig admits to disappointment. It would have been gratifying to report significant gains, he says, but "unfortunately, our conscious wishes must yield to the overwhelming evidence that none of the LSD treatments" work better than a hospital's normal methods of handling alcoholics.

OFF THE WAGON

One year after treatment, 80 to 90 per cent of the patients had fallen off the wagon, says Dr. Ludwig.

Arizona, Oklahoma and New Mexico contain nearly half the entire Indian population of the country.

Pop Artist Hit With Tourist in Uganda

ENTEBBE, Uganda (AP) — When sunlight strikes Augustine Kalyamagwe's collection of dolls and unclassifiable creations, it looks like an explosion in a Christmas ornament factory.

Nestled among the banana plants and trees along the Entebbe Road, the semicircular display of African pop art includes foil-wrapped figures, a gaudy carved turtle biting a gaudy carved man and an airplane fashioned from plastic strips.

★ ★ ★

Noise of greetings brings Augustine shuffling from his bricabrac-trimmed mud hut, set back along a path in the flowers and bush.

With a few shillings' encouragement, he'll invite travelers inside to see oddly colored carvings, in genious designs of plastic strips and magazine cuttings and scores of other such works.

NOTES OF APPROVAL

On rare occasion, he'ss accompany himself on a small stringed instrument and chant a Luganda tune on the marvels of gold.

Then he'll produce a tattered folder of even more tattered notes of approval left by previous visitors.

★ ★ ★

There's a letter from a French diplomat which reads:

"Mr. Kalyamagwe is an artist and what is marvelous is that he does not know it. The silence which surrounds him is without any doubt the fruit of his inspiration . . . it is our duty, visitor, to encourage this man in buying (items) he will one day offer for sale."

Augustine has overcome the shyness indicated in the Frenchman's letter. If a prospective buyer cannot speak Swahili or Luganda, Augustine indicates his prices by pointing to numbers on a curling calendar.

If he considers the sale a good one, he'll wrinkle his 60-year-old face to a whiskery smile and recite his entire English vocabulary: "Thank you."

★ ★ ★

In top form, Augustine will lead visitors around back and show them the sharpened chunk of metal wedged into a stick which is his carving tool. He also uses a rusted machete.

He'll sit, in his long whitish robe and shower shoes, and with heavy chops demonstrate his craft on unfinished pieces of work.

STARTED IN 1954

He says he took up his art forms in 1954. The collection out front went up in October 1962 to celebrate Uganda's independence. He left it there since and it has proven a breadwinner.

Unmistakably, he enjoys the attention it has brought him, though it is still slight. Old Uganda hands consider him tourists' property.

And tourists, who won't find him in a guidebook, generally are in too much of a hurry to notice his strange roadside gallery.

If visitors have been attentive, and generous, Augustine will walk them to the road and stand waving until their car is out of sight.

After that to him they are not only patrons of the arts but friends as well.

Sherlock Holds His Popularity

Time Fails to Dim Interest in Detective

LONDON (UPI) — The redoubtable Dr. Watson would have had just one word for it — "extraordinary."

Few would disagree. Least of all Sherlock Holmes, the illustrious fictional detective whose exploits in the London of half a century ago were immortalized in short stories by the late Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

★ ★ ★

In the 37 years since Conan Doyle's death, interest in his most celebrated creation has shown few signs of slackening. If anything, the contrary is true.

On both sides of the Atlantic, Homesiana has grown and flourished. In some instances it has become almost a cult.

MATCHED IN FERVOR

Organizations dedicated solely to the study and perpetuation of Holmes vary in technique and activities but match one another in fervor.

★ ★ ★

Members of the Baker Street Irregulars, largest aggregation of Holmes followers in the United States, are often seen sporting the traditional deerstalker cap and smoking the Meerschaum pipes favored by the master sleuth.

★ ★ ★

"We take our Sherlock Holmes straight," says Julian Wolff, the society's New York-based head.

The organization's London equivalent is slightly less flamboyant but none the less dedicated. About 600 strong, it meets four or five times a year for dinner and discussion.

ALIVE TO MANY

W. R. Mitchell is the businessman-head of the society, which has been active since 1951. It was instrumental in reconstructing the Holmes lodgins at number 221-B Baker Street as part of the Festival of Britain held the following year.

To many around the world, Holmes is a real person and lives. Mail comes to London addressed to Sherlock Holmes at a steady clip of four or five letters a week.

★ ★ ★

Some seek his advice on personal problems. Some offer him jobs.

Others offer him advice such as "you smoke too much" or warn him against the evils of cocaine of which Doyle made him an occasional user.

STOREHOUSE

Just off Trafalgar Square, hard by the Strand, is the Sherlock Holmes pub, a storehouse of Holmesiana that attracts thousands of tourists annually and is a particular favorite with Americans.

★ ★ ★

Were Sherlock Holmes to return for a visit to the old haunts he almost surely would agree with his good friend Dr. Watson that the way the legend lives is, indeed, extraordinary.

New Western Blazes Trail ---in Bedroom

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — "A Man Called Gannon" is, on the surface, another Western. But in its way it's blazing a trail. What it has that no other Western has had is a couple of nude love scenes.

It was inevitable, I suppose, that the current trend toward nudity would mosey over into the Western field.

★ ★ ★

The only thing left is cartoons; maybe somebody will remake "Snow White" with sweet little Miss White cavorting naked with Dopey.

But back to "Gannon." Judi West, the cookie of "The Fortune Cookie," drew the assignment of making wild, passionate, unclothed love in this one.

TWO SCENES

There are two such scenes — one with Tony Franciosa, one with Michael Sarrazin.

They were shot in one day, one following the other. Tony and Mike were full of praise for Judi.

★ ★

It is embarrassing, to say the least, for a girl to go through a day like that. But she managed, they said, with good spirits. And she didn't even catch cold.

Many Agree: It's the Berries

First Fruit of Spring Commands Esteem

WASHINGTON — An Elizabethan physician's opinion of strawberries stands the test of time: "Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did."

As the first fruit of spring in most temperate lands, strawberries still command esteem and mouth-watering affection, the National Geographic Society says.

★ ★ ★

In the United States the hardy plant remains the undisputed champion of cultivated berries. Americans consumed 275,000 tons of strawberries in 1967.

The crimson fruit falvors ice cream, tops sundaes, fills pies, garnishes salads, swims in cream, floats in champagne, and dominates the king of summer desserts — strawberry shortcake.

AMERICAN VISION

Shortcake is more American than apple pie. The vision of a rosy tower of berries resting on a buttery biscuit foundation and topped by billows of whipped cream has been fatal to generations of calorie watchers.

Shortcake even tempted the Indians. They concocted an early version from wild berries and cornmeal.

★ ★ ★

The native North American strawberry, Fragaria Virginiana, was small, like its European counterpart, but more productive.

Early settlers on the eastern seaboard marveled at the abundance and vigor of the plants. "We cannot set down a foot but tred on strawberries," wrote a Maryland colonist.

IMPORT HELPS

A South American plant, however, helped to develop the larger varieties of strawberries cultivated commercially today.

In 1714 a French engineer, Amedee Francois Frezier — whose name coincindentally was derived from the French word for strawberry, Fraise — delighted his countrymen by returning from a trip to Chile with plants that eventually bore fruit "as large as small apples."

European gardeners planted the Chilean and North American species in the same plots, and large, productive plants evolved.

American nurserymen did not list the improved varieties until almost 1800. But Charles M. Hovey, a Cambridge, Mass. horticulturist, made up for lost time by developing a new species of strawberry from seed produced by cross-pollination.

THE BEGINNING

Hovey's creation, introduced in 1838, marked the beginning of large-scale strawberry breeding in the United States.

American growers have kept pace with new developments ever since. For instance, most of the bumper strawberry crop in 1968 will travel to market in sleeping bags.

Growers place boxes of fresh strawberries in polyethlene bags pumped full of a special gas low in oxygen and high in carbon dioxide. The gas mixture puts the fragile berries to sleep by virtually stopping decay and mold.

HONORARY DEGREE — Henry Whiting, a leader in the automotive industry and former executive of the Packard Motor Car Co., was awarded an honorary Doctor of Laws degree by Northwood Institute at its recent commencement in Midland. Whiting of 715 Lake Park, Birmingham, was recognized for his interest in the establishment at Northwood of the first certified automotive merchandiser program in the history of the industry. He was instrumental in bringing Northwood to the attention of the National Dealers Association.

Capitol Story Is Published for Foreigners

WASHINGTON — Foreign visitors who "parlez francais" now can read the official story of the United States Capitol in "Nous, Le Peuple."

"We, the People" the popular guidebook published by the United States Capitol Historical Society, has been translated into five major world languages.

★ ★ ★

Besides French, the profusely illustrated book is available in German (Wir Das Volk''), Italian ("Noi, Popolo''), Portuguese ("Nos o Povo"), and Spanish ("Nosotros, El Pueblo").

In preparation for two years, the foreign - language editions were published because of the phenomenal success of the English version and to answer the reqeusts of many foreign visitors to the Capitol for literature in their own language.

1.6 MILLION COPIES

"We, the People," produced as a public service by the nonprofit National Geographic Society, has sold more than 1.6 million copies since it was issued in December 1963.

Foreign governments and embassies in Washington, D. C., have ordered the historical guide in large quantities. The United States Information Agency and the Peace Corps plan to distribute the translations abroad.

"This undertaking is further recognition of the great need in this country for a combined effort to improve America's image abroad and to send freedom's story around the world," said Congressman Fred Schwengel of Iowa, president of the United States Capitol Historical Society. "As America's best-known symbol of democracy, the Capitol is the vehicle through which the story has been told."

A new foreword by Representative Schwengel and a special introduction by historian Allan Nevins emphasize the contributions made by the people of other nations to the development of the United States — contributions inscribed on the walls and built into the Capitol itself by architects, artists, and artisans from distant lands.

GAMUT OF EMOTION

Written by Lonnelle Aikman of the National Georgraphic Senior Editorial Staff, "We, the People, The Story of the United States Capitol," evokes the sweep of the Capitol's history from the jubilation of the cornerstone laying in 1793 to the mourning at President Kennedy's bier.

The book's 144 pages contain 175 photographs, historical paintings, and other illustrations, nearly all in color. One picture itself made history. The United States Senate shattered a long tradition by permitting National Geographic photographers to make its first official portrait while in session.

Copies of "We, the Peole" in any of six language editions may be obtained from the U.S. Capitol Historical Society, 200 Maryland Avenue, N. E., Washington, D. C. 20515; paper, $1.25, cloth, $2.75, leather, $8.50, postage included. The books also may be purchased at the Capitol, National Geographic's headquarters, and the Smithsonian Institution.

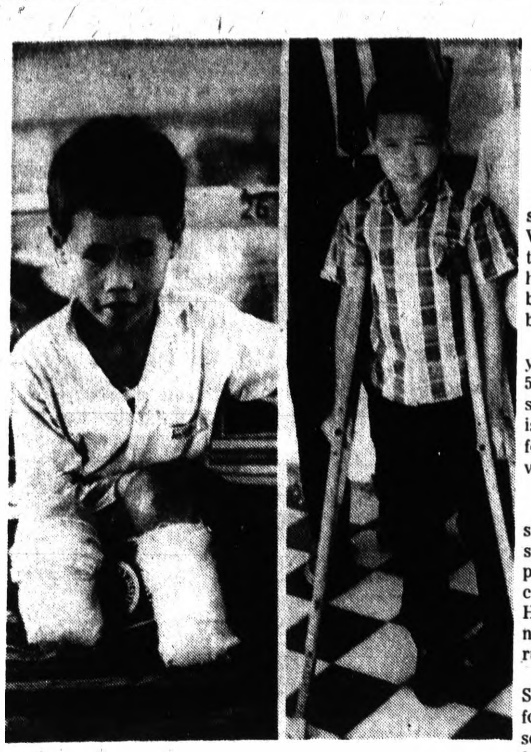
New Limbs From U.S. Woman

Legless Viet Boy Gets Help



AP Wirephoto

WAR VICTIM GETS HELP — Truong Van Cao (left) recuperates in Saigon, after he lost both legs when hit by a mortar shell, and shows his mother (right) how he is learning to use artificial legs provided with the help of a $100 gift from Nancy Ashley Smith of St. Louis, Mo.

SAIGON (AP) — With tears streaming down her face, the Vietnamese widow expressed thanks for the $100 gift sent to her son, a 12-year-old buffalo boy who lost both legs after being hit by a mortar shell.

"I am grateful to you and your help," said Huynh Thi Gai, 51. "My home has been destroyed and I am very poor. It is very difficult for me to care for my children. I thank you very much."

★ ★ ★

The gift came from a woman some 10,000 miles away in Missouri, who had seen a newspaper picture of young Truong cuperating in Saigon's Cho Ray Hospital shortly after the lunar new year offensive last February.

The donor, Miss Nancy Ashley Smith of St. Louis, sent a check for the boy to President Johnson. The President in turn had it forwarded to Saigon, where the chief of the Refugee Division of the U.S. Agency for International Development, John F. Thomas of Minneapolis, Minn., made the presentation.

LOOKED BLEAK

Three months ago life looked bleak for little Cao in the big, strange city of Saigon. His childhood home had been in the countryside in Hau Nghia, west of Saigon, where he rode the backs of the water buffalo as they grazed, or chased after the huge beasts through the rice paddies.

