HRD program is praised

A jury of educators selected the OU Bachelor of Science in Human Resources Development program as one of eight programs to be described in detail at a national conference.

The organization was the American Association of Colleges of Teacher Education Conference on Human Services Education held in New York City in mid December.

Over 250 representatives attended the conference. The major theme was to expand "the role of colleges of education to prepare personnel to serve in human development functions for the full life span of people."

William F. Moorhouse, chairperson of the OU program, represented the faculty at the conference and presented follow-up studies made of the more than 400 graduates, and he presented information on the kinds of skills taught in the OU program.

Moorhouse also was a participant in an invited conference held in Washington, D.C., where representatives of 36 colleges and universities who have human services development programs exchanged information. The university is one of the first institutions in the country to develop such a program and, because of its success, is looked to for a leadership role in this area, Moorhouse said.

The Washington conference was sponsored by the American Society of Training and Development. The society centers its work on the training and education of persons employed in business and industry. The OU HRD program has placed a number of graduates in personnel departments and in employment related positions in public agencies, Moorhouse said.

Students or other persons interested in obtaining a brochure on the program can obtain one in room 235 Vandenberg Hall.

Enrollment record

A record enrollment for a winter semester seems assured following advance and regular registration reports for the winter semester.

The current record of 10,353 students was set last winter and includes 7,032 students registering in advance, 2,325 students registering during the regular period, and 996 students enrolling in off campus and school services courses.

The records to date for winter of 1980 show 7,149 advance registrations, 2,682 students registering on Jan. 3 for a total of 9,831. Off campus and school services enrollments are still to come.

The record for a fall enrollment is 11,729 set this academic year. The previous high was 11,220 set in the fall semester of the 1978-79 academic year.

New funding method

Lewis N. Pino, director of research and instructional services, calls faculty attention to a new funding possibility.

Proposals involving the public understanding of the history and implications of science, technology, and the arts are being sought by three agencies, Pino said.

They are the National Endowment for the Arts, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the National Science Foundation.

In the past, prospective grantees have had a problem deciding which agency should receive a particular interdisciplinary research project. Now the job of proposers has been simplified as the three agencies have a mechanism for the joint consideration of such proposals.

Preliminary proposals may be submitted to either of the endowments or the foundation. If the project is considered promising, the project officer will contact his or her counterparts in the other agencies to arrange for joint consideration.

Inquiries about these new cooperative grant opportunities should be to Pino in room 364, South Foundation Hall.

Center makes institute awards

Summer Institute proposals which received funding for 1980 have been announced by Dave Aussicker of the Center for General and Career Studies.

The institutes were selected by a faculty advisory group on the basis of attractiveness for non-traditional and new student populations, faculty creativity and educational quality, and involvement of community and non-university instructional staff.

The Winners

C.K. Rowland and William Macauley, political science, will conduct "Presidential Nominating Conventions" from June 23 to August 13. The institute course will directly involve students in the summer Republican presidential nominating convention held in Detroit. In addition, guest lecturers will be drawn from both the Republican and Democratic parties.

Renate Gerulaitis, modern languages, will direct an institute entitled, "Foreign Language—French, German, and Spanish" to be offered from June 16 to June 27.

Alien forms

Alien registration forms are now available in room 121 of North Foundation Hall so that OU foreign students may comply with the federal regulations.

Paul E. McKinnon, district director, Immigration and Naturalization Service, has reminded the university about the "Annual Address Report Program." Section 265 of the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952 requires that every alien within the United States on the first day of January of each year report his address in writing during the month of January," McKinnon said.

The course is designed to provide intensive experience and knowledge of foreign languages to inservice teachers. Gerulaitis will be joined by other Oakland faculty members from the Department of Modern Languages and Literatures.

William Hoffman, mathematical sciences, will lead an institute on "Math, Art and Perception" from June 23-August 13. The interdisciplinary course will review the history of math in art, theories of mathematical art, and the psychology of pictorial art appreciation. Outside experts, in addition to Oakland faculty, will be part of the instructional staff.

In addition to the three on-campus summer institutes, three out-of-country courses are planned in China, Ireland, and Russia.

Bernard Thomas, history, will lead a group of students on a 22-day tour throughout China. The course will focus on major themes of China's Imperial past, the great transformations of the Revolution, and China's modernization and foreign policy perspectives.

Donald Morse, English, will direct a study tour to Ireland. In addition to Morse, the course will be taught by an Irish faculty of lecturers coordinated by the Irish scholar-teacher Gratian Freyer through the Irish Humanities Center.

