

Tuesday, December 14, 2004

Freshman Outlook continues through winter semester

By Dawn Pauli, contributing writer

Two freshmen pocketed $250 prizes for simply logging on every week and reading Freshman Outlook, an online resource packed with tips, advice and resource links to help students make the jump to college life.

Patricia Ogura and Jason Threlkeld completed all 13 modules of Freshman Outlook during the fall semester and were entered in the drawing. Freshman Outlook continues through the winter semester, and two more names will be selected from those who read each of the modules.

In response to feedback, changes were made to the way students read Outlook, said Parvati del Razo, Freshman Outlook coordinator and graduate student.

"Instead of it being sent via e-mail, students can log on each week and read it at their leisure," she said.

To log on, students should go to the Current Students Web page and click on "OU've got mail" and then "Freshman Outlook."

Topics for the winter semester will focus on student developmental issues, including student leadership, avoiding probation, goal setting and career planning.

"It's very good information you'll need as you go through the college experience," del Razo said.

For more information on the Outlook program, contact the Office of New Student Programs at (248) 370-2655 or outlook@oakland.edu.

SUMMARY

Two freshmen pocketed $250 prizes for simply logging on every week and reading Freshman Outlook, an online resource packed with tips, advice and resource links to help students make the jump to college life.

Created by CareTech Administrator (webservices@caretechsolutions.com) on Tuesday, December 14, 2004
Modified by CareTech Administrator (webservices@caretechsolutions.com) on Tuesday, December 14, 2004
Article Start Date: Tuesday, December 14, 2004