But since the Tet offensive, life for Cao had been one Chaotic move after another. From the rice field, where he was tending the buffalo when mortar fragments tore into his legs, he was taken to a U.S. Army hospital at Cu Chi. In the hospital, doctors found it necessary to amputate both legs to save the boy's life.

Then he was moved to Saigon's Cho Ray Hospital. He was there in a crowded ward when some of the heaviest fighting of the Tet offensive took place around it.

After the fighting died down, room was found for Cao at the National Rehabilitation Center, a Vietnamese government institute where 90 per cent of the patients are civilians. The center has highly trained personnel and capabilities for making and fitting new limbs.

Now Cao must learn to use his new legs, and like many of the other patients at the institute, it means a new start in life for him.

For the past month he has been doing his first walking, but must depend heavily on crutches. A strong sense of self-reliance keeps him going, and he tries especially hard to show improvement for his mother's visits to the center. She tries to see him for a few days every month, when she can leave his five brothers and sisters.

★ ★ ★

Present plans call for Cao to go to school for two or three years and then to a trade school. Until now, he has never spent a day of his life in school. He will receive his education on a scholarship provided by voluntary relief agencies.

Cao is more fortunate than many in Vietnam in the care that he has received, but many problems still are ahead for him. Doctors say he probably always will need crutches.

Dr. Nguyen Huu Vi, director of the rehabilitation institute, notes sadly: "He will never be a buffalo boy again."

S. Africa's Unusual Plight: Too Much Money

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — With gold piling up and money pouring in, prosperous South Africa may have to make some basic changes in economic policy.

South Africa's financial problems result from too much money. Foreign capital floods in.

★ ★ ★

At the same time South Africa continues to stockpile its newly mined gold.

The resulting buildup of internal liquidity is likened by economists to a massive head of steam. They say runaway inflation threatens unless the pressure is eased.

RESERVES AT RECORD

South Africa's official gold and foreign exchange reserves have reached a record 674.4 million rands, or $944.1 million. They have grown almost 50 per cent in seven months.

An immediate relaxation of controls on the exchange of money is advocated by some experts as the only way to prevent the economy from being swamped by an oversupply of money.

★ ★ ★

These economists say South Africa is caught between the domestic need to reduce reserves and a desire to maintain the external strength of the rand, now traded at $1.40, during a period of international financial uncertainty.

★ ★ ★

F.L.J. Smith, president of the Federated Chamber of Industries, has called for increased investment abroad as well as an easing of exchange control.

POTENT MEANS

"The chamber urges the government to implement without delay a selective but meaningful relaxation of exchange control as a potent means of draining away excess liquidity," he said. "At the present juncture it is essential that the investment of funds abroad should be strongly encouraged."

★ ★ ★

Concern about excess liquidity was reflected in a recent order by the reserve bank which instructed other banks to hand over 40 per cent of their extra deposits. This was a technical device designed to prevent short-term interest rates from falling in the money market.

★ ★ ★

Exchange control was introduced after faith in South Africa was badly shaken by the Sharpeville mass shootings of Negroes in 1960. Money poured out of the country until restrictions were slapped on.

The controls worked well and money was kept in the country to help finance an industrial boom. Now some experts believe the measures have outlived their usefulness.

MORE COMPLICATED

Gold poses a more complicated problem.

South Africa was notably chilly toward the two-tier system of pricing gold, believing instead that an increase in the pegged price of $35 an ounce was long overdue. Prime Minister Balthazar J. Vorster says gold should be "revalued at a realistic price and maintained as the true anchor of the international financial system."

★ ★ ★

Finance Minister Nicolaas Diederichs announced in March that South Africa would not sell gold on the official or free markets "in the immediate future."

Actually, South Africa appears to have little room to maneuver. It produces about 75 per cent of the West's gold. Last year gold was worth $1.05 billion represented 35 per cent of all South African exports.

EXPORTS COULD DROP

In other words, if gold were demonetized, this country's exports could drop by more than a third.

Another source of concern is declining production. Mines say the peak years are past and that a 2 per cent decline in gold output each year can be expected for several years.

For years the policy has been to add gold to South Africa's reserve bank when a surplus in external payments developed, otherwise sell most of it for $35 an ounce through the Bank of England.

This policy is unlikely to be changed soon despite the present halt in sales. Some economists think South Africa should resume selling some gold through the Bank of England and sacrifice the extra profit that might be gained in the still glutted free market.

South Africa needs an assured and stable market for its gold and would be distressed if the Special Drawing Rights of "paper gold" now being set up forced it to rely permanently on the vagaries of the free market.

Gold experts in Johannesburg say the free market is burdened with some 2,500 tons of gold bought since November by speculators and hoarders. South Africa would depress the price if it tried to unload much gold on the free market now.

However, this country cannot hold its growing stock of gold indefinitely and no foreseeable surplus in external payments is likely to be big enough to absorb all the newly mined gold poured into the National Reserve Bank.

Flexible Cable for Hand-Shower

A hand shower unit on a flexible cable can be a great aid to families with small children, invalids or elderly members. The unit can be affixed to a wall faucet and mounted in a holder for regular use, or used on a showerless tub.

Full use of ceramic tile in shower enclosures and about the tub will prevent any splashing problems.

U.N. Colleagues Rank Goldberg Highly

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — There are dissenters, but most of Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg's colleagues give him an "A" rating for his 34 months at the United Nations.

The dissenters generally compare the 59-year-old former Supreme Court justice unfavorably with his immediate predecessors, Adlai E. Stevenson and Henry Cabot Lodge — both as a public speaker and as a forceful figure.

★ ★ ★

Goldberg himself acknowledges that he was no match for Stevenson either as a wit or an orator — he knew he was bound to suffer in comparison. The consensus is that he was only adequate as a speaker and, in the words of one diplomat, he was inclined to "corn" rather than eloquence.

What he lacked on the rostrom, however, he made up behind the scenes. He is rated excellent as a negotiator. And he has applied himself with almost unbelievable energy both during the conventional working day and in building social contacts.

SIGNIFICANT ROLE

He also played a significant role in Washington in determining U.S. foreign policy — in almost everything except Vietnam. As a dove, he fought a losing battle on Vietnam, and this was the major factor determining his resignation announced April 25.

★ ★ ★

He had a number of personal triumphs which stood out during his U.N. stay. When he agreed to take the post in the summer of 1965, the U.N. General Assembly was paralyzed by the threat of a U.S. - Soviet confrontation over arrears in payment of peace-keeping assessments.

★ ★ ★

Goldberg gave top priority to this problem and eventually decided that the United States should bow to the will of the majority of U.N. members and remove the threat of trying to suspend the voting rights of the Soviet bloc and France. His first task was to convince both the administration and key congressional figures that such a course was desirable.

★ ★ ★

Employing his skill as a jurist, he did such a thorough job that the United States was able to back down without criticism from Capitol Hill. Within two months after his arrival on the scene, the assembly was back in normal operation.

BIG TRIUMPH

One of his biggest triumphs was in achieving a cease-fire in the 1965 India-Pakistani conflict over Kashmir. Just a few months after becoming U.S. representative at the United Nations, it came his turn to be president of the Security Council during the fighting.

He credited his experience as a labor negotiator as being partly responsible for the achievement of the cease-fire. It was generally agreed that his persistence and patience played a major role.

★ ★ ★

Goldberg also was a principal figure in the successful conclusion of an international treaty banning weapons of mass destruction from outer space. He spent hours in secret negotiations with the Russians as a prelude to the agreement.

Next to his unsuccessful efforts to give the United Nations a role in Vietnam peace efforts, his most difficult assignment was in representing the United States in the Middle East crisis during and after the June war of 1967.

WITH ISRAEL

He found himself in the position of siding generally with Israel, whose military action was regarded by many U.N. members as aggression against her Arab neighbors. Although the United States had been considered by the Arabs for Zionism a year earlier. The Syrian declared: "There is a years as being pro-Israel, some sought to link U.S. policy with the fact that Goldberg was Jewish and had made Zionist statements in private life.

Personal attacks on Goldberg were made by unofficial groups such as the Arab Higher Committee for Palestine and even in the United Nations itself. In 1966 Syrian Ambassador George Tomeh read from a speech Goldberg had made backing complete identification between the ambassador of the United States and Zionism."

★ ★ ★

Goldberg replied that he had made the statement in 1965 not as U.S. ambassador but "in my own right as a private American citizen."

"In any event," he said, "I do not apologize for that speech. I have not brainwashed myself as an individual."

NIGHT AND DAY

Goldberg worked night and day both in Security Council and General Assembly debates on the Middle East, but it was Lord Caradon of Britain who negotiated the agreement on the resolution approved by the council last Nov. 22, paving the way for the peace mission of Swedish diplomat Gunnar V. Jarring. Because of the U.S. position, Goldberg found his hands tied as a potential negotiator.

Goldberg attached much more importance to social affairs than any of his predecessors. He believed that one of the big jobs of the U.S. representative was to get to know the delegates of all countries, large and small alike.

During his first nine months in office he reported he attended 222 luncheons, receptions and dinners.

Fair Will Honor Itself

California Builds a Monument

(EDITOR'S NOTE — In a former sheep pasture about five miles from the state capitol, California is building the California State Exposition and Fair. The plan is to give a sampling of differing parts of the varied state. The theory: If out-of-state residents see nothing else of California, they should at least see Cal-Expo.)

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Within a couple of years, tourists should be able to see all of California on two hot dogs and a couple of root beers.

And, with a little extra effort, they can bet on thoroughbreds, ride a roller coaster and see what miracles industry is fashioning for America's consumer society.

The place is California's $34-million monument to itself, the California State Exposition and Fair, being constructed on the banks of the American River.

Officials hope this massive complex of steel, granite and aluminum will lure 40,000 tourists a day to Sacramento, eventually paying its own bills, and free state revenues for use elsewhere.

20-YEAR PLAN

The complex was 20 years in development. The 1,040-acre site was purchased in 1947, about the time it was generally acknowledged that the old State Fair site had outlived its usefulness.

Original plans envisioned a new state fair on the order of the old one, but with better parking and modern facilities. Over the years, however, a group of men with Disneyland backgrounds convinced the legislature that the new fair should go beyond the prize bull and homemade apple pie competitions.

★ ★ ★

Hopes for the creation of a semipublic, semiprivate state fair agency waned a bit with Ronald Reagan's election as governor. It was feared that economy-minded Reagan might frown on government going into the entertainment business.

But Reagan let the show go on, calling for more direct participation by private enterprise to make Cal Expo a pay-as-you-go facility.

NEARLY DONE

Workmen have almost completed Exposition Center, an eight-building complex to house displays depicting California's wild and wonderful heritage.

Few of the exhibits are finished, but there will be great use of models, dioramas, and multiple-screen projections synchronized with sound.

★ ★ ★

Visitors will see how glaciers carved Yosemite Valley, how landing in San Diego in 1542, how gold fever trnasformed a pastoral landscape into the crazyquilt of motion and emotion and emotion that is California today.

Exposition California will portray the California of the gold rush and the California of the freeway rush.

SPACE AGE

It will tell the story of the state's great railroad building era and of its entry into the space age. It will contrast life in California's early missions with life today in the state's crowded urban centers and sprawling suburbs.

Elsewhere in the recreational complex, visitors will be able to take rides in hollowed-out logs through giant redwood forests, descend in ore buckets into a make-believe gold mine, or wheel a sports car through a flowering California desert.

★ ★ ★

Part of Cal-Expo will open July 1. Most major exhibits won't be ready for a year or two.

Put Heat Ducts Close to Floor

Since heat rises, the best place to locate heat distributors is close to the floor on walls facing the outside of the house to create a curtain of warmth against the cold outside air.

In a hydronic system, water is piped through finger sized tubing on the outer perimeter of the house.

Rio Traffic Tunnels Cut Natural Barriers

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Nine tunnels cutting through more than five miles of solid rock have done much to relieve traffic congestion in this city of five million persons.

The newest tunnel is also the longest in any city of the world, and has cut travel time between north and south Rio by as much as an hour.

★ ★ ★

Like a glistening jewel set off by blue ocean waters lapping on gleaming white beaches, Rio is scattered among steep green mountains and hills, remnants of a prehistoric age when volcanoes belched fire and molten rock.

The ancient volcano cones, today better known as Sugar Loaf and Corcovado with its towering Christ statue, created some of Rio's worst headaches.

LONG BATTLE

Corcovado slices between the city's north and south zones. The mountains trailing off at the base of Sugar Loaf isolate famed Copacabana Beach.

The battle against these natural barriers began almost a century ago, when horse-drawn carriages first began clopping through the Alice Street tunnel in 1887.

★ ★ ★

Four years later another tunnel was completed, linking the city center with pastoral farmlands now covered by Copacabana's shoulder-to-shoulder high-rise apartment buildings.

Copacabana's estimated one million residents move in, out and about their area through four tunnels, and the city government is talking about building at least one more.

BIGGEST HEADACHE

The biggest headache of all, however, was movement between the north and south zones, long possible only through the already congested downtown business area.

The first step towards solution was the Santa Barbara tunnel through Corcovado completed in 1960. It is eight-tenths of a mile long.

