

Wednesday, February 11, 2004

Oakland University to host Dr. Charmaine Nelson

Dr. Charmaine Nelson of McGill University in Montreal will present a lecture titled, "Blacks in White Marble: Slavery and Identity in 19th Century Neoclassicism." The Oakland University event, hosted by The Honors College and co-sponsored by Art and Art History, Center for Multicultural Initiatives, Women's Studies and Meadow Brook Art Gallery, is scheduled for February 16, from noon - 1 p.m. in the Meadow Brook Art Gallery.

Nelson received her Bachelor of Fine Arts and Master of Fine Arts degrees for Concordia University, Montreal. She then went on to receive her Ph.D. from University of Manchester, Manchester, U.K. in 2001. Nelson is currently an assistant professor of Art History at McGill; she also serves as an adjunct professor of Art History and faculty coordinator at the University of Western Ontario, London, Ontario, Canada.

SUMMARY

Dr. Charmaine Nelson of McGill University in Montreal will present a lecture titled, "Blacks in White Marble: Slavery and Identity in 19th Century Neoclassicism."

Created by CareTech Administrator (webservices@caretechsolutions.com) on Wednesday, February 11, 2004

Modified by CareTech Administrator (webservices@caretechsolutions.com) on Wednesday, February 11, 2004

Article Start Date: Thursday, February 12, 2004