Career development facilitator training program offered

Oakland University's School of Education and Human Services (SEHS) is offering a Career Development Facilitator (CDF) Training Program in Livonia and Rochester. The first class will be held in Livonia on September 6 and on September 11 in Rochester. The deadline to register is Friday, August 31.

CDF training is an extensive certification program designed for individuals who are employed as career resource center coordinators, school counselors, employment and placement specialists, human resource professionals, and educators.

CDF training is endorsed by the National Career Development Association, National Employment Counseling Association and National Association of Workforce Development Professionals.

Career and labor market information, career planning, assessment approaches, technology and career development, client training, meeting the needs of diverse populations, and ethical and legal issues are some areas to be addressed during the 120-hour program. Participants who successfully complete the course are eligible for national certification.

The cost of the certification program is $685 and includes resource material. Participants have the option to take the course for six university undergraduate or graduate credits. For more information visit the Department of Professional Development and Education Outreach Web site. To enroll, contact Professional Development at (248) 370-3033 or pro-development@oakland.edu.