★ ★ ★

Now there is the new Reboucas tunnel, which slips under Corcovado Mountain for 1.7 miles, constructed at a cost of 20 million.

Motorists who use the tunnel can cut crosstown travel by at least 30 minutes, and as much as 60 minutes during rush hours.

UNIQUE TUNNEL

While Reboucas is a significant milestone in Rio, a unique double-decker tunnel is reaching the halfway construction mark.

With traffic flowing in one direction on the lower level and in the opposite direction on the upper level, it will open up the beach-side areas now choked off by the "Two Brothers" mountains.

Troubles, too, have come with the tunnels.

★ ★ ★

Citizens sometimes complain that faults in design and maintenance lead to accidents. One tunnel had a rather infamous reputation until proper lighting made it less useful for robbers.

"Persons who entered it dressed" Rio residents used to say, "would undoubtedly leave naked — but grateful for not also having lost their life."

Ex-Fireman, 72, Reminisces

(EDITOR'S NOTE — The following was written for The Pontiac Press by Roy L. Dodge of Harrison.)

By ROY L. DODGE

John W. Bradburn, a resident of Harrison, where he retired 15 years ago, is one of three living charter members of the Pontiac Metropolitan Club.

Bradburn, now 72, joined the Pontiac Fire Department Dec. 11, 1916 and retired in May 1953 after 37 years of service.

★ ★ ★

He and his two brothers, Bill and Al, now deceased, had more than 100 years with the department, said Bradburn.

"Things are a lot different today than they were back in the old horse and buggy days," he recalled.

BIG BELL

"When that big bell rang in the belfry at the old Number 2 Station on Walnut back in 1916, we had the rig on the road within two minutes. That included dropping the harness on old "Bob and Nibbs," the team I drove on the aerial ladder wagon.

★ ★ ★

"We took off down the street with the bells ringing and the whistle shrieking on the old Stanley Steamer pumper and everyone in town stopped what they were doing. It was really a big event!"

In 1916, Bradburn was working with his father, then a teamster in Pontiac, and they happened to haul cinders for Chief Austin's driveway.

When they finished the job that night, the chief asked Bradburn to come to the fire station the following morning. That day he received his uniform and badge number 18, which he wore for nearly half a century.

STILL CARRIES

Although a bit tarnished and worn, Bradburn still carries the badge and proudly displays it anytime the occasion arises.

★ ★ ★

"We had to pay for our own uniforms at that time," he explained. "I didn't receive any pay until I had worked a month. The uniform cost $29.50 and we only received $27.50 every two weeks.

★ ★ ★

"In 1916 there were only two fire stations in the city with a crew of 10 men."

★ ★ ★

The first motorized fire engine in Pontiac was an American France with a 1,000 gallon tank, according to Bradburn.

CURFEW BELL

"There was a big bell in No. 1 fire station," he said. "Every evening at 8 we used to ring the curfew bell and any children under 18 years had to be off the streets."

★ ★ ★

"We used to plan weeks ahead to celebrate the 4th of July. We had to stay on duty straight through the holidays, but we always had open house at the fire stations with picnics, ice cream, fireworks and all."

★ ★ ★

Bradburn never was involved in any disasters during his long career, but he recalls one day he did have a streak of bad luck.

★ ★ ★

"The alarm sounded about midnight. While we were making the run, the ladder truck I was riding collided with a doctor's car at the corner of Lawrence and Saginaw. It knocked me off the rig and bruised me up a bit, but we made the run O.K.

BOOT CAUGHT

"A few hours later another alarm sounded. I grabbed my pants and was still pulling them on when I slid down the pole. I caught my boot in one pantleg and when I hit bottom I fell on the cement floor and broke my ankle.

"I wouldn't have minded it quite so much but it turned out to be a false alarm!"

★ ★ ★

Bradburn, who never married, spends his time in the quiet of the woods where he and his remaining brother, Roy, live in a small cabin two miles north of Harrison. Until the last few years the two brothers went deer hunting each fall, fished and enjoyed the outdoors.

★ ★ ★

For the past several years John has grown a flowing beard that matches his thick, snow-white hair. He plays Santa Claus for the children of Harrison and surrounding areas.

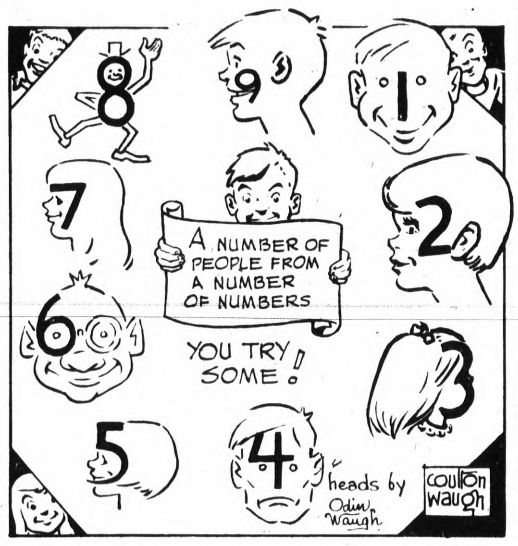
Junior Editors Quiz on NUMBERS



QUESTION: How can you make heads from numbers?

ANSWER: For all those of us who have trouble getting numbers out of our heads, here's a switch. This correspondent wants to know how to get heads from numbers. One of our artists knows all about it.

She had once given chalk talks to entertain audiences and this was one of the stunts she used. She would ask some one to give her a number and then draw it in a large size on the black board or demonstration paper.

It would suggest some part of a face or perhaps some kind of expression. The audience would be amazed to see how fast she could whip out an amusing character from the lifeless-looking number.

She had, she said, memorized a number of different heads for each number and she has drawn one group she used to use in our illustration.

Why not practice this group of characters, get some of your friends together, ask for a number, and see if you can startle them? It's a good idea to practice up a bit before you try the trick out on an actual audience.

Kit Carson, Dead 100 Years, Lives in Legend

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Born Christopher Carson in 1809, the man nicknamed Kit became a legend of the Old West. This Memorial Day marks the 100th anniversary of his death and nowhere will he be more remembered than in Taos, N.M., where he added daring patriotism to his respected accomplishments.)

TAOS, N.M. (AP) — The annual changing of the flag in the plaza of this antique village has a special significance this Memorial Day.

It is 100 years since the death of the man who nailed the banner to its first cottonwood staff, nailed it there, and quietly suggested that no one dare lay his treasonous hands on it again. No one dared.

★ ★ ★

The audacious patriot was Kit Carson.

With the death May 28, 1868, of the explorer, trapper, Indian fighter, scout, soldier, rancher — few American folk heroes knew so varied a career — there died a breed of man that was an American original, the Mountain Man.

TYPICAL OF BREED

To the Mountain Man, rugged individualism was no mere shibboleth, personal independence no myth. None typified the breed or added more to its romance than Kit Carson.

On this Memorial Day, a dozen or so of Kit Carson's descendants are gathering in the Taos plaza. One of them, probably Kit Carson III, a retired trader from Alamosa, Colo., was to lower the tattered old flag that has flown day and night since last Memorial Day and replace it with a new one. A small centennial celebration, more a family reunion, was to follow.

★ ★

The Taos flag is one of the few in the country permitted by Congress to remain aloft continuously, a privilege granted in recognition of Kit Carson's daring defiance

★ ★ ★

The incident happened in the early summer of 1861 when news of the outbreak of Civil War reached New Mexico. Kit Carson was 51. His frontier exploits already had made him a national legend. He was embarrassed by all the fuss over him, wanted only to put both adventure and limelight aside and retire quietly to his ranch.

REBEL SENTIMENT

Sentiment in New Mexico was largely on the side of the Confederacy. The territory had been a part of Mexico until a scant 12 years before, and many citizens still viewed the conquering bluecoats with less than total admiration.

Their view of Kit Carson, however, was one of undiluted respect.

★ ★ ★

They respected him as a friend and respected his deserved reputation with the rifle he held cocked and primed as he stood at the base of the flagpole.

Southern sympathizers had ripped the flag from its staff the previous day. When Kit Carson said leave it alone, it was left alone.

HELL-BENT

The people of Taos had know the slight, 5-feet-6 frontiersman with the steel gray eyes and rusty hair ever since he arrived in the old adobe town in 1826. He was 17 then, hell-bent for excitement.

★ ★ ★

Taos, an ancient Spanish settlement which was a thriving community even before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth, was at that time the southwestern headquarters for the booming fur trade. Young Christopher Carson — known from infancy as Kit — had heard about the swashbuckling beaver trappers who gathered in Taos and ached to join them.

He signed on as cook with a trapping party headed by Ewing Young, a frontiersman of the first rank, and headed for the wilderness.

When the party returned, word got around that the leathery, freckled greenhorn had shot three Indians durng an attack. His hand was steady, his aim true. He had proved himself.

REPUTATION GROWS

For the next 16 years Kit Carson trapped the mountain streams of the American West all the way to the Pacific and from border to border. As his experience grew so did his reputation among fellow trappers.

★ ★ ★

His courage, his skill in the woods and his boldness in battle, soon earned the respect of even the veterans, men like Jedediah Smith, Jim Bridger, Tom Fitzpatrick, Joe Meek — men who marked the trails that became the roads that later bore endless caravans of wagons westward.

★ ★ ★

These were the Mountain Men.

They lived among Indians and took Indian ways and Indian wives and spoke a strange patois puctuated by wild sounds like 'wagg!" and "sirree!"

The Mountain Men lived by their wits, a day at a time, and prized their freedom above all else. They were a fraternity of individualists. A man might hire out to one fur company, disappear in the night and join another. Or strike out on his own. They skinned their beavers and traded the pelts for one big midsummer fling and enough powder and lead to see them through the next winter.

SELF-EFACING

Unlike his boisterours, yarn-spinning companeros, Carson was quiet, self-effacing, laconic. His deeds spoke for themselves. Volumes.

The less he said about himself, the more others said about him. Still it is unlikely his name would have become so widely known, his exploits so romanticized, had it not been for a chance meeting aboard a Missouri River steamboat in 1842.

★ ★ ★

Carson had been in St. Louis to visit his daughter, who was staying with relatives. The girl was the only child of his first wife, a Cheyenne, who died in childbirth. There is no trace of his daughter's descendants.

On the steamer, heading back, Carson met John C. Fremont, the Army surveyor. Fremont needed a guide, someone who knew the Western wilderness he planned to survey. He tried Kit Carson.

CARSON EXTOLLED

Fremont's official report of his two expeditions became a best seller. The government printed more than 250,000 copies. In the report, Fremont extolled Kit Carson, recounting feats of daring and courage.

During the war with Mexico Kit Carson carried dispatches to Washington for Gen. Stephen W. Kearny. While there President Polk personally offered him a temporary Army commission Carson had longed to be a soldier.

★ ★ ★

He returned to Taos proudly in a first lieuteant's uniform only to discover that Congress had not got around to confirming his commission before the war ended and it was therefore null. Carson said it was his bitterest disappointment.

During the Civil War, however, every man in the First New Mexican Volunteers down to the regiment's last private petitioned the War Department to make Kit Carson their commander. The Army complied, giving Carson the rank of colonel.

HATED ASSIGNMENT

Carson led his regiment in one successful battle against the Confederates, then was given an assignment he regretted the rest of his life. He was told to round up the Navajo tribe, whose raids on New Mexican settlements had become most irritating, and march them off to what amounted to a concentration camp.

Reluctantly, Carson followed orders. He burned the crops and slaughtered the sheep herds of some 9,000 Navajo tribesmen. Desitute, they surrendered.

★ ★ ★

After the war Kit Carson served as commander of Fort Garland, Colo., and later as an Indian agent.

During an inspection trip of the fort a rattlesnake spooked his horse. Carson was hurled over an embankment, injuring his neck. The injury plagued him for months. At length, the man who had tempted danger and death in the wilderness so many times died in his sleep. He was 58.

RESTING PLACE — Kit Carson, founder of the Masonic Lodge in Taos, N.M., rests within a fence erected around his grave by the Masons. His wife's grave is also in the plot. Looking at the memorial is 12-year-old Delbert Trujillo of Taos.

Home Occupied for 236 Years

DARLINGTON, Md. (AP)—A 10-room house, built in 1732 and enlarged in 1750, has been occupied continuously since its construction, basically unchanged except for a modern kitchen built on the site of the woodshed.

★ ★ ★

John Clark bought the house in 1960 from Harold Jones, in whose family the property had been for three generations. He and his son, Philip Clark, a student at Harford Junior College, are presently living there.

It was originally built by Col. Nathan Rigbie, a tobacco planter and one of the wealthiest men of his time.

Only four of every 100,000 people committed theft in Japan in 1966, compared with 662 for the U.S., highest in the world, and 500 for Britain.

Smoke Bomb Incident Riles Tiger Pitcher McLain

Denny Blanks California, 3-0, for 8th Victory

ANAHEIM (AP)—Denny McLain is winning his war against American League hitters but taking a drubbing in his vendetta with the baseball fans of Detroit.

The Tigers' ace right-hander revealed for the first time here Wednesday night that his wife and infant daughter recently averted possible serious injury after someone in Detroit placed a bomb in the family car.

★ ★ ★

The incident occurred 10 days ago, only a few days after McLain publicly accused Detroit fans of booing the team to such an extent last season that it cost the Tigers the American League pennant. They finished one game behind champion Boston.

