Grizz Facts: A look at college writing assignments

The ability to communicate effectively through writing is one of the most highly valued skills among employers and a critical component of a college education. Oakland students have many opportunities to develop writing proficiency through coursework. Information reported by OU first-year and senior students on the National Survey of Student Engagement indicates that the number of assigned pages of writing per year has increased by more than 20 pages between 2013 and 2018.
