

CONTRIBUTORS

Glen Armstrong is a Special Lecturer in the Rhetoric Department at Oakland. He studied writing at Wayne State University and The University of Massachusetts. Armstrong's verse has appeared in such publications as Poetry Northwest, Cream City Review and Painted Bride Quarterly.

Karen Stacy Ballard is a self-published author and operator of a publishing and media company, Pink Street Publishing. Her first book, Sugawords: Poetic Memoirs, is a collection of poetry spanning over a decade. A Detroit native, she is a proud graduate of Central Michigan University with a Bachelor of Science degree in journalism, public relations concentration and business administration minor and a Master of Science in Administration degree in organizational communications.

Peter J. Bertocci is Professor of Anthropology and Director of the Center for International Programs. He has taught at Oakland since 1968, and received the University Teaching Excellence Award for 2006-2007.

Gottfried Brieger retired as a political chemist in 2003. For the last 10 years, he finally had a chance to impact the University as chair of the Campus Environment and Development Committee. His impact was slight, however. He will acknowledge his role in the design of the entryway to campus and the architecture of the new undergraduate housing. He was disappointed that his recommendations to attach at least some crenellations to the Recreation and Sports Center hangar were rejected. He rejects any responsibility for the Pepsi marquee at the corner of Adams and University Roads.

K. Bill Byrne spent thirty years in training and marketing in the automotive industry, the bulk of that time with Volkswagen of America. He teaches Rhetoric 150 and 160 at Oakland University as a Special Lecturer.

Peter D. Coyl graduated from Oakland University in 2006 with a Bachelor of Science in Public Administration and Public Policy. During his time at Oakland, he participated in the study abroad program to the Foreign Affairs University in Beijing, China. Coyl is now a student at National Taiwan Normal University's Mandarin Training Center in Taipei, Taiwan.

Dagmar Cronn is Emeritus Professor of Chemistry at Oakland University, having retired in 2007. Her areas of expertise have been in atmospheric chemistry and environmental science and she was the OU Teaching Excellence Awardee in 2006.

Karen S. Dunn is an Associate Professor in the School of Nursing at Oakland. Dunn achieved a Ph. D. in nursing at Wayne State University in 2001, MSN at Valdosta State University in 1997, and a BSN at Wayne State University in 1982. Her clinical experience is in Medical/Surgical Critical Care Nursing. Her program of research is in the fields of gerontological nursing practice, holistic self-care practices, aging and spirituality, end-of-life care, and pain management. Her research efforts are to promote wellness through the effective use of holistic self-care practices.

Sherman Folland is Professor of Economics and has published numerous articles on health economics. With two colleagues, Folland is co-author of the leading textbook in that field, The Economics of Health and Health Care.

Barbara Harrison is an Assistant Professor in the School of Nursing. Her research on implicit memory began during her doctoral studies at the University of Michigan. She has received funding to further this research from the American Academy of Nurse Practitioner Foundation.

Paul Kubicek is Professor and Chair of the Department of Political Science. He teaches a variety of classes in comparative politics and international relations, and has also taught in Ukraine, Turkey, Austria, and Slovenia. His current research focuses on issues of democratization in Eastern Europe and Turkey.

David A. Levine is the former Chief Economist and Founder of the Bond Department at Sanford C. Bernstein & Co., Inc. (now part of Alliance Bernstein). Levine also served on the firm's investment policy committees for U.S. equities, developed-market foreign equities and emerging-market foreign equities. Levine says that he is under the illusion that just about anything can be quantified.

Pamela Light is a graduate of OU with a Bachelors Degree in English and Film Studies (1983) and a Masters Degree in English (1985). She is chairperson of the English Department at Rochester College.

Cathy McQueen, a graduate of the University of Michigan, has been a Special Lecturer in Rhetoric at Oakland University since the Fall of 2000. After 20 years of teaching, she has discovered that although the students change, their excuses never do.

Christine Nguyen, a psychology major and a history minor, is a senior Honors College student at Oakland. Her essay was written for HC 202, Romantic Revolutionaries, in the Fall of 2007.

Geoffrey Potts is a recent Oakland University alumni ('07) with a B.S. in Biology and a Specialization in Microbiology along with a minor in Anthropology. A graduate of the Honors College, Potts is currently a first year medical student at Wayne State University. He has experience in biological science research as an undergraduate with Dr. Douglas Wendell.

Cheryl Riley-Doucet is Assistant Professor in the School of Nursing at Oakland. Her area of research focuses on Family and Gerontological Nursing, in particular enhancing coping strategies for older adults and family caregivers with chronic illness through the use of environmental interventions. She has recently completed preliminary research investigating the feasibility of using MSE in the home and its effect on decreasing behaviors of agitation in older adults and family caregiver burden. Riley-Doucet is also a co-investigator in collaborative research with the Oakland University Department of Engineering and Computer Science developing and testing a technology for autonomous management of agitation in dementia through physiologic signal analysis and multi-sensory stimuli administration.

Alberto Rojo is Associate Professor of Physics. His recent grants include NSF and Research Corporation. His recent publications are about theory of quantum systems. He has recently started developing the theory of the so called "quantum non holonomic systems," with a forthcoming publication in the July issue of the prestigious Physical Review Letters.

Linda Thompson Adams is Dean and Professor of the School of Nursing at Oakland University. She earned her BSN and MSN degree at Wayne State University, and masters and doctoral degrees in public health from The Johns Hopkins University. As dean, she has lead the way in creating innovative programs to address the nursing shortage, such as the Accelerated Second Degree program, by forming collaborative partnerships with health care organizations. She has established the first Doctor of Nursing Practice program in the State of Michigan which is a blend of online and face-to-face interaction. Thompson Adams serves on the Board of Trustees and Worklife Quality Committee for St. John Health System. Her prior experiences include policy research and higher education.

Jennifer Van Vliet, a pie-loving English major, spends her days playing crossword puzzles and her nights attempting to study. She is currently in her second year at Oakland University and is proud of The Honors College.

Ann L. Whall is currently the Allesse Endowed Chair in Gerontologic Nursing as a Visiting Professor at Oakland University School of Nursing. Whall is also Professor in the School of Nursing at The University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, and Associate Director of the University of Michigan's Geriatrics Center. She completed (in June, 2006) as Principal Investigator a 6-year grant funded by the National Institute of Health and addressing disturbing behavior in dementia.