STOP FOR GAS

McLain says his wife and daughter were driving from the Detroit stadium to their suburban home when they pulled off a highway to get gas.

★ ★ ★

"The attendant looked under the hood and discovered there was a smoke bomb wired to the ignition," McLain said here Wednesday night after he pitched a four-hitter and struck out 13 in a 3-0 victory over the California Angels.

★ ★ ★

"If the bomb had gone off when my wife was driving at high speed, she and the baby both could have been killed," he said.

"But the bomb wasn't wired properly. It was supposed to go off when she turned on the ignition.

"If anything had happened, I'd have spent the rest of my life finding out who was responsible."

GOES ROUTE

McLain, 8-1, leads the American League in victories, has gone the route in eight of his first 11 starts and has reduced his earned run average to a microscopic 1.92.

★ ★ ★

"I've been booed before, but never like that," he said, "and I guess it made me press too hard."

Manager Bill Rigney and the Angels agreed that they've never seen the 24-year-old McLain throw as hard or pitch as well in helping the Tigers to increase their American League lead to 1½ games.

"It was the best I've thrown since 1965, when I hurt my shoulder late in the season," said McLain."

★ ★ ★

Dick McAuliffe slashed three hits off loser Jim McGlothlin, 4-3, one of them driving home the game's first run in the sixth inning. Horton hit a two-run homer in the seventh, his fifth in six games against the Angels this year. He has driven in 10 runs against them.

★ ★ ★

The homer extended Horton's batting streak to 11 games.

An infield hit by Ray Oyler and a sacrifice by McLain set up McAuliffe's run-scoring hit. Bill Freehan was aboard with a walk when Horton homered.

McLain struck out 13 and walked one.

★ ★ ★

Rick Clark, 0-3, took the mound in the fourth and final game of the series for the Angels today, opposing Detroit right-hander Joe Sparma, 3-4.

LIGHTER SIDE — The seriousness of the upcoming race at the Indianapolis Speedway was replaced by laughter for a few moments during yesterday's meeting of the 33 drivers. Bobby Unser can't control his urge to laugh as instructions were given for today's running of the '500.' Taking part in the levity are Joe Leonard (left) who has the pole position in today's race. In background are Mario Andretti (left) and Roger McCluskey.

Racing Fans Await Piston-Turbine Duel

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — A horde of motor speed fans poured slowly into the waterlogged Indianapolis Motor Speedway today, optimistic that the weather would relent long enough for running of the 52nd 500-mile race.

They were drawn by a showdown between turbine and conventional piston engines, started but unresolved last year.

Rain which had fallen almost daily during the four-week practice and qualification period had left some of the cars incompletely tested.

The limited running time may have added to the hazards of running at the venerable racing plant where 58 persons have been killed.

★ ★ ★

The rain certainly added to the hazards of the 300-acre infield, where 25,000 cars normally are parked during the race. It was a mixture of mud and puddles.

FAVORITE

Meanwhile, the writers and broadcasters voted Graham Hill of London, 1962 world champion and 1966 Indianapolis winner, a 5-1 favorite to win the 500 again in his Lotus-Pratt & Whitney turbine.

In fact, the news media folk were so impressed by the Lotus turbines that they voted the three in the line-up to finish 1-2-3. The other two are driven by Joe Leonard of San Jose, Calif., who won the pole position at a record qualifying speed of 171.559 m.p.h., and Art Pollard, a sophomore at the speedway from Medford, Ore.

★ ★ ★

A possible crowd of 300,000, would not have shown up only for a turbine shoo-in. It was laced with long-time fans for such veterans as A. J. Foyt Jr. of Houston, shooting for an unprecedented fourth 500 victory; Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Pa., who has broken the 10-mile qualifying record three times, and chargers like the Unser brothers and international racer Dan Gurney of Santa Ana, Calif.

★ ★ ★

The hottest 1968 drivers in the field were Hill, fresh from winning the Spanish and Monaco Grand Prix events, and Bobby Unser of Albuquerque, N.M., winner of the last three championship events on the U.S. Auto Club circuit.

The field was unique in having sons of two former Indianapolis contenders in the line up. They were Billy Vukovich of Fresno, Calif., whose father won the race twice, and Gary Bettenhausen of Stinley Park, Ill., whose father was a perennial contender.

White Sox Halt Oriole Streak

Horlen, McCraw Combine Talents in Chicago Win

By The Associated Press

Chicago's Joe Horlen and Tom McCraw are keeping in step after a few false starts.

Horlen fired a five-hitter and McCraw tripled two runs home Wednesday night as the White Sox beat Baltimore 3-1, ending a six-game losing string as well as the Orioles' six-game victory skein.

★ ★ ★

The victory was Horlen's fourth in a row after five straight losses. McCraw, who contributed to one of the Horlen's setbacks by committing three errors in one inning, has driven in winning runs in three of the right-hander's victories.

★ ★ ★

Horlen, who ran his scoreless innings streak to 37 before yielding a sixth inning run, needed only 100 pitches to subdue the Orioles and halt Chicago's tailspin.

HITS TRIPLE

McCraw tripled down the first base line for the first of Chicago's three hits in the game, giving the Sox a 2-0 first inning lead against Dave McNally. They added a run in the fourth when Buddy Bradford singled, stole second and tallied on a single by Ken Berry.

★ ★ ★

Paul Blair doubled in the Orioles' sixth and scored the first run off Horlen in five games on a single by Curt Blefary.

Ambassador's Horse

Sir Ivor Is Epsom Winner

EPSOM, England (AP) — Sir Ivor was the toast of racegoers and the pride of American owner Raymond Guest of New York for winning the English Derby Wednesday in a thrilling burst of speed.

The American-bred colt — hailed by English champion jockey Ester Piggott as the finest racehorse he's ever ridden — immediately was installed as the odds-on favorite for the Irish Derby June 29.

AN AMBASSADOR

Guest, the U.S. ambassador to Ireland, won a total of $289,261 when the 4-5 favorite came on with a rush in the last furlong.

The winning share was worth $140,461 to Guest, who also won an additional $148,800 in bets.

★ ★ ★

Sir Ivor, a 3-year-old, finished 1½ lengths ahead of English-owned Connaught. Mount Athos was third, another 2½ lengths back in the 13-horse field. The time for the 1½ mile turf race was 2:38.7.

★ ★ ★

Connaught went off at 100-9 and Athos was 45-1.

Guest watched the race on television before attending the opening of a park in County Wexford dedicated to the memory of John F. Kennedy. Members of the Kennedy family were present to congratulate Guest when his horse won.

The ambassador, shortly to retire, said: "This is great. I feel wonderful."

As for the fortune he won — "Well, don't forget that federal taxes will take 77 per cent of it."

QUEEN ATTENDS

Guest's French-born wife led Sir Ivor to the winner's enclosure at Epsom to the cheers of a crowd of 100,000 including Queen Elizabeth II.

★ ★ ★

"I thought the horse wasn't going to make it but Lester Piggott is a great jockey and knew what to do," Mrs. Guest said.

He was Piggott's fourth Derby win. Sir Ivor, trained by Vincent O'Brienl, was listed as the 2-5 favorite for the Irish Derby.

Boxing Career in Doubt

NEW YORK (AP) — The boxing career of light heavyweight contender Johnny Persol of New York appeared over today.

The 27-year-old, ninth-ranked 175-pounder is recovering in a hospital from an eye operation for the restoration of a detached retina in his left eye.

Falcons Obtain End From Rams

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons announced Wednesday they have traded linebacker Bob Sanders and guard Jim Wilson to the Los Angeles Rams for end Bucky Pope.

Pope, a three-year National Football League veteran, played his college days at Catawba College, Salisbury, N. C.

★ ★ ★

A parttime performer for the Rams, Pope's career record shows he caught 34 passes, of which 13 were for touchdowns. He sat out the 1965 season with a knee injury.

★ ★ ★

Wilson, a former All-American lineman at the University of Georgia, came to the Falcons last year in a trade with the San Francisco 49ers and appeared in seven games in the 1967 season.

The American Football League team also announced Wednesday the signing of reserve quarterback Tom Flores to a new pact.

M-M Boys Add Zip to Giants

The original M&M boys—Mantle and Maris—still are around but the San Francisco Giants' act of Mays and Marichal is upstaging them in the initial league — and doing all right in the National League, too.

Wonderful Willie and Juanderful Juan combined their talents again Wednesday night and led the Giants to a 2-1 victory over the reeling St. Louis Cardinals.

The triumph gave the Giants a 1½-game lead over Atlanta, whose game against Houston was rained out in the third inning. The world champion Cardinals, now in fourth place, lost for the 11th time in their last 13 games and fell to within a half-game of the second division.

★ ★ ★

Elsewhere in the NL, Chicago and Philadelphia split a twi-night doubleheader, the Cubs taking the opener 9-2 and the Phillies winning the nightcap 8-3. Cincinnati spotted Los Angeles a five-run lead, then rallied to edge the Dodgers 6-5. The New York Mets and Pittsburgh were not scheduled.

WINNER OF 8

In the American League, Chicago defeated Baltimore 3-1, Minnesota nipped Cleveland 1-0, Detroit beat California 3-0 and Oakland turned back Boston 7-4. The New York Yankees and Washington had the day off.

★ ★ ★

Marichal stopped the Cards on six hits to become the NL's first eight-game winner. Mays gave him all the runs he needed when he cracked his ninth homer of the season in the third inning after Ron Hunt singled.

Oak Park Hires Football Coach From B. Harbor

Al Ratcliff of Benton Harbor has been hired as varsity football coach at Oak Park High School effective this September.

The 44-year-old Ohio-born Ratliff posted a 39-27-6 grid record for eight years at Benton Harbor HS, and had an 84-33 mark as the baseball mentor for 10 seasons.

Ratliff graduated from Anderson (Ind.) College in 1950 and has a Master's degree from Ball State (Ind.) in 1954.

He was an assistant coach for four years at Battle Creek HS. Ratliff led Benton Harbor to two football league titles. He will teach mathematics at Oak Park.

Cager Arraigned in Marijuana Case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Basketball star Lucius Allen of UCLA, a key player on the Bruins' national championship teams the past two years, was arraigned in municipal court Wednesday on two counts alleging possession of marijuana.

★ ★ ★

The 6 foot 2, 21-year-old guard, along with four companions, will return to court June 19 for a preliminary hearing. Bail of $1,250 was continued.

★ ★ ★

The group was arrested, originally on a traffic charge, last Thursday.

★ ★ ★

Allen recently dropped out of school but had enrolled for the spring quarter. He still has a year of eligibility remaining for basketball but his future remains in doubt.

TOP CATCH—It took a tow truck crane to hoist this 162½-pound sturgeon, which was caught with hook and 30-pound test line by Alan Kaneble (left) of Big Lake, Minn., while fishing in the Rainy River near International Falls yesterday. Largest sturgeon previously taken in Minnesota by angling weighed 93 pounds according to state conservation department records. With Kaneble, 28, a forester, are Wallace Pritchard and Richard Bowes, friends who helped him beach the big fish after a 45-minute struggle.

Timely Homer Lifts Jets

By The Associated Press

As far as the Columbus Jets are concerned, Jack Damaska's first home run of the International League season came at an opportune moment.

Damaska hit it leading off the ninth inning Wednesday night at Richmond, sending the Jets' encounter against the Braves into extra innings. The Jets won it 3-1 in the 10th and moved to within 1 games of league-leading Rochester.

★ ★ ★

In the only other game Wednesday night, the Jacksonville Mets defeated Louisville 3-0 and dropped the Colonels two games off the pace. The Buffalo-Rochester and Toledo-Syracuse games were rained out.

Although the two teams collected 24 hits between them, Columbus and Richmond were scoreless until the Braves put together Mike Page's double and Dave Nicholson's single for a run in the eighth inning.

Blues Make Office Moves

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Sidney Salomon Jr. announced Wednesday a complete restructuring of the St. Louis Blues front office, including the elevation of William "Scotty" Bowman to the position of coach and general manager.

★ ★ ★

Lynn Patrick, former general manager of the National Hockey League club, was given the position of managing director of the team's, player development and farm system.

Nicklaus Shoots 71 for National Target

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Big Jack Nicklaus shot a 71 Wednesday for duffers around the country to try to beat in a National Golf Day competition.

★ ★ ★

The reigning U.S. Open champion fired the one-under-par round on the Atlanta Country Club course in the pro-am tune-up to Thursday's start of the Atlanta Classic. Nicklaus set the Golf Day standard by beating PGA champion Don January who had a 74.

★ ★ ★

Competitors in National Golf Day play in the next three weeks can win a plastic bag tab from the PGA by beating Nicklaus' score.

★ ★ ★

Nicklaus almost eagled the par five 18th hole, when he slammed his second shot seven feet form the pin. He missed the putt but still managed a birdie, his third on the backside where he shot a 34 after a 37 on the opening nine.

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—Here is the Jack Nicklaus-Don January card as they fired for National Golf Day:

Par out	453	443	454—36
January out	454	543	544—38
Nicklaus out	463	542	454—37
Par in	454	344	345—36—72

Twins' Boswell Blanks Indians

ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — In the absence of any of the hitters doing anything to excite the fans, Cleveland pitcher Steve Hargan and Minnesota outfielder Tony Oliva supplied the dramatics Wednesday night. The Twins nipped the Indians 1-0 behind Dave Boswell's three-hit pitching.

