Private school enrollment charted

Five private high schools sent from 10 to 25 percent of the 1978 grade twelve students to Oakland University as freshmen for the 1979-80 year.

The statistic is part of a survey of Oakland and Macomb private schools completed by Gene Spencer, special assistant to the president.

OU Senate
April 10, 1980
3:15 p.m.—128-130 OC

Second reading: Debatable, amendable and eligible for final vote at this meeting.

"Moved that the University Senate recommend to the president and to the board the establishment of a program of graduate studies in nursing leading to the degree of Master of Science in Nursing. The date of implementation of this program shall follow endorsement by the appropriate funding agencies of the state and shall be subject to the availability of requisite resources."

New Business: "That the University Senate recommend to the president and to the board the establishment of a program of graduate studies leading to the degree of Master of Arts in Sociology. The date of implementation of this program shall be subject to the availability of requisite resources."

New Business: Joint resolution from the Academic Policy and Planning Committee and the Faculty Council of Health Sciences. "Resolved that the University Senate recommend to the president and to the Board of Trustees the adoption of the following basic principles and implementation sequence for the development of a School of Medicine at Oakland University." (The principles and implementation sequence were published in the April 3 issue of the OU News).

Four of the five schools with 10 percent or more enrollment representation in the OU freshman class are in Oakland County. They are Pontiac Catholic High School (10 percent); Oxford Christian Academy (14.3 percent); Bishop Foley High-Lamphere (15.5 percent); and Our Lady of the Lakes in Waterford (20 percent). The top percentage of all of the private high schools was delivered by St. Anne High of Warren. St. Anne sent 25 percent of its 1978 graduates on to OU to enroll as freshmen last fall.

Spencer's study shows that only two of the 17 schools that sent freshmen on to OU last fall were located outside of a 15 mile radius of the institution. They are Our Lady of Mercy in Farmington with 1 percent of the class (16 miles) and Adelphian Academy of Holly with .5 percent (23 miles).

Thirteen of the 30 private schools surveyed in the two county area did not send any students on to OU in the fall of 1979.

The study is an expansion of Spencer's Jan. 3 memo on origins of public high school freshmen enrolling at OU and of David C. Beardslee's work on "Geographical Origins of F.T.I.A.C.'s Fall 1979 Data" dated Oct. 19, 1979.

Photo pioneer lectures

Harold E. Edgerton, the man whose sonar device assisted in locating the USS Monitor wreck, will present films and a lecture on the expedition on April 15.

Edgerton is recognized internationally for his pioneering work in the development of the electronic speed flash and for his use of sonar in archaeology and geology. His free lecture is at 3 p.m. in room 203, Dodge Hall of Engineering.

The speaker is Institute Professor Emeritus, Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is particularly well known for his work in stroboscopy and ultra-high speed photography. He originally perfected the use of stroboscopic lights in both ultra-high speed motion and still (stop motion) photography. His photographs of bullets in flight, hummingbirds in flights, and athletes in stop action have been seen by millions.

Now working on sonar, his efforts assisted in finding the USS Monitor, the famous Civil warship that sank in 1862 off Cape Hatteras. The wreck, in 230 feet of water, was found in 1973 by a systematic sonar search of an area 6 by 15 miles.

Edgerton has designed watertight cameras and strobes. He has worked aboard CALYPSO with Jacques-Yves Cousteau, and he has assisted with the cameras and lighting equipment for the bathyscaphes FNRS III, TRIESTE, and ARCHIMEDE.

Among his many awards are the United States National Medal of Science, the Royal Photographic Society of London's Silver and the John Oliver LaGorce Gold Medal of the National Geographic Society. The OU appearance is part of the Distinguished Lecture Series sponsored by the School of Engineering and supported by a grant from the Bendix Corporation.

Art show

On April 10 and 11, one of Detroit's young artists will present a one-man exhibition. Recent paintings by Douglas Hoagg will be displayed in the Crockery Alcove of the Oakland Center between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.

The 25-year-old artist studies fine arts at the Center for Creative Studies (CCS) in Detroit. Last year, Hoagg was awarded a merit scholarship and studio space based on a jury of his work by the faculty members of CCS.

Hoagg is currently exhibiting in the "Michigan Glass 1980" show at The Detroit Artist's Market. His previous showings include: the "All Media Show" at Focus Detroit, a cooperative gallery, and the "Michigan Annual Show" at the Mount Clemens Art Center.

Although the artist works in several mediums, such as glass, watercolor and natural elements, his exhibition at OU will consist of his recent paintings.

Hoagg said he is working with texture as it relates to surface and that he is concerned with how geometric shapes interrelate in his work.
