FROM THE SCHOOL OF EDUCATION AND HUMAN SERVICES

From Assistant Professor Bill Solomonson:

Looking back, I can recall that when my children were younger "no" was unfortunately, but perhaps naturally, more commonly heard than "yes."

"Dad, can I sled down the stairs?"
"No."

"Dad, can I go up on the roof?"
"No."

"Dad, can I use the chainsaw?"
"No!"

But, what's dangerous is if this slips into habit – a "habit of 'no.' "

"Dad, can you jump on the trampoline with me?"
"No – er, wait a minute, yes!"

It is not the "no's" that move things forward, it's the "yes's." Here are some examples of SEHS "yes's" and their outcomes in the past few years.

MTD PS

The Master of Training & Development (MTD) program in the Department of Organizational Leadership (DOL) established a new student organization in 2012/2013. This organization, the MTD Professional Society, has hosted 18 monthly events, including three special gala events at Meadowbrook Hall, all of which featured keynote speakers from the professional world, alumni featured speakers, and networking. Several students or former students have gained employment through these events. Ten students have had unique and meaningful leadership opportunities as Board members. What if this had been a "no"?

Training & Development Case Competition

A collaboration between the Association for Talent Development – Detroit Chapter (ATD, which is the largest professional training organization in the world) and OU/DOL helped launch the first Training & Development Case Competition in December of 2014. Three teams from two universities competed over many weeks in creating a professional learning solution based on a complex hypothetical case. Students worked hard, and learned. A panel of four judges representing both academe and practitioners reviewed the teams' work and awarded prizes in an exciting live event. What if this had been a "no"?

Clintondale/OU Flipped Classroom "Lean" Collaboration

In a real collaboration, SEHS, the Clintondale School District, and a private company, the Lean Learning Center, are working together to bring a flipped course on lean concepts to students at Clintondale High School. Each stakeholder has risks and potential gains, not the least of which are the potential student outcomes as well as the research opportunities. The two pilot courses launch in less than a month, and the developers and teachers are working hand-in-hand to make it a success. What if this had been a "no"?

The intent of these examples is not to simply share some recent SEHS successes. Nor is it to share some of the things that I've been involved with over the past few years that you might not be aware of. Rather, it is to ask you to reflect for a moment on the opportunities that may come your way in the future, or might simply be the spark of an idea in your own mind right now, and to consider the power of what "yes" can do. It will be a luxury to look back and be able to ask yourself, "what if this had been a 'no'?"