Hargan, Oliva and Boswell were the principals in a threatened beanball war which got nipped in the bud by umpire Bill Valentine.

Hargan hit Oliva with a glancing blow off his batting helmet, and Oliva made a move to go after Hargan on the mound in the second inning.

When it was over, Hargan and Oliva both said they didn't mean it.

"I wasn't throwing at him," said Hargan, "but I'd be mad, too, if somebody hit me in the head.

Oliva's temper flared when he was hit, but later he said, "I think he did the right thing. Boswell is a little wild, so maybe they think he's throwing at them. So they throw at somebody, and that's me."

Cesar Tovar scored from third after the catch by Indian first baseman Tony Horton in foul territory, about 50 feet past first base.

ATHLETICS WIN BIG

OAKLAND (AP) — Pitcher Jim Hunter of the Oakland Athletics must have thought he was dreaming.

There he was, walking off the Oakland Coliseum mound with a 7-4 lead over the American League champion Boston Red Sox.

It usually takes the Athletics a week to score seven runs.

Hunter, 5-3, started shakily and had trouble in the ninth inning but was great in between as he beat the Red Sox.

Hunter gave up three runs in the first but only one was earned. Manager Bob Kennedy of the A's came out and talked to him after Hunter loaded the bases.

Oakland first baseman Danny Cater drove in four runs — the most he can remember having in a major league game.

He did it all with only one hit, doubling home two in the first and bringing in two others with an infield out and sacrifice fly.

Turns Out Tennis Players

New Products From Hoxie's Factory

HAMTRAMCK (AP) — Jane "Peaches" Bartkowicz, who learned to hit her backhand shot with two hands, has graduated from Jean Hoxie's tennis factory.

But Mrs. Hoxie, who by her own admission has been coaching for "about 100 years," has some more fruit on the vines.

★ ★ ★

"I've got a girl, Janet Lendman, 10, who hits the ball as hard as a man," says Mrs. Hoxie in her machine gun style delivery. "If I told her to knock a brick out of a wall, she'll try to knock it out."

Mrs. Hoxie's base is Hamtramck, a predominately Polish-American community of 50,000 completely surrounded by Detroit. The main industries are Chrysler Corporation's largest assembly plant and tennis.

Hoxie-coached players have won 293 U.S. tennis championships in 31 years and there's no end in sight.

But Peaches, recently named to the U.S. Wightman Cup team, ranks as the best. She learned to hit her backhand shot with two hands when she was just a toddler because she wasn't strong enough for the normal shot.

"Peaches won more tournaments than the rest, so I'd have to say she was the best," said Mrs. Hoxie. "I've had other great players but none that has had the opportunity at the international level that Peaches has had."

Miss Bartkowicz, who won the Wimbledon junior title at 15, and the U.S. 18 and under girls' singles and doubles titles three years running, has reached the age of 19.

CUP MATCHES

Now a sophomore at Miarriott College in Florida, Miss Bartkowicz is in London for the Wightman Cup matches.

"She's been under pressure that would make your hair curl," recalls Mrs. Hoxie. "But you've got to be hungry. That's why I coach here in Hamtramck instead of some country club. These kids don't get tennis at home."

But they soon learn. They take factory worker stamina and use it to endlessly slam a tennis ball off a board wall until Mrs. Hoxie decides "it's time for a little competition."

Then it's off to the tennis wars, and the championships.

Summer afternoons Hamtramck's public tennis courts are crowded with young players, some sent by rich fathers, to learn the demanding Hoxie style of play.

Peaches' younger sister, Plums, is 13 and still developing.

"Plums is an extrovert," said Mrs. Hoxie. "Peaches is an introvert but she's like a savage on the court. When there's a bad point, Plums will make a remark. Peaches will just give you a look.

"But these kids will win more championships than the country club set, who are exposed to more tennis. They know the game but they aren't hungry."

SIC 'EM TIGER! — Janet "Tiger" Lendman, a 10-year-old with a cannonball shot, is the newest protegee of veteran Hamtramck tennis coach Jean Hoxie. Players coached by Mrs. Hoxie have won 392 national titles.

Jim Ryun May Miss Two Major Meets

TOPEKA (AP) — It is improbable that he will be able to run in the NCAA track and field championship meet and there is question whether he can compete in the National AAU Championships.

The NCAA meet is June 13-15 at Berkeley and the AAU championships at Sacramento June 20-21.

★ ★ ★

The University of Kansas junior said physicians Tuesday positively diagnosed his illness as infectious mononucleosis and recommended at least two more weeks of complete rest. "I just don't want to go into these meets without any preparation," Ryun said. "And the doctor said there is no sure way of knowing when it will be okay for me to start running again.

"It might be in two weeks and it might be longer."

GOING UP

Ryun will travel to Flagstaff, Ariz., this weekend. He will spend the summer there getting acclimated to an altitude of 7,500 feet, comparable to Mexico City, site of the 1968 Olympics.

An official of the U.S. Olympic Committee said Tuesday Ryun could be given a bye into the Olympic Track and Field trials at Los Angeles June 19-30 if his present illness keeps him out of the two qualifying meets.

Ryun had been expected to compete in both the 1,500 and 800 meter races in the Olympics.

Power Boaters Await Flag at Sylvan Lake

The power boats are coming to Sylvan Lake next week.

The 52nd annual regatta sponsored by the Oakland County Boat Club will mark the green flag for American Power Boat Association races in Michigan and Ohio this summer.

★ ★ ★

The first heat of the 48-cubic-inch inboard class at noon Sunday, June 9 will be the start of sanctioned power boat racing this season in Region VI (Michigan and Ohio).

As usual, the Oakland County Boat Club's popular regatta is expected to lure a full fleet of approximately 70 boats.

★ ★ ★

Everything but the unlimited inboard class is planned and a significant increase in the big seven-litre boats is predicted. The 48's run about nine-foot in length and reach 65-70 miles per hour during the 1⅔ miles lap at Sylvan Lake.

DOUBLE

The seven-litres are double that length and, appropriately, achieve usually twice the speed. Each heat is five miles, or three laps, on the Sylvan course.

In between the two extremes are the 145-cubic-inch, 150, 225, 266 and 280's. Two heats are planned for each race with the competition expected to finish around 4:30 p.m.

★ ★ ★

Following the final race and before the presentation of trophies will be a water skiing exhibition by the Lake Oakland Ski Demons.

★ ★ ★

This is planned to include a kite act, barefoot skiing, trick skiing and mixed doubles exhibition. Several former state champions are slated to perform with the Ski Demons.

There is no admission for the races. Refreshments will be sold on the boat club grounds along Ferndale Street.

The Sylvan Lake Police and the Water Safety Division of the county sheriff's departments are cooperating with the boat club.

★ ★ ★

Among the more prominent drivers expected are Ed Morgan of Trenton, a three-time national champion, last year's high point leader Les Brown from Worth, Ill., and the highly competitive Anne Lee Deuschle of Fort Thomas, Kans.

Chalks Up Golf Ace

Chris Jenkinson of Union Lake aced the 135-yard, No. 7 hole at Morey's last week. He used an 8-iron and carded a 39 for the round.

Sub-Midget Race Events Set at OCSC

Quarter-midget competition will return to the Oakland County Sportsmen's Club on a regular basis starting Sunday.

Time trials start at noon with the first heat race scheduled for 2 p.m.

★ ★ ★

"The competition is designed for boys and girls 6 to 16 years old," said Ed Kruder, president of the Michigan Midget Racing Association. "Engines will be limited to three horsepower stock models."

Kruder, who lives at 6219 Waterfront, Waterford Township, said, "We are trying to revitalize quarter-midget racing at the sportsmen's club. There is a fine tenth of a mile oval, but it hasn't been used much in the last four years."

TWO CLASSES

There will be competition in two classes every other Sunday through the summer. Novice class cars will have carburetor stops limiting speeds so that the cars take 20 seconds or more for one lap.

The "B" cars run with open throttle.

"We hope to have enough cars entered to run two four-lap heats and one 10-lap feature in each class," said Kuder. "Proper car handling and safety will be emphasized.

"This program will be an opportunity for youngsters who have a quarter-midget in the family, but know little about them, to participate in competition under proper guidance."

Dates of the other competitions are June 2, 23; July 7, 21; Aug. 4, 18; Sept. 8, 22; and Oct. 6, 20.

Cogdill to Speak at Hi-White Fete

Detroit Lions' football player Gail Cogdill will be the guest speaker at the Hi-White Athletic Association ceremonies Thursday at the Highland Township Hall to initiate the Association's athletic season.

Following a parade at 10 a.m., the athletic association will meet at 11:30 at the township hall and the ceremonies will be followed by 9 baseball and softball games.

The face of our dear son,
Come smiling through the door.
No one knows the silent heartache

French Agog Over Twirlers

'Army of Charm' Idea Imported From U. S.

PARIS (NEA) — Majorettes may have become an integral part of American folklore. In France they are very definitely a recent acquisition to public life.

There are today 3,500 majorettes in what the French so euphemistically call "the army of charm and smiles."

★ ★ ★

The first group was formed around four years ago in Nice by Dr. R. Toussaint. He had appreciated the battalion of pretty girls heading a parade he had seen when on a visit to the United States.

His idea caught on and since then 80 groups have been formed, each of 10 majorettes or more.

As in the USA, the time is coming when no celebration or parade will be complete without its advance guard of mini-uniformed girls.

Recently in the Parisian suburb or Saint Ouen the head majorettes of France held their first congress.

The average Frenchman who is inclined to think that the girls in the gay musical-comedy uniforms are just out for a good time makes a great mistake.

"Recruiting is very selective," pointed out Guy David, 28-year-old assistant director of the Fetes Committee at the Saint Ouen Town Hall. "The discipline is strict and the training equal to that of any amateur athlete."

SPECS ARE OUT

No candidates wearing spectacles need apply. Otherwise the girls are expected to be comely and graceful, stand at least 5 feet 6 and be between 15 and 25 years of age.

After admission to the group a candidate is placed on trial for a month. This is followed by three months' training to find out whether she is gifted for baton-twirling or the drums.

★ ★ ★

Then there are at least five hours of rehearsals every week for the "troupe," eight for the "sergeant majors" who, of course, represent the elite.

The girls learn rhythmic dancing with a professor from the Paris opera, and baton-twirling.

According to David, whose great ambition is to contact an American group of majorettes, their French cousins have evolved a routine which differs slightly from theirs.

The French have introduced more dance steps on the march and their own version of high stepping.

★ ★ ★

Majorettes stem mainly from the white-collar classes but there are also a good number of factory workers, dressmakers and others.

Last year an electronics expert perfected a hi-fi drum (which precedes the majorettes) which sends out marital music and is relayed by a tiny transistor hidden behind the drums.

All the drummers have to do is mime the drum beats. The music is that of well-known orchestras and far superior, naturally, to any local brass band.

In this area, at least, the French majorettes are miles ahead of their American counterparts, who march to the beat of a different drum.

'Maladjusted Rate Is High'

Serious Cases Found in American Schools

By PATRICIA McBROOM
Science Service Writer

WASHINGTON — There are an awful lot of maladjusted kids in American schools; the boys are worse off than the girls; but many will get better with age, even in the face of a shortage of competent people to help them.

These are the results of a study of studies — some 50 surveys made over the past 44 years are included — undertaken at the University of Chicago.

★ ★ ★

Maladjustment serious enough to call for professional help runs about 10 per cent in children aged 5 to 12. Sex differences emerge sharply, with 14 per cent of the boys showing serious problems and only 5 per cent of the girls.

Prof. John C. Glidewell did the work at the request of the Joint Commission on Mental Health of Children, which plans to include it in a national report next year.

4 TYPES OF PROBLEMS

Dr. Glidewell says the study reveals no increase in maladjustment among elementary schoolchildren during the 40 years, although a number of other studies have suggested an increase of emotional disturbance among teenagers.

"Maladjustment" includes four types of problems: personal distress, as revealed through nervous tension, excessive daydreaming, crying or fearfulness and sleep troubles; social ineptness such as apathy, withdrawal, or overaggressiveness; but not including delinquency; and problems of development, such as stuttering, bed-wetting and temper tantrums.

★ ★ ★

Something like 35 per cent of all schoolchildren have some trouble along these lines, but only 10 per cent are serious enough to justify clinical attention.

Between 40 and 60 per cent of the children will get better without psychiatric attention, explains Dr. Glidewell, and referring a child often stigmatizes him.

WEIGH RISKS

Teachers are aware of this; they weigh the risks against possible benefits and refer about 3.7 per cent of the children when facilities are available.

Facilities, however, are not always available. "I don't want to leave the impression that there is no problem," says Dr. Glidewell, but it is not as large as the 10-per cent figure would indicate. "We are perhaps one-third to one-half understaffed for the problem."

In Memoriam 2

IN LOVING MEMORY of our Mother, Barbara F. Carry who passed away September 11, 1966.

