Office decoration contest planned

The Second Annual Office Decoration Contest, a contest for the most welcoming and OU-spirited office, will be held at the end of August to help get the campus decorated for the 2002 Welcome Week. If your office is interested in participating, you must contact the Office of New Student Programs, 134 North Foundation Hall, by Friday, May 3.

"The Office Decoration Contest is to provide a welcoming environment for new and returning students," said Rachel E. Brown, assistant director of New Student Programs. "We want students to know that faculty and staff have school spirit and that OU is a great place to be at."

This year's decorations have to be up by Tuesday, Aug. 27. The 2002 orientation assistants will select the winner by Friday, Aug. 30. The winners will be awarded a breakfast celebration party.

The Office Decoration Contest was held for the first time last year. After reviewing 35 offices and their decorations, the judges selected the Disability Support Services Office and the Graham Health Center as winners.

Oakland University's Welcome Week is held annually to provide new and returning students with information about different university departments, services and student organizations. It is filled with educational and social events for all students. This year's Welcome Week is Tuesday, Sept. 3, through Saturday, Sept. 7.
