

Tuesday, May 19, 2015

Master's counseling student starts business to help babies sleep all night

When her three children wouldn't sleep through the night, Patricia Werner discovered her new career path.

Werner developed Baby Sleep All Night, a company that coaches parents in ways to help their children fall asleep and stay asleep. As a current student in the community counseling track of the Master of Arts in Counseling program, she credits the program with helping her sharpen her listening and problem solving skills.

"My career choice has been nothing but a blessing," Werner said. "There is nothing like hearing from my families how happy they are now that everyone is getting a healthy night's rest."

Learn more about Oakland University's Master of Arts in Counseling.

Read more alumni features.

Patricia Werner was recently featured on WDIV in this segment "Getting Babies To Sleep At Night."