We do not need a special day
To bring her to our minds
For the day we do not think of her
Is very hard to find.
If all this world were ours to give,
We'd give it, yes, and more,
To see the face of our dear Mother
Come smiling through the door.
Since this cannot be,
We know God has her in His keeping,
But we have her in our hearts.
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they so little know
The sorrow that is in our hearts concealed,
And her memory is a keepsake
By which we'll never part.
Sadly missed by children, Brother, sisters and father.

IN LOVING MEMORY of our husband and father, James A. Taylor, who passed away February 4, 1968.
I have only your memory, dear husband,
The love a heart holds dear.

Remembrance keeps him near.

Successful Investing

BY ROGER E. SPEAR

Q — I would like to trade more actively in stocks if I could operate by a formula or system of selection that would limit losses. There must be books or articles by experts indicating characteristics of both good and poor buys.—M.B.

A — You're quite right. There are books and articles for investors like yourself to read and study if you're willing to make the effort to learn about the country's basic industries, the corporate enterprises developed by each, and what these corporations report about their earnings and future prospects.

Stock prices are generally available in the larger city papers. As for mechanical formulas or systems to apply to stock selection, their use is a highly professional operation. I think you'd do better to study and learn all you can about common stock investing on the basis of fundamental factors, that is, the company's earnings, use of its products, competitive position in its industry and so on.

I suggest that you look into the financial section of your public library for books and magazines on business and finance and then ask your broker to let you see his statistical reports on individual companies. Daily reading of financial news in a metropolitan paper will familiarize you with favorable — and unfavorable — factors affecting industries, companies and securities. These are some of the ways to train yourself to make good stock selections.

Q — Please give me your views on Delhi Australian Petroleum, 50 shares of which were recently given to me. Does it have future growth potential?—E. L.

A — Yes, I believe it definitely does. However, inasmuch as Australian oil companies do not enjoy great popularity in the United States it might be advisable to liquidate your gift and buy 100 shares of Occidental on the Big Board. These shares have a stronger following than Delhi Australian and are attractive for growth. They have shown good market action because of Occidental's diversification program. Earnings are expected to move up again this year.

★ ★ ★

The police and National Guardsmen continued on alert after the streets were cleared of the crowds which began to form shortly after midnight.

★ ★ ★

The fatalities Wednesday night were the first in the rioting which began Monday with a flurry of bottle tossing, burning and window smashing.

Police said one of the victims, Matthias Browder, 18, was killed by a liquor store guard who told them he fired into a group of youths breaking a store-front window.

City Day Care Center, Services Get Approval

A day care center and provision for social services to the economically disadvantaged at Lakeside homes were approved last night by the Pontiac Board of Education and the Pontiac Housing Commission.

The Pontiac Housing Commission will provide $10,000 for a person to plan a new 5,000-square-foot building west of the present community building.

★ ★ ★

Planned to be opened in September 1969, the day care center would provide free baby-sitting for adults who attend adult education or adult re-training programs.

The new building would also house a Head Start program for preschool children, other community programs and agency services.

GOALS OF FACILITY

Goals of the facility represent an interagency approach to:

● Fully meet the physical, educational and emotional needs of the economically deprived.

★ ★ ★

● Supply services and facilities that will provide means for the deprived to rid themselves of poverty.

School officials say they would try to get federal funds for the project beyond the $10,000.

OTHER BUSINESS

In other business, the board:

● Heard a $98,139 proposal to buy nine buses to transport almost 1,000 students who live within the city limits and at least one mile from school. No action was taken by the board, pending availability of funds later.

★ ★ ★

● Hired Joseph Sommerville, principal of Woodson Elementary School in Inkster, to be the new principal of Franklin Elementary School. He is a Negro. Controversy had stirred over whether to hire a Negro or white principal.

★ ★ ★

● Certified the Oakland County Tax Allocation Board's tax rates to the taxing municipalities with the school district as follows:

8.30 mills (8.20 last year) plus 1.40 mills additional rate in the City of Pontiac, 15 mills (6.25 new mills plus 8.75) all-purpose voted excess mills and 4 mills for debt service.

★ ★ ★

● Authorized the business manager to hire an architect to study how music rooms and remodeling of the kitchen and cafeteria can be done at Eastern Junior High School.

Borrowing Bill Unlikely to Up Taxes for Most

A state legislative bill to give school districts increased authority to borrow money without popular votes appears likely not to increase taxes of most Oakland County residents.

The bill gives second-, third- and fourth-claas districts power to raise their bonding limit for construction without a public vote from 2 per cent to 5 per cent of the district's state equalized valuation.

★ ★ ★

Four of the country's 28 school districts are currently below the 5 per cent level and thus would benefit fron the bill, which passed the Senate earlier this week.

The bill now has to go back to the House for concurrence with a Senate amendment.

OUTSTANDING BONDS

Pontiac School District would probably not fall below the 5 per cent level for five or six years, according to schools Business Manager Vern Schiller.

He said the district will soon have $31 million in outstanding bonds, about $6 million beyond the 5 per cent debt limit.

State equalized valuation of the school district is about $500 million, he said.

Oxford, Berkley, Ferndale and Royal Oak are said to be the only districts in the county who are below the 5 per cent level and would benefit by the bill.

TAX HIKES POSSIBLE

Districts who take advantage of the bill may have to increase property taxes in order to pay for increased borrowing, Rep. Clifford H. Smart, R-Walled Lake, said.

School districts which are growing are not likely to fall below the 5 per cent level, which would then permit districts to finance construction projects without voter approval.

All school districts in Oakland County are either second-, third, or fourth-class districts.

Antioch Student From Area Held on $10,000 Bond

YELLOW SPRINGS, Ohio (AP) — Kent Mathewson II, 21, of 671 E. Long Lake, Bloomfield Hills, a student at Antioch College, was held under $10,000 bond today in connection with a narcotics crackdown in which 13 persons were arrested Monday night.

★ ★ ★

The 13, who were nabbed in a police raid that climaxed 18 months of undercover work, are slated for arraignment next Tuesday or Wednesday. They will enter pleas then.

★ ★ ★

Six of those arrested were Antioch students, the others were residents of Yellow Springs.

Sylvan Lake Driver Thwarts 3 Bandits

A Sylvan Lake man told Pontiac police yesterday how he thwarted a holdup attempt the previous night.

★ ★ ★

Curtis Sluss, 21, of 2043 Pontiac said three men attempted to force their way into his car while it was stopped for a signal at Telegraph and Orchard Lake about 11 p.m.

★ ★ ★

Sluss grabbed a pistol and fired over their heads and the three men fled, police were told.

Gasoline-Sniffing Raised in Death

NEW BUFFALO (AP) — A youth whose body was found in a wooded ravine in New Buffalo may have been sniffing gasoline, New Buffalo Police Chief Ray Siebenmark said Wednesday.

★ ★ ★

Siebenmark said clothing worn by David Lynn Baxter, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Baxter of near New Buffalo, bore an odor of gasoline and a can partially filled with gasoline was found near his body Tuesday night.

Mule-Lovers Stubbornly Like Critter

WASHINGTON — Men who know mules best say the animals really are quiet and gentle. They have the scars to prove it.

A Missouri mule breeder shrugged off a large bruise on the back of his thigh. "I just got too close when a bunch of them were playing," he said. "That wasn't a mean mule."

★ ★ ★

The operator of a Kansas mule farm, whose thumb was bitten off by one of his charges, claims it was his own fault. "I got a little careless," he explained. "When those ears go down, watch out."

Kicks and harsh words may pass between mule and man, but a bond of affection often develops. "Mules and small southern farmers have been closer partners than man and horse or man and dog," wrote Ralph McGill, the noted Georgia editor.

IMPORTANT IN SOUTH

On some farms in the south, the mule still is a most important animal, the National Geographic Society says.

The mule has been bred since pre-Biblical times. A cross between a male donkey and a female horse, the mule combines the best features of both parents. It has the wit, sobriety, endurance, and sure-footedness of the donkey; the strength and bulk of the horse. It thrives on poor food and withstands cold or blistering heat.

No tractor ever inspired the affection one North Carolina farmer had for his mule. After his faithful partner of 20 years died, the man committed sucide. He left a scrawled note on a worn path: "My old mule is gone. I am drowned in this pond."

County Health Dept. Eyes Hepatitis Case

The Oakland County Health Department is investigating a single case of hepatitis that was reported last week in the Rochester area.

★ ★ ★

The infected person is receiving treatment and the victim's contacts are being checked, a health department spokesman said.

The disease, which can be transmitted in water or food, attacks the liver. It can occur in epidemic proportions, but yields to modern treatment, health authorities said.

Car Wash Gets Waterford OK

Special approval was given by the Waterford Township Planning Commission Tuesday for the construction of a coin-operated car wash on Cooley Lake Road near Hunt.

The applicant, Albertus Frixen, was instructed by the board to obtain a building permit within a year or the board would withdraw its approval.

The rezoning of a parcel on M59 and Pontiac Lake Road from agricultural to a local business district classification for a supermarket was recommended for township board approval.

Permission was given to Hillis E. Sisk to keep two horses up to four years on property zoned single family residential on Hospital Road near Highland.

Denied was a request of John Hunt to build six apartment units on Walton directly across from Curwood.

GIANT PRISM — Towering 34 feet over a small park in Norrkoping, Sweden, the Prisma, the world's biggest glass sculpture, is made of 3,500 panes of window glass glued together to form a 33-ton obelisk. Artist Vicke Lindstrand created the $35,000 sculpture on commission from the city of Norrkoping. The process turned plain glass into a giant prism that absorbs, refracts and changes light from all directions, dissolving it into all the colors of the spectrum.

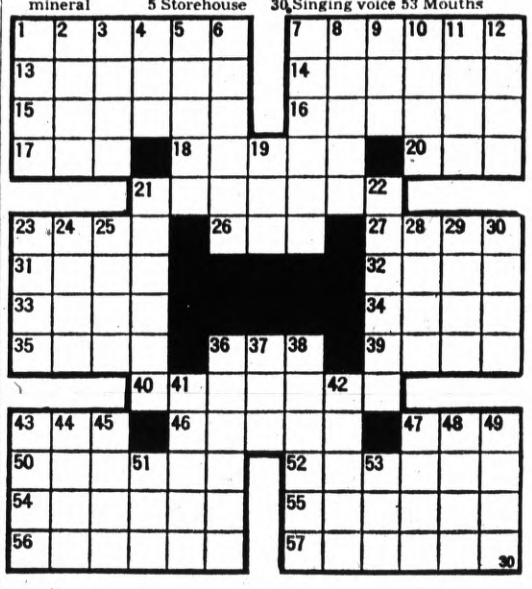
Answer to Previous Puzzle



Romeo & Juliet Go Gotham as They Go for Lox & Bagels

By EARL WILSON

NEW YORK — Romeo & Juliet came ot lunch at Max Asnas' Stage Delicatessen . . . for lox and bagels . . . not for tea and crumpets . . . and comedian Jack E. Leonard shouted at Romeo, Leonard Whiting, 18, from London, "Oh, hello, Romeo! I didn't recognize you without your balcony."

WILSON

Olivia Hussey, 17, who plays Juliet in the much discussed picture, didn't know what lox and bagels were, being from Argentina and England, and Romeo was also indefinite and mystified.

"In England we call bread 'bread,'" he said.

"Shakespeare ain't hot either," muttered somebody in the back.

Tom Poston and Morey Amsterdam greeted the youngsters and Jack E. Leonard for once didn't eat off people's plates (he's on a diet). Jack E. Leonard asked who directed them in "Romeo & Juliet." They said Franco Zefferelli, a great European director.

"I once knew a guy with a name something like that, was a tire thief in Pittsburgh," Jack E. said.

★ ★ ★

Juliet was a little giggly and Romeo pinched her, and I asked if they could be romantic about each other in real life, and Juliet (ordering cheesecake) said, "Perhaps," and Romeo (over corned beef) also said, "Perhaps."

Is there anything you can see here in New York you can't see in London?" I asked them since they'd bought some mod gear in the Village.

"Yes," said Juliet. "The Statute of Liberty."

THE MIDNIGHT EARL . . .

Philippines' First Lady, Mrs. Fernando Marcos, and a party of 14, were at El Morocco . . . The once-upon-a-time mansion of the late Thomas J. Watson at 75th and 5th shook as Bolshoi Ballet dancers and American fans did modern dancing to psychedelic lights. It was at a reception given by Rebecca Harkness and her ballet group, at one of the great parties.

While some wealthy folks have peacocks around their pools, the Yonka Troubtez-koys at their big Monte Carlo villa have penguins, and a special penguin pool . . . Charlton Heston was added to the new Miami Jockey Club honorary board of directors with Ted Kheel and Ivan Tors.

★ ★ ★

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Flip Wilson says his brother went to the draft board and volunteered: "They turned him down. Said they already had enough people on the draft board."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Those election campaigns are very costly, and John J. Plomp writes, "Don't be surprised if our next president's an ex-millionaire."

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "Things are always the last place you look — because after you find them, you stop looking."

EARL'S PEARLS: A student caught tossing a rock at a teacher had an excuse — said he was studying geology, and was submitting his homework.

Bobby Kennedy's so optimistic about his chances that he's already looking for a vice-president who's willing to babby-sit. That's earl, brother.

FIGHTING THE FOG — Experiments in fighting fog around airports have produced promising results, according to the Air Transport Association. The dark area under the plane in this photo shows reaction to seeding, which causes water droplets to combine, reducing their number and affording greater visibility.