Robert Howes, history, will coordinate an 18-day tour of the U.S.S.R. this summer. The tour will be oriented toward Russian history, literature, arts and architecture.

Further information is available from the Center for General and Career Studies at 377-2198 or from the respective faculty members.

Brazzell cited

Two recent honors have been announced for Johnetta Brazzell, associate director, Urban Affairs.

She has been appointed to the Physicians' Assistant Task Force by Gov. William G. Milliken, and she has been named one of the delegates to attend the Jan. 13-17 White House Conference on Small Business in Washington, D.C. The sessions include topics on capital formation and retention, government regulations and paperwork, international trade, inflation, women in business, and minority business development, among others.

Feeman named

George F. Feeman, mathematical sciences, has been appointed to a nine-member Advisory Committee of the newly formed Consortium for the Development of International Cooperation in Science and Technology of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities. Earlier he had been named by former President O'Dowd to be Oakland's representative to the consortium. The consortium provides service to 150 member institutions in the United States and indirect assistance to the Association's membership of 333 colleges and universities. Its main purpose is to connect systematically higher education institutions with international development needs in science and technology through exchanges of faculty for teaching, consulting, and research and other means, at the same time as it exists as an information center for higher education's involvement in international science and technology projects.

OU faculty publish, lecture

Robert J. Zolad, School of Economics and Management, has been elected to the Board of Trustees of the Birmingham-Bloomfield Art Association. He will act as a financial consultant and will be a member of the Budget Committee.

Judith K. Brown, sociology and anthropology, has reviewed Melford E. Spiro's Gender and Culture: Kibbutz Women Revisited. The review appeared in the Oct. 25 issue of Science (Volume 206, no. 4417).

Kate Hallert, a sophomore math sciences major, presented a paper on "Snowflakes and Coastlines," a study in fractional dimensions, at the regional Pi Mu Epsilon Conference held in conjunction with a Conference on Geometry at Miami University in Ohio.

Janet A. Krompart, university library, has compiled and edited an index to Biographical Dictionary of Republican China (Ed. Howard L. Boorman. New York: 1967-1971). The index, entitled a Personal Name Index to Biographical Dictionary of Republican China, was issued as a fifth volume of the Dictionary by Columbia University Press in April, 1979. In addition to listing all personal names cited in the four-volume set, the index provides the vernacular form of many Chinese names for which only the romanized form appears in the text. In addition, Krompart has been elected secretary of the Asian and African Section, Association of College and Research Libraries, American Library Association for 1979-81.

I. Theodore Landau, psychology, was a co-author of a recently published chapter in Endocrine Control of Sexual Behavior (edited by Carlos Beyer). The title of the chapter was "Anatomical and Biochemical Substrates of the Actions of Estrogens and Antiestrogens on Brain Tissues that Regulate Female Sexual Behavior in Rodents."

Psychology faculty presentations at the 87th Annual Convention of the American Psychological Association in New York City were made by Boaz Kahana, "Grandparents, and Grandchildren: Changing Roles of the Three Generations" (with Eva Kahana); Dena Scher, "Male-Female Roles in Israeli Children's Literature"; Keith E. Stranovich, "Automatic Recognition Skills and Reading Ability in First Graders"; and Sandra K. Webster, "The Biochemistry of Dysmenorrhea" (with Joan E. Bauman, Robert C. Kolodny).

Burdick has had a short story accepted for publication in the Summer 1980 issue of The Great River Review. The story is called "The Death of My Husband Ivan Ilych." Burdick's poem "Aveugle(s)" has just appeared in the Fall 79 issue of Posie—USA, a journal dedicated to North American poetry in the French language.

Gayle Partmann, linguistics and sociology/anthropology, recently presented a paper at the African Studies Association meetings in Los Angeles as part of a symposium on language spread and social change. Her paper was entitled, "National Identity and the Ivorization of French."

Virinder K. Moudgil, biological sciences, is the author of "Effect of 17 β -estradiol on [3H] progesterone binding in rat brain," published in Life Sciences, 25:1335-1342. The studies were supported by a $97,000 grant from the National Institutes of Health and in part by a Biomedical Sciences Research Grant from OU. Co-authors of the paper are undergraduate students working with Moudgil.

Donald E. Morse, English, gave a lecture on "Classics Revisited: Alice in Wonderland for Adults and Children," to the American Association of University Women, Birmingham Chapter, as part of their annual day of study. He recently spoke to the Rocky Mountain College English Association meeting in Albuquerque, on "Psychoceramics and the Teaching of English," as well as bringing greetings from the national CEA of which he is vice president.
