

Wednesday, February 18, 2004

Dean of Students Web site premieres

By Dawn Pauli, contributing writer

The Office of the Dean of Students, responsible for programs and services to promote a positive campus experience for students, recently launched its first-ever Web site.

The site includes links to the Center for Student Activities, Campus Recreation and the Center for Multicultural Initiatives. The Student Handbook, Student Rights, and application forms for OU awards and scholarships also are available with the click of a mouse.

"We were looking for ways to incorporate technology to create a more efficient and effective department," said Karen Lloyd, assistant dean of students. "One of the ways we're doing this is with the online Student Handbook. We can make real-time changes and ensure information is always up-to-date."

Lloyd says the Web site will continue to evolve.

"In the future, we want to create a forum that will allow all members of the university to share information that is mutually beneficial," Lloyd said. "We're off to a good start and the possibilities are endless. Technology doesn't stand still, and we'll continue to look for ways to deliver a better product and improve our customer service."

For more information, visit the Office of the Dean of Students Web site.

SUMMARY

The Office of the Dean of Students, responsible for programs and services to promote a positive campus experience for students, recently launched its first-ever Web site. The site includes links to the Center for Student Activities, Campus Recreation and the Center for Multicultural Initiatives. The Student Handbook, Student Rights, and application forms for OU awards and scholarships also are available with the click of a mouse.

Created by CareTech Administrator (webservices@caretechsolutions.com) on Wednesday, February 18, 2004

Modified by CareTech Administrator (webservices@caretechsolutions.com) on Wednesday, February 18, 2004

Article Start Date: Wednesday, February 18, 2004