A Look at TV

Vintage Show Faces Ax

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — "To Tell the Truth" was up to its old tricks on Wednesday as a panel of four tried to pick the one man out of three who was the real author of a new book. But when September rolls around, it will be, in all probability, one of television's vintage programs that will be missing.

After 12 years, CBS will probably administer the coup de grace because of low ratings and what are known as demographics, which are statistics gathered by audience research companies to show the composition of audiences by age, sex, buying power and the like.

"Truth," it seems, has strong appeal to the older audiences—this is evident since one of its participating sponsors manufactures an adhesive for dental plates. Today the big daytime push is in the direction of the young housewife—the big consumer of everything from washday products to dessert toppings—but no one is really terribly concerned with the audience in the post-35 group.

Over the years, the Goodson-Todman show has gone through a lot of changes. Polly Bergen, those with long memories will recall, was, along with Kitty Carlisle, an original member of the panels. Tom Poston was a regular for years until he was unceremoniously dropped this season. The show helped launch Polly on a bigger career, and it started Miss Carlisle on a whole new tack as a lecturer. Bud Collyer has been the show's host since its beginnings and his "God bless you" farewell to each departing team of contestants has become almost as well known as his order: "Will the real . . . stand up?"

★ ★ ★

Another long-playing CBS show, "What's My Line?" bit the dust recently but apparently its producers and even CBS—whose TV network dropped the old show—believes there is still life in the old format.

Another division of the CBS empire will sell a new production of the old game show to local stations, but only Arlene Francis will be back on the panel.

STILL PLAYING

As for "Truth," Collyer and Miss Carlisle are still playing the game this week, along with Orson Bean, who has become a regular in recent seasons. A young actor, Bert Convy, has taken Poston's place, apparently to help attract younger viewers. Peggy Cass, another regular, is making a movie, so Joanna Barnes is sitting in.

When the show goes—and it will unless something dramatic happens to its ratings—it will be missed. Somehow, even if one doesn't tune in regularly, it is comforting to know that, if you want to see it, it's there.

Airmail Barely Got off Ground

By National Geographic Society

WASHINGTON — America's first scheduled airmail flight ran out of gas before it left the ground.

As President Woodrow Wilson and other government dignitaries fidgeted impatiently, nervous mechanics took turns spinning the propeller and shouting "Contact!"

★ ★ ★

Nothing happened until someone remembered to fill the gasoline tank, the National Geographic Society recalls.

Once aloft, the pilot's troubles weren't over. Expected to fly from Washington, D.C., to New York via Philadelphia, he headed off course, tried to land in a small Maryland town to ask the way, and nosed over. Excited farmers told the grounded courier he had flown 25 miles in the wrong direction.

ANOTHER MADE IT

The new service wasn't a complete disaster, however. At about the same time on May 15, 1918, another plane was taking off from Belmont Park race track in New York, the northern end of the route. This flight was successful — and the pilot was rewarded with a bouquet of flowers.

S. W. (Bill) Hackbarth, a 67-year-old former airmail pilot, recently celebrated the 50th anniversary of the United States airmail by flying the original transcontinental mail route in a rebuilt plane. He also kept VIP's waiting by landing at the wrong Washington, D.C., airport.

★ ★ ★

Hackbarth's aircraft was resurrected from bits and pieces of an old plane that crashed into a Utah mountainside in 1922.

Soviets Confirm Crash of Bomber

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union confirmed today that one of its bombers crashed into the Norwegian Sea Saturday "while making a training flight."

★ ★ ★

The crash had been first announced by the U.S. Defense Department, which said the bomber crashed in flames moments after buzzing the U.S. aircraft carrier Essex. No survivors were found.

The population in Asia is about two billion and grows at the rate of 2 per cent a year.

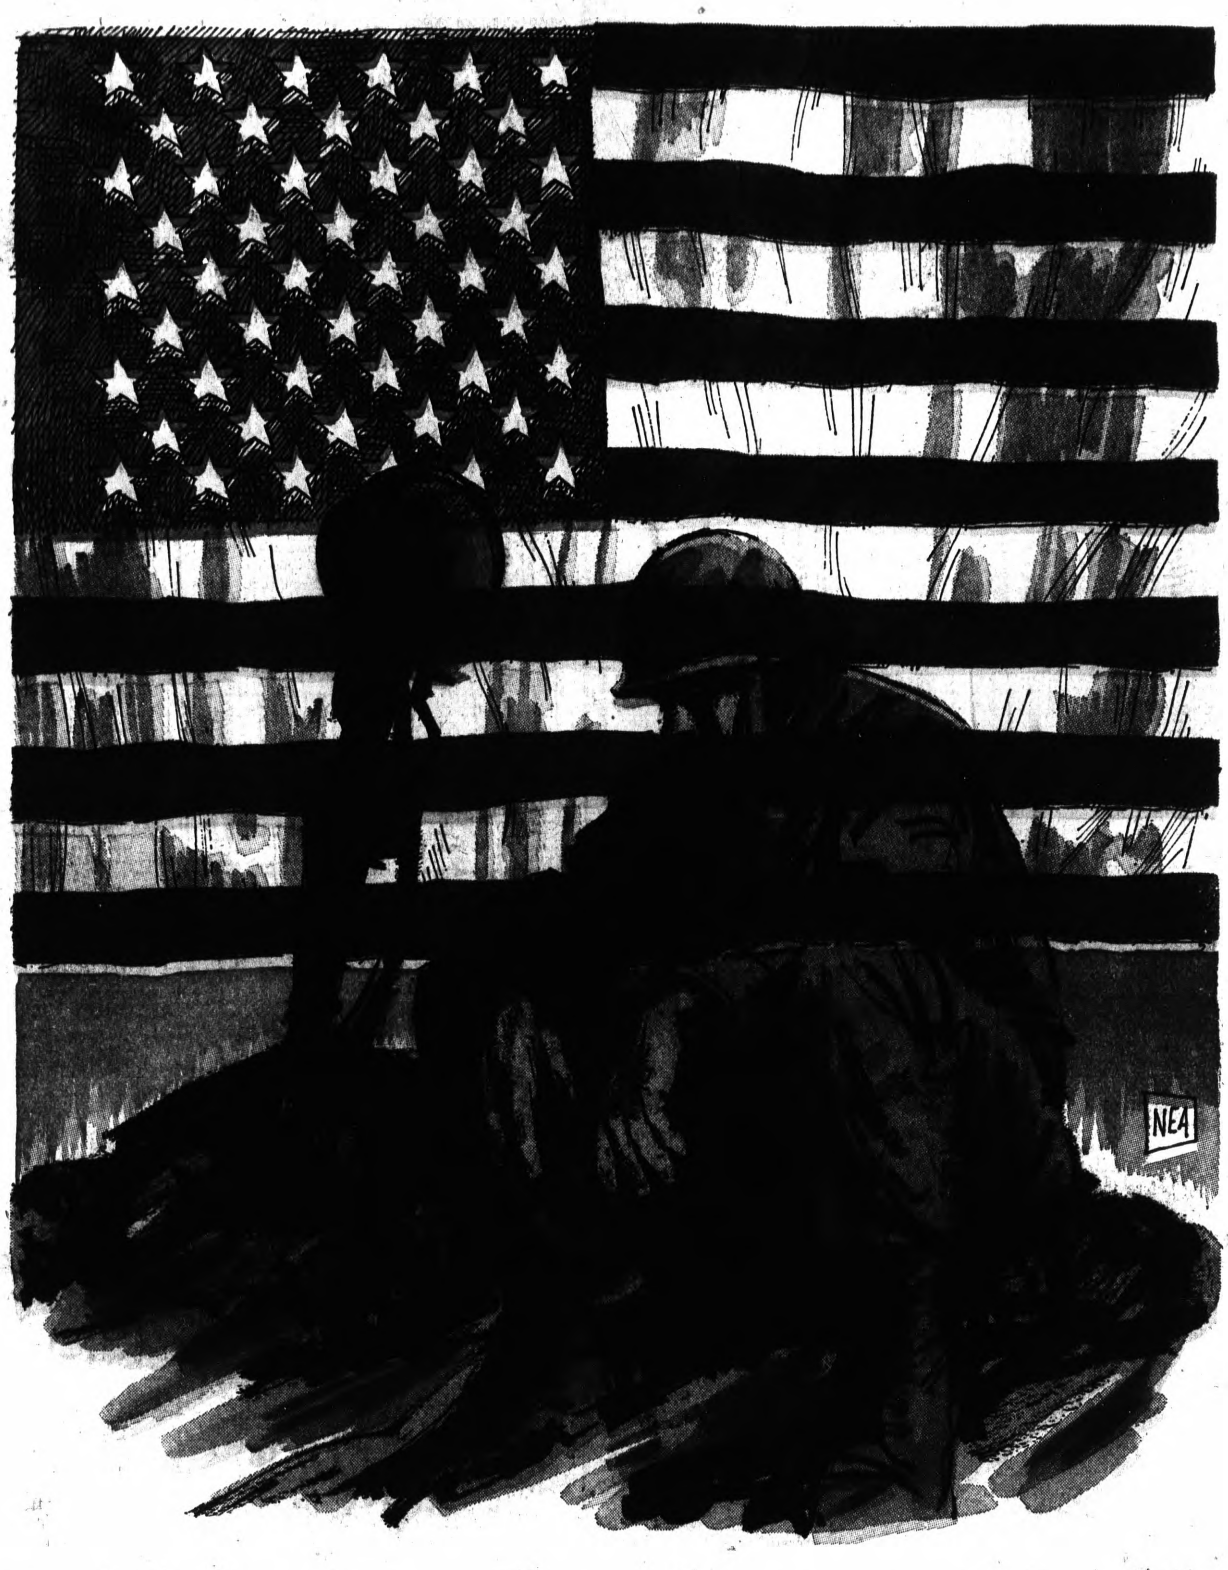
Message Spurs Hunt for Submarine



Radio Call Hoax?

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The massive search for the atomic submarine Scorpion and her 99-man crew centered off the Virginia capes today after receipt of a radio signal from a sender identifying itself as the missing craft.

A patrol plane and six ships reported picking up Wednesday night a "very clear" signal. But a Navy spokesman said early today, "It could be a hoax."

★ ★ ★

Cmdr. T. L. Ingraham, public affairs officer of the Atlantic Fleet's submarine force also told a news conference, however: "The Navy still maintains hope."

The submarine, missing since Monday, is the object of the greatest air-sea search ever mounted by the Navy — 10,000 men, 55 ships and 30 planes.

NO FURTHER MESSAGES

The radio message was picked up when the patrol plane receiving it was 110 miles east of Norfolk. Search units were concentrated in an area stretching from 110 miles to more than 300 miles east of Norfolk. But no further radio transmissions were reported.

The sole message said: "Any station this network. This is (and then gave the code name for the Scorpion.)"

★ ★ ★

The Navy said the code name has been repeated numerous times in communications among the search force ships and planes.

Ingraham said the Navy did not definitely believe the message came from the Scorpion. He added it could have come from a shore radio.

CAUTION URGED

The Pentagon previously cautioned development had occurred. Like Ingraham, the Pentagon said the message could have been a hoax.

Navy sources said one of the craft picking up the message was the nuclear submarine Lapon, which was 300 miles east of Norfolk. They said the Lapon took a bearing of 075 degrees east northeast of the signal, which would place the transmitting point farther out to sea.

★ ★ ★

Ingraham said, "It is extremely doubtful that a transmission of this type could be originated by a submarine that may be submerged or bottomed in that vicinity"—the general area where the signal was heard.

He said the Scorpion "certainly would know a search was in progress for her" and "she would be on the surface" transmitting.

Ingraham reported the ocean in the general area where the signal was heard is 12,000 feet deep. This is well beyond the continental shelf, which extends some 70 to 80 miles seaward.

Explosion at Day Nursery Kills 7 Children, 2 Adults

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A flaming gas explosion wrecked a suburban day nursery Wednesday, killing nine persons, seven of them children, 16 months to 4 years old. Three other children were injured.

Two women employes of the nursery in suburban Hapeville perished while trying to save the young children in their care.

"When you're crawling around and you hear babies pleading, and you can't find them, it hurts," said L. F. Redwine, who works nearby and plunged into the shattered building to help rescue the children.

Fire Chief J. P. Nunn said the explosion occurred after the operator of a bulldozer struck a gas line in front of the building. The escaping gas filled the basement of the nursery and was apparently ignited by a water heater flame or other spark, Nunn said.

AT HOME

Nunn was at his home in the same block as the nursery when he heard the explosion.

Police said the nursery manager, Mrs. J. M. Gardner, 50, of Hapeville, died in the flaming building after going back inside to try to evacuate the children.

★ ★ ★

Also killed was Mildred Reeves, about 30, of Atlanta, a nursery employe.

The immediate efforts of nursery employes and nearby workers kept the death list from rising higher, witnesses said.

The children were taking their daily nap when the gas line was broken, a nursery employe, Mrs. Willie Lee Reeds, said. Employes started taking one group of children to an adjoining house, then the explosion came.

It was hours before authorities could identify the seven dead children.

★ ★ ★

But after checking with the families of every child registered at the nursery, Hapeville police said only seven children were still unaccounted for.

Police identified the victims as Gail Cumby, 4, Hapeville; Roger Buckley, 2, Hapeville; Denise Umphries, 2, Hapeville; Julie Whidby, 2, Forest Park; Ronnie Wilson, 3, Hapeville; Shelley Little, 16 months, East Point, and Michael Kingston, 2, Union City.

Income Tax Hike a Near-Certainty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It appeared almost certain today that President Johnson would get his long-sought income tax increase, but he will also have to swallow an unwanted $6-billion cut in federal spending ordered by the House.

Passage of the 10 per cent income tax surcharge was a virtual certainty after the House yesterday defeated attempts by liberal House members to reduce the cut to $4 billion.

★ ★ ★

Congressional leaders expected passage on June 12. The Senate, which already has approved the tax increase and spending cut, was also expected to pass the House version and send it to Johnson for his signature.

The compromise hitching the surtax to the spending cut originally was worked out in the Senate when the tax-writing House Ways and means committee refused to act on the tax increase.

★ ★ ★

The big spending cut was the price Johnson had to pay to get economy-minded congressmen to okay the surtax.

Memorial Day—and Another War

By Newspaper Enterprise Association

It was in 1868 that John A. Logan, commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, directed that all G.A.R. posts set aside the 30th of May "for the purpose of strewing with flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country during the late rebellion."

At first, and for long afterward, called Decoration Day, the day was later changed to Memorial Day and came to be a time in which to honor the dead of all wars, not just those of the Civil War.

Today, the heroes' graves we would strew with flowers have multiplied by the tens of thousands and lie scattered about the entire world.

In the 100 years since that first Memorial Day, five more wars have called America's sons to fight and die in places far from home, places whose once-strange names are indelibly etched into history — San Juan Hill . . . Belleau Woods . . . Bastogne and Iwo Jima . . . Missionary Ridge . . . Khe Sanh . . .

★ ★ ★

Reckoning the Vietnam conflict from 1965, when massive American involvement began, 1968 marks the 14th year that Memorial Day, a day born in the aftermath of war, has been observed in the midst of war.

Fourteen years of war as opposed to 86 of peace — or what passes for peace in the affairs of nations.

★ ★ ★

Mathematically, peace would seem to have the best of it. Each new war, however, and each between wars period, has seen the development of ever more terrible engines of death.

The present "limited" war has witnessed the routine employment of more concentrated destruction than even during World War II. The brief desert battles in the six-day Arab-Israeli war eclipsed even the mass tank warfare of 1941 and '42 in numbers of vehicles engaged and destroyed.

Yet, men have managed to limit war, compared to what they could unleash. (Though what soldier killed this morning died a "limited" death?)

★ ★ ★

There may be wars and rumors of wars as far ahead as we can see. The graves will multiply, so long as the ideals for which the first American soldier died require the extreme sacrifice of succeeding generations of brave men.

But one day the last soldier's grave will be filled. This we must believe. And on that day, perhaps a new verse to the beloved "Taps" will tell all those who rest in honored glory that their deaths were not in vain, that —

War is done,
Stilled the guns,
O'er all lands, on the seas, in the sky,
All is well,
Soldier rest,
God is nigh.

Candidates to Debate

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Robert F. Kennedy of New York and Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota, who will face each other in the California Democratic primary next Tuesday, have agreed to hold a live television debate this weekend. The three major networks said in separate announcements Wednesday that they would make network time available for joint appearances by the two senators, both of whom are on the California ballot, and also by Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, if he wished to participate.

Sun Replaces Rain for Holiday Events

At last, the long-awaited sun arrived, just in time for the holiday parades.

Rain clouds, which brought a deluge to the area for the past four days, were nudged into the horizon early this morning.

The expected high temperature today will be between 62 and 68 degrees.

RISE IN TEMPERATURE

Yesterday's high was 61 degrees at 4:30 p.m.

Rain probability today is 20 per cent. The forecast for tonight is mild but cloudy.

You should be able to see Old Sol again tomorrow and enjoy even warmer temperatures.

The low temperature prior to 8 a.m. was 48 degrees.

Increase Payments on Federal Debt Up More Than Expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of paying for the federal debt—already at record levels—will go even higher than originally thought this year because of the current period of tight credit.

The increase, however, is expected to be relatively small.

Interest payments on the federal debt are now expected to be close to $14.5 billion for the fiscal year which ends June 30, or about $150 million more than anticipated last January.

This would mean a year-to-year increase of about $1.1 billion from the $13.4 billion actually paid to carry the debt during the previous fiscal year. The cost of borrowing money in the current inflationary period has increased rapidly even for the Treasury Department which can command the lowest rates in the country because its securities are considered the safest of all investments.

'NO QUICK CURE'

The extent of that spiral was underscored Monday by Chairman Arthur M. Okun of the Council of Economic Advisers, who said the nation is experiencing an inflationary epidemic that even a tax increase could not quickly cure.

Until President Johnson's proposed 10 per cent income tax surcharge is enacted, Okun said in a memorandum made public by the White House, "There will be growing strains on prices, costs, imports and financial markets at home and abroad."

But even with higher taxes, Okun said the route back to price stability will be "long and difficult" and will require the cooperation of the private sector. "It is crucial that we begin the journey now."

★ ★ ★

It was the latest in a series of urgent appeals from the administration for higher taxes.

Only last week, however, the Treasury paid the highest rate since the Civil War to borrow $1.5 billion. And rates this week, although lower, are still close to the top of the scale.

REFINANCING

The Treasury borrows at least $2.7 billion each week to refinance part of the federal debt.

When the department reestimated its interest payments last January for the current fiscal year, it used interest rates in effect last December.

★ ★ ★

Rates actually declined during the early part of this year but in the last two months have shot upward.

The $352-billion federal debt is composed of treasury securities held by individuals in the form of savings bonds and by banks, savings and loan associations, insurance companies, corporations, state and local governments, the Federal Reserve System and government investment accounts such as the Social Security trust fund. Some of these securities mature each week and the Treasury must borrow money to pay them off.

★ ★ ★

Part of the Treasury's problem is Congress' refusal so far to adopt the surcharge. The department had figured on $2.7 billion in additional revenues during the current fiscal year from the surcharge and the speedup in corporate tax payments.

It has been forced to borrow additional money to make up some of this loss. It absorbed the rest.

For the next fiscal year, the Treasury figured interest on the debt at $15.2 billion. This figure could come close to the mark if taxes are raised, it's believed.

But without higher taxes, officials won't even hazard a guess on what the interest payments might be.

Opening lead—♣ Q

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Today's hand was played in the early days of contract. Not exactly this hand, but one similar enough so that the result was the same.

JACOBY

South was one of the first great contract authorities. North was young Oswald Jacoby. The game was rubber bridge and the stakes quite high for those Depression days although they would mean little in today's inflation.

South liked to bid no-trump and his opening no-trump bid was an indefinite sort of strong hand with no-trump distribution. Needless to say, four aces and a king filled the bill nicely.

As you can see North responded with a two heart call. He knew that South would bid again. When South jumped to three no-trump, North went after 100-honors in hearts and rebid his nice suit. When South persisted with no-trump, North decided quite properly that South held all the aces. North bid a heart slam.

★ ★ ★

It did him no good. South went right on to six no-trump and North gave up the hopeless struggle.

South played with perfect technique. He won the club opening and led a low spade to set up a possible squeeze if diamonds did not break. Unfortunately for North and South the diamonds did not break and the squeeze didn't materialize. South got his 150 ponits for the aces but game, slam and rubber had gone into limbo.

★ ★ ★

Oswald Jacoby was mad then. He is still mad 35 years later but with the passage of time some of his anger is turned against himself.

He knew that his partner liked to play no-trump. He should have realized that he was not going to get to play the hand and should have given up at three no-trump.

True, the heart slam was there since playing at hearts he could ruff his fourth diamond but what good is a heart slam when you aren't going to be allowed to play in hearts?

What do you do now?

A—We have a slight preference for a four-heart bid, but no criticism for a pass. Let your conscience be your guide.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Instead of bidding one no-trump your partner responds two diamonds to your opening spade bid. You rebid two hearts and he jumps to four hearts. What do you do now?

Drama Took Over in '67-'68 Broadway Year

By WILLIAM GLOVER
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK — Musicals, the special pride and joy of Broadway, took a back seat to drama during the 1967-68 theatrical year.

Artistically, it was a season to commend rather than hail. Statistically, both activity and prices were up.

During the production year that ends technically on May 31, showgoers will have seen 73 new exhibits and anted up $56 million at the box office.

In comparison, there were 64 arrivals in the previous semester with an over-all take of $52 million. And the year before that, the respective figures were 55 und $50 million. The steady increase in grosses has resulted to some extent from higher ticket prices necessitated by rising costs.

RATIO UNAFFECTED

One statistic, the hit-flop ratio, remained stubbornly unaffected by all the creative endeavor that ranged from calculated shock to formula slickness. Several shows ranged to the limits of vocal and visual frankness.

Excluding repertory enterprises which are inexorably committed to deficit financing and limited run "prestige" presentations, 59 commercial shows arrived. Of these, 11 already have paid off or give every evidence of eventually rewarding their angels.

★ ★ ★

Several other still-running entries could join the charmed circle.

To get the fiscal picture of Broadway in proper perspective, two other factors must be mentioned. Nine holdover smashes from earlier seasons continue to pile up profits and five other long runs wound up during 1967-68 with a profit of over $400,000.

HEALTHY ROAD YEAR

Also, about a dozen touring versions of Broadway winners prospered during a healthy road year.

Standout performers were Helen Hayes, Joel Grey, Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme, Albert Finney, Zoe Caldwell, Ingrid Bergman, Colleen Dewhurst and Melvyn Douglas.

★ ★ ★

The palpable new hits, now running, include "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead," the top prize-winning drama from England; Arthur Miller's "The Price," Neil Simon's "Plaza Suite," and the blithe London trifle, "There's a Girl in My Soup."

Of 13 musical ventures, only "George M!," "Golden Rainbow" and "The Happy Time" appear potential dividend reapers. Among the most monumental disasters in the song-dance category were "Darling of the Day" and "I'm Solomon."

CLOSED PAYOFFS

Closed payoffs include Marlene Dietrich's fabulous in-person engagement; Eugene O'Neill's somber posthumous piece, "More Stately Mansions," and by slim margins, Peter Ustinov's "Halfway up the Tree" and Edward Albee's "Everything in the Garden."

Other quality assets of the season were visits by the Vienna Burgtheater, the Polish Theater of Poland and the work of the APA-Phoenix company.

Worthy too are the still-running "Joe Egg," "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie" and the recently arrived "Soldiers."

★ ★ ★

The Lincoln Center Repertory, badgered still by errors of omission and commission, gave evidence of growing strength with "The Little Foxes," "Tiger at the Gates," "Saint Joan" and "Cyrano de Bergerac." APA scored its biggest hit with "The Show-Off."

On the downbeat side, established authors, including Robert Anderson, Henry Denker, Harold Pinter, Gore Vidal and Tennessee Williams, found the going rough. Even Bernard Shaw, in a one-man condensation "By George!," failed to please critics or populace.

New writers had plenty of opportunity, being involved in 22 presentations. The four that made the biggest impressions were Tom Stoppard with "Rosencratz and Guildenstern," Terence Frisby who delivered "There's a Girl in My Soup" and Peter Nichols, "Joe Egg." Britons all. The lone domestic standout was Mrs. Jay Presson Allen with "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie."

★ ★ ★

The public, as usual, proved tougher than the critics, speedily ignoring seven plays that won majority approval, and reversing the pundits only once.

State Gears for Tourist

LANSING — The Michigan State Highway Commission, recognized nationally for its travel information program, is ready to extend another welcome to vacationers.

Some 800,000 persons are expected to stop this year for free travel counselling service at the Commission's eight travel information centers, and increase of about 100,000 over last year.

The centers are on main highways at six points of entry — New Buffalo, Monroe, Port Huron, Sault Ste. Marie, Ironwood and Menominee — and at Clare and Mackinaw City. By late summer, a ninth center will be in operation on I-69 near Coldwater.

For several weeks, maintenance crews have been busy repairing and redecorating the information center buildings and grooming the surrounding picnic grounds.

RACKS STOCKED

Literature racks, filled during the winter with information on winter sports, have been stocked with summer folders, and literature storage shelves are being restocked, literally by the truckload.

Last year, travelers selected and carried away more than 2.5 million maps, directories, schedules, brochures and booklets telling about travel attractions, how to reach them and where to stay.

It is expected that the 1968 total will exceed three million.

New Idea Aids Fresh Water

By Science Service

In coastal areas, when fresh water is pumped in large quantities from underground water-bearing formations the pressure often becomes low enough in the aquifiers that salt water from the ocean can leak in and contaminate the fresh.

Several ways of preventing this have been tried, but with limited success.

Now two California inventors have patented an idea which may show promise. It consists of pumping a dam down a well to block off the contamination.

A series of holes is drilled in a line between the fresh water supply and the incoming salt water.

A slurry of clay or other non-water-soluble material is pumped down the first hole, while fresh water is removed from the second in conventional fashion.

Then the process is shifted so that slurry goes down the second hole and fresh water comes up the third, and so on until a wall has been built blocking the aquifier off from the salt